VICTORIA BALL.

The long expected and much talked of VICTORIA BALL, was at length consummated last night. It had been for months in agitation, at one time laid on the shelf and like to expire, at another revived and newly invigorated; once we almost feared that it was doomed to be one of those many anticipated events which never advance further than the cradle; but now it has actually been perfected in the womb of time, has existed, and is departed—gone, gone to the sepulchre of the past. All the bustle, and turmoil and excitement is now over, the vestiture-makers will have a little breathing time, the curious nothing further to enquire about the mystery, lovers nothing to conceal, but the gossips plenty to talk about. A pageant of this elaborate nature has generally a fortnight's moral existence,—it exists a week in prospect and a week in retrospect. It has now become something to talk about.

Never in our recollection has the City-of-Palaces been more full of youthful beauty than it is at the present moment. Bright eyes and rosy cheeks, and pale ones too, which, to us, at least, are still more fascinating ("pale with high and passionate thoughts," as L. E. L. expresses it) somewhat the same strain as that in which Shakespeare speaks of a cheek, "sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought") and light forms full of grace and elegance, and sweet voices now abound every where. There was a time, when we eschewed society, and looked upon a Fancy Ball as nothing better than a "vanity fair;" but we honestly confess that we have been utterly unable to resist the fascinations of this season. Our social propensities have been called into action to a degree altogether unprecedented in a life, which has not been a very dull one. Who can remain at home when a —, and a * * *, and a —, and * * * exercise their irresistible witchery in the mazes of the graceful dance? Not we—not we!—when we look around upon the throng of graceful, undulating forms which flit about like young Sylphides, the buoyance of our by-gone days, again invigorates our frames, and we fancy ourselves in reality young again, ever exclaiming in the words of a poet, "Oh, we do not very often cite as an authority,

There's not a joy the world can give
Like that it takes away.

Oh! indeed, when we look upon these fairy forms, we almost imagine that we have fallen into the hands of Medusa, who has cast us into her magic cauldron and made us young again. We have been before the public long enough to have been often cut up without the assistance of the sorceress.

But we must speak of the Town Hall. When we first entered it, we found ourselves in a very bower of roses, and we thought of Oberon and Titania, and the ladies of the "Midsummer's Night's Dream," though this, in truth, is mid-winter,—and we looked around for little Puck and his folies, and before very long we discovered him in the shape of a two-penny! — we thought of the "bower of roses by a gentleman's streams," and of the nightingale who last sang the pretty song to us. When we arrived in the ball room, we were quite bewildered; we knew not whether we were in Greece, or Switzerland, or the Highlands of Scotland, or Fairy-land, or whether we were taking a part in a tableau vivant, representing an apotheosis of Walter Scott, such a diversity of mimic garbs were there present, so many costumes of different nations were making up the motley throng. We wish we could do justice to the assembled multitude, and give a correct account of the fancy dresses; but as we have been often told by one, whose dicta, are gospel to us, he who does this best we herewith begin our attempt.

Does well, does nobly, angels could no more,

Miss M. A. Ross and Mrs. Gordon, attired as Scotch ladies, are the first in order, to whom we must allude. Doctor Johnson said, that the only fine prospect which a Scotchman ever sees is the high-road which takes him to London; but the Lexicographer would not have said this, if he had seen such sweet Highland lassies in Scotland as we saw last night at the Town Hall. Towards the latter part of the evening a highland reel was danced in excellent style by the two Misses Ross, Dr. Stewart, Mr. Edwards, &c. The two gentlemen whom we have mentioned, were dressed in a corresponding costume, and admirably attired they were. Miss Erskine, as Mary Arvenel, looked the lovely high-born damsel to perfection; but we should have thought from her grace and elegance that she had spent all her days in the "Court of Felici-ana," and not in the rustic neighbourhood of the Scottish Monastery. The two Misses Gould, in Polish costumes, looked, as they ever do, very pretty and fascinating. Mrs. Parker was splendidly attired as Anne of Austria, and Mr. Parker, in one of the finest dresses in the room, supported the part of the Duke of Buckingham. Miss Trower was a pretty little Swiss peasant. Mrs. Pierce Taylor, and Miss Shaw were tastefully attired, as we think, but we may be wrong, in the costumes of the Tyrol, and Mr. Taylor looked as though he had just stepped out of one of Lewis's pictures. Mr. Bayley was very correctly attired as the Master of Ravenswood; Mr. Henry Palmer as Sir Giles Overdone; Mr. William Palmer as Renshi, and Mr. Stocport as Angelo Colonna. Mr. Larpent, in a sumptuous dress, assumed the character of Charles the Second. Mr Kay, as Sir Piercie Shafton, dressed as Mysie Happer, described him (see Walter Scott's Monastery) talked Euphuism most vigorously; but his courtly pace was somewhat retarded by a very inappropriate limp; we suppose that this was occasioned by the duello with Halbert Glendinning. Mr. Wm. Bracken was admirably dressed in an Albanian costume and looked the character exceedingly well; and Mr. Wyllie, as an Austrian Officer, struck us as a capital personation. Mr. Cecil Trower was beautifully dressed in a Greek costume. Captain Colley, as Meg Merrilies excited our admiration; and a gentleman, whom he could not identify by reason of his huge proboscis, looked Punchinello to perfection. Robinson Crusoe, accompanied by a new Zealand chief, in the absence of his man Friday, were regarded with much attention and well sustained their characters. We observed Sir Callaghan O' Biallaghan amidst the assembled multitude and "a flaxen headed Ploughboy, who whistled o'er the sea," looking his character to admiration. Besides this there were a variety of Turkish, Greek, Swiss, and old English costumes, which we have no space to particularize, but we must not forget to mention one character, which was the chef d'œuvre of the night.

A very facetious gentleman, whose identity we were unable to decide upon, went about in the uniform of a two-penny postman, with a large leather bag and dak-wallah's bell, distributing letters to the fair ladies assembled. We were able to exert our influence so successfully, that we contrived to peruse a few of these epistles and, as far as our memory, which is fortunately one of the best, will permit us, we now present our readers with a transcript of them. The following was received by Miss Ross.

Scorn not our revels, Lady, for to-night
 Full many a gentle bosom with calm joy
 Is beating, as the joyous music swells
 And the gay dance progresses. Scorn not us
 Because we are arrayed in antic garbs,
 And for a little while have cast aside
 Our natural manners, striving to appear
 That which we are not; do not say that we Have ta'en our passage in "the ship of fools"
 Nor call us silly children; for thy good,
 Believe me, sometimes to unbend and cast
 The armour of our dignity aside
 Wherein we walk so stately—oh! 'tis good,
 Good for our hearts that we should sometimes fix
 Our thoughts on trifles which amuse the herd,
 And though we may be fit for loftier things
 Still sympathize with those gay souls who spend
 Day after days in unoffending sports,
 And feel no nobler yearnings; we can hold
 No commune with the multitude, nor give
 Our kindly, social sympathies full scope
 For action, if we move not with the throng,
 But hold ourselves apart and from afar
 Contemplate, with a grave, observant eye,
 Scenes, which we scorn to mix in—Thou art wise,
 And higher things engross thee than the dance,
 The masque, the revel, and the mimic show,
 But scorn not us poor Mountebanks, who strive Ourselves and others to amuse, deck'd out
 In garbs of quaint device.—One wisest man Fell of philosophy has written thus:
 "The dignity of life is not impaired
 By aught that innocently satisfies
 The humbler cravings of the heart; and he Is a still happier man who, for those heights
 Of speculation not unfit, descends
 And such beign affections cultivates
 Amongst the inferior kinds;"—

Lady 'tis true.

The next is an Acrostic, and therefore it would be needless to say to whom it is addressed.

M any an eye beams brightly here to night,
 A nd many a face is radiant with delight,
 R oses and lilies here together vie,
 Y outh every where throws round its witchery,
 A nd yet there is not one, whom I can see—
 N o, no, not one, with look more full of glee,
 N or with a sweeter smile than I can trace,
 E ngraven on thy fair and speaking face.

R are is such kindness, And later still
 O n the high summit of a towering hill,
 S uch bounteous verdure, such sweet flowers to see—
 S o plentiful is pride, so rare humility.

To Miss Erskine the following Acrostic was delivered; we particularly admire the bathos at the end, and if the poet's request was complied with, we are sure that he was better paid for his badship than any Poet Laureate on record.

A nd are the scenes still fraught with heart-felt joy?
 M ethinks thou must be weary of them now—
 E ver the sweetest things are first to cloy—
 L ove, only love, excepted. On thy brow
 I mpressed, the characters of thought I trace
 A nd nobler yearnings speak from out thy face.

E xcitement quickly palls - the sower here
 R eaps nothing but disgust and weariness,
 S atisfy and pain. A higher sphere,
 K ind and good Lady, waits thee—let thy soul,
 I n the gilt chains of pleasures stern controul
 N o longer fettered, dare a loftier flight, E nter the heaven of thought and—

Dance with me to-night.

Miss Shakespeare's hallowed name seems to have originated the following elegant but well deserved compliment.

"Lovely as Shakespeare's women," is a phrase
 Like to become a proverb in these days;
 For not another pen like his can trace
 In such sweet tints the purity, the grace,
 The tenderness, the power of woman's mind,—
 Woman, the good, the gentle, the selfless,
 The unselfish sweetener of man's bitter life,
 Which else had been one long, long scene of strife
 And wretchedness—and guilt;—oh! none can doubt it,
 As Otway says, "We had been brutes without thee."
 Thou art a true Shakespearean maid; thy name
 And nature too, at once the fact proclaim.
 But which art thou most like of all the throng
 Of sainted maidens canonized in song?
 Juliet the young, the loving Tuscan maid,
 Or Perdita, a violet in the shade,
 Blooming almost unseen, or that sweet child
 Of nature, young Miranda, in the wild
 And desert island with her aged sire,
 Or Beatrice with a wit like fire
 Brilliant but scorching, or like sweet Anne Page?
 Or Portia, with the strangest Heritage
 E'er Father left his child? or her, who died,
 A marie maiden, and a suicide
 In youth's hot spring, Ophelia? or the kind,
 Devoted child, who nursed her poor, old, blind
 And sorrow-stricken sire? Of these sweet creatures
 Which dost thou most resemble in the features
 Of thy fair face and thy pure virgin soul?
 Not one, not one, but all combined in one great whole.

Miss Frower, who was attired as a Swiss Peasant girl, was exhorted in an acrostic to betake herself home again to her Swiss cottage. We doubt not but that the writer alluded to a certain building of that description at Tirachur, which makes us think that he must be a Barrackporean.

L eaving thy pleasant home
O n the gr. en hill's mossy side,
U nwisely thou hast come,
I n strange land to abide,
S halt thou not oft repent, my gentle Swiss,
A journey made to such a land as this ?

T hou wilt, I'm sure thou wilt,
R epent what thou hast done.
O h! think of thy own clime,
W ith its mild, unseorching sun,
E mblem of thine own mud, my gentle Swiss—
R est thee awhile and ponder well on this.

Miss Oakes received an appropriate acrostic, with a "most lame and impotent conclusion." The writer has edged in a compliment to her worthy sire, which we echo with all our hearts.

I f thou hast ever, in our own dear isle,
S traying all carelessly, ere chanced to view
A flower gentle as the first young smile
B eaming Aurora flings upon the dew—
E rst thou hast seen it, thou hast loved it well—
L ady—thine emblem, Lady of the Vale,
L ike thee 'tis simple, elegant, and pure,
A s snow new-fallen on the moonlit moor.

O aks spread protecting branches o'er its head,
A nd fostering guard it with their parent shade;
K indred thine own—not more regardful, maid,
E ver to soothe thy griefs—and yet so few folks
S urely will think I've only sung—a Hoax.

The next we had the pleasure of perusing, was a short scroll from some visionary young man to Mrs. H. Alexander.

E xceeding sweet, a vision of the night
L ulls my o'er troubled soul with calm delight;—
I see a mother and a sporting child,
Z ephyr ne'er wore look of joy so wild
A s that much loved and chirped infant wears,
B uoyant he frolics round, nor thinks, nor cares,
E 'n now that lady smiling thinks upon
T hose infant antics;—thou art such a one,
H e is thine own, thy firstborn, only son.

A nd then too comes a little fairy face
L eaping in broken accents, while she stays
E yeing her brother's frolics, as he plays—
X anthe ne'er smiled so clamly, joyfully,
A s thy young daughter in her infant glee;
N or Tethys, Queen of Ocean, neeth the wave
D ecked with the richest gems her kingdoms gave E 'er shone more bright, fair lady, now than thee—
R eproach me not—this is not flattery.

There were also some neat verses addressed to a fair Katherine.

K illarney's lake ne'er richer beauties gave
A gain reflected in its lucent wave,
T han thine, fair Eastern Queen, for oft to me
H ast thou appeared as some bright fantasy,
E xulting in thy loveliness, and state,
R obed as Zenobia, though as her not great
I n battle's throng to join:—that soft black eye
N ow speaks of that pure happiness to be,
E xceeding lovely, loved exceedingly.

But in spite of all that we have said, though there were hosts of beautiful faces and gay, sumptuous dresses at the Victoria Ball, it lacked animation. People were contented to dress, and thought nothing of sustaining their parts, with the solitary exception of the two-penny post-man, to whose feats we have already alluded. If in this hasty sketch we have omitted to notice any, whom we ought to have registered more particularly, we must plead the lateness of the hour, and the attendant hurry, as an excuse. However, we have done our best and we have only now to add that we hope very soon to be present at another Victoria Ball.

The Hall was crowded—not less than 600 persons were present. The decorations were of a light and elegant character, well suited to the occasion, and did much credit to the taste of the Stewards and the artists who carried their arrangements into effect.—Bengal Hurkaru, January 16.

THEATRICALS.

OTHELLO.

I have read with much interest the articles in the papers on the subject of Othello. A discussion of the same nature, occurred a year or two ago between the Editor of the Bengal Hurkaru and myself. That gentleman seemed willing at first to adopt the criticism of Coleridge; but he subsequently, with an editorial candour extremely rare, acknowledged, that on more mature consideration he was inclined to return to the general opinion that Shakespeare intended to illustrate the nature of the passion of jealousy in the character and conduct of the Moor. I partly agree with the opinions expressed in an article on this subject in the last number of the Literary Gazette, and especially do I second that portion of the argument which opposes a preceding writer's notion, (very ingeniously maintained, however,) that Shakespeare intended Iago, and not Othello, to be the leading illustration of the ill effects of giving too easy admittance to that "green-eyed monster, which mocks the meat it feeds on." I have expressed similar opinions in the Literary Leaves in an article on the play. I differ, however, on the material point, from the writer in the last number of this journal. He has, I think, greatly and unjustly lowered the character of Othello by representing him as a man naturally jealous. It seems to me that Shakespeare did not intend to give this tone to the mind of Othello, and that it was not his chief object to show how jealous disposition is ready to seize without original or just cause of suspicion upon trifles light as air, as confirmations strong as proofs of holy writ; but to exhibit the effect of the hideous vice on men of strong passions and fiery minds. When the poison of jealousy has once fairly entered the heart, the most trivial circumstances tend to strengthen and confirm its influence; but with such a man as Othello, the misery is not at first self-inflicted. The Moor was the very reverse of a suspicious character, which is always a mean one. In the words of Dr. Johnson, and boundless in his confidence. Even Iago, who "knew all qualities with such a learned spirit of human dealing," repeatedly acknowledges the generous trustfulness and high character of the man whom he hates.

The Moor showed that I endure him not,—
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature ;
And I dare think he will prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband.

And it is from a due consideration of the Moor's "free and open nature," that Iago is induced to depend for the purposes of his revenge upon the effect of such subtle insinuations as Othello, believing him to be honest, was compelled to credit.

The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so ;
And will as easily be led by the nose,
As asses are.

Othello had too much fire in his soul to suffer him to play the mean and dilatory and patient part of a man naturally suspicious, who is always lying in wait for opportunities to discover his own misery and dishonour, and who treasures up long and greedily the minute evidences that feed his hateful passion. "Think'st thou," he exclaims—

Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No ; to be once in doubt,
Is once to be resolved.

When he is sent by the Senate on the expedition to Cyprus, with what perfect confidence he places his young and lovely wife in the charge of Iago ; and when Brabantio says

Look to her, Moor ; have a quick eye to see ;
She has deceived her father, and may thee.

What is his answer ?

My life upon her faith !

And to show, out of his own mouth, how little he was inclined to insist upon a strict surveillance of his wife, or to build his fears of her fidelity on trifles, let us quote part of his speech to Iago even after that artful villain had poured the first drops of bitterness into Othello's cup. It is not the language of a man originally disposed to be mistrustful.

— 'Tis not to make me jealous,
To say—may wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays and dances well ;
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous ;
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt ;
For she had eyes, and chose me ; no, Iago ;
I'll see before I doubt : when I doubt, prove ;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,— Away at once with love, or jealousy.

When a man is naturally disposed to indulge the passion of jealousy, never does he exhibit it more strongly than when he is first working his way into the affections of his mistress ; and Othello from being a mere soldier, "rude in speech and little blessed with the set phrase of peace," and having a complexion and cast of features that he was quite conscious were not generally attractive to the Venetian ladies, might have been excused some little anxiety respecting the possible triumph of his rivals. Her father never supposed for a moment that his reception of Othello's visits would lead to so strange a match, and, when the event actually occurred he was so perplexed and bewildered, that he could only attribute it to supernatural arts.

She is abused, stolen from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks ;
For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind or lame of sense
Sans witchcraft could not —

And even the pert Emilia could not help expressing her surprise that Desdemona had forsaken so many noble matches on his account. In her generous passion at the suspicious of the Moor in one of the latter scenes of the play, she boldly tells him to his face, that Desdemona was "but too fond of her most filthy bargain." Yet, notwithstanding Othello's manifest disadvantages as a lover and a lady's man, of which he was so fully conscious, Desdemona never seems to have discovered in him, until the poison infused by Iago had worked its effect, the slightest indication of jealousy. Even after the scene of the handkerchief, when Emilia asks if this man is not jealous, Desdemona answers with an exclamation that she "never saw thus before." In a preceding part of the same scene the following dialogue occurs.

Des.—Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia ?
Emil.—I know not, Madam.

Des.—Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse.
Full of cruzadoes. And but my noble Moor
Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill thinking.

Emil.—Is he not jealous ?

Des.—Who, he ? I think the sun, where he was born Drew all such humours from him.

I repeat my opinion, that Othello was not naturally jealous, but on the contrary of a most trustful and generous disposition, and that Shakespeare seems to have intended to show, how rapid and terrible are the effects of jealousy when it has once taken possession of a fiery and impassioned heart. His object, it appears, was not to display the petty and nerve-tinging suspicions of a little mind, of a jealous, key-hole-peeping, Paul Pry, but to exhibit a fearful picture of the tempest and desolation, and delirium into which its sudden admission may throw the noblest natures.

We have no right, whatever, to regard Othello in the light of a feeble-minded dupe. If he had not been affected by the evidence so artfully brought forward by Iago, whom he looked upon as a zealous and disinterested friend, and whose good faith had never been suspected by himself or others, whose honesty in fact was proverbial, we might have fairly censured him for his blind and overweening confidence in his wife's constancy or his own power over her affections. He would in that case have almost deserved his dishonor. We ought not to forget that we are behind the scene, and know more than the unhappy Othello himself the true characters and designs of the same circumstances as the Moor could have been proof against the consummate skill of such a master in devilish arts as the fiend Iago. We sympathize with Othello's amazement when the light breaks in upon him and he discovers how completely he has been deluded and destroyed by his powerful circumvention. When Iago is brought before him, he looks to see if the is cloven-footed.

Othello—I look down towards his feet ; but that's a fable :
If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

I could easily multiply extracts in support of my opinion ; but perhaps the reader might grow tired of the subject. I shall give but one more brief quotation and conclude. It is Othello's character from his own mouth, and I think it a true one.

— I pray you, in your letters,
Speak of me as I am ; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice ; then must you speak
Of one, who loved not wisely, but too well ;
Of one, not easily jealous, but being wrought,
Perplexed in the extreme.

I ought to apologize for the length of this article on a subject that has already occupied so large a space in the columns of the Literary Gazette ; but it is difficult to A check oneself in a discussion in which Shakespeare is the theme.

RIENZI.

Miss Mitford's Tragedy of Rienzi, was performed on Friday evening for the benefit of Mrs. Leach. The play had never before been performed, and we think, had been little read in Calcutta. It is nevertheless one of the best Dramas that has been produced in these latter days, when the cry is echoed from north to south and from east to west, that the sun of dramatic literature in England, has been obscured, never again to put forth its beams. They who only know Miss Mitford by her country stories, and think of her as the placid, subdued writer of those sweet rustic domesticities which find their way into the hearts of all dwellers in the country and of very many town-bred folk, will marvel at the vigour both of conception and of diction, which we meet with every where in the Tragedy of Rienzi. The play is full of energy, each character forcibly sustained and full of individuality, the interest unbroken, and many of the situations eminently dramatic. We doubt not but that most of our readers have perused Mr. Bulwer's admirable Romance, built up on the same historical basis. Miss Mitford was first in the field; but neither of the two authors, in portraying the character of Rienzi, have adhered very faithfully to recorded facts. It was Sir Walter Raleigh, we think, who on hearing a tumult beneath his chamber windows, despatched some of his domestics to learn the cause of it, and when they returned, one giving him one and another another account of the affray, he exclaimed, "Ah! indeed, if I find it so difficult to learn the true facts of incidents which happen at my own threshold, how little reliance must I place in the records of events, which occurred centuries ago." It is indeed the rarest of accidents to meet with an impartial historian. Bulwer accuses Gibbon of having unnecessarily blackened the character of the last of the tribunes, and we think that we might accuse Mr. Bulwer of having unduly exalted it. But this is a peculiar characteristic of many of Bulwer's writings to make us sympathize with those who are more worthy of our execration and abhorrence—witness the novels of Paul Clifford and Eugene Aram and the character of Sir Reginald Glanvill in Pelham. None, but a bigoted Tory, could rise from the perusal of Bulwer's Rienzi without a warm, perhaps an enthusiastic admiration of the noble character therein portrayed; but we are sorry to say that the Rienzi of the Romance is far different from the Rienzi of History. The contemporary biographer, who has generally received the credit of rare impartiality, inspires not the reader with that belief in the virtue and nobility of the Tribune which the author of Eugene Aram instils into our minds. We see nothing in Mr. Bulwer's Romance of the obese and bloated wine-bibbing debauchee. We see him only as a hero and martyr, as pure in his private and in his public relations. The Romance writer describes him too, as a man of gentle feeling, which assuredly he was not—first he was, even to a Brutus-like justice, and endowed with a lofty and towering, but not a refined, intellect. Some leaven of the "sordid hostelry," which was his birth-place, clung to him throughout his career. Unselfish we cannot believe him to have been; he loved the people because he was one of them; he hated the aristocracy because they had insulted him. The memory of these insults was ever rankling in his soul and goading him on to action. Revenge was his guiding principle. It was not pity, it was not justice, it was not the love of liberty; it was revenge which stimulated his dormant energies, and stirred up those resolves in his mind, which led to the great revolution of which he was eventually the victim.—"Yes"—he says in the language of Miss Mitford's Tragedy,

Yes, I've trod thy halls,
Scorned and derided midst their ribald crew,

A licensed jester, save the rap and bella;
I have borne this—and I have borne the death,
The unavenged path of a dear brother.
I seemed—I was, a base, ignoble slave.
What am I—peace I say—what am I now?
Head of this great re-public, chief of Rome;
In all but name her sovereign.

Even Bulwer, in spite of his admiration for the Tribune and all that he has said about patriotism, confesses in the very first chapter of his Romance, that it was revenge which first incited Rienzi to action. When the spear of the ruthless Colonna passed through the body of Cola's brother, loud were the cries of Cola for justice. "See ye, Sirs, he was but too gentle; and they will not give us justice because his murderer was a noble and a Colonna. And this gold too, gold for a brother's blood! Will they not," and the young man's eyes glared like fire—"will they not give us justice? I shall show!" So saying he bent his head over the corpse; his lips muttered as with some prayer or invocation, and then rising, his face was as pale as the dead beside him; but it was no longer pale with grief!

"From that bloody clay and that inward prayer Cola di Rienzi rose a new being. With his young brother died his own youth. But for that event the future Liberator of Rome might have been but a dreamer, a scholar, a poet—the peaceful rival of Petrarch, a man of thoughts not deeds. But from that time all his faculties, energies, fancies, genius, became concentrated to a single point, and patriotism, before a vision, leapt into the life and vigour of a passion, lastingly kindled, stubbornly hardened, and awfully consecrated—by revenge."

This is historical, and both the Dramatist and the Romance writer have availed themselves of this pathetic incident in Cola Rienzi's life, making such frequent allusion to it in their respective works, that the Tribune seems to think far more of revenging his brother's blood than of liberating his fallen fellow-countrymen. The latter consideration appears more like an afterthought—a means—a sort of appendage to his plan of revenge. It was his scheme to crush the aristocracy; by crushing the aristocracy he consummated his revenge and at the same time he liberated the people. "Accade," writes the contemporary historian, "che uno suo frato fu ucciso, e non ne fu fatta vendetta di sua morte: non lo potè a jutare; pensò lungo mano dirizzare la catteda di Roma mulo guidata." Miss Mitford, in the second act of her Tragedy, wherein Rienzi addresses the multitude thus beautifully in the person of the Liberator, alludes to this exciting cause—

—I that speak to ye—

I had a brother once, a gracious boy
Full of all gentleness, of calmest hope—
Of sweet and quiet joy—oh! how I loved
That gracious boy!—younger by fifteen years,
Brother at once and son! In one short hour
The pretty, harmless boy was slain! I saw
The corse, the mangled corse, and when I cried
For vengeance—rouse ye Romans! rouse ye slaves!
Have ye brave sons? look in the next fierce brawl
To see them die. Have ye fair daughters? look
To see them live, torn from your arms, dishonoured, Dishonoured—and if ye dare call for justice—
Be answered by the lash.

The sudden breaking off from the narrative of his wrongs to the vehement outburst of "rouse ye Romans, rouse ye slaves" is peculiarly fine, and at the same time highly tragic. He had gone through, with controlled feelings, the history of his brother's death, but when he came to that part of the narrative, where he was about to tell of the insults he himself received, when he called aloud for "justice," his indignation arrived at an excess which he has no longer power to moderate; he cannot tell of the cutting words which were spoken, and the contemptuous acts were done unto him, by the proud nobles; the memory of these things lashes his soul into a whirlpool of uncontrollable passion, and he breaks of into a wild cry for vengeance—vengeance upon the oppressors. If we have mistaken the true meaning of this passage, Miss Mitford and our readers must forgive us.

They who only know Rienzi in Mr. Bulwer's Romance, and have delighted (as who has not?) in the stirring scenes of that touching story, will marvel at seeing so little in the drama, with which they have been previously acquainted. They will miss Nina (what hosts of pleasant memories that name awakens in our mind)—they will miss Nina altogether, and they will see Adrian Colonna under the title of Angelo Colonna, but oh! not half so angelic as the Colonna in Bulwer's Romance. And Irene, the sister of Rienzi, they will not see in the play; but in her place is Claudia, Rienzi's daughter, and the bride of Angelo Colonna. Mr. Bulwer, in the preface to his Romance, pays this fine tribute to the genius of Miss Mitford, "I cannot conclude without rendering the tribute of my humble praise and homage to the versatile and gifted author of the beautiful tragedy of Rienzi. Considering that our hero be the same, considering that we had the same materials from which to choose our several stories, I trust that I shall be found to have little, if at all, trespassed upon ground previously occupied. With the single exception of a love intrigue between a relative of Rienzi and one of the antagonist party, which makes the plot of Miss Mitford's Tragedy, and is little more than an episode in my romance, having slight effect on the conduct and none on the fate of the hero, I am not aware of any resemblance between the two works. And even the incident I could easily have removed, had I deemed it the least advisable. But where there is so much it were an honour to imitate; it would be almost a discredit had I nothing that resembled." And if we consider the difficulties, under which the dramatist labours, but which the novelist has not to encounter, we should find it difficult to determine between the respective merits of the Tragedy and the Romance of Rienzi. The very nature of a romance gives a wide scope to the writer for illustrating the times, in which he lays the scene of his story, but a dramatist can scarcely be descriptive, and not at all discursive, and must confine himself to one particular epoch, unless he violates the unites most flagitiously. The career of Rienzi is better described in the Novel, but we doubt whether we can say the same of the character.

Thus far had we written, with the exception of a few introductory words, before witnessing the performance of Rienzi on Friday night. We have spoken at some length of the play; it now becomes our duty to speak of the players. We are truly sorry that we cannot do this in terms of very flattering eulogium. We love to praise far better than to censure, and Judea damnatur cum nocens absolvitur assuredly is not our motto; but praise becomes of little value, it is forthcoming upon every occasion, and we should be right glad to see a bolder tone of criticism introduced into our Indian literature. Nothing checks the advance of intellectual improvement so much as indiscriminate praise. We shall never see really good acting upon the Calcutta stage until gentlemen are told when they play badly, especially, gentlemen who can play better if they please, but whom too much praise has rendered careless—careless from over-confidence. It is not enough that an actor should know the words of his part, he must comprehend, fully comprehend, the individuality of the character he attempts to embody; and this demands study, without which, be the natural talents of the actor what they may, he is sure to be precipitated into a failure. We do not infer that the favorite amateur who represented Rienzi on Friday night did not understand the character of the hero; we think that he understood it very well and that he was throughout the Tragedy the very Rienzi which we have depicted at the commencement of this article; but he was not Miss Mitford's Rienzi. He may have studied, and we doubt not but that he did, the character of Rienzi as portrayed in the pages of Gibbon and the co-temporary historians, but we can hardly think that he studied Miss Mitford's Tragedy, with any great degree of attention. We have no great objection to his preferring the authority of the historian to that of the dramatist, especially as in doing so his opinion coincides most entirely with our own, nor should we object to his calling in his historical knowledge to aid him in his stage representations, if the words that he is called upon to speak in the Tragedy could possibly have proceeded from the historical Rienzi—from the Rienzi as performed the other night. The words spoken, and the manner of speaking them, were in almost every instance utterly at discord. We saw two Rienzi's throughout the drama instead of one individual character. Young did not act this part in the least degree like Mr. —, and Young was its original personator; indeed, we believe it was written for him. We were disappointed; nor we had studied the play and there were sundry favorite passages which we had marked, anxiously looking forward to their delivery with a vague impression of how they ought to be delivered, partly derived from our own knowledge of the subject, and partly from our recollection of Charles Young; but we missed almost all these points. For example, in the passage to which we have alluded above in terms of especial commendation, when Rienzi is telling the history of his wrongs and breaks off abruptly from his narrative into an energetic appeal to his fellow citizens to bestir themselves from their slavish indolence, Mr. —, instead of pausing in the middle of the line and changing entirely the tones of his voice from the broken accents of sorrow awakened by the memory of the brother's death to the loud outburst of fiery indignation and revengeful craving at the thoughts of the injuries they had put upon him, ran on with the line as though there had been no stop at all, no sudden breaking off, no sentence unfinished, no change of feeling, delivering the latter portion of the line precisely in the same voice in which he commenced it—

— And when I cried

became

And when I cried,

'For vengeance, rouse ye Romans, rouse ye slaves, as though the whole line had been a portion of the same sentence.

The scene with Claudia (Mrs. Leach) after the condemnation of Angelo Colonna, was far the best in the whole Tragedy; indeed a portion of it was admirably played. We did see a handkerchief on two uplifted seemingly to wipe away a tear; indeed, we acknowledge, that though old play-goers ourselves, and upon all occasions as worldly and callous-hearted as most people, we felt certain creepings of the flesh which told us that our feelings were moved to rather an unwonted degree. If the whole tragedy had been acted as well as this scene, we should have thought Rienzi a much better performance than Othello, as we now pronounce it to have been worse. We do not allude to the character of the hero, but to the entire representation of the play.

We need say nothing of the Messrs. Ryckman; they played as they always do, deliciously; but of the Farce we must say a few words. It was well, though somewhat overacted, but it went off heavily enough—it not only wearied, but in some instances it disgusted us. With all submission to the gentlemen who have the management of these things, we think it would be as well if they had passed their pens across sundry and divers passages of the farce, which in our opinion, and we are not very squeamish, were exceedingly indelicate and low. It should be remembered at these assemblages, in a crowded night, as it was on Friday, a great portion of the ladies of Calcutta are gathered together within the walls of the Chowringhee Theatre; it should likewise be remembered that here we have no "gods" to whose vicious appetites unwholesome food is to be administered, and therefore we do not see any occasion for preserving these indecencies of an earlier age in the stage representations of the present day, at least let them be abandoned in Calcutta, where an audience consists almost exclusively of a country well-born and educated, and we should hope therefore refined. If may be said, "but 'to the pure all things are pure,'" but this is no excuse whatever for indecency. We do not suppose that the double entendres of last night were understood by half the people present; but we think it would have been far better if they had been, as Shakespeare says, "reformed altogether."

At the conclusion of the performances, Mrs. Leach delivered a valedictory address, written, we believe, by Capt. McNaughten. We have not seen it, but as far as we could judge from hearing it delivered, it was exceedingly well-written and appropriate; as good and as little commonplace as it is possible to make these addresses got up for an especial occasion, where the subject of all others is the most hackneyed and the least poetical. It was spoken with much feeling and expression. The house was crowded throughout.—Herald, January 14.

MRS. LEACH'S FAREWELL.

Mrs. Leach took her Farewell Benefit last night to the fullest house we ever remember to have seen at the Chowringhee Theatre. Exclusive of the admirable selections she had made, the simple and much to be lamented circumstance of her last appearance was ample incentive for so full an assemblage. The house was literally crammed and more than once were apprehensions entertained by the denizens below of the unceremonious descent, per smash, of the Gods above. Those, however few, that were not present on this very interesting occasion, have to regret the richest treat ever afforded to the bistrionic world of India.

Although we have had the pleasure of seeing Master Walter in a great variety of characters, we never saw him in finer feather and more at home than he was last night. The maintenance throughout of the fiery spirit and majestic deportment of the ambitious and the noble Tribune, his sedulous address to the rabble, his subsequent defiance of their defection, his natural tenderness at the anguish of his daughter, &c., &c., were of themselves sufficient to stamp him an actor of the highest class, and evinced a strict study of the very arduous part he had undertaken. This is but a cursory notice of one of the perfectest pieces of acting we ever witnessed on the boards of our Drury, and we can only repeat our consolatory comment to the absentees that they lost, that which we would not have lost for twenty catarrhs and all the untellable tin' of Croesus!

Mrs. Leach, the elfin spirit, who by the magic of her matchless attractions and the tender appeal of her last appearance, summoned this marvellous congregation of Calcuttaites, was as usual, au fait throughout and more than once elicited the most rapturous and deserved applause, particularly in the graphic scene of Angelo Colonna's execution and her fall which, by the same token, we observed very nearly capsized her papa, albeit against all the scientific rules of gravitation, which, we have read in sundry abstruse Encyclopedias, maintain that the lighter body is hauled down by the heavier! But let that pass.

What Ursini meant by making a sort of absurd badinage of a serious part, by uttering words in a comic strain that were evidently intended to be tragic, is to us utterly incomprehensible. It is a mistaken notion to imagine, that such travesties tell, and if he would take our humble advice he would reform altogether that system of ill-conceived pleasantry.

The elder Ryckman's Non Piu Mesta, was played quite à la Nicholson. It struck us by the by (having handled a Rudall and Rose in our day) that his flute was a singularly small one, counter-balanced peradventure by the hunda longitude of his digits which was equally conspicuous, his style of playing being, what Tom Hunter would call, high actioned! The Suonita Tromba of his son was decidedly the best specimen of piano forte playing we ever heard. The exquisite maintenance of the air through the prestissimo variations and the astonishing velocity with which he rattles his fingers, which are also happily Bröbdingagian! over the keys, is perfectly wonderful. The last rose of summer and the duet with the basso-bassoon were also perfect chefs d'œuvres. How proud must the sire feel at the rapidly culminating talent of his son. We venture to predict that he may confidently rely on his soon attaining the very apex of his calling.

*Te doctarum hederæ præmia frontium

Love à la mode was very creditably done by all therein engaged.

Sir Archy was very good in his keen sarcasms although his Scotch, we thought, was far from genuine. Sir Callaghan O'Brallaghan labored slightly under the same disadvantage, but with that exception (and it is no easy matter, we beg to assure our readers en passant, for your John Bull to come the Tipperary) got through his part in right good style. Master Modus (as was his wont, in days of yore, when last we saw him) made a very happy (improvisatore) allusion to the heartless apathy which has of late been shamefully evinced on the subject of the Wellington testimonial.

The Beau Mordicai of "a debutant", was a very successful performance indeed. With such an inauguration he may, we calculate (as Jonathan would say) safely rely on his future Thespic prosperity. Squire Groom was but so so and strutted the boards backwards and forwards too often and too much after the fashion of a clown at Astley's for our taste. His Roscian Personage has a deuced hard mouth and requires to be awfully hard held in some of his dramatic handicaps! Mrs. Leach's Charlotte (although a character by no means calculated for the display of sack and bushin genius, if our readers will allow us the masculine adjective) was in her usual style of excellence.

We cannot ~~leave~~ to the painful portion of this our hasty critique, on our indulgent readers will deign to rub it.

Alas! the immense crowd, the strictest silence was preserved (even by those Babylon blockheads who delight at times in disturbing others and making themselves assiduously conspicuous by their rude, untimely laughter and their imaginary wit) when Mrs. Leach came forward to falter her valedictory address which couched in the most apposite and touching terms, was delivered with the intensest pathos. There was no acting there, but the pure ebullition of the tenderest emotions of the heart, kindled by that relentless corroding and, alas! inevitable word FAREWELL.

MRS LEACH'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

Though oft-times here, with anxious, faltering heart,
I've stood before you, in an acted part;
While yet the mind (by alter kindness nerv'd)
Still fear'd the censure which it knew deserv'd,
And e'er, beneath your kindness, grown secure,
I banish'd doubt, and felt hope's visions sure:
Yet never, even in the earliest hours,
Of my young trials in these thespian bowers,
Have I a task so hard and mournful known,
As this—where all the affliction is my own.
(Not, like the mimic'd grief, alas! to cease,
When the fall'n curtain ends the fictitious piece)
As this, to speak that severing word of pain,
Which breaks a charm I ne'er can know again.
In you I've found, through many a happy year,
The fostering guardians of my stage career;
The patrons warm and constant in my cause,
Forbearing blame, but lavish of applause;
Whose cheering smiles each humble effort paid,
And cast each fault (of many!) in the shade.

Can I, then, hence, with light, ungrateful breast,
Unutter'd thanks, and feelings all repress'd,
Depart from these our own dear Drury's walls,
Where to the last your praise upon me falls?
Oh, no!—oh, no! though cold and faint appear,
The words which bear my anguish to your ear;
Not therefore less my sadden'd heart o'flows,
Not therefore less will memory fond repose
On your long-granted kindness, which has cast
Its blessing o'er me, ev'n unto the last.
Where'er I drag this health-deserted frame,
Unchang'd by clime, my heart shall rest the same;
Shall nurse the gratitude so feebly told,
Which time shall not impair, nor age make cold;
And yield, if on me e'er grief's blight descend,
The whisper'd solace,—“there you still have friends.”
That spell shall sweetly every fear allay,
Shall check despondence, when it else might sway;
To scenes of joy (and such may be in store)
From warm remembrance, and one rapture more;
Hope's precious balm to fate's dark hour supply,
Or chase the tear from sorrow's trembling eye.
But wherefore, lingering, in your presence keep,
With woe fraught breast, and struggling not to weep?
Why check the word which must at last be spoken?
Cling to the link which must to night be broken!
O! generous friends!—Oh! patrons, firm and dear!
Deem not my words, though feeble, insincere.
The heart o'erburden'd finds all language fail,
And feelings still o'er eloquence prevail.
But you, with lenient judgment to the last,
Will not pronounce me thankless for the past;
Nor turn, with harsh suspicion on your brow,
From the spoil'd child of your indulgence now;
Whose lips and tears, heart-prompted, weakly tell,
The bitter pang with which she sighs—Farewell!

SUICIDES IN CENTRAL INDIA.

We have been favoured by Major Sleeman, with a record kept by his orders of the number of suicides committed in the district under his charge, in the years 1831 and 35. The reports which were continually brought to him of the repeated acts of self-destruction, made him naturally anxious to discover the cause of the unusual frequency of this practice, and he directed the native officers to ascertain and place on record, whenever it could be discovered, the reason by which these victims had been actuated. It is singular to observe on how slight occasions many of these acts of suicide have been perpetrated; sometimes for an attack of dysentery, at other times, for a pain in the intestines, and sometimes, through grief for bereavement. It is also worthy of notice, that out of forty cases that are thus reported, thirty were women.

England was for many years considered to be distinguished above other countries, for the number of suicides committed in it, and this was attributed to the gloom of our climate. But those statistical researches which have given the present age so peculiar a character, have served to dispel this idea; and it is now ascertained that the number of suicides in France, where the climate is so much more propitious and cheerful than in England, is greater in proportion to the population. But a farther corroboration of the fact, that climate has little to do with such acts, is found in the report we now publish, which, in a climate, directly the reverse of England, gives us forty suicides in a population of two hundred and fifty thousand. Suicide is not the result of climate but of morals.—Friend of India.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.

Draft Memorial laid before the Meeting on the 1st of January, 1838.

TO THE HON'BLE THE COURT OF DIRECTORS.

Sheweth—That the despatch of your Hon'ble Court addressed to the Governor-General in Council, and dated 3d May last, has been laid before the subscribers to the Civil Service Annuity Fund, at their annual meeting, having been communicated by the Government to the Managers of the Fund for that especial purpose, and thus has been printed and circulated to the Service.

That in this despatch your Hon'ble Court has declared your approval and confirmation of the rules passed by the Service to give effect to the measures of indulgence towards the Service sanctioned by the orders of your Hon'ble Court, dated 27th May, 1835; but your Hon'ble Court repeat the injunction that the rules so passed shall not be extended beyond three years without your further special sanction.

Your memorialists, on the part of the whole body of the Civil Servants, subscribers to the fund, whom they represent, beg to offer to your Hon'ble Court their humble thanks for the consideration manifested for the interests and wishes of your Servants in these orders.

Through the effect of the provision made for permitting the retirement of Servants on their completing one quarter only instead of one half of the value of the annuities, no less than fifty of your senior Civil Servants will be enabled to retire in independence, the majority of whom must otherwise have spent the remainder of their days in India, some through loss of fortune, from disastrous commercial failures, others through disappointment and tardy promotion in their career of service, and many, it need not be concealed, through early improvidence and debts contracted under temptations that no longer exist.

Your Hon'ble Court has benefited directly from these retirements in the immediate relief they have given to the finances of this presidency; for a large proportion of the Servants who have so relinquished or are about to relinquish office, have been in the receipt of personal allowances and augmented salaries not continued to their successors; and, in many instances, a saving of the entire salary has been effected by abolition of the office on the vacancy occurring. Moreover, through the liberal provision thus afforded, your Hon'ble Court has been relieved from the claim which your Commercial Servants of this presidency, whose career had been confined to that department so as to unfit them for high offices in other lines of service, must indubitably have possessed of your liberality, consequent on the abrupt discontinuance of your trade in India. But the most important benefit of all has resulted, from the means and the inducement afforded by this more liberal provision to meritorious Servants worn out by their unrelenting exertions to relinquish important official situations, the duties of which they were from infirmity no longer able to perform.

The large number of retirements occasioned by these measures, has not, however, had the effect that might have been anticipated in accelerating the promotion of Junior Servants; owing to the number of situations abolished, or filled by persons from other professions. To the working branches of the Service, therefore, there has yet been little gain in present position, and if the rule for completing only a quarter of the value of the annuity on retirement, is to cease altogether at the end of the third year, there will be none in future prospect, from the measures of relief devised by your Hon'ble Court.

Your memorialists being thoroughly convinced that the rule in question may safely be continued with advantage to the fund and without imposing new burthens on the finances of your Hon'ble Court, and feeling strongly the inevitable consequences that will follow from its sudden cessation are emboldened again to urge upon your Hon'ble Court their humble request that the present order for the rule to cease after it shall have been applied to the annuities of 1836, may be re-considered.

Your memorialists would submit that the effect of fixing a date for the cessation of the rule, has already been felt injuriously: Junior Servants whose due period of service and residence has just been completed, have hurried forward their applications and have retired without the excuse of failing health, and before their accumulation of means was properly advanced upon a calculation that the annuity at a quarter value now is the same thing as one taken two years hence under the condition of completing the half value. Thus the extra inducement offered within the period fixed producing anticipated applications from Junior Servants, the whole number of annuities is likely to be prematurely taken, and several Seniors will be deprived of their just provision, when in ordinary course the period of their retirement shall arrive. The regular current of promotion, which, while all are confident of obtaining the retiring provision when their turn shall come, flows evenly with contentment to all, threatens to become unnecessarily deranged, and the advantage conceded instead of being a fairly earned and certain provision, will be the prize of hasty eagerness, and a source of contentious jealousy and evasive feeling.

If your Hon'ble Court had graciously permitted the rule to stand until stopped by a vote of the Service, the annuities granted on improved terms, instead of being seized with greedy avidity so as to threaten a deficiency to meet the applications, which your memorialists at present see reason to apprehend, would have remained for distribution amongst your Servants in the order of their being ready for retirement, and the measure would have been much more extensively beneficial without injury or loss of any kind to your Hon'ble Court.

Your memorialists solicit attention to the following brief reference to the principle on which the Annuity Fund was established as affording incontrovertible proof of the ability of the Fund to provide its annuities on the terms of quarter payment.

Your Hon'ble Court is aware that the prospective estimate, upon which the assurance of the stability of the Fund is founded, assumes an annual subscription from the Service of about three lakhs and a quarter (the real average has exceeded three lakhs and a half,) and a like sum being reckoned as donation from your Hon'ble Court, the sum of six lakhs and a half of sicca rupees was thus annually to be provided; but in order to furnish nine annuities per annum, an income somewhat exceeding nine lakhs was necessary, the calculation was therefore so made, that through fines to the extent of half the value of the annuities, a capital in shape of unappropriated balance should be provided in the early years of the institution, from the interest of which at six per cent., added to a permanent sum of about one lakh from fines, the remaining sum of two lakhs and a half of sicca rupees per annum should be secured at the end of the 25th year.

In the first ten years of the Fund, the expenditure for the purchase of annuities, instead of being nine lakhs per annum, was less than half the estimate, owing to the paucity of retirements. Consequently the accumulation, instead of arising from fines, and proceeding in the manner estimated, was a net saving out of the income from subscription and donation, and on the first May, 1836, it amounted to the enormous sum of Co. Rs. 74,02,874, or Sa. Rs. 69,40,195, exclusive entirely of the values set apart yearly as equivalent to the annuities furnished.

Your Hon'ble Court, upon representation of this condition of the Fund, and of the unfortunate circumstances which had combined to prevent the due retirement of your Bengal Servants, allowed annuities to be granted for three years on the terms of quarter payment. But with due foresight, and in order to secure the stability of the Fund, it was ordered, that before making this appropriation out of the inordinately large balance that had accumulated, one-third of the value of over-due annuities, together with any that might remain unclaimed at the end of the three years, should at once be added to the capital of the Fund, the interest of which was required to make good the annual income of future years.

Through the operation of this order the sum of Co.'s Rs. 39,81,301, or Sa. Rs. 36,69,969 only out of the above stated large accumulated balance was set apart to provide annuities on the new terms, leaving Co.'s Rs. 34,21,573, or Sa. Rs. 32,70,226 still available as a permanent capital yielding interest in addition to the other sources of income.

According to the accounts laid upon the table on the 1st

Balance as	}	56,75,082
per account, Deduct remainder of
the appro-	}	35,81,301
riated

January 1838, this balance on the 1st May 1837, was increased to 44,60,763 Co's Rs. or 41,81,255 Sa. Rs. from which six lakhs being deducted to supply the additional six annuities of present year, there still remains Sa. Rs. 35,00,000, yielding interest in the perpetuity. At six per cent. this reserve will give 2,10,000 sicca rupees to be added to the subscriptions a donation yielding between six lakhs and a half or seven lakhs. The Fund, has thus an assumed income from its present sources of very nearly nine lakhs, and as the balance is still increasing the income will very shortly exceed that amount.

This being premised, it must be obvious to your Hon'ble Court, that the question as to the ability of the Fund to continue the rule sanctioned for three years, under which a reduced number of annuities are granted on the condition of completing payment of one quarter of the value must resolve itself purely into a question, whether an income amounting at present to very nearly nine lakhs of Rupees, and expected shortly to exceed that amount, is equal to the providing of the number of annuities on such terms.

But nine lakhs of sicca rupees is the full average value of nine annuities, which might be purchased with the sum, without the Fund's demanding any further payment from retiring Servants. The rule for completing half the value was adopted, first in order to admit Senior Servants from the date of the Fund's being established, and that their payments might from the required capital, and secondly, for equalization of the benefit yielded by the Fund, and in order to provide a perpetual source of income, then deemed indispensable to secure annuities in sufficient number. If, however, the interest of the capital of the Fund yields a sufficiency of income to provide the full amount required, the fines may be dispensed with as a source of income, and a lower amount than one half may safely be assumed as the amount to be made good by the retiring Servants. The question therefore of the Fund's ability to continue furnishing even nine annuities on the quarter payment terms, resolves itself into a simple calculation, whether the refunds to the fortunate Servants whose subscriptions exceed the value of the annuities, are likely to equal, fall short, or exceed the fines to be required from others to make good that proportion.

Refund 18,000-13-5

The result of the experimental rule to the present date has shown an excess of fines above refunds amounting to 1,17,532 Co's. Rs.

But your memorialists are not prepared to draw from this circumstance the conclusion, that the subscriptions of retiring members will ordinarily fall short of that proportion, more especially when the Fund shall have been of that duration, that servants will ordinarily have subscribers for the whole period of their service. Although therefore your memorialists are convinced that the Fund may safely grant annuities to the extent of its fixed income on the terms of requiring no further payment in the way of fine from retiring Servants, and the necessity of making good, a quarter value may fitly and advantageously be applied as a limit only to the benefit any Servant may take from the Fund, the refund of excess subscriptions above that proportion ought not to stand as part of any permanent rule of the institution.

If indeed your Hon'ble Court determine to restrict the number of annuities permanently to six per annum or two-thirds of the original number, the values of the remaining three may be applied to the refund of excess subscriptions; but if the whole income be applied to granting annuities, there will be no source from which to supply this outlay.

Your memorialists therefore beg submissively to solicit from your Hon'ble Court, not that the rule as passed by the Service may be allowed to stand, under which only six annuities can be granted annually on the terms of quarter payment with refund of excess of subscriptions, but that you will permit the Fund to grant annuities not exceeding nine in number to the extent of the annual fixed income of the Fund from subscriptions, your donation, and interest on the fixed capital, under the condition of requiring retiring Servants to make good to the extent of a quarter of the value of their annuities; but receiving no refund of any excess in the amount of their subscriptions, in case these should at the time of retirement with interest exceed the annuities taken.

And your memorialists will ever pray.—Calcutta Courier, Jan. 3.

STEAM MEMORIAL, &c

The following draft of a memorial to the Board of Control intended to be proposed at the public meeting on Thursday morning next, is published for general information:—

THE RESPECTFUL MEMORIAL, &c.

SHEWETH,—That your memorialists, under date 5th March, one thousand, eight hundred and thirty-six, addressed a memorial to your Right Hon'ble Board, praying that certain resolutions of the Select Committee of the Commons, which sat in July, 1834, recommending the immediate establishment of a Steam Communication with India by the Red Sea, might be forthwith fully acted upon; and that steps might be immediately taken in conjunction with the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company, to establish a regular Steam Communication between the principal India Ports and the Red Sea.

That your memorialists very gratefully acknowledge the consideration and attention of your Right Hon'ble Board, in having in a letter, dated the 17th October, 1836, through your Secretary, to the address of the Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, Chief Justice of Fort William in Bengal, who signed the memorial on their behalf, acknowledged the receipt of the memorial, and declared that the subject should receive that consideration to which its great importance and the high respectability of the parties subscribing it were fairly entitled.

That since the date of the above memorial, your memorialists understand from a statement made by the President of your Right Hon'ble Board to the Select Committee of the House of Commons appointed in June last, to enquire into the best means of establishing a communication by steam with India by way of the Red Sea, that the Hon'ble Court have concluded an arrangement with Her Majesty's Government for the establishment of a monthly steam communication between Great Britain and India by way of the Red Sea, the communication being directed to Bombay; which arrangement was approved by the President of your Right Hon'ble Board as being conforming to one of the alternatives proposed in the 5th Resolution of the Select Committee of the House of Commons in 1834, which left to the joint consideration of the Home Government and East India Company "whether the communication should be in the first instance from Bombay, from Calcutta, or according to the combined plan of the Bengal Steam Committee."

That your memorialists, sensible of the advantages derivable from the establishment of a frequent expeditious and regular Steam Communication limited to Bombay, adopted as it has been by the President of your Right Hon'ble Board, in order to prevent delay in the commencement of so useful an enterprise, desire to express their gratitude to your Right Hon'ble Board for the establishment of such a communication; but your memorialists respectfully submit, that the advantages derivable from such limited communication, are in reality of little importance, when considered with reference to those which must result from extending it to the other presidencies: whether in regard to the intrinsic advantages themselves, or to the respective costs at which each is attainable.

That your memorialists have the less hesitation in pressing upon the consideration of your Right Hon'ble Board the expediency of the immediate extension of the communication to the other presidencies in consequence of perceiving, from the statement rendered by the President of your Right Hon'ble Board to the Select Committee of the Hon'ble the House of Commons, that the Hon'ble the Court of Directors have reserved the question of such extension for consideration after trial has been fairly made of the limited communication, and have further recommended to the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General to send either the Atalanta or Berenice round from Calcutta to Madras, thence to Ceylon and thence to Socatra and up the Red Sea, with a view to ascertain practically what objection there may be to that route; and because the select Committee of the House of Commons which was appointed in June to enquire into the best means of establishing a communication by steam with India by way of the Red Sea, to whom this purpose of establishing the communication to Bombay alone was known, recommended, expressly with reference to such extension, a continued and zealous attention to the subject on the part of Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company; which extension, moreover, appeared to the Committee perfectly compatible with the arrangements in progress towards the limited communication.

That your memorialists regard this reservation on the part of the Hon'ble Court of the consideration of the ulterior extension of the communication to the three presidencies, and the recommendation to the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General, to cause an experimental voyage to be made from Calcutta, as a recognition, by the Hon'ble Court, of the superiority of the extended over the limited communication; and the President of your Right Honorable Board having expressly declared his opinion in favor of such extended communication, your memorialists therefore deem it to be the less necessary to dwell on that superiority. They would, however, briefly state, that under the restriction to Bombay the advantages of the communication to the rest of India, beyond the more speedy conveyance of correspondence, and that limited as to size, are of little value, from Calcutta, between which place and Europe by far the most extended intercourse obtains. Passengers can never be sure of reaching Bombay in time for the steamer; and your memorialists would respectfully observe, that it is chiefly from mutual personal intercourse that the benefits and advantages contemplated by the Hon'ble Court of Directors in their despatch to the Government of Bombay under date the 11th March, 1834, must spring.

That, as regards the intercommunication between the Home Authorities and the Presidencies on the eastern side of India, and especially the Supreme Government, the confinement of the communication to Bombay, must limit the correspondence to short letters consisting merely of general heads of information on the one hand and instructions on the other; while by the establishment of a monthly steam communication with the three presidencies, the minutest details of the several Governments, recorded in the proceedings of the Governments, as well as in those of the several boards, could be conveyed Home monthly as they occurred, within 60 days of their transmission from India; thus furnishing the ruling authorities at home with a regular connected series of fully detailed perfect information of all proceedings throughout all India, in accordance with the grand desideratum as declared by Mr. Peacock, in his evidence before the select committee of the House of Commons, viz. "In time of war expeditious communication is advisable; in time of peace regularity is the thing and perfect knowledge when we have it; if we have a regular communication and imperfect knowledge occasional expedition will not make up for it."

That your memorialists refrain from enlarging further on the obvious incalculable mutual advantages which must arise to the two countries by approximation in the most ample form of which it is capable; and rather address themselves to urging on your Right Hon'ble Board to concur with the Hon'ble the Court of Directors in the immediate establishment of the communication to the three presidencies on the most enlarged and liberal scale; worthy at once of the two countries, and of the prospects of real good, which such a communication, so established, hold out not merely to India but to the whole of Eastern Asia.

That it appears to your memorialists that no experimental voyage can be necessary to establish the practicability of the communication being carried on monthly from all the presidencies of India, due attention being had in the South west monsoon in the Arabian Sea (such a course being taken as circuitous as may render necessary; that in fact there is a great deal of the world where steam navigation cannot so regularly and securely be carried on as in India, where from the regularity with which the wind blows a steamer can take a position to windward of her intended port without fear in the intermediate time of a change of wind.

That referring to the declared opinion of the Select Committee of the House of Commons to the effect that the more extended system of communication is perfectly compatible with the arrangement in progress for the limited communication to Bombay, your memorialists would observe that this compatibility could be much more easily and advantageously applied, if the arrangements for the whole measure were in progress simultaneously, than if those for the extension are left out of consideration in the arrangements for the limited communication; because it may be found that arrangements sufficient for the latter may not be so for the former, whence it might be necessary, at some sacrifice to remodel the establishment prepared for the limited communication.

That your memorialists observe from the evidence of Mr. Peacock, before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, that the overland postage of the letters sent from all other parts of India to Bombay for steam conveyance is considered as an indemnity to the East India Company towards reimbursement of one-half of the charge of conveyance of the mails between Alexandria and Bombay.

That the individuals residing in Calcutta and its neighbourhood send and receive very nearly one-third of the whole number of letters that pass between England and India, notwithstanding which it is very impracticable to distribute letters from England by steam vessels by any other means than through Bombay, of course your memorialists could not complain of the necessary charge for the conveyance of their letters between Calcutta and that place; but when the British Legislature, with characteristic liberality in cases of transmission of correspondence, has limited the postage of a single letter to 1s. from the Red Sea to any port in the East Indies, your memorialists do consider it to be unreasonable and unfair that they should be compelled to contribute to the means of transmitting to Bombay only, by an additional payment of fifteen annas or 1s 9d.; that the inhabitants of Madras and its neighbourhood are in like manner subject to this unreasonable impost in the reduced amount of the overland postage to that place. In fact your memorialists submit that by the restriction to Bombay the intended liberality of the legislature of Great Britain and the consequent advantage of the multiplication of correspondence is shut out from the inhabitants of Calcutta and Madras and from others residing within two or three days' walk distances, involving, your memorialists venture to assume, nearly if not quite the half in number of all the letters despatched from India.

That such unreasonable and unfair impost necessarily must continue until the communication is extended according to the prayer of your memorialists, and your memorialists ventured to hope that even under this view alone your Right Hon'ble Board will see the expediency and justice of at once extending the communication to the three presidencies, especially when, in addition to the above heavy tax on their correspondence, your memorialists as well as the inhabitants of Madras and its neighbourhood, are unable to despatch by the regular route to Bombay for conveyance to England by a steamer at whatever cost, or however important the occasion may be, any document exceeding 12 tolas or 4oz. 10dwt. in weight; the heavy baggy any parcel of greater weight than 6oz. 10dwt. by which latter conveyance the time occupied between Calcutta and Bombay is nearly doubled. On time by the regular day, in the N. E. monsoon, when taken with the steam mail being thirteen days, while in the S. W. monsoon it is estimated it will take 15 or 16 days.

That your memorialists firmly believe that until such extended communication, as that now prayed for, is established an almost universal dissatisfaction will prevail throughout India especially as Her Majesty's ministers have, through the Lords of Treasury and the particular ministerial authority for the affairs of India, the President of your Right Hon'ble Board, expressly declared their unqualified concurrence in the now repeated anxious wish and desire of your memorialists and of India generally; while the evidence lately taken before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, cannot fail still further to satisfy your memorialists, and the people of India in general, of the justice, sound policy, and expediency of at once establishing a regular and expeditious steam communication between England and the several presidencies on a scale adequate to the growing wants of India in her relations with Great Britain.

That your memorialists therefore most earnestly and respectfully pray that your Right Hon'ble Board will, in conjunction with the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, forthwith establish such a steam communication between England and India as may give public satisfaction and fulfil what has been admitted by the highest authority connected with the government of British India to be the "just expectations of the people both of England and of India."

N. B. the memorial to the Court of Directors is the same mutatis mutandis and with the omission of the second paragraph.—Hurkaru, January 3.

CAPTAIN GRINDLAY'S EXPLANATIONS.

To C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Secretary to the New Bengal Steam Fund.

Sir,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated 1st May, 1837, enclosing a resolution passed by the committee of Calcutta at a meeting held on that day.

As I trust that by this time my constituents in Calcutta entertain a feeling with regard to my labours very different from that which is expressed in the resolution which you have transmitted, I might perhaps be justified in abstaining from any comment upon it, and trusting to the slow, but generally certain effect of time to secure me justice.

The adoption of this course, however, might not be free from the appearance of disrespect, and for this reason I think it necessary to make a few explanatory remarks.

In the first place I must observe, that the resolution is based upon an assumption that is incorrect. It is assumed that I have not advocated the extended plan of steam communication, and for this imaginary neglect the penalty of the disapprobation of my constituents is to be inflicted. I cannot but regret, and not less on account of those who passed the resolution than of him who is the object of it, that a little more attention was not previously given to the whole tenor and course of my proceedings, and also that the great principle of justice was not adhered to, which requires that a man should be heard before he is condemned. Without affording me an opportunity of explaining such parts of my conduct as my constituents might deem to stand in need of explanation, I receive the most painful expression of disapprobation which it was in their power to convey.

That the indignation might be rendered as galling as possible, it is somewhat ostentatiously announced in the public journals of India, and communicated to various individuals in this country, with a promptitude and industry which would seem rather disproportioned to the object, even if the resolution had been the result of full and impartial investigation, instead of being founded upon ex parte views and heated feelings.

No opportunity of defence or exculpation is allowed me. The first official intimation that I receive of the existence of a charge against me, is the transmission of my conviction and sentence. I cannot reconcile this to any principle of fairness, and I am sure that upon review it will appear even to those who have been parties to the proceeding, that I have been hastily dealt with.

Returning to the question, whether or not I have advocated the extended plan, from the discussion of which I have been led by the extraordinary course of proceeding adopted, I beg to submit that I have been the constant, determined, and unwavering supporter of that plan, from a period antecedent to my connection with the Calcutta committee, and that I have devoted all the mental and physical energy which I possess to promote its success. It has been the object to which all my labours have tended, and from which my attention has never been for a moment withdrawn. For evidence of this I may refer to almost innumerable passages of my correspondence, and to the testimony of all persons in this country who have had the means of observation. I am so much at a loss to conceive the grounds upon which is rested the assumption, that I have not advocated the extended plan of communication, that I am scarcely in a condition to meet the charge in any other way than by a plain denial.

Of the extent and persevering consistency of my advocacy, the subscribers generally have not the same means of judging as those who have been more immediately concerned in the management of the correspondence. Much that could not be conveniently introduced into public letters, has been adverted to in private communications; and when I am attacked for neglecting that object which I have incessantly laboured to promote, I must rely upon the justice of those who are better informed, to give me the assistance of their good report.

I have understood indeed that exception was taken to a small part of the pamphlet which created so considerable a sensation whose none was felt before, and the publication of which I sincerely believe was a most influential movement towards the end for which we were striving. I have heard that it has been imputed to me as a dereliction of duty, that I did not in that Pamphlet insist upon the extended plan or none at all. My answer is that the entire tendency of the Pamphlet is to give an impression that the extended plan is not alone the most eligible, but that it is that which must ultimately be adopted. These are the views pervading the pamphlet, while in the appendix of documents the reader is conducted at once to the same conclusions in a more direct manner. This course was adopted neither from coldness, nor from indolence, nor from carelessness. It was the result of deliberate consideration, and time has but convinced me more and more of its propriety. The pamphlet did not expound all the views which I entertained on the subject nor all which I was anxious to communicate. It was but the commencement of a series of labours to draw attention to the subject, to awaken the public mind and gradually to inform it. I never professed my object to be different from what I now state it to have been. In my letter of the 24th December last, which accompanied the pamphlet I spoke of it as intended to "prepare the public mind for further measures," and this is the language which I have invariably held.

But why did I not take other ground and desire at once the establishment of the extended plan? Because such conduct would have been the height of imprudence.

Authority was against us, some of the advocates of the communication were against us, and the public was not then with us. I was anxious while rousing the last of these three parties, not to alarm the other two. I was desirous of calling forth no enemy, and of ensuring to the cause as many friends as possible. I dreaded wasting time and losing strength in discussing points of detail, all that we could command both of time and strength were required to draw attention to the principle. It is not vanity to say that no man in this country is better acquainted than I am with the difficulties which stand in our way, and I can testify that we had no strength to spare and no time to waste. I might have taken the course which it seems now to have been desired that I should take, but I conscientiously believe, that the result would have been a considerable loss of friends, increase of dislike to the question in the higher quarters, and comparative indifference on the part of the public.

Whenever I had an opportunity of safely enforcing the advantages of the extended plan I availed myself of it; and if I had not been constantly thwarted in my desire to aid the cause in public meetings, those opportunities would have been much more numerous. Let me here call attention to the resolutions prepared by me for the public meeting which I was anxious should take place in the city of London, and which at one period I had sanguine hopes of obtaining. One of these resolutions refers expressly to the beneficial effects of the proposed steam communication in reference to China, the Indian Archipelago and Australia. This implies the adoption of the most comprehensive plan of communication, and the resolution was expressly framed to imply this without calling for opposition or alarm. The same view was embodied in a clause of the proposed petition.

That these meetings which I had projected with others all over the country, did not take place, is no fault of mine; I laboured incessantly to obtain them, but in vain. Had I been successful upon this point we should have been armed with a strength which could not have been resisted, and I have no doubt, that by this time we should have had the extended plan in operation, I submit then, that it is both harsh and unjust to cast blame on me for the consequences of a course for which I am not responsible, and which I resisted to the full measure of my power.

In evidence of my zeal and of the object to which it was directed, I refer to the following letter addressed by me to the Home Committee on the 10th May last.

The Right Hon^{ble} Lord Wm. Bentinck.

J. MACILLOR, Esq.

E. FLEISCHER, Esq.

G. G. DE H. LAURENT, Esq.

WM. CRAWFORD, Esq.

T. M. TURTON, Esq.

London, 16th May, 1837.

The home committee of the Bengal steam committee.

The question of steam communication with India has undoubtedly made some progress in the quarters where alone the power resides of carrying it into full effect.

The line to India will probably soon be perfected by extending the communication already established between England and Alexandria to Suez, Mocha, and Bombay; and there is reason to hope that some additional facilities may be afforded by occasional recourse to the new line of packets about to be formed in the Mediterranean by the French Government, aided by overland communication to and from Marseilles.

This appears to be the extent of what is at present to be looked for, and though it is to a certain degree satisfactory, it is obviously less than is required either by the wishes or the necessities of the Indian community. No plan will meet their views and interests which does not embrace a monthly communication with all the presidencies; and so long as it is confined to one, the advantages contemplated must be very imperfectly realized.

The expectations of India on this point are reasonable, and the object to which they point undoubtedly practicable. The comprehensive plan has in its favor not only private suffrage but has been sanctioned by the deliberate judgment of the treasury and the India Board. Under these circumstances, there could be no impropriety in endeavouring to assist Government in carrying out the plan which two of its boards have admitted to be the best. One of the principal reasons for the hesitation of Government to act upon its own views, is probably the apprehension that public opinion is not prepared to support them. This belief if it exists is certainly erroneous, and the most ready and complete way of removing it would be by petitions emanating from a public meeting in the city of London. The objection to this proposition formerly existing in the mind of Sir John Hobhouse may not continue in its full strength, and in whatever degree it may remain it might probably be removed by a proper application.

To the end the good offices of Lord William Bentinck might be requisite.

His Lordship's influences it may be hoped, would be successful in obtaining the consent of the President of the Board of Control to the adoption of a measure which is resorted to in all cases of public interest, and is usually found far more efficient in promoting a desired object than any other means which can be used.

(Signed) R. M. GRINDLAY.

Deprived of those public means which would have been most efficacious, I was thrown entirely upon the use of private efforts; and to these I devoted myself to the injury of my health and to the neglect of my personal interests, and a host of obstacles which would have deterred any man who did not despise both ease and self-advantage when they stand in the way of his duty. I experienced much anxiety and subjected myself to an overwhelming mass of labour, but I have the satisfaction of knowing that it was not altogether in vain. Obstacles gradually disappeared, the public became interested in the question, hostility diminished. One of the home authorities consented to admit the principle which it had always before steadily rejected, the other avowed itself a convert to the extended plan. Are these things nothing? Or have they been effected without human agency? What share I have had in producing them I leave to others to declare, and I may appeal to two of the warmest, most judicious, and most intelligent friends of the extended plan, Lord Wm. Bentinck and Mr. Turton, for justice to myself, as well as to your Home Committee.

From the moment that we obtained the ear of the public and of the authorities, I avowed publicly as I had before done privately, my advocacy of the extended plan; could I then take this step without compromising the interests of my constituents, and I lost not a moment when the proper time arrived.

I would call especial attention to my evidence before the late Parliamentary Committee, and to a paper formerly transmitted to you, which I had proposed to tender as my evidence.

Time will not allow me to enter into particulars so fully as I could wish, and indeed the vague nature of the charge against me renders it impossible for me to know to what particulars I ought especially to speak. On the fifth of August last, I addressed a letter to you containing a brief review of my proceedings with a statement of some of the reasons by which they had been governed. I enclose a copy of that letter now and request that it may be considered as a part of my present communication, and submitted with it to the subscribers.

I know that I have served them zealously and I believe discreetly. I cannot believe that they will eventually blame me for a discretion which has saved their cause from being wrecked, and in the anticipation of the return of more kindly feelings I suspend until this communication has been considered the proceedings which would finally dissolve a connection which I have always felt to be an honor.

The home committee will meet on the 20th proximo, when they will have an opportunity of passing judgment upon my conduct. I fully believe that it will be a most favorable one, and as they have had the best means of observation I need not say that whatever it may be, it will merit the highest respect.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) R. M. GRINDLAY.

CAPTAIN GRINDLAY'S RETROSPECT.

London, 5th August, 1837.

To C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Secretary to the Bengal Steam Fund, Calcutta.

SIR,—From the period when I had the honor of undertaking the charge which the committee at Calcutta were pleased to entrust to me, I have kept them continually advised of the steps which had been taken to advance the question, and of the degree of success by which they had been attended. With regard to our progress previously to the 1st of June, I can have therefore but little that is new to communicate; but the transmission of the report of the committee of the House of Commons appointed during the last sessions, appears to me to be a proper occasion for taking a very brief retrospect of our proceedings. By looking at the state of the question when it was first taken up, comparing it with its present position, and observing the intermediate steps by which the change has been effected, we shall, I think, be enabled better to understand and appreciate both our prospects during the past, and our prospects for the future.

Previously to my being honored by the first instructions from my constituents in India, I had devoted my attention to the subject of steam communication, but appearances here were of the most dark and discouraging description. To say that the public generally and even the more intelligent part of them were indifferent on the subject will not convey an adequate idea of the prevailing state of feeling. That state was apathy at its extreme point—if I might be allowed to add a superlative to a superlative—I would say at its most extreme point.

The ignorance prevailing upon the subject equalled the indifference, and was indeed in a great degree the cause of it. Many perhaps a majority of those who took the trouble of ever bestowing a thought on the subject, believed the design to be about as practicable as a proposal for a communication by balloon. Others who did not deny a steam communication with India to be within the limits of possibility, were frightened at the enormous expence which they believed necessary to establish and keep it up. Others again were insensible to the advantage of such a communication, and many commercial men of eminence believed that it would be prejudicial to existing interests of greater importance than those which it was proposed to serve. This difficulty was especially felt by Major Head in his endeavors to obtain subscribers to his scheme, and the fact that his project received such slender encouragement, at a period when the mania for joint stock speculation was raging at its greatest height, must be regarded as a convincing proof how little disposed the people of this country were to promote the object which in India was felt to be of such existing interest. Worse than all, those in authority were either against us, or not decidedly with us. The Euphrates expedition was then in progress, it was a favorite in high quarters, the most sanguine hopes were entertained of its success, and it was distinctly asserted that the conveyance of letters by that route, was all that the public had a right to expect, and all that the Government ought to provide for. The Red Sea route found advocates indeed in those who had studied the question and understood its practical bearings; but these persons were few, and unfortunately not in the most influential stations. The Court of Directors twice rejected the plan in any form; and the evidence of Sir John Hobhouse will shew how strong was the feeling against it. In the legislature nothing was to be hoped for, until the stagnant power of public opinion had been effectually stirred; the Bombay petition had been presented by the President of the India Board, but this step so far from creating any interest corresponding with the magnitude of the question did not even elicit a single remark. The Houses of Parliament partook fully of the public torpor.

In this state of things the obvious course was to proceed gradually, but steadily in the work of awakening and enlightening the public mind on the subject which we had at heart, and the greatest caution was necessary to avoid the danger of throwing over the plan altogether, possibly for years. It was necessary not to claim too much at once lest both the public and the Government should become alarmed, and indifference should be exchanged for what would have been still worse, obstinate resistance. It was necessary, indeed, to divert attention exclusively to the Red Sea, and to maintain the superiority of that line over every other; but this ground being taken as the basis of the movement, it was desirable to avoid controversy as far as it was possible. It was desirable to make no enemy and to lose no friends. These were the principles which I laid down for my own guidance, and on them I have invariably acted.

The first public step taken by me was the insertion of the circular in the Times newspaper of the 29th of September. The circulation and influence of this journal are such as to render it the best vehicle for preparing the public mind and giving it a required direction on any subject. Having commenced the movement in this widely read and influential journal, I continued it by publications in various papers and periodicals, the majority of which are named in the margin.

Thus far I acted solely on my own views and I believe that my labors were not in vain. On receiving the Committee's instructions I placed myself in communication with Lord William Bentinck and the gentlemen appointed to act as a home committee.

From this period my system of operations under their sanction has been so fully and regularly submitted to your notice, that a mere glance at them will be sufficient.

I may remark that as Parliament was not sitting, our only course was to endeavour to act upon the public; and the general apathy on which I have already dwelt, would indeed have made this advisable though Parliament had not been prorogued. The memorandum dated the 3d October, details the various modes by which I proposed to prepare the way for opening the Parliamentary contest with effect. It will be recollected that a plan was laid down for a series of public meetings and of petitions emanating from those meetings. I was especially anxious upon this point, because it would have given us opportunities of doing that which could not be done safely in any other way. Had the proposed meetings taken place, they might have led without difficulty to the adoption in their petition, of language utterly inconsistent with any system of communication, but that which is the best and most desirable, namely, the most comprehensive.

To illustrate this I may refer to the draft of the proposed London petition. The London meeting, had it taken place, would, in all probability, have been composed of persons of every possible degree of information and every possible shade of opinion. At such a meeting where many would know little or nothing of the subject, where many more were but half friends or perhaps concealed enemies, and where another portion would probably be enamoured of some favorite plan of their own, and consequently indisposed to tolerate any other which is threatened to interfere with it, in such a meeting, and with public opinion uninformed and wandering, the friend of a communication with all the parts of India could not venture to speak out as decidedly as they could wish, but the communication contemplated in the petition drafted for that meeting is with "India and China" without limitation, the widest extension which the most ardent friends of the plan could desire. By such a mode of advancing the comprehensive plan we should have escaped opposition, at the same time that we had a prospect of enlisting on our side, interests not immediately connected with India. I have continually regretted the disappointment of my views with regard to public meetings, and for no cause more than for this, that we lost the opportunity of pledging the petitioners to the extended plan, and of acting upon the Government in its favor, with the full force of their united influence.

It is indeed useless to regret that which has passed, but it is necessary in this case to advert to it, in order to shew that the plan was arranged so as to carry the petitioners the full length that could be desired.*

The press was another engine of which I proposed that we should liberally avail ourselves. In communicating this branch of operation it appeared to me desirable to fix attention by issuing something very brief, but to the purpose. As opinion then was, a great mass of printed papers would not have been read. Selection and compression were necessary; in making a choice among the materials received from India it was due both to my constituents and the cause that the views both of Calcutta and Madras should be presented to the public here. To effect this object I printed the Calcutta circular, the Calcutta petition and the Madras petition preceded by a short appeal in favor of the communication "with all parts of India." A map accompanied, which was made the means of silently advancing the more perfect plan of communication, for by pointing out the route to each of the principal parts of India, it was to be inferred as a matter of course that none of them was to be neglected.†

This paper was circulated throughout every part of the kingdom. Articles in the various literary journals mentioned in the margin succeeded.‡

For one important publication (the Asiatic Journal) distinctly advocating the comprehensive plan, we are indebted, as I have already mentioned, to a very high authority, with whom I was in daily communication.

Attention being thus partially roused it appeared to me that a separate publication on the question, somewhat longer and more elaborate than any which had yet been ventured might now be hazardous. I was then prepared and published my pamphlet. I was convinced by this time the public would read such a work, which at an early period they would not. §

One difficulty was thus removed, but others remained in full force. We had raised so much of sympathy in the public mind that we might fairly expect by a further effort to excite much more, but there was still the risk of going too fast, of overrunning public opinion, of exciting collision and calling forth opposition, and, I must add, my conviction, that a very slight opposition would have been fatal to all our hopes! It was necessary, therefore, to say only so much as would be received without very great difficulty, and thus prepare the way for the rest, which might follow in due time. I must confess that I looked with much anxiety to the reception of that pamphlet. I did not feel quite assured that the public appetite was prepared for it, and I was in some fear that either it might excite no attention, or might provoke some hostility. With regard to the latter point I was fortunate, the only discontent called forth was from the advocates of the Euphrates plan; as to the effect of the pamphlet I was still more fortunate, and I need only refer in proof of this to the immense number of notices referred to in the margin. || I am informed by those well acquainted with literary affairs, that the circumstance is nearly if not altogether without parallel, except in the case of some work of general literature, emanating from an author of distinguished name, and calculated for popular reading and entertainment. It may be proper to state that the notices were the actual productions of the parties having the literary management of the publications in which they appeared—care was taken that the pamphlet was placed before them, but no means were used to influence their judgment. Their unanimity may, I think, therefore, be accepted as a proof that whether or not I displayed any great portion of talent, I was at least not deficient in the equally indispensable quality of judgment.

Excited attention without creating opposition, and this effect is attributable to the cautious avoidance of all controversial matter as far as was consistent with the general advocacy of any particular plan. These testimonials were not without effect; some who had been strongly, and I doubt not conscientiously opposed to every plan of steam communication with India, and others who had been specially opposed to that by the Red Sea, gave way. Government saw that the public were becoming interested in the matter, and that something must be done, and had we been fortified by public meetings and petition, there can be no doubt that the comprehensive scheme would have been carried at once.

At the meeting of Parliament we had made some way. We had not done then all I wished, but I had done all within my power, and we were in the condition to expect that Government should at least give us a hearing. I was anxious for the early presentation of the petitions, but difficulties arose partly from the distracted state of public business, and partly from other causes. Lord William Bentinck was desirous that we should have the co-operation of Major Head's Company; with a view of effecting this object various meetings took place which ended in nothing. Indeed had the terminations been different as far as we are concerned the ultimate result would have been the same, as Sir John Hobhouse's evidence shows that the London Steam Company had no chance whatever with the Government. During this period, as before, I continued to urge the importance of public meetings and petitions; but, unfortunately, with no better success than formerly. I was compelled, therefore, to content myself with the use of the means which fell within my personal power.

The question continued to be postponed in Parliament until its friends had reason to be sick at heart; and a main cause of this was an impression that it would be taken up by Government in a proper spirit. Our interview with the chairs and with Sir John Hobhouse were considered to a certain extent satisfactory, and the declaration of the President against public meetings was held to be decisive as to their prohibition. At the same time, I could not but feel that though the chairs had expressed themselves individually favorable, this was all, and I could not but see that Sir John Hobhouse still retained a lingering attachment to the Euphrates plan. This feeling was so apparent, that with a view of soothing it, and thus winning a most influential man from an impracticable plan to one that was feasible, I took the opportunity afforded by a second edition of my pamphlet, to offer such an explanation upon that delicate subject as I thought would be gratifying to Sir John Hobhouse and would dispel any reluctance which he might feel to a retreat from the Euphrates to the Red Sea, and the comprehensive plan. As I compromised no principle and endangered no interest of my constituents, I thought, and still think, that I was acting prudently. I pressed the holding of public meetings though opposed by authority, but it would have been foolish to contend with authority upon a point which by the course of events was so rapidly becoming one of no practical importance.

I need not mention that my public exertions have formed, but a very small part of my labours in the cause. No channel has been neglected through which an impression was likely to be made, and I rejoice to know that these efforts have not been without effect.

The letters from the treasury and from Sir John Hobhouse to the court, show, that the comprehensive plan has made its way with the Ministers of Her Majesty's Government. It was not equally successful elsewhere, and the arrangement made may be regarded as a compromise.

It seems clear that the Court of Directors would not at present yield more, and it may be presumed that Sir John Hobhouse abstained from pressing the matter further lest he should risk that portion of it which has been gained. The danger of the question being lost altogether, is apparent from Mr Melville's evidence.

Here in my mind arises additional reason for regretting that we did not strengthen the hands of Government by public meetings and petitions.

That under any circumstances would have been my plan had I been left to choose; it is but fair, however, to say that the state of the question as between the two authorities was kept very closely. Lord William Bentinck, one of the warmest advocates of the comprehensive plan, constantly expressed himself satisfied with our prospects, and repeatedly delayed the presentation of the petition at the suggestion of Sir John Hobhouse, who said that when prepared to state the intentions of Government, the petition would be a powerful auxiliary to him.

We know that he was friendly to the comprehensive plan; but during the month of May, I obtained private information of the possibility of an unfavorable turn, and, in consequence, addressed to the home committee a letter of which you have a copy. In this, I re-urged the necessity of public meetings and petitions on the ground "that no plan would meet the wishes and views of the Indian community which did not embrace a communication with all the presidencies," and that "as the comprehensive plan had in its favor not only private suffrages but had been sanctioned by the deliberate judgment of the treasury and the India Board, there could be no impropriety in endeavouring to assist Government to carry out the plan," by the means which I recommended. You will have seen, however, that I failed to convince the committee of the necessity of this until too late, and I believe that Lord William Bentinck now considers this a subject of regret.

I will not recapitulate the contents of my letters of June and July. You are aware that Lord William Bentinck finding that it was intended to introduce a partial measure, moved for the appointment of the select committee. I have stated that some of its members were averse to the comprehensive plan, and Sir John Hobhouse having failed in his efforts with the Court of Directors took the adverse side also and carried his party with him. The consequence was that the affair was nearly strangled in its commencement, and nothing but the indomitable perseverance of Lord William Bentinck and Mr. Mullins prevented the committee separating immediately after Sir John Hobhouse's evidence had been heard, without hearing any more or making any report.

On the prospects of the question I will not now speculate. Lord William intends to bring it forward, and in a future Parliament, as it is now so generally understood that he will have abundant aid from without and I trust it is unnecessary for me to assure you of my unceasing exertions to promote it. I am truly happy in being able to add that Lord William has repeatedly expressed his sense of my services, and his entire approbation of the measure which I have throughout adopted; and I need not I trust add, that my best exertions will be at the command of the friends of the comprehensive plan, and I shall co-operate in completing the object in view as zealously as I have thus far added its progress.

After being compelled to say so much of myself, it is delightful to have to bear testimony to the merits of others, and I am bound to say that I feel it quite impossible to render justice to the valuable services of Mr. Turton, and to the zeal with which he has served the cause ever since his arrival in this country.

In reviewing my own proceedings, I feel that I have acted to the best of my judgment, I mean of my present judgment as well as of my judgment at the time the different transactions took place, and had I the same duty to perform again, I would take the same course; our tactics in this country are necessarily different from those of India.

There the Government is every thing, here the Government is powerless, unless supported and urged forward by public opinion.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedt. servt.

To C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Secretary to the New Bengal Steam Fund.

SIR,—We have heretofore abstained from reporting the progress in this country of the question of steam communication with India, because we understand that Capt. Grindlay transmitted monthly a detailed account of such particulars as would keep you duly acquainted with the course of events here. Our object having now been partially attained we feel called upon to congratulate you upon the degree of success which has attended our exertions, and to express our earnest hope that the step which has been gained is but the prelude to complete realization of our wishes, and that a few months will produce the extension of the communication to all the principal ports of India. You are aware how zealously the comprehensive scheme has always been supported by your late Governor-General. The opinion which he has hitherto maintained he continues to hold, and is prepared to assert them in the next session of Parliament, when the subject will be again pressed upon the notice of the Legislature. Great caution has been necessary to avoid ruining our prospects altogether by too much rapidity of action, but we have now gained a point from which we cannot be driven, and the possession of which will enable us to advance with greater certainty and confidence.

We forward a memorandum which will convey some knowledge of the difficulties with which we have had to contend, difficulties which could only be surmounted by the operation of time aided by caution and discretion. Captain Grindlay has devoted his time almost exclusively to the furtherance of your views, and has constantly been engaged both publicly and privately in promoting their success. As we have had opportunities of becoming acquainted with his labours not enjoyed by his constituents in India, we think it due to him to bear testimony to the unwearying zeal, judgment and assiduity, with which he has sought to advance their interest, and to express our entire satisfaction with his conduct throughout the proceedings in which we have been engaged.

We have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedt. servts.,

STEAM MEETING AT THE TOWN HALL.

The Steam Meeting at the Town Hall on Thursday was very numerously attended. At a little after ten the Sheriff took the chair and read the requisition on occasion of which the meeting had been called, and having so done, he proceeded as follows: Gentlemen, had the occasion upon which we meet to day, been a matter of an ordinary nature or of minor importance, I should have desired, as I should have considered it my duty, to preside at it; but when I take into consideration the intensity of interest that is felt upon the question we are met to consider, and the peculiar position in which it is placed as respects the authorities at home, I think that I shall best fulfil my duty by proposing that the chair should be taken by one far more capable of filling it with effect. Gentlemen, I shall therefore propose the name of one who has often fulfilled the duty upon this most important subject. I propose to you that the Chief Justice be requested to take the chair.

Sir E. Ryan.—Gentlemen, my excellent friend the High Sheriff, having selected me to fill the chair at this meeting and you having been pleased to express your approval of his nomination, I with pleasure assume a duty connected with a subject upon which, it is true, that I have always and do take the deepest interest. Upon the general merits of the subject it will not be necessary for me to enlarge at the present moment, my sentiments have often been expressed, and before I make any further observations on the subject, it will be better to allow the proposed resolutions to be submitted to the consideration of the meeting.

The Lord Bishop then rose and said, I should have been much better pleased if the duty of proposing the first resolution, had been entrusted into other hands, had the occasion upon which we have met together, been one of ordinary import or of common character. The retired and sacred nature of my profession would render it improper and unbecoming in me to take a prominent part on occasions of meetings for ordinary purposes or with a view to objects of doubtful utility; but on a subject whereupon an intensity of feeling pervades the public mind, and were the question under discussion may be considered as embracing all the interests of humanity, and in its consequences calculated materially to affect the whole well being of society; on a question which regarded in its influence upon all the benevolent relations of life, is boundless in its scope, on such an occasion I deem it not only not unbecoming, but entirely consistent with my more immediately sacred duties, to exert my voice in support of that which is calculated to prove so eminently conducive to the benefit of mankind.

In whatever light we regard the great question of Steam Communication with Great Britain, whether as public men, or as private individuals, as members of the community, or as fathers, husbands, or guardians,—in every relation of life shall we find the vast importance of this great improvement in the means of distant and rapid intercommunication, between the metropolitan country and her colonies. What father of a family, does not appreciate the immense value of the means of learning the progress of his distant progeny, their health and happiness within a comparatively unimportant interval of time? Who, looking at the subject as a public man, can regard with indifference the vast improvements which will be derived to commerce in general? What boundless advantages will this country enjoy in the rapid communication of the discoveries of the western world in the arts and the sciences! Of what incalculable value towards the civilization of the East must be the full and rapid communication of European knowledge, and the wisdom of the West! To every missionary of religion, to every traveller in search of knowledge, as well as to every servant civil or military of the Company, is this subject of deepest interest. It is a project which like the discovery of the mariner's compass or invention of printing, must produce consequences which it is beyond the view of human speculation to embrace. In such a case, and to promote such an object, I cannot but feel that I am justified now in coming forward as I did five years ago for the same purpose. Nothing, indeed, can be contemplated as so wonderfully calculated to promote the interests of humanity as the invention of locomotion by means of steam; and as regards India, the present moment appears to present a crisis, which not only justifies but demands the support of all, and of every character in promoting the scheme in its largest and most comprehensive extent, an object upon which such an intensity of feeling pervades all India. Our great business is, by manifesting our own anxiety and eagerness to kindle the sympathies of the British nation, which unless we are strenuous will necessarily become lukewarm, and consequently the object we have in view will be not smothered but delayed. Our exertions, indeed, ought not to be limited by any consideration of the abstract merits of the question, or the benefits to be derived from its accomplishment. We are to consider not so much what we have to gain as what we have to overcome: the coolness and backwardness of friends, the hostility of those whose interests are in truth identified with our own, but who choose to oppose instead of supporting us. I speak of Bombay. All these circumstances demand that we exert ourselves in proportion. The selfish policy of Bombay as exhibited in the early stage of intercommunication, sufficiently evinces what would be the result of a scheme which should confine the channel of communication to that port. Of their unaccommodating spirit we have had example we may say before hand. Of the uncertainty of the present mode of conducting the communication, I need only instance the case of Principal Mill, who, taking his passage here on the best calculation, arrived at Bombay three days after the steamer had sailed. There can be no doubt, that whether we are lukewarm or whether we are energetic, this great object will make its way; but the question is, whether you will have it now or twenty years hence? The cause will advance, it cannot be stopt; but the question is, shall it advance with the firm, bold front of freemen or the creeping abjectness of slaves? The cause must advance, it is not to be resisted; but the question is, shall it advance with the current or against it? If you are lukewarm; if you are tame and timid, your cause must advance against the stream. If you are resolute, firm, energetic, you will turn the current in your favor. The results that are to be anticipated from a free communication between this country and England, on the most comprehensive scale, are boundless, and for my own part I cannot perceive the immense difficulties that have impeded the regularity of communication between Suez and Bombay; and in making allusion to the conduct of Bombay in respect to the steam question, we should recollect, that we are not possessed of all the facts, and that we ought to believe that but for some operating causes to us unknown, there would exist the same unanimity at the other presidencies, and the same desire to promote the one great object, and the more we are enabled to give a favorable and charitable construction upon the conduct of others, the more easily will the great question make its way. That it will make its way through whatever may obstruct it is certain; but the question is, whether India shall enjoy this blessing now or whether it is postponed to twenty years hence! With the aid of this discovery and holding the most important colonial possessions ever connected with a present state, such vast means of bestowing happiness upon mankind have been entrusted by Providence to the British nation, not merely for herself but in trust for the many millions who look to her, not only for protection but for improvement and civilization. England beholds India thirsting for knowledge, and looking to her fountains from whence to draw and be satisfied. India beginning to awaken from the sleep of ages, after sixty years' repose, under a benignant, mild and paternal government, turns her eyes towards England, and asks that the book of knowledge be spread open before her. England has been placed by Providence on the pinnacle of national greatness, and India has been entrusted to her care, in order that she may from the height of her own prosperity and glory, communicate to her colonies, the knowledge and the wisdom that has made her great. The question then is, whether England will hasten to send forth her sons to communicate these boundless advantages to these her vast possessions, and in order so to do whether she will adopt such means as may be said with scarcely a metaphor, to bring their vast possessions nearer home? Immeasurable will be the advantages which we may contemplate in ten thousand points of view, of such an object when attained. In the time of sickness, the enfeebled patient may be rapidly transported from the dangerous atmosphere in which he is sinking, and carried into pure and renovating climes! Instead of parting with our children, when we send them to the land of their fathers, as though we were to be separated with but the distant and cheerless prospect of seeing them again only after the lapse of years—when perchance they have steeped from infancy, to an adult age—we may hope by means of steam, to send for them and have them with us in a space of forty days! So vast and various indeed are the advantages to be anticipated, that it is impossible even to imagine, far less to enumerate, the grand results which must be the consequences of the full attainment of the great object which we have met this day to promote! If ever there were a triumph for public spirit, it will be enjoyed in the accomplishment of this great object; and, it is only by the full and energetic display of public spirit, that it can be accomplished. By this means shall religion, by this means shall liberty in its widest and noblest sense, be diffused amongst the millions of the East. To aspire to such grand objects is a noble feeling and worthy of the greatest nation upon earth; it is worthy of the claims which religion has upon such a nation; it is worthy of the blood once which such a nation owes to the Almighty, from whom its greatness flows. Into this great measure should the British nation plunge at once, not headlong, but with an utter disregard to sordid and narrow calculation of expense. Now is the hour when it is in the power of the British nation to open the flood-gates of measureless blessings upon her Indian territories. Let her not hesitate, let her not delay, but achieve at once that great good, which will clothe her with true glory, and secure the future happiness of India.

Sir Edward Ryan.—Gentlemen, I am desired by his Lordship to read the following resolution.

1st.—“That as the petition of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood to the Honorable the House of Commons, and the memorials to the Right Hon'ble the Board of Commissioners for the affairs of India, and the Court of Directors of the East India Company, all dated the 5th March, 1835, praying for the immediate establishment of a regular, expeditious, and frequent communication between the principal Indian ports and Great Britain, by means of steam vessels, have failed in the attainment of the object as far as relates to Madras and Calcutta, an arrangement having been entered by the Court of Directors with Her Majesty's Government for the establishment of a communication limited to Bombay, and as the select Committee of the House of Commons, which sat in June last, has recommended a continued and zealous attention to the subject on the part of Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company, it is expedient that a further petition and memorials be presented to the above named authorities from the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, praying for the immediate establishment of the extended communication.”

The resolution was seconded by Mr. Jucker, and passed by a show of hands, no one dissenting.

Sir Edward Ryan.—Gentlemen, you have unanimously carried the resolution for presenting the petition of which a draft has been proposed and published, and which may probably have been seen and perused by many present; if however you are desirous that it should be slow read, the Secretary to the Steam Committee, will read it to you.

Here a number of voices intimated by acclaim that the petition should be read, which was accordingly done.

Mr. Pattle.—I did not expect, when I came here to-day, that the duty of proposing the 2d resolution would have devolved upon me. I had understood that it had been undertaken by a party far more capable than myself of adequately fulfilling it. However, it is with no reluctance that I address you as the mover of the 2d resolution, and in doing so I may congratulate the friends to Steam Communication upon the numbers here assembled to support its interests. It proves how general is the conviction that pervades our society, that the cause of steam will never be complete till the full and entire object prayed for by the petition has been attained. The petition itself is so ably drawn, and so fully and clearly expresses the strong grounds upon which we claim the attention of Parliament, that it leaves little to be said further in its support; and, I am fully assured, that it must carry conviction, as well as satisfaction, to the breast of every impartial and unbiassed man. With your permission I beg to read the 2d resolution.

2d.—“That the petition now read be adopted and that the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund be requested to take charge of the same in order to its being duly signed, and that they be further requested, after full opportunity shall have been afforded to the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, to sign the same to forward it to the Right Hon'ble Lord William Cavendish Bentinck for presentation to the House of Commons, with the expression of the grateful thanks of this meeting for the indefatigable exertions made by his Lordship in furtherance of the prayer of the former petition, and to solicit the continuance of His Lordship's invaluable aid until the object is attained.”

Gentlemen, I will only add that to Lord W. Bentinck are due our very warmest thanks for his strenuous exertions, as well as to others who have manifested an equal zeal and equal talents, in promoting the great object of our wishes.

Captain T. J. Taylor seconded the resolution.

Sir Edward Ryan.—Gentlemen, I hold in my hands part of the evidence taken before the Committee of the House of Commons, which, as it has not been published in this country, you will not deem it irrelevant if I read to the meeting, as most strikingly exhibiting the opinion of Lord W. Bentinck, respecting the advantages to be derived to India, by the establishment of Steam Communication with India on the most comprehensive plan.

Sir Edward Ryan here read the following extract from the evidence he alluded to:—

The Right Hon. Lord William Bentinck, Chairman of the Committee, further Examined,

1854.—Lord Sandon.] Do you consider that a speedy and regular communication by steam with all the ports in India will be productive of any moral or political advantage? Very many, and very great. With respect to the moral advantage, I have already had the occasion, in India, of publishing my opinion; and I will now repeat it. The subscribers to the Madras Steam Fund addressed me a letter, in 1834, in which they stated their belief that this project would confer vast and incalculable benefits upon our country and mankind. I answered as follows: “I confess that my anticipation of the expected benefit goes far beyond the more obvious results, great as those undoubtedly would be, of improved government, of the welfare of the people, as effected by such improvement, of the promotion of commerce, and of what may be considered of minor importance, of the comfort of our own numerous countrymen, separated by such great distance of time and place from all connexion with their dearest interests. The limit assigned by the resolution is expressed by the large term of ‘mankind,’ and in my judgment appropriately and correctly; because the great want of this eastern world, India, China, &c., may be comprehended in the single word, ‘knowledge.’” If the moral condition and happiness of the most enlightened countries suffer from this cause, it can be easily conceived, that on this great space, where the human mind has been buried for ages in universal darkness the task must be hopeless unless the same means which have alone accomplished the object elsewhere are brought into action, and these means increased and enforced with all the encouragement that the Government authority can bestow. I look to steam navigation as the great engine of working this moral improvement. In proportion as the communication between the two countries shall be facilitated and shortened, so will civilized Europe be approximated, as it were, to these benighted regions; and in no other way can improvement in any large stream be expected to flow in. Past experience shows what we have to expect for the future. I shall take the liberty of enlarging upon this topic. For much more than half a century the British dominion has been established at the three presidencies over a great extent of territory, with a large dependent population. Examining attentively the intellectual condition of these numerous communities it cannot be denied that little progress comparatively has been made in the acquisition of useful knowledge. There prevailed throughout, and in the darkest ages of European history, the same ignorance and superstition, the same belief in witchcraft, the confidence in charms and incantations, the same faith in astrology and omens, the practice of human immolation of all sexes and ages, and many other barbarous customs, opposed to true happiness, and repugnant to the best feelings that Providence has planted in the human breast. Again also, in the arts and sciences, in every branch of useful attainment, the ancient usages and learning retain their unimpaired sway. In medicine and surgery, in chemistry, in hydraulics, in mechanics, in civil engineering, in painting, sculpture and music, we observe them all, with the exception of a few individuals of superior talents and ambition, remaining stationary in their primitive rudeness and ignorance. And yet, during this long interval, thousands of well-educated Europeans, deeply versed in all these branches of knowledge, have been succeeding each other, and domiciliated for years in the country. Why, it will be asked, had all this science, this learning, and this ability to impart instruction, passed away without leaving any trace or impress on the mind of India, although in no other part of the world does there exist greater quickness of intellect, a more eager thirst after knowledge or superior aptitude to acquire it? The answer to this question is plain and obvious. The cause is to be found in the past principle of our rule, of rigidly precluding the free admission of Europeans to India; the direct consequence of which, whatever in other respects may have been its advantages, has been to dam up in a great degree the main channel of improvement into India. It may be assumed that 19-20th parts of the importation Europeans have consisted of the Company's servants; they have had, of course, other duties to perform, occupying the whole of their time, and the fault lies not with them, if they have contributed little or nothing to this object. The government, indeed, may perhaps be accused of omission, and of not having done as much as they might; but I doubt even with more exertion on their part whether, while the same system lasted, much progress could have been made. All the improvements of the description to which I have been alluding, are exclusively due to the skill and enterprise of individuals, aided by the capital of the houses of agency. Every indigo and coffee plantation, the Gloucester mills, the works of every description that are moved by steam, the iron foundries, the coal-mines worked after the European fashion, and the other great establishments that we see around us in Calcutta, are so many great schools of instruction, the founders of which are the real improvers of the country; it is from the same sources that we must expect other school-masters of new and improved industry. The new charter will remove many obstacles, but steam communication far more. But with the opinion I entertain, that the extent of colonization, (as it is misnamed,) and the effects of it, have been very much overrated, I am convinced that the knowledge and instruction so much needed by India can never be sufficiently provided by European colonists and speculators only. The natives themselves must be encouraged to go to Europe, there to study in the best schools of all the sciences. This opinion I know to be entertained by some of the intelligent members of a committee now sitting at Calcutta, to consider the best means of educating the natives in the higher branches of medicine and surgery. The Pasha of Egypt has given a noble example in this respect to the rulers of rude and unlearned nations. The circumstances that have hitherto operated as a complete barrier against the intercourse of the natives with Europe, except the classes of sailors and of menial servants, have been, first, certain customs as to food prescribed by the Hindoo religion; and secondly, and mainly, the length, the expense and apprehension also of so long a voyage. In respect to the first of these obstacles, Rām Mohun Roy, who will be of illustrious memory among his posterity, has broken the ice; and I know that some, and I have no doubt that other, rich and well-educated natives are preparing to tread in his footsteps, with the same laudable desire of seeing what India may become, by what Europe, and especially England, is; and of raising their country by the same means from the moral and political degradation in which she is plunged. With respect to the second obstacle, which makes the attempt almost impossible to the great class of students, however willing to those who are to be the practical operatives and the introducers of the new arts and sciences, and will become the best teachers of their countrymen, steam navigation, with the aid of Government, and of those interested in India's welfare, will go far to remove it. I was happy to learn from the same members of the medical committee, that natives thoroughly acquainted with the English language would, if assisted, be ready to embark immediately in that pursuit, and necessarily in others of the same utility. I will, therefore, conclude this too long detail by saying, that it is knowledge that is needed; knowledge is the beginning of wisdom; knowledge alone can raise this country to a higher standard among the nations of the world; and with the sentiments I have expressed, of the best and most effectual mode of attaining these great purposes, the Steam Committee are amply borne out according to my firm conviction, in their resolution, "that this project opens vast and incalculable benefits to our own country and to mankind." The principal political advantages I will shortly state; First, great increase to our military power. The vast space we have to occupy and defend, and the consequent impossibility of quickly transporting troops from one point to another, has led to the necessity of having upon each portion of our territory a force sufficient for its protection, independent of all extraneous assistance. It is evident that, India forming a peninsula, and the monsoons offering no impediment to the access of steamers, large means of transport of this kind could always convey troops to the point menaced, and the whole army could thus be made available for the service of every portion of our dominions. The last overland mail brings an account of the arrival of the Atalanta at Bombay, and of her being dispatched three days afterwards with a whole native regiment to Mangalore, the seat of an insurrection. In Bengal, the river steamers will convey a reinforcement in three weeks, and safely, to Allahabad, situated at the junction of the Jumna and Ganges, and the central point of the upper and lower provinces of Bengal, which by the ordinary boats of the country could not have been done in less than as many months, and without much risk, the insurance to Allahabad being equal to that upon a whole voyage to England. When in India I recorded the opinion, which I repeat, that had the establishment of steamers now proposed been in existence during the Burmese war, many thousands of lives, prodigious individual suffering, and millions of money, would have been saved to the state. It is not too much to assert that under the peculiar local circumstances of India, with great space, no roads or canals, a very unhealthy climate, and with a sea-coast for its universal limit, one-fourth of the same military force, in co-operation with an adequate steam establishment, would be more efficient than the whole without it. If, moreover, the Pasha of Egypt could be induced, as some well-informed witnesses seem to consider practicable, to allow the passage of our troops through his country, a regiment or more from Malta might reach Bombay in five weeks. All this is power exercised in its most imposing character. Hyder Ally is said to have declared, that it was not what he saw, but what he did not see, that he was afraid of. I beg leave to put in an extract from a letter (vide Appendix) from the superintendent of steam vessels on the Ganges, upon the great success of that establishment, and as affording a certain degree of expectation of a similar result to the sea-going steamers. Secondly, the civil functionaries, who now come to India so young as to have acquired little European useful knowledge, and necessarily from their position, too apt to contract arbitrary feelings and habits, would have easy means and should be encouraged to visit Europe, there to acquire liberal notions of the principles and practice of improved administration. Thirdly, the same salutary influence would operate upon our military officers. Subordination would be greatly promoted by the knowledge that the authority of the superior power at home could be quickly interposed; nor would the court-martial have the same reluctance to do their duty, if all those considerations which distance so injudiciously creates were removed. The comfort, the allegiance, the attachment of all to their native country, would be more firmly maintained. Fourthly, but perhaps the most important benefit of all, would be its tendency to place the security of our empire upon the only solid foundation, the general good will of those we govern. Our present position is this; we have conquered the whole of India; we have much above 100,000,000 of men under our direct and indirect rule; and it is universally allowed that our government has no hold upon the attachment of the people. I will introduce here, as more deserving the attention of the Committee than any opinion of my own, an extract from a minute of one of the most sagacious statesmen that India, or indeed any other country, has produced, the late Sir Thomas Munro, written in 1824, describing the effects of our government. "If we make a summary comparison of the advantages and disadvantages which have occurred to the natives from our government, the result, I fear, will hardly be so much in its favour as it ought to have been. They are more secure from the calamities both of foreign war and internal commotion; their persons and property are more secure from violence; they cannot be wantonly punished, or their property seized by persons in power; and their taxation is, on the whole, lighter;" (my experience cannot confirm this latter opinion;) "but, on the other hand, they have no share in making laws for themselves, little in administering them, except in very subordinate offices;" (some amelioration has taken place in this latter respect, but not much;) "they can rise to no high civil or military station; they are every where regarded as an inferior race, and often as vassals or servants than as the ancient owners and masters of the country." This minute is full of able, wise and enlightened principles, and the same sentiments will be found to prevail in the recorded documents of two other most able and distinguished individuals, Sir John Malcolm, and the Hon. Mount Stuart Elphinstone. Sir Thomas Munro observes also, "It is not the arbitrary power of a national sovereign, but subjugation to a foreign one, that destroys national character and extinguishes national spirit." Successive foreign domination under Mahomedan emperors, for centuries, has been the sad lot of India; and it ought to have been a happy change in her fortunes and no doubt will be, that she has become subject to a civilized, enlightened and Christian nation; but so far she has gained little by the transfer, except general peace and tranquillity, and the consequent capability of receiving the benefits of improved institutions and government. In many respects the Mahomedans surpassed our rule; the settled in they countries which they conquered; they intermixed and intermarried with the natives; they admitted them to all privileges, the interests and sympathies of the conquerors and conquered became identified. Our policy, on the contrary, has been the reverse of this; cold, selfish and unfeeling; the iron hand of power on the one side, monopoly and exclusion on the other. The bane of our system is not soely that the civil administration is entirely in the hands of foreigners; but that the holders of this monopoly, the patrons of these foreign agents, are those who exercise the directing power at home; that this directing power is exclusively paid by the patronage; that the value of this patronage depends exactly upon the degree in which all the honours and emoluments of the state are engrossed by their clients, to the exclusion of the natives. There exists, in consequence, on the part of the home authorities, an interest in respect to the administration precisely similar to what formerly prevailed as to commerce, directly opposed to the welfare of India; and consequently it will be remarked without surprise, that in the two renewals of the charter that have taken place within the last 25 years, in the first nothing was done to break down this administrative monopoly, and in the second, though a very important principle was declared, that no disability from holding office in respect to any subjects of the Crown, by reason of birth, religion, descent or colour, should any longer continue, still no provision was made for working it out; and, as far as is known, the enactment has remained till this day a dead letter. India, in order to become an attached dependency of Great Britain, must be governed for her own sake, not for the sake of the 800 or 1,000 individuals who are sent from England to make their fortunes. They are totally incompetent to the charge, and in their hands the administration, in all its civil branches, revenue, judicial and police, has been a failure. Our government, to be secured, must be made popular, and to become so, it must consult the welfare of the many, and not of the few: the government must remain arbitrary, but it may also be, and should be, paternal. But how can this be effected? England has no knowledge of and no care for India. India, again, has no representatives in England, and has hitherto had no access to her shore; her fate is entirely in the hands of the two authorities with whom her management is vested. The Court of Directors seek their office for the sake of the patronage only; for the most part they are strangers to India; have their own separate affairs to manage; are divested of responsibility; but, from their permanency, and the knowledge which they derive from their numerous clients, they possess a power and influence over all affairs, which a temporary President of the Board of Control, unaided by any board possessing local information, cannot possibly control. It is much to be regretted, when the last charter was renewed, that these two bodies had not been amalgamated into one department, with a Secretary of State at its head, with a competent board like that of the Admiralty, possessing local experience and information; chosen, perhaps jointly by the East India Company and the Crown, or Parliament, and paid out of the India revenues. It is through the means of a quick, safe and frequent communication between all India and England, that the natives of India in person will be enabled to bring their complaints and grievances before the authorities and the country; that large numbers of disinterested travellers will have it in their power to report to their countrymen at home the nature and circumstances of this distant portion of the empire. The result, I hope, will be to rouse the shameful apathy and indifference of Great Britain to the concerns of India; and by thus bringing the eye of the British public to bear upon India, it may be hoped that the desired amelioration may be accomplished. The following remark of Mr Mill, in his able history of India, is well suited to the present question: "If the East India Company have been so little successful in ameliorating the practical operation of their government, it has been owing chiefly to the disadvantage of their situation, distant a voyage of several months from the scene of action, and to that imperfect knowledge which is common to them with all their countrymen."

The whole scope of Lord William Bentinck's evidence, goes to prove his entire conviction of the utility and the necessity of establishing the communication by steam on the most comprehensive plan. By means of this invention months are reduced to weeks, and there can be no doubt that had the facilities of steamers existed in India during the Burman war, one-fourth of the military force employed, would have produced more efficient results. A regiment might be brought from Malta to Bombay in three weeks. Hyder Ally, used to say that he feared the English, not from what he saw but from what he did not see."

Sir Edward Ryan.—I thought that whilst we tendered our thanks to Lord W. Bentinck it would not be proper in some measure to shew how far his Lordship merited them for his services in this cause. His Lordship follows out the argument to its full extent. Before I conclude allow me a few words more. We are not met here to consider whether communication by steam with India, shall be established or not; that question, thank heaven, is settled and decided in our favor; that battle is fought and won; all we have now to ask or desire is that our success be complete. The petition, therefore, has been prepared which states that the home authorities have not done enough in restricting the communication to Bombay, nor granted to us that which we have a right to claim. The petitions shew, that by the regulations of government the greatest weight allowed by dawk, is 4 ounces, and by dawk banghee 19 pounds; the time occupied by the dawk banghee is double that of the dawk, and thus all important as to the transmission of public document and public correspondence, having to be conveyed to us across the peninsula of India, steam is of little or no use. Now as we are the payers, we have a right to ask for the full, complete, and equal establishment of steam communication by letter. But what is still more desirable, and the absence of which is a still greater hardship upon us, is the means of personal communication by steam. Every body is aware of the difficulty that at certain periods exists of getting round to Bombay. Principal Mill, on every reasonable calculation, expected to arrive therein time for the Atalanta; he was three days too late, and these three days occasioned him the loss of many weeks as regards his arrival in England, as well as much additional expense. However, although individual cases may serve to illustrate the mischief, it is not the loss or disappointment sustained by individuals, but the inconvenience to the public that constitutes the grievance. It is the withholding that facility of intercourse which once established would bring thousands to India who now never dream of such a journey. Look at the difference in the traffic between Liverpool and Manchester, in the establishment of rail roads between those two towns. When steamers shall be regularly established between this country and India, multitudes will flock here, and return and tell those at home, what we are and what we are not, which at present they do not at all seem to know. The Lord Bishop has so ably developed the vast results which may be most confidently relied upon that it will be unnecessary for us to dwell further upon the subject; but I would call attention to one point. Whilst we are seeking for the full completion of our wishes, we ought to feel grateful for what has already been achieved. We have an admission of the justice of our cause. We shall have Ceylon, which is at present altogether excluded from participation in the advantages of steam, joining its voice with ours. We are sure that in Lord W. Bentinck we have one who will never lose sight of the one, great object; he knows the advantages to be derived from it by the people of India at large, his exertions will ever be ready to second your "agitations" as they have been termed, and the ultimate and, I hope, near consummation of our wishes, will take place.

Mr. Speers.—I was under some apprehension from certain remarks in the public papers, that an opinion had gone abroad that we had agitated this question too much; but the numbers I see assembled around me convince me that I was mistaken. If I feel any degree of hesitation in addressing you upon this subject, I feel an equal confidence, that your support and comment will bear me through. I am very certain that we have a good cause, in confirmation of which we have not only the acknowledgment of the home authorities themselves, but the strongly expressed and ably maintained opinion of Lord W. Bentinck. It is therefore very clear that it is not without good reason that we continue to meet and to petition. With respect to personal communication, who can regard the immens number of vessels crowding our port, and learning that the whole traffic by these ships has been entirely left out of consideration in the present steam arrangements, and say that we have not ground to petition or cause of complaint. They think at home that a passage to Bombay, is tantamount to a conveyance to any part of India, just as a corresponding friend will give you a letter on your departure from England for Bombay, and request you to be so good as to deliver it to their absent friend in Bengal, whenever it is convenient to you to go out and see him. We ask the Court of Directors for steam intercommunication. Very well, says the Court; we will give it, and they then take us and land us at a remote corner of this great peninsula, and then say, we have given you what you asked for, you have got steam communication with India. It is true we find ourselves in India when set down at Bombay, but if our object is Calcutta we have either to be jolted in a palankeen twelve or fifteen hundred miles or begin a new voyage almost as long as the one we have just made. But even as regards letters, in order to indicate what are the sentiments of mercantile men, as to the extent of the advantage hitherto enjoyed by us. I need only state the substance of a resolution yesterday passed at the Chamber of Commerce, that Government be specially addressed on the great inconveniences to the mercantile world of the present irregular and uncertain mode of despatching the steamer from Bombay. I am glad to find that the interests of the mercantile community have been so warmly advocated by Lord William Bentinck, who regards this great measure not as a means of gaining space, but of diffusing knowledge, and extending civilization. It is by the frequent and constant contact of British civilization with native ignorance, that improvement in the national character of this country is to be effected. I was informed by a friend of mine who had been 19 years at Singapore, that he witnessed a very decided improvement in such of the Malays who inhabited the neighbouring islands and had had frequent intercourse with our settlement there. I am hence led to consider that there cannot be a better school of civilization for the natives of the East, than a British settlement—than the establishment of a free and civilized community amongst a barbarous and degraded community. Not only, therefore, is justice to ourselves, but in justice to our native friends, we are bound to promote the great object of steam communication by every means in our power. The highest office and employments are now open to the natives of India, but how can their sons be rendered fit to fulfil them, without they get education, and what is it that prevents the natives of India from sending or taking their sons to the best source of education but the dreary prospect of having to traverse half the globe on board a ship, on a journey which will occupy a twelvemonth. Were steam communication established on its best system, natives of property might, and would, carry their sons to England, place them at school and return in the confidence that they were not at a year's distance but only that of a few weeks. All this and more, much more is to be anticipated among the great results of steam intercourse between England and India. We may therefore feel assured of the warm support of our native friends. I shall now therefore read the resolution.

3rd.—"That the memorials to the Board of Control and the Court of Directors, now read be adopted and after being engrossed that they be signed by the Hon'ble the chairman on behalf of the meeting and by him transmitted to the Hon'ble the President of the Council of India in Council, with a request His Honor will do the memorials the favour to forward the same to England, with such support as His Honor in Council may consider the matter to deserve."

The resolution was then read and seconded by Mr. R. Scott Thomson, who said, I beg to second the proposition of Mr. Speers, that the memorials to the Board of Control and the Court of Directors be received and adopted by this meeting. I do so with much pleasure because I consider it to be the bounden duty of all classes to come boldly forward on this occasion and with one accord support the prayer of these memorials.

That we must have steam communication between India and England on a permanent footing sooner or later, every one feels confident of; every thing around us carries conviction to our minds that it is fast approximating to that "consummation devoutly to be wished;" but whether we are to sit under the limited plan as suggested between Bombay alone and England, via the Red Sea, or enjoy all the advantages which must accrue to this portion of India by the home authorities adopting the comprehensive scheme, must rest in a great measure with ourselves. It is the duty of every one to aid in accomplishing this desirable object; the effect of the limited communication is ably expressed in the petition as throwing a vexatious taxation on this side of India which the public ought not to bear, and the advantages of extending it to all other ports including Ceylon has been most forcibly and eloquently laid down to us by my Lord Bishop, this morning. If we persevere, by respectful petitions to Her Majesty's Government, and continue to agitate the importance of the question, there is no doubt that it will ultimately be crowned with success.

Mr. T. H. Naddock.—The resolution which I have to propose will require few remarks. The opinion of Lord William Bentinck on the subject under discussion, has already been laid before the meeting, and there can be no doubt, that the opinion of Lord Auckland is precisely the same, and that he views the subject in exactly the same liberal spirit. There can be no doubt that the reasons urged by Lord William Bentinck will have weight with Lord Auckland, and will conduce much to the conviction of our present Governor-General of the propriety of his recommending our petition in the strongest sense to the attention of the home authorities. Neither can there be any doubt that the voice of the present meeting, supported as it is by the presence of the most dignified public characters of the metropolis, will not fail to have great effect, especially when it appears that the sentiments expressed in our petition are participated in as well by natives as by Europeans. But we must not on that consideration neglect to avail ourselves of the aid of Lord Auckland's support, and on this ground beg to move the following resolution:

4th.—"That it is expedient in the present position of the question of steam communication with England, to address the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General with the expression of the confidence of this meeting, that his Lordship, from his own judgment of the advantages which must ensue to Great Britain and especially to India, from the establishment of a perfect and efficient Steam communication with the three principal presidencies and Ceylon, will be disposed to view favourably the object of this meeting, and praying that his Lordship will support the prayer of the memorials and petition in such manner as shall appear to His Lordship best calculated to procure the establishment of an efficient steam communication with the three presidencies."

This resolution was seconded by Baboo Duarkanath Tagore, who said, gentlemen, in seconding this resolution I cannot but remark that if the nobleman we propose to address for his aid and support be desirous, as there can be no doubt he is, of doing good to this country, he can not do better than adopt the sentiments of Lord W. Bentinck, which I hold in the greatest veneration, and which cannot but be recollected upon an occasion like this without respect and gratitude. I doubt not that Lord Auckland will view this great question in a similar light, and equally appreciate the great benefits which will flow from its adoption. The chairman has justly said that we have got something; true we have got something—we may get our letters sometimes a month or sometimes two months earlier than without steam, but as far as personal communication with Europe, we are little aided. If we would go to England, we must contemplate a voyage of six months, during which nothing shall meet our eyes but an expanse of waters. As maintained by Mr. Speirs, I concur that if the natives could get their children placed at English seminaries, within a reasonable distance of time in communicating with them, and within a moderate length of passage, they would have been sent to the seminaries of Great Britain. The native population, do wish for knowledge, but how are they to get it if they are shut out from access to its sources? They must be enabled to go to the spot where it emanates. Lord Auckland can do nothing wiser and better than to promote the success of the petition. When it is obtained and its consequences developed by education, we shall then be able to demand with a lofty front a full equalization of rights and privileges.

Sir Edward Ryan declaring the business of the day concluded, rose to quit the chair.

The Lord Bishop.—I would for one moment beg the attention of the meeting before it break up. I beg to propose the grateful thanks of this meeting to the Chief Justice, and when we consider how much the cause of steam communication with India is indebted to his exertions, I am confident that the meeting will join with me in the most cordial thanks to Sir E. Ryan.

Sir E. Ryan.—I am most grateful to you, gentlemen, for this testimony of your kind acknowledgment of my limited services to the cause in hand, but I must be allowed to say that your thanks in this instance are due in another quarter. It was to Mr. Greenlaw, whose indefatigable and most able services have been so ardently devoted to the cause, that the thanks of all, myself included and among the foremost, are pre-eminently due. I must repeat now that which I have so often publicly declared before, that it is to Mr. Greenlaw we are all chiefly indebted; and if I might be allowed I would propose as an amendment, that the thanks of this meeting be first and foremost given to Mr. Greenlaw by acclamation.

This proposal was received with loud cheers and acclamations.

Mr. Greenlaw expressed himself, as he appeared, embarrassed at the cordial manner in which his services were acknowledged. He had so frequently had occasion to express his grateful sense of the kindness shown to him in connection with the object of the meeting, that he had no words remaining with which he could adequately express his feelings. He wished to be permitted to read two questions and answers from the evidence given by Capt. Brucks of the Indian Navy, before the Select Committee of the House of Commons. Many gentlemen then present might remember when he originally proposed the comprehensive communication, how he had been met with reference to the S.W. monsoon part of the question, though his argument only applied to one single voyage during that monsoon. He hoped the evidence of Capt. Brucks, an old officer of the Indian Navy, which he would now read, would have the effect of satisfying every one that he had not been in error in his original opinion. Capt. Brucks was asked by Lord William Bentinck.

"1852. You think that, whether from Point de Galle to Socotra or from Bombay to Socotra, there are no difficulties even in the south-west monsoon, which would prevent the permanent establishment of steam navigation by either of those routes?—Certainly not. But I ought to mention, or it may be said I act inconsistently in India, as when I left India I was as great a bigot to the system laid down by Captain Wilson as any one knowing the seas could be depending for information on Captain Wilson's report of the Hugh Lindsay; but since I came to England I have, under the sanction of the Court of Directors, made a point of going round in steam vessels to see what they could do, and I feel, from the experience I have gained, there is so little to prevent the constant communication being carried on, I should be quite ready to stake my professional reputation on the subject.

1853. Chairman.] Having, in India, entertained a different opinion?—Yes having had no information but that derived from Captain Wilson's pamphlet, and no knowledge but of the Hugh Lindsay, a very inferior vessel to most here."

Such, Mr. Greenlaw observed, is the matured opinion of Capt. Brucks, and he would offer no observation on it but repeat his thanks to the meeting for their kindness.—Herald, January 7.

The following address to the Right Hon'ble Lord Auckland, voted at the late Steam Meeting, and his Lordship's reply, are published for general information.

TO THE RIGHT HON. GEORGE LORD AUCKLAND, G. C. B.
Governor-General of India.

Address of the Inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood in Town Hall assembled.

My Lord,—The inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, duly assembled at the Town Hall for the purpose of taking into consideration the present state of the question of steam communication with England, having prepared a petition to the Hon'ble the House of Commons, and memorials to the Right Hon'ble the Board of Control and the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company, praying that steam communication from England may forthwith be extended to the three principal presidencies, venture to address your Lordship, confident that their prayer will receive from your Lordship all the attention and support which its importance merits.

They refrain from entering into any details of that importance, satisfied that your Lordship cannot for any period have presided over the Councils of this vast empire, without being fully sensible how much its moral, political, and commercial welfare must be promoted by an efficient steam intercourse between England and all parts of India.

They therefore content themselves with soliciting your Lordship to afford them the benefit of your support in such manner as may to your Lordship seem best calculated to attain the object in view in its most efficient form.

On behalf of the meeting,

TO THE RIGHT HON'BLE SIR EDWARD RYAN, &c. &c. &c.

SIR,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of an address signed by you on the part of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, soliciting my support to a petition, and to memorials, in favor of the immediate extension to the three presidencies of steam communication with England. In answer, I willingly promise you that cordial support which I am bound to give, as well by the feelings which would lead every Englishman in India to bring himself nearer to his country, as by the duty which is imposed upon me of endeavoring to promote whatever may tend to the general welfare; and I need not add any thing on my part in confirmation of the evidence given by Lord William Bentinck and others before the Committee of the House of Commons, to prove how deeply involved are the interests of our native as well as of our British fellow-subjects in the success of your representations. I am ready to acknowledge with gratitude the liberality with which increased means of communication have within the last year been supplied to us; the advantages of which, not without occasional disappointment, we have all experienced; but I strongly feel how insufficient for many of the great purposes to be contemplated in the extension and acceleration of intercourse with our country, those means must yet be considered; and for their further improvement, I rejoice that the government and the community may rely upon the continued exertions of those who, with you, have long and strenuously applied themselves to the accomplishment of this most important public object. I cannot doubt that the manifestations of the general and intense interest with which this question is regarded in India will be received with all the attention which they so justly merit by the high authorities to which they are addressed.

On my part, no opportunity will be neglected of aiding by all means in my power, the renewed representations which will now be submitted. I am confident that the willing co-operation of the President in Council will be afforded to us; and I am looking with impatience for the hour of putting to the test of actual experiment the facility of overcoming those obstacles, to which, it may yet by some be apprehended, that a steam voyage from Calcutta to the Red Sea during the unfavorable season, will be exposed.

I am, your faithful servant,

AUCKLAND.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.

A public meeting of the inhabitants of Madras was held at the College Hall this morning, pursuant to public notice, for the purpose of considering the best mode of carrying into effect a plan to record the Military Achievements of the Duke of Wellington.

PRESENT.

The Rt. Hon. the Governor,	Dr. Lawder,
The Hon. Mr. Sullivan,	Mr. A. McLeane,
Sir R. Conyn,	Mr. Trevor,
Sir E. Gambier,	Major Derville,
Sir P. Maitland,	Mr. A. Arbuthnot,
Colonel Huchens,	Mr. C. Arbuthnot,
Colonel Evans,	Mr. Wylie,
General Napveton,	Major Butterworth,
Colonel Napier,	Captain Philpot,
Mr. McDouell,	Captain Dalrymple,
Mr. Chamier,	Colonel Strachan,
Mr. J. Elliot,	Captain Freshfield,
Mr. W. Elliot,	Captain Forster,
Mr. Ouchterlony,	Major Haig,
Captain McDonald,	Captain Justice,
Captain P. McDonald,	Mr. Fullerton,
Dr. Wight,	Mr. Ackworth,
Mr. W. Ashteth,	Mr. Bayley,
Mr. Annesley,	Strenevassah Pillay,
Maj. Bradford,	Brigadier Bell,
Mr. Bruce,	Captain Maitland,
Captain Snow,	Colonel Tulloch,
Colonel Walpole,	Captain Bower,
	Mr. Liddell.

The Right Honorable the Governor having taken the Chair, addressed the Meeting as follows:

The object of the meeting to lay before the public of Madras the proceedings of a committee in England which has been formed to receive and apply such sums as may be subscribed to the erection of a national trophy to the military achievements of the Duke of Wellington.

To enlarge upon the services of "that great and distinguished General (to use the words of George the 4th) who has so often led the armies of the nation to victory and glory, and whose high military renown is blended with the history of Europe," would indeed be superfluous; but it has often been remarked that these splendid services, which have received the repeated and unanimous thanks of both Houses of Parliament, and which have been honoured by the sovereign with the highest rewards which it is in the power of the Crown to bestow, have been suffered by a singular neglect to remain unmarked by any national testimonial in the metropolis of the British empire. I am aware that a statue has been erected in the city to the Duke of Wellington, but this was intended as a mark of the gratitude of the citizens of London to his Grace for the interest which he had taken in the improvements in the City, especially those connected with the rebuilding of London Bridge.

The monument now proposed to be erected will have neither a civic nor a local character. It is intended as a national and a Military Trophy.

It has been objected in some of the London newspapers, that this is not the proper moment for a subscription of this nature which ought, it is argued, to have been entered into, either at the close of the war, or not until after the decease of the hero; and that our zeal to do honour to the great general, may be, by party misrepresentation, converted into a species of political homage. I need not for myself disclaim any such purpose; and if I at all notice the subject, it is only to remove any misapprehension which might possibly prevail respecting it.

The Committee in England, is composed of individuals connected with all parties; the papers relating to their proceedings, were forwarded to me by Sir John Hobhouse, himself one of the Members of the Committee; and among the names in the subscription list are to be found those of men of every shade of political opinion.

This too, at the time of a general election, when political feelings are sharpened by the actual contest of political principles.

Let no man here conceive, that he is compromising his political principles in subscribing to this work; and let no man, on the other hand, persuade himself that in coming here to day he is promoting a party object, or attending a political meeting.

There is, indeed, a peculiar reason why the public of Madras should come forward upon this occasion. It was in this country that the Duke of Wellington commenced his brilliant career. The Madras army have their share of his glory, and I see here to day, some of those who participated in his early victories.

Moved by Lord Elphinstone, seconded by Sir P. Montland, and carried unanimously.

Resolved.—That a subscription be entered into for the purpose of forwarding the object of the following resolution of a meeting of the noblemen and gentlemen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, held on Monday 19th of June 1837, (the Anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo falling on Sunday.)

Resolved.—That, as there is no great national memorial to record the splendid military achievements of the Duke of Wellington, it is proposed to erect, by general subscription, and in an appropriate situation, in the metropolis, such a testimonial as may be worthy of those services, and of a nation's gratitude.

Moved by Sir R. Comyn, seconded by the Hon. Mr. Sullivan, and carried unanimously.

Resolved.—That Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. be appointed treasurers for the purpose of carrying into effect the foregoing resolution.

Moved by Sir F. Gambier, seconded by Mr. Chalmier, and carried unanimously.

Resolved.—That the thanks of the meeting be given to Lord Elphinstone, for presiding on the occasion.

About two thousand rupees were subscribed on the spot.—Madras Herald, Dec. 16.

MEETING OF THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE BANK OF BOMBAY.

Our readers will observe in another column, the report of the Bank Committee, read before the subscribers at the meeting of Saturday last. We see little in that document at all satisfactory to the shareholders, and most particularly object to the farther grant made out of the funds, for the expense of an agency in England. A committee has now been formed in London; that body has been put in full possession of the views of the subscribers as to the institution, and every necessary step has been taken to introduce the project to the notice of the home authorities, and of all parties whose influence can at all be instrumental to its success. The prejudices that at first existed against the scheme, and which tended so powerfully to throw a damp on its reception at the Court, have been counteracted or removed, and there is now nothing left for those to whose management its affairs have been committed, but to await quietly the result of the application made to the Government of India, for its opinion as to the proposed Bank of India, which is to be so decisive in regard to that of Bombay. Where then is the necessity for a farther advance out of the funds subscribed? Mr. Ashburner's activity is admitted on all hands, and there can be no doubt that he has done much to promote the interests of his constituents; but when nothing farther can be done till the decision of the Court upon the Governor General's reply to its communication is ascertained, what in the name of all that is absurd, can the committee mean, by increasing the expenses when all onward proceedings are at a perfect stand? It is anticipated that every thing will be known in a very short time, and there is little doubt entertained that a charter will be eventually procured. These views are, we apprehend, a little over sanguine, as the Court is not always particularly speedy in its decisions. The delay may then be prolonged from month to month, and from year to year, without any nearer approach than at present to a conclusion, and the money of the shareholders is in the mean time silted away without any purpose being gained.

We see no reason why an end should not at once be put to all hesitation as to farther proceedings, or why a Joint-Stock Bank should not as proposed at first be immediately started. All the details of management might thus be put in operation, the business fairly commenced, and instead of funds being unprofitably wasted, the concern would be in a fair way of paying its own expenses. On a charter being granted, the business thus put in active train, and the establishment completely organized, might, with a stroke of the pen, be transferred from the Joint-Stock Bank, to the chartered one. The delays of the Court of Directors ought to have no influence whatever on the proceedings of the committee who, on ascertaining that there are difficulties in the way of one scheme should lose no time in entering on the other. Orders have been sent to England, regarding the engagement of people conversant in banking affairs to manage the institution and immediate instructions should be forwarded to the committee to conclude arrangements with such individuals, and send them out, with all the necessary paraphernalia, by the earliest opportunity. This would be the only course to quiet the minds of the subscribers, who must by this time be heartily sick of the postponements which have taken place.—Bombay Gazette Jan. 15.

At a General Meeting of the Shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, held on Saturday the 13th January 1838, at the Office Messrs. DROWN, CARTER, and Co.

J. B. SIMSON, Esq. in the Chair

The following report of the proceedings of the committee was read by their chairman, D. Greenhill, Esq.

REPORT

The Committee have, in common with the subscribers generally, to regret the unforeseen delay which has occurred in procuring a confirmation of the charter by the Court of Directors; but there is every probability, by the last advices from England, of an early decision being obtained.

Many serious difficulties, unlooked for when the application was sent home, have arisen to retard its completion. Some of these, time alone could obviate, and others have been diminished or removed by Mr. Ashburner, whose presence in England, the committee feel has been of such high importance to the interests of all concerned, as to have abundantly confirmed the propriety of his having been deputed there.

"It would appear that previous to the application from this presidency, a reference had been made to the Government of India, for its opinion on the scheme proposed for the establishment of the "Bank of India;" and until the answer was received, it was intimated to your agent that no resolution could be come to on the subject of the "Bank of Bombay." Mr. Ashburner lost no time in pointing out in the most forcible manner, in personal conferences with several influential parties the hardship of this delay to the subscribers of this Bank; but being assured that there was no likelihood of the court being disposed to alter the course they had adopted, he was recommended by the London committee not to press for an immediate decision, as any further attempts to hasten proceedings under the existing circumstances, were more likely to injure than assist the end in view. Mr. Ashburner was the more reconciled to this advice, there having been reason to expect the report of the Governor-General by an early opportunity; and since the first communication from Mr. Ashburner, several papers on the subject have been received by the Court; and the report itself of the Supreme Government was looked for in London by the next packet.

The committee have no official information of the sentiments of the authorities in India who were consulted; but that the opinion of the Governor-General is in favor of banking in this country is sufficiently well known to lead the committee to anticipate the support of the Supreme Government to an Institution based on the principles of the Bombay Bank; and from all the information your committee have been able to obtain, in regard to the scheme for the "Bank of India," they see no chance of its ever being perfected, or that its consideration will eventually interfere with the Establishment here.

Your committee have addressed the Government of this presidency, soliciting it to ascertain from the Governor-General the date of the transmission of His Excellency's report to the Court of Directors; but no reply has yet been received.

The delay arising from this unforeseen cause has been most usefully employed by Mr. Ashburner; whose correspondence, which has been open to the perusal of all the subscribers, evinces how indefatigable he has been in obtaining interviews with the public authorities, and private individuals of weight, who take an interest in the welfare of this presidency, for the purpose of explaining all the circumstances under which the charter was applied for and granted by the local Government.

In advertent to the active opposition, naturally created by an apprehension of the injury to private establishments, which the institution of a Bank would doubtless give rise to the committee are of opinion that the opportune arrival of Mr. Ashburner in London was most valuable to the subscribers in removing the prejudices industriously circulated against it, and which only personal conferences with the parties could have enabled him so successfully to effect.

The committee have at the same time much satisfaction in stating that their applications to the influential individuals addressed by their Chairman, and supported personally by Mr. Ashburner, have met with the anticipated success.

In regard to the delay that had taken place, whilst, the committee regretted the necessity of Mr. Ashburner's detention; they were, notwithstanding, decidedly of opinion that the presence of a zealous Agent was essential to overcome the tediousness of the forms of office and to neutralize the opposition that would certainly be persevered in; and persuaded as they were that no one possessing the interest and qualifications, in any degree equal to Mr. Ashburner, could be found to supply his place with more economy; they approved, on the expiration of the period for which an allowance for his expenses was made, on the part of the subscribers, of his remaining until he could be furnished with further instructions; being satisfied that the interests of the subscribers in general will be greatly benefited by his continuing in England for the short time, within which it is probable that the question will be finally decided, the committee trust the meeting will authorize them to sanction his stay for that purpose.

The committee have the pleasure of stating that Mr. Ashburner has likewise been assiduous in obtaining every kind of information respecting the detailed management of Banks both in England and Scotland, and is still engaged in making such enquiries as are likely to add to the efficiency of the Establishment; his detention, however, so much beyond the time originally contemplated, seems to entitle him to the consideration of the subscribers for some further compensation; and the sum which the committee would now submit, in a separate resolution, for the sanction of the meeting is no more than seems to be consistent with the grounds on which the previous grant was made.

Since the last meeting your committee have transmitted to the Agent, a Memorial addressed to the Board of Control, on the subject of the Charter, to be presented in the event of the London committee deeming it advisable. A copy of that memorial is laid on the table with the rest of the correspondence.

To the London committee, Mr. Browning, of the firm of Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart., and Co. has been added; whose acquaintance with the subject, and influence with parties whose support was desirable, has been highly useful, and the committee have requested Mr. Finlay, who has just gone home, to join the committee there.

Several vacancies having occurred in the Bombay committee since the General Meeting, the committee have the pleasure of announcing that Messrs. Skinner, Bruce, Waddington and Gordon have accepted their invitation to join them. They have also to announce that Messrs. Dadabhoj and Muncherjee Pestonjee having requested to be relieved from the office of treasurers to the institution in the month of March last, it was undertaken at the request of the committee by Messrs. Duom, Carter and Co.

The account current with the treasurers is laid on the table, shewing the balance in their hands to be rupees 4,054, 3, 07,

A statement is also submitted to the meeting received from Mr. Skinner, (the trustee) of the Government paper now in his possession, amounting to rupees 81,800 (the interest on which he invests in the 4 per cent. loan) and a cash balance of rupees 77. 83 and there is now a total balance in favour of the subscribers of rupees 85,931, 3. 9. exclusive of the sum in the hands of Messrs. Coutts and Co.

Rupees 47,076 3, 68 or £ 5,000 sterling were remitted, as stated in the committee's last report, and in terms of resolution 8th of the 11th January last, remains in the hands of Messrs. Coutts and Co., of London.

Rupees 7,000 were appropriated, also under the authority of the meeting of the 11th January, to meet Mr. Ashburner's expenses, and rupees 3,145 3 10 have been further disbursed by the committee here since its appointment.

The meeting will perceive by these statements, that besides the salary of the Secretary to the committee, which was fixed on the very lowest scale, viz. 150 rupees per mensem, the allowance to the agent in London, and the charges of the solicitors here; the expenditure of the committee has been limited to rupees 485,1,4) principally for Bank notes, advertisements, and postage.

The committee, in now submitting their proceedings, since the last General Meeting, for the inspection of the subscribers, have only further to state that they trust they will meet their approval.

(Signed) D. GREENHILL, Chairman.

Bombay, 13th January, 1838.

Proposed by Dr. Henderson, seconded by Mr. R. Smith, and carried unanimously.

That the report now read to the meeting be approved, adopted, and published for general information.

Proposed by the chairman of the committee, seconded by Jugunnath Sunkerset, Esq.

That in consequence of the unavoidable detention in England of Mr. Ashburner, this meeting authorize and empower the committee to pay him an additional sum, to the amount voted to him at the meeting of the 11th January, for his travelling and other expenses, for the remaining period he may be obliged to remain at home; to be calculated in the proportion of the former grant.

Proposed by Dr. Scott, seconded by Dr. Henderson.

That the thanks of this Meeting be given to the Chairman and committee for their attention to the interests of the shareholders.

Proposed by Colonel Wood, seconded by Mr. Brownrigg.

That the thanks of the Meeting be given to Mr. Simson for his conduct in the chair.

(Signed) J. B. SIMSON, chairman.

We have had several communications on the subject of the late bank meeting, but as we consider it unnecessary to give a place in our columns to many when one will equally well answer the purpose, we have selected the letter which appears to us to contain the greatest modicum of what can be reasonably said against the proceedings in question.

With the writer of that letter, we entirely concur, and recommend what he has said to the grave consideration of all concerned. We are totally averse to the practice which has hitherto prevailed of calling the public meeting of this institution in a private office, where it was impossible that any thing like a decent sprinkling of the shareholders could be brought together. In fact we are of opinion that summoned in this way, the meetings can hardly be called any thing but private, and are considered rather in that light than in the other by the great body of the subscribers, particularly among the native community. Why not convene the Bank meetings in the Town hall, an apartment large enough for every purpose, and which no one would demur in entering, as he would into a private office. For committees, the latter is all right and proper, but for general meeting of bodies so large as that of stockholders in the bank, every one will allow that the Town Hall is in all respects much better adapted.

The plan proposed by our correspondent, of announcing the measures to be brought forward at the General Meeting, is an excellent one, and if adopted, would give every one an opportunity of stating his opinion. As it is, many, for the reason above stated, do not attend, and those who do, are quite taken by surprise as to the motions which they find made, seconded, and for the most part agreed to by the subscribers—who are present. This ought not to be, and a public notification of the business to be proceeded with, would have the effect of putting every one on his guard. We could wish that the late proceedings, in justice to all the subscribers, had been tested in this manner, in which case we should have looked forward to a very different result.

With regard to the allowance given to Mr. Ashburner, we think it quite an extravagant one, considering the present circumstances of the bank. His first allowance was understood to include the amount of passage money to and from Great Britain. Even this deduction would leave a handsome surplus for his services in favour of the Bank, and if the new advance is to be made in proportion to the original, instead of the reduced amount, then will the Bank Agent have but little reason to regret the continuance or delay in a settlement of the question, which is so anxiously looked forward to. We admit that a great deal has been done, nay we are ready to admit that all has been done that is necessary, till an answer is received from the court. Where then is the gain to be reaped from further expenditure? all has been done, what work is there then yet to do, before the receipt of this portentous answer? We shall be told, perhaps, that though not positively engaged in advancing what is placed under his care, an agent may yet be pretty well employed in looking after contingent advantages and in collecting information that may possibly be useful. To this we reply, that so long as an agent is kept in pay, equally long will there be a nominal duty for him to perform; but we think the simplest, most satisfactory, and most economical plan, would be to recommend Mr. Ashburner to return, and leave the future management of the Bank affairs to the London committee, several active members of which are directly interested, in its success. The accountants whom that body has been requested to engage, if well selected will be able to communicate all the information requisite on provincial banking, and thereby supersede the necessity for an agent to make himself acquainted with the details. If these accountants have not been already engaged, they ought to be so immediately, and dispatched to Bombay to open an institution of some description or other. With active assistance, a moderate capital, and a fair field to act upon, there ought to be no further enquiries for an agent to make in either England or Scotland, which could not be much more satisfactorily and profitably answered here.—

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

There was a numerous attendance of the share holders of the Universal Assurance Society at the office of the secretaries, on Saturday at eleven o'clock. The annual accounts were laid on the table. We give a brief abstract of the proceedings.

It appeared that the amount of the risks outstanding in India to 30th November last and in England to 30th June 1837, was Co. Rs. 85,28,435 on 744 lives in 827 policies, thus giving an average of Rs. 10,312 on each. The lapses from the commencement of the society in 1834, to the present period, London and Calcutta inclusive, are in number twenty; the aggregate amount of claims thereon Co. Rs. 1,92,333.

The assets are as follows:—Of the Indian Branch invested in Co. Paper and on deposits of Bank shares and Co. Rs. 5,71,66. Of the Parent Society, in other similar securities £41,398, or Co. Rs. 4,13,984. Total Assets Co. Rs. 9,85,645.

The report of the directors of the Parent Society was read by the Secretary, after which on the motion of Hon'ble Mr. Shakespeare, seconded by Mr. G. Hill, it was resolved—That the report read, together with the accounts and statements laid before the meeting, appear satisfactory, and are passed accordingly. It was then proposed by Mr. A. F. Smith, seconded by Mr. A. Beattie

“ That it appears of great importance that tables be obtained as early as possible regulating the rate at which policies may be purchased by the Society from parties willing to dispose of them, and that the Directors be requested to bring this matter again to the notice of the Parent Society.”

It was afterwards proposed by Mr. T. H. Gardner, seconded by Captain Thomson, that the Directors be requested to urge the society in England to send out annuity tables to enable the Society to undertake the profitable branch of annuity business in this country. Mr. Pattle and Mr. Beattie, who went out of the direction, were unanimously requested to continue then services, and they were re-elected accordingly. Upon the motion of Mr. E. S. Ellis, thanks were voted to the chairman, Mr. Pattle, and the meeting repaired.—Oriental Observer, Jan. 6.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

At a monthly meeting of the Proprietors of and Subscribers to the Calcutta Public Library, held on the 6th January 1838.

DR. STRONG IN THE CHAIR.

Present—Dr. Jackson, W. P. Grant, Esq., T. H. Gardiner, Esq., and J. H. Peterson, Esq.

Dr. Strong informed the meeting that as it was probable, that the members of the Medical and Physical Society might have occasion to remove their books from the Asiatic Society, he was desirous to offer the society the use of a part of the Library rooms or a separate room, and asked whether there would be any objection on the part of the Proprietors of the Calcutta Public Library; when it was resolved in compliance with Dr. Strong's wishes, that it would be a mutual accommodation to have the books of the Medical and Physical Society placed in a part of the Library rooms, distinct from their own collection and in charge of a dustproof, which would be the only expense to the society, as the librarians of the Calcutta Public Library offer their services gratuitously to the Society.

After this the Curators reported that three hundred and forty-six volumes were purchased during the last month, two hundred and twenty-four volumes of which forming the selection made from the library of the late Sir B. Malkin.

MEETING AT THE UNION BANK.

A meeting of proprietors was held this-day, pursuant to advertisement, LONGUEVILLE CLARKE, Esq., in the chair.

The subjoined report was read by the Secretary, when it was Proposed by Captain Alexander St. Leger McMahon, and seconded by Mr. J. W. McLeod, and carried unanimously.

I.—That the secretary's report just read, is approved, and that it be published.

Proposed by Mr. Richard Walker, seconded by Mr. Theodore Dickens, and carried unanimously.

II.—That the accounts now submitted are approved and passed by this meeting, and that the books be closed accordingly.

Proposed by Mr. J. W. Cragg, and seconded by Mr. A. F. Smith.

III.—That a half yearly dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, or Co.'s Rs. sixty (Co.'s Rs. 60) per share, be now declared.

Proposed by Mr. Theodore Dickens, and seconded by Mr. Wm. Bruce, and carried unanimously.

IV.—That this meeting, made special for the purpose, approves and confirms the resolutions passed at the special general meeting of proprietors on the 15th December, 1837, for increasing the capital stock of the Bank, in the manner then and there laid down, with the following alteration in the 3d resolution, viz., of adding the words "or any other" after the word "abovementioned," and also that the day on which shares shall be sold pursuant to the 5th resolution shall be the 16th February, 1838, and not the 1st February 1838, as originally expressed.

Proposed by Mr. T. Dickens, and seconded by Mr. H. M. Elliott.

V.—That at the ensuing sale on the 16th February next, purchasers, after payment of the premium in cash, may give their promissory notes payable on or before the 30th June next, with 10 per cent. interest.

Proposed by Mr. James Mackenzie, and seconded by Mr. J. W. MacLeod.

VI.—That the present meeting be adjourned to Friday the 16th February next, at noon, for the purpose of declaring and selling the shares not taken up.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The report for the half year expired on the 31st ultimo, will be brief and I trust satisfactory.

The profits actually realized by the Bank during the past six months have been..... Co.'s Rs. 1,80,006 11 10

To which add the small undivided surplus of last half year.... Co.'s Rs. 7,007 13 10

We have a total divisible sum of..... Co.'s Rs. 1,87,014 9 8

The capital stock of the Bank paid up, amounts to..... Co.'s Rs. 31,15,000 0 0

On the 30th June last it was only..... Co.'s Rs. 21,60,000 0 0

Increase of capital stock since that period..... Co.'s Rs. 9,55,000 0 0

The above divisible profits of the present half year, have therefore to be spread over a considerably larger capital. But they amount notwithstanding to a rate exceeding 12 per cent. per annum, by a small fraction.

It may be well to remind you also with reference to the profits realized on the past half year, that during a considerable period the state of things at Home and in China operating on the market here, naturally caused a larger diminution of our deposits, and thereby contracted in proportion the funds of the Bank disposable for the lucrative work of discounting. But for this, the profits of the period, would probably have been greater.

If you divide the whole—say 12 per cent., which may be thought expedient to facilitate the proposed further increase of 8 lakhs of stock, the dividend on each share will be Company's rupees sixty.

The notes in circulation have been lower than usual this half year, which is believed to be owing mainly to the long delay in the arrival and consequent issue of the new Company rupee notes. Our sicca notes were of course troublesome to customers, and therefore exchanged more largely than before for the Company rupee paper of the Government Bank, which assimilated with new specie currency of the country. Thus, last half year our extremes of circulation were Company's rupees 5,01,218 and Company's rupees 2,18,161 while in that preceding, they reached Company's rupees 7,43,000 and Company's rupees 3,38,000.

I am not aware that any thing of importance remains to be added to this report.

The last augmentation of stock has all been taken up with the exception of the following.

Seventy shares of absentees in Europe not yet declared.
Seven shares of proprietors in India.

These last will fall to be sold at an early day, (which will be duly announced) along with any shares of the fresh stock proposed to be finally voted this day, which the proprietors on the spot having the option to take up, shall not think fit to accept, on the 1st of February next.

ROMAN CATHOLIC GENERAL MEETING.

PRINCIPAL ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, 15TH JAN. 1838.

The Most Reverend Dr. R. St. Leger in the Chair.

The annual meeting of the Roman Catholics for the election of wardens, was convened by the usual notifications this day, and at 8 A. M. about twenty of the most respectable Catholic gentlemen were present. On the chair being taken, the most Reverend Dr. St. Leger, addressed the meeting, informing them, that the purpose for which they had assembled was familiar to them, and that he felt it his duty to express the satisfactory manner in which the outgoing wardens, Messrs. M. Crow and Thomas Gregory, had conducted their honorary duties; and, said the Reverend gentleman, they are entitled to the thanks of the community for the attention they manifested during their career, and for many of the improvements which they had introduced. The Reverend gentlemen then thanked Messrs. Crow and Gregory, and the business of the day proceeded. On a suggestion from one of the gentleman present, Messrs. James Rostan, Junior, and B. Furie were chosen Scrutineers, and Messrs. Crow and Gregory tellers; on the votes being collected the following result appeared.

Mr. Francis Rodrigues	16 votes.
„ Mathew Augier	12 ditto.
„ Samuel Jones	4 ditto.
„ John Michie	2 ditto.

Messrs. Rodrigues and Augier were elected Wardens, and after thanks were voted to the most Reverend Chairman, the gentlemen retired.—Hurkaru, Jan. 16.

REPORT BY THE DIRECTORS OF THE BENGAL BONDED WAREHOUSE ASSOCIATION.

Report by the Directors of the Bengal-Bonded Warehouse Association, submitted to a General Meeting of the Proprietors held on 12th January, 1838.

Had the Association been definitively constituted, the period for the Meeting would have been in November; but the Directors have deferred calling you together, till the Draft of the Incorporation Act should be published, that you might at the same time have an opportunity of taking its provisions into final consideration.

The course of the Act to its present stage may be shortly stated.

The measure was quite new. We had no precedents here for our guidance. On being desired by the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General to prepare a draft, we made our legal advisers acquainted with all that had taken place on the subject, whether in correspondence with Government, or at the proceedings of meetings; and we from time to time gave such assistance, in suggesting and revising, as was required, and we were competent to afford.

After much labor a draft was at last handed up to the Government, too voluminous probably, as it attempted, by express regulation, to provide for whatever seemed to be of likely occurrence. We were then required to place our counsel of communication with the Advocate-General, for the settlement of the Draft.

It had become obvious, that the dimensions of the Draft must be greatly curtailed, to render it eligible to be passed into a law. This having been effected, after much pains and care had been bestowed upon the task, a Draft was in October returned to Government, in a very abridged form as compared with the original. It had been thought that, were the Society empowered by enactment to frame by-laws (subject of course to the confirmation of Government,) for its internal administration, all such rules instead of encumbering the Draft had better be left to be prepared, discussed, and submitted, after experience should indicate what was essentially wanted.

The Honorable the President in Council was lately pleased to forward to us a Draft, which the Legislative Department was inclined to prefer to the other; and he invited some of us to wait upon him and the Hon'ble Mr. Macaulay, to confer on the points in which the two Drafts differed, as they were desirous to settle these in a manner satisfactory to the Association.

A deputation accordingly waited upon those authorities to point out the few differences which were held to be of consequence, and found them prepared and anxious to meet the views of the Association in whatever was reasonable.

The Draft of the Act having now been published for general information, you have doubtless all, as was intended, formed your opinion of its merits.

We are bound in candor to admit, that it is a decided improvement on the Draft which was handed up; it is more concise and lucid; and is, we think, in no wise less comprehensive, or of inferior efficiency. We anticipate that it will obtain your full approbation.

The Accounts, and the Books of our proceedings, are placed before you. You will there perceive that the Receipts and Disbursements up to 31st ultimo are as follow:

In reference to the plain projected for the first range of warehouses, it was necessary to commission iron beams and pillars from England, towards the purchase of which, bills for £6,228, secured on consignments of produce, have already been remitted. At the time when the first indent was framed, it was supposed that the whole iron work would cost on board ship in England £14 per ton, or £14,000 on a computation of 1,000 tons; but as the price of iron has fallen since then, the cost should amount to less than that sum. The execution of the order was entrusted to Messrs. D. Ainslie, G. C. Arbuthnot and T. Speir, shareholders, whose gratuitous services are reckoned on as being cheerfully afforded. We are now daily looking for accounts from those gentlemen.

Some time unavoidably passed away, before the part of the premises which we required could be vacated, and possession obtained; and afterwards, breaking down the houses, and removing the rubbish, consumed a considerable interval; nor, finally, could the excavation for the foundation be completed before the end of October.

Apprehending that much time may yet elapse before the iron work can be received; and as it is not unlikely that some further iron apparatus will have to be provided, to ensure the stability of the pillars, and to support the floors; and as the exigencies of the Bonding Trade imperiously demand that no time be lost in preparing sufficient and suitable accommodation for its reception, we have thought it expedient to have a plain specification and estimate made out, for the construction of the first range, with brick pillars and saw beams, leaving the iron works, with such additions as, in the judgment of a scientific person, may be proper for its completion, to be used for a second range, which we feel persuaded the progress of the bonding system will ere long call upon you to erect.

This plan is now submitted for your consideration and decision.

The amount of the estimate, Rs. 3,20,000, is unquestionably high; but we conceive that it is susceptible of considerable retrenchment. The cost of the masonry is stated to be Rs. 1,32,000; and the wood work amounts to Rs. 1,88,000. You are already aware that much of the ground, being of comparatively recent formation, the base of the walls will require to be of unusual breadth; and it being of the greatest importance, for the preservation of the merchandize which may be stored there, that the ground floor be rendered dry, it will have to be well raised, involving much expense; but in the estimate for the wood work, we perceive room for great reduction. Parties have tendered for the delivery here of teak planks from Moulmein, of the prescribed lengths, breadths, and thickness, required for the flooring, at the rate of 1-12; indeed one party tendered at 1-8 per cubic foot; and such plank, for the purposes to which they are destined, should need but little additional workmanship, assuredly not the costly labor implied in this estimate, which charges 1-8 per square foot of 3 inches planks. In the single item of teak planks for floors, extending to Rs. 1,34,000, a saving of Rs. 50,000 appears to quite practicable; and it is not unreasonable to assume that some considerable, though it may not be a proportional reduction, may be effected in the provision of saw wood, amounting in the estimate to Rs. 30,417 for beams.

We will now direct your attention, in a summary way, to the actual position of the bonding operations.

Government, averse to grant private licenses, having prepared some of the godowns to the export warehouse, gave the Society the option of hiring them, intimating that, if declined, they were to be conducted, for storing goods, seeking the privilege of the bond, under the Board of Customs. Anxious to support the views of Government, and judging it expedient that no other should have the initiation of the system, we did not hesitate to hire the godowns, though, from their being detached, insulated as it were in another establishment, and from the indifferent character of their accommodation, we were not sanguine as to the result being productive. The experiment has now been in so far tested on an unfavourable field, and here is its issue. As was to have been expected at the commencement of a business quite new, it moved on but languidly for a time, and of precarious extent. Its progress, however, after a season accelerated; and as its advantages became known, the confidence in its steady growth was strengthened. The hired godowns are now quite full, the rent chargeable for the goods in store amounting to about Rs. 1,300 a month; which exceeds by Rs. 400 the cost of your establishment and the hire paid for the godowns, and it has become not only desirable but necessary, for the reception of the goods already in progress to be bonded, to resort to measures for obtaining the earliest possible occupation of the godowns which already exist on the south part of the import premises. This will involve the necessity for a further payment, on account of the purchase money, of about Rs. 50,000. But the room thus got is of decidedly a superior description as compared with the hired godowns, and will store away times five the quantity of goods whereas the rent at present paid for those hired godowns is equivalent to seven per cent. on this instalment of the price. The hired godowns are to be vacated as soon as possible. As the offices are to be ready in the course of March, it is, independently of the saving, of obvious advantage, to have all the Society's operations concentrated on one spot, and under the immediate control of your directors.

Under the powers given to them and with reference to the expenditure above required, the directors now call for a third contribution of ten per cent. per share.

In conclusion, it is proper that we submit a few observations, as to the future prospects of the undertaking.

The capacity of the range to be now erected, after allowing ample space for the passage of the goods, may be estimated at 20,000 tons; but taking it at 15,000 tons throughout the year, the rent by a calculation we possess, and based on the average we find in the rates charged by a number of the mercantile firms here, would amount to about Rs. 2,70,000 in the year. Occupied to that extent of its capability, the revenue you will be sensible, would amply suffice to remunerate, the cost of even an expensive fabric, to support the requisite establishment, and to afford a considerable reduction of the current rates of godown hire. Such experience as we have had of the warehouse business, still in its mere infancy it must be admitted, does yet encourage us to expect that the warehouse will be well occupied; further we anticipate a necessity at no remote period, for the construction of another range; and we ground that anticipation, not only on the extending value of the bonding privilege, but on the advantages of goodness, cheapness, and security of accommodation; on the benefit of concentration; and on the great convenience and facility afforded to trade by the operation of the warrant.

TRANSIT DUTIES ON SALT.

We are glad to observe symptoms of a change for the better in the conduct of Government in regard to the transit duties on salt, although what is yet done falls miserably short of what the public have a right to expect, and what must be done. Our readers will remember, that some short time ago an order in Council was published, continuing the transit duties upon salt alone, without any intimation as to the duration of such continuance, whether until the new law should come into operation, or till such other period as it might seem good in the eyes of our rulers to decree. To do away with the effect of this order, it is evident that another must be issued to council it, in toto, and this we had expected from Government so soon as its eyes became open to the singular anomaly of bringing into force the new Act passed by the Supreme Government, while the article to which that act had reference was still by an express order emanating from the former, subjected to the old duties which the new law was expressly framed to abolish. Well, and now that the absurdity and injustice of such a course of procedure have become manifest to our Government, what is proposed to be done by way of remedy? Surely, our readers will say, the objectionable order is declared to be cancelled. Not exactly so; we are sorry to inform them, although we have little doubt such is intended by our law-makers. The notification of the 23d November last is undoubtedly referred to, and the transit duties as well as all other duties except the 8 annas per maund are repealed on all salt manufactured in the territories subject to the government of the presidency of Bombay. No, that would be too much: evil may be done in wholesale, but we correct by degrees. No, the relief can now only be afforded to that salt which may be imported into any part of the presidency of Bombay! Is it seriously meant that this notification is to be understood as a reversal of the other? If so our local law-makers would seem to have forgotten that there may be salt produced in other parts of the presidency and carried to the interior without being imported at all, and that the order now before us provides no remedy for salt so conveyed unless it has previously passed through the ordeal of importation. But let our readers judge for themselves; here is the notification which has suggested to us the above observations.

With reference to the notification of 22d November last, the Right Hon'ble the Governor in Council is pleased to declare, that all salt on which the duty of eight (8) annas per Indian maund, imposed by Act XXVII of 1837, has been paid, shall be exempt from the payment of transit duties, and also from that of sea customs, and all other taxes or imposts whatever, on importation into any port of the Bombay Presidency.

Published by order of the Right Hon'ble the Governor in Council.

L. R. REID, Secy. to Govt.

We are not exactly aware of the practice in force among our authorities when orders in council or public notifications are framed with reference to the various departments of the service, but should think that in all such cases the officers in charge of the departments should either receive instructions to frame the documents, or be referred to and consulted as to the forms necessary to be observed. We should think that one or other of these courses is the most natural to be followed, as well as the best calculated to ensure the purposes of any enactment being fully answered. If then in the case under review a reference has been made to the Collector of Customs, who we presume is the officer under whose department the new arrangement in regard to salt will come into operation, as to what was necessary to be done, that officer surely can never have imagined that an order so imperfect in its nature, and so partial in its apparent tendency, could answer the purpose of cancelling the preceding one. He must have known that there are many ways in which the salt produced in the presidency may be transmitted for consumption to the interior without being imported, and that salt proceeding towards the interior direct from the place of production without any intermediate process, does not appear to be in any wise included within the provision of the present notification. He must have known, that as the new duty is imposed in lieu of all transit duties whatever, a total repeal of the latter is plainly and distinctly called for without reference to importation or any other circumstance. The duty levied once for all at the pass is intended to relieve the producer or purchaser from all farther exaction, and it appears absurd to speak of importation when the whole scope of the enactment is to leave the future operations of the dealers unfettered by any restriction as to the mode of its transport or the whereabouts of its destination. This we are sure will at one glance be perceived by the able and active officer who now manages the department of Customs, and we have too much confidence in his good sense, to believe that he will not immediately suggest to Government some mode of getting quit of the difficulty pointed out. The best remedy would, in our opinion, be a simple declaration of the obnoxious order we have so frequently referred to being cancelled. A few words would suffice, and the matter would at once be placed beyond all doubt. Suppose something like the following, which, from its not having been thought of before, we are inclined to believe that the collector of customs has not been consulted at all on the subject, as he would undoubtedly have taken some such short and simple cut to the attainment of the object, which has not yet been reached, notwithstanding the turnings and windings that have been taken to arrive at it. But our rulers, like other wise even, who have like them committed an occasional blunder in policy, seem to think that there is nothing more statesman-like than to mystify a measure so much as to hide its object from ordinary observers. But we are inclined to hold the opinion that the plainer a law is the better it is understood, both by those for whose guidance it is enacted, and by those upon whom it is to take effect. The less room left for cavil or dispute, for legal difference, for revisions or interpolations, the better. We should say something like what follows would at once and without going about the bush have effected all that was required :

"It is hereby notified, in reference to the notification of 22d November last, that the Right Hon'ble the Governor in Council, is pleased to cancel that notification, and to declare that from the 15th instant, when the new law, imposing a consolidated excise duty on salt, of 8 annas per India maund, liable at the place of manufacture, came into operation, that article has become exempt from the payment of transit duties, sea customs, and all other taxes or imports whatever, which have heretofore been levied on it."

This we should think, or something like it, is necessary to get rid of the difficulties with which the question is at present beset, and place the trade in salt on a clear and indisputable footing. As it at present stands, any officer of Government, however well intentioned he may be, may cause a great deal of trouble and annoyance to multitudes engaged in the traffic, and put many parts of the country to serious inconvenience. He sees his instructions plainly laid down in the notification of the 22d ultimo, and he will observe no reversal of the decree herein promulgated. The partial one we have quoted will only serve to puzzle and perplex him, and he will consider it the safest course he can follow to walk by the letter of his instructions, waiting patiently till he hears of something to the contrary. Nothing ought, as we have said before, to be left to be inferred. All ought to be distinct and explanatory, in a document emanating from Government. We trust to see the evil yet unprovided against remedied in an early number of the Government Gazette.

By the way, the price of salt in the bazar affords ample confirmation of what we have repeatedly urged regarding the hardships inflicted on the poorer classes by the new law. We can hardly think that even the strictest sticler for the perfection of Government will deny that a grievance much more oppressive to the people than the old system ever was, has now to be submitted to. The dealers have been relieved from the delays and inconveniences they were formerly subjected to, but the consumers were ten times worse off than ever. — Bombay Gazette. Dec. 25.

ARMENIAN PHILANTHROPIC ACADEMY.

(From a Correspondent.)

Yesterday the Annual Examination of the Pupils attached to the Armenian Philanthropic Academy took place. Among the Examiners, we noticed the Revd. Mr. Boswell, Revd. Ter David, Revd. Ter Antone, Messrs. Jacob Antone and Manuk.

Owing to various circumstances, the company was not so large as it usually has been, otherwise the interest felt by the pupils and their friends, would have suffered no diminution.

The senior boys were examined in the English, Greek, and Roman classics with Armenian; were questioned in English, Roman and Armenian History and Astronomy; they then solved propositions on the Elements of Euclid, and worked several problems on the terrestrial globe.

The second and third classes read English and Latin the Armenian, they answered numerous questions on, woman and Armenian History, and acquitted themselves very much to their own and the credit of their instructors.

The junior boys were examined in English and Armenian; and, considering that the former is to them a foreign language, we should say, that their proficiency in that department was very considerable.

Several pieces were recited in Armenian and English with great effect. Indeed, so completely did some of the boys enter into the spirit and character of what they recited, that we could almost imagine them to be their own.

Specimens of plain and ornamental penmanship were exhibited, which displayed both taste and ability on the part of the writers, and proved, that there is no lack of talent in the graphic art.

To those boys who had made the greatest proficiency prizes were distributed of sufficient value to encourage them to persevere with unabated diligence. We cannot close this notice without observing, that this institution, which is supported entirely by Armenians, reflects the greatest credit on its benevolent founders and excellent managers, inasmuch as it proves their regard for the interests of literature and science, as well as their deep solicitude for the general instruction of the Armenian youth. We sincerely congratulate the members of this community on the advantages they possess, and the certain prospect they have that the blessings of an enlightened and liberal education will be transmitted to their children's children, even to the latest posterity. — *Cal. UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS.

To Mr. C. U. SMITH.

Chairman of a Committee of Uncovenanted Servants.

Financial Dept.—Sir,—With reference to the memorial submitted by your committee and the orders of Government communicated to you on the 17th March, 1835, I am directed by the Honorable the Deputy Governor of Bengal to transmit to you for information, the accompanying copy of a despatch from the Honorable the Court of Directors in the Financial Department, dated the 20th August, 1837, No 13.

OUR GOVERNOR OF THE PRESIDENCY OF FORT WILLIAM IN BENGAL.

General Letter from, dated 15th June, 1835.

(No. 3.)

Transmitting memorial of Uncov. Assistants praying the grant of occasional furlough and establishment of a Retiring Fund, with annuities in reversion to widows and children.

1. We cordially participate in the feeling which you express that the meritorious and efficient services of the body from whom the memorial in question proceeded are entitled to every possible attention. We are compelled, however, to adhere to the principle suggested in our public letter, dated 30th July, 1828, (para. 40) that any pension fund which the Uncovenanted Service may establish, must rest exclusively for support upon the contributions of the members; and realizations of the proposed benefits be entirely dependent upon the amount of subscriptions being adequate to the satisfaction of the accruing claims. The only part which we could take in connexion with such a fund would be to deduct at the desire of the subscribers, the sums for which they were liable from their salaries and allowances, to grant on the money thus withheld, interest not exceeding the ordinary market rate, and to disburse in India, when only duly called upon for the purposes of the fund, such sums as might be required, not exceeding the amount of the principal and interest. It might be distinctly understood, that we can undertake nothing beyond this, nor can we incur even this limited responsibility except in furtherance of a plan to be previously submitted to us, which, in our opinion, shall offer a full probability of success.

2. The circumstances of the services which enjoy the benefit of furlough, being widely different from those which apply to the memorialists, the possession of the privilege by the former, can afford no argument for its extension to the latter, and in the absence of all other reason we must decline to make any change in this respect.

We are, &c.

To H. T. PRINSEP, Esq.

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Financial Dept.—Sir,—Mr. C. U. Smith, chairman of the late Committee of Uncovenanted Servants, having transmitted to us your letter to his address, dated the 13th instant, together with the copy of a dispatch from the Honorable Court of Directors, which accompanied it, relative to the memorial from that class of public servants, praying the grant of furlough, and the establishment of a retiring fund with annuities, in reversion to their widows and children, we beg leave to represent for the information of the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor of Bengal, that subsequent to the date of the memorial alluded to above, the committee of Uncovenanted Servants submitted for the consideration of the Supreme Government a definite scheme of a Widows' Pension Fund, when, encouraged by the sentiments expressed by the Hon'ble the Court of Directors in a public general letter, dated 30th July, 1828, an extract from which is noted in the margin, they solicited the annual grant of a donation towards its support and interest at 6 per cent. per annum for such monies of the fund as might be deposited in the general treasury; This definite scheme received the sanction of the Supreme Government as communicated in your letter, dated the 14th Sept. 1836, in which the Governor-General in Council was pleased to grant the ministerial aid of the Government officers in managing the funds of this scheme, as well as an account current at 6 per cent. per annum, but with regard to the annual donation His Lordship in Council declared his incompetency to afford any such aid, but stated his intention of referring the subject to the consideration of the home authorities. Under the encouragement thus afforded by the Supreme Government, the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, as it at present exists, supported by the patronage of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India, was established and eventually commenced operations on the 1st of May, 1837; the success and future prospects of the fund were fully detailed in a letter to the address of its patron under date the 10th September last.

Extract from a public general letter from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, dated the 30th July, 1828.

40. We regret that it should have been found necessary to abandon the project of a pension fund for uncovenanted servants; we shall be ready to afford any reasonable encouragement to the proposed Savings' Bank, and we are still of opinion that if any considerable body of our uncovenanted servants should come forward with a plan for establishing a pension fund exclusively by stoppages from their own salaries, and in which plan the benefit to be held out should be made entirely contingent on the amount of subscriptions to be received, all proper facilities should be afforded to them for that purpose.

41. On the plan of a savings' bank which has been submitted by Mr. Mc Kenzie, and commented upon by Mr. Hunter, we shall offer no remarks, because your local knowledge renders you competent to regulate the details. We think, however, that the annual subscriptions should be limited to 500 rupees, and we cannot consent to allow a higher rate of interest on the deposits than six per cent.

The letter from the Hon'ble Court, under date the 30th August last, has reference to our address to Government under date the 25th February, 1835, and as the special reference made during Lord Auckland's Government, which could not have been received at the time the Hon'ble Court's dispatch was written, put the Hon'ble Court in possession of the principal features of the Fund, as well as of the data on which it is based, we have reason to hope that its establishment will not only be confirmed by the Hon'ble Court, but that with their wonted liberality a suitable donation will be granted in addition to the ordinary market rate of the day (already conceded by them,) and which invariably averages a higher percentage than that which the fund at present enjoys, viz. 6 per cent. Under the circumstances above explained, we trust that it will please the Government to await the result of the special reference, previous to passing any final orders on the subject of the dispatch from the Hon'ble Court with which we have now been favoured.

We have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servants,

THE DIRECTORS OF THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE PENSION FUND.

Financial Dept.—Gentlemen,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 29th ultimo, and in reply to state that it is not the intention of the Deputy Governor of Bengal to interfere with the arrangements made on behalf of the Uncovenanted Servants' Pension Fund until a reply shall be received from the Hon'ble Court to the special reference made on the subject, in a letter of the General Department, dated 1st March last.

2d. As the despatch of the Hon'ble Court dated 30th August had distinct bearing on the subject, a copy was communicated for your information, in order to prevent the disappointment of any too sanguine hopes of support, that might be entertained; but no final orders on the subject will be issued till the receipt of the reply of the Court to the letter above referred to.

I am, gentlemen, your obedt. servt.

* Mr. Cracroft.

Dr. Adam.

* Dr. McLellan,

Dr. Wallich.

* Dr. Evans.

The election of 3 annual members constituting the special committee for superintending the society's museum, was then proceeded with, when it was proposed to re-elect the present members. Question put to the vote and carried unanimously.

Museum Committee

Mr. Crawford, Drs. McLellan and Evans.

A letter was read from M. Csoma Korosi, declining acceptance of the office of librarian, when it was proposed by the secretary, and seconded by the Lord Bishop, that Mr. M. Kittoe should be placed in temporary charge of the library and museum on the consolidated salaries of Drs. Burlini and Pearson, as allowed to those officers. Put to the vote and carried nem. con.

Mr. Kittoe returned thanks for the honor conferred, and signified his acceptance of the office.

The appropriation of Dr. Evans's very valuable collection of Natural History (laid out for the inspection of the members which had been tendered to the society for purchase at a previous meeting) was now discussed, when it was proposed to refer the matter to the committee of papers.—Englishman, Jan. 5.

VEGETABLE EXHIBITION.

The show of vegetables was far beyond anything that could have been expected with reference to the unusually unfavorable season. The cauliflower was beautiful and would have vied with any in Covent Garden. The cabbage was also very fine. The peas were excellent, and there were two fine baskets of English or rather Cape broad beans. Carrots from Cape seed were superior to preceding years; onions and leeks, though few, were large and good and the red beet and salad were in good season. Only two baskets of artichokes were visible, and potatoes very few. Of native vegetables, the pure white and red bringals were most conspicuous; the celery though good, was not sufficiently blanched.

The scene was altogether attractive, and the number of ladies who graced the Hall, rendered it doubly so. Let us hope, now that they have found their way to the Town Hall, they will not consider it beneath their attention to get up a Floricultural exhibition. The highest noblemen and noblewomen in England compete now for prizes in Horticulture, and if the ladies in India would only set their fair hands and heads to work, we should get on even more rapidly in the flower garden, than we have done in that of the kitchen. We intreat the ladies to give this subject their immediate consideration. We have noble proof of what they can do and have done in furthering the great objects of education, and charity; let them bestow a very small portion of time and means to "flowers of loveliness," and we shall not despair of seeing the dahlia, the crocus, ranunculus, moss rose, gum-lustus, lavender and the innumerable list of pretty flowers that adorn our English parterres, brought to emulate those in our native land.

We understand that the secretary has applied to Messrs. Noble and Sons, of Fleet-street, for a supply of rare flower seeds against next cold season.

Among the visitors who were present, we noticed Sir Edward Ryan, Sir John P. Grant and Mrs. Pennington, Captain Hobson of the Royal Navy. Several Officers of His Netherland Majesty's ship of war, Dr. Wallich, &c.

The medals and rewards, were distributed by Mrs. Pennington, in the following order, VISITORS.—Messrs. Spry and Dearman.

The proceedings of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen, proposed at the last meeting, were elected members of the society, viz.:

The Revd. F. Wybrow ; Cowkrishnath Roy Bahadur, Rajah of Cossimbazar, C. Tucker, Esq., C. S ; Thos. Palmer, H. C. Kemp, and E. W. Cluributt, Esqrs. ; Lieut. J. R. Lumsden ; Lieut. J. R. Abbott, and Captain F. Smallpage.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members :

L. Sacket, Esq., of Sicrigully, Bhargulpore, proposed by H. Piddington, Esq., and seconded by the secretary.

W. Vansittart, Esq., and Capt. F. W. Birch, proposed by F. P. Strong, Esq., and seconded by the secretary.

Thomas Gibbon and James Casserat, Esqrs., proposed by W. F. Gibbon, Esq., and seconded by the secretary.

J. H. Budgman, Esq., proposed by H. Walters Esq., and seconded by William Storm, Esq.

J. A. Gregg, of Dum-Dum, and P. Sutherland, Esqrs., proposed by W. G. Rose, Esq., and seconded by William Storm, Esq.

R. S. Strickland, Esq., proposed by the Secretary and seconded by William Storm, Esq.

H. H. Spry, Esq., (Assistant Surgeon,) proposed by Dr. Wallich, and seconded by the Hon. Col. Rehling.

Capt. W. N. Forbes, (Engineer,) proposed by C. K. Robison, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

William Mackenzie, Esq. proposed by A. Beattie, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Jackson.

The meeting then proceeded to the annual election of office bearers, when all the officers of the past year were re-elected, the list therefore remains the same which is as follows, viz.

PRESIDENT.—The Honorable Sir Edward Ryan.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.—Dr. Wallich ; His Highness Nawab Tohowerjung ; C. K. Robison, Esq., and Rajah Radhakant Deb.

GENERAL COMMITTEE.—Dr. Strong, Joseph Willis and D. Hare, Esqrs. ; Baboo Radamadub Banorjee, A. M. Low and William Storm, Esqrs.

SECRETARY AND COLLECTOR.—John Bell, Esq.

NATIVE SECRETARY.—Dewan Ramcomul Sen.

The lists of members appointed to the standing committees (9 in number) remain unaltered, viz. :

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Sugar.—N. Alexander, A. Colvin, Dwarkanath Tagore, D. Hare, G. U. Adam, A. Muller, J. Allan, W. Storm, J. Dougal, J. W. Masters, and John Bell.

Cotton.—Jos. Willis, A. Colvin, Dr. Hufnagle, G. A. Prinsep, W. Speir, W. Storm, D. B. Syers, W. Earle, G. U. Adam, and John Bell.

Silk, Hemp and Flax.—W. Speir, Ramcomul Sen, Professor O'Shaughnessy, Jos. Willis, R. W. Watson, C. K. Robison, H. M. Low, D. W. H. Speed, G. T. F. Speed, W. Storm, and John Bell.

Nursery Committee.—Dr. Wallich, W. Storm, Dr. Hufnagle, W. F. Gibbon, Capt. Leach, and John Bell.

The secretary read the annual report of the society including that of the collector, for the past year, which exhibited very satisfactory evidence of the increasing interest, to the objects of the institution, both as regards its financial resources, and numerical strength. During the past year 243 names had been added to the list of members, and only three retirements, two of those being gentlemen leaving Calcutta, and the other, having no time to attend to its proceedings.

Proposed by Mr. Cracroft, seconded by Dr. Wallich, and Resolved.—That the reports just read be adopted.

Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Mr. G. A. Prinsep, that the thanks of the society be given to Mr. Bell for drawing up these reports.

The vice president, next called attention to the annual exhibition of vegetables, and anniversary dinner, and proposed that the same course be adopted on this, as on the former occasion, viz., that the time and details regarding the exhibition of vegetables and the dinner be left to the Committee of Management. This proposition was adopted by the meeting.

Read the report of the Caoutchouc Committee on the motion made by Mr. Cracroft at last meeting. The committee recommend that the gold medal be awarded to Lieutenant Vetch on the condition being complied with, as embodied in the proposition.

Resolved.—That the report be adopted.

Read the report of the committee on implements of husbandry and machinery, on the motion by Mr. Bell at last meeting.

The committee report, that a machine after Mr. Teignmouth Sandy's model, could not be erected at a less cost than one thousand rupees, and that it is not expedient to incur this cost, with reference to the advantage it might possess over machines of similar construction, &c.

Resolved.—That the committee's report be adopted.

Read the reports of the Nursery Committee, made up since the last meeting, showing an increased cultivation of sugar-cane, and resolutions upon which the cotton beds, &c., are to be made subservient to more supplies of cane expected from Jubbulpore and Bourbon.

Resolved, that the Committee's reports be confirmed.

The motion made by Mr. Storm at last meeting—
“That an application be made to the Admiral commanding in India, requesting him to give instructions to any of Her Majesty's ships of war touching at Odessa, to bring such quantity of the cane of that land as they may be able conveniently to carry for the use of the society,” had been carried into effect by the secretary addressing a letter to that authority.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

Proposed by A. Beattie, Esq.—“That with a view to the improvement of sugar cultivation in Bengal, this society having employed all the means in their power to obtain a sufficient supply of a better description of cane than is indigenous in this country ; and there being only a limited quantity now in their possession, and but slender prospects of an early accomplishment of this desirable object, on a sufficiently extensive scale without aid from some other quarter, that the secretary be requested to address the Government on the subject, and solicit His Honor the President in Council, to consider whether, for an object fraught with such extensive benefit, and of such general utility, the Government could employ at an early period one of their own vessels in bringing up a supply of seed cane from Otaheite, this society would undertake to distribute it in the most prudent manner, to secure the best possible result from the same, in the sugar cultivation throughout this presidency."

The following communications were read. From Dr R. Wight, of Madras, dated December 21st, transmitting 410 more copies of plates of dye lichens to complete the number required for the transactions, viz. 500, forwarding copy of a correspondence with the Madras Government on the subject of lichens, and regretting his inability to furnish more information at present regarding them, but promising to do so, when in his power to procure it.

The Vice President here called the attention of the meeting to the subject of certain observations made by the secretary in his précis of the meeting of the 8th November, 1837, in a letter from Dr. Wight, of Madras, to Dr. Wallich, which was read on that occasion, and stated that from letters that had since passed, which he thought it unnecessary to bring forward, he was sorry to say, had given offence to Dr. Wight.

The Vice President then read the extracts and observations in question, after hearing which the meeting was of opinion, that nothing of an "offensive" nature appeared in the secretary's remarks.

The secretary, however, observed, that as the remark made in Dr. Wight's communication in the précis of the 8th November meeting, were his own, and not those of the society, he begged to "propose that a minute be made in the proceedings, to the effect that the paragraph which appeared in the précis of a meeting of the 8th November might be cancelled, which was assented to.

From Dr. Wallich, dated December 19th, presenting on the part of Mr. C. Mantley, a small quantity of nan kin cotton seed.

From Capt. Sanders, Secretary to the Military Board dated December 15th, in reply to the secretary's letter of the 8th instant, on the subject of guinea grass, returns the society the thanks of the Board, for the information therein contained.

From Capt. A. Bogle, dated Kyook Phyou, December 3rd, advising despatch by the Krishna of a parcel, containing samples of Arracan rice, together with a list and prices of the same during the past and present year, and conveying information regarding this, the most important staple product of the province.

Stating that he has also forwarded by the same vessel, three bottles of genuine Sandoway tobacco seed and sugar-cane cut in the island of Ramree, as samples of the cane of Arracan, which seem to be superior to the common cane of Bengal. Asking for a supply of seed paddy, cotton seed, and Otaheite cane, mentions his endeavours to discover beds of coal, and iron ore, which are known to exist on that coast, and requesting information on the subject of casutchouc.

From Dr. W. G. Maxwell, dated December, forwarding for presentation to the society, two large sized colored drawings, from nature, of two species of the tobacco plant, natives of the Northern Circars.

From R. W. Chew, Esq., dated December 18th, forwarding a bunch of juncos, the produce of his garden.

From the Revd. T. Boaz, dated December, 21st, forwarding on the part of Capt. A. Bogle, the several articles alluded to in that gentleman's letter, viz. 3 bottles Sandoway tobacco seed, 3 sugar canes, and a packet containing samples of rice.

From Dr. Wallich, dated December 21st, annexing extract of a letter to his address from Mr. Richards of the Royal Botanic Garden at St. Denis at Bourbon, under date 26th October last, in which that gentleman promises to transmit very shortly a box of cactus with 'cocheniller fins,' and 25 cases of Batavian sugar cane.

From Lieut. H. Higgs, Secretary to the Agricultural Society of Assam, dated September 16th, announcing the formation of a branch society at Gowhatti, on the 15th September, under the title of "The Assam Agricultural and Horticultural Society," and soliciting the aid and advice of the Patent Society, towards furthering the objects of this association.

N. B. The prize assigned in the précis of last month's proceedings, for the delay in acknowledging the receipt of a communication from R. Montgomery, Esq., of Arracan, is equally applicable to the above letter.

From Major S. , dated "on the Ganges," December 14th, in accordance with the request conveyed in the secretary's last letter, he has asked Lieut. Brown to transmit on account of the society's nursery, a good supply of cactus from his Jubbulpore plantation, and that the same may be expected to reach the presidency in the early part of February next.

Conveying, in reply to queries, some information respecting the Otaheite cane, and mentioning the circumstance, that at Deyrah, a solution of the cedar-oil in water, has been found an effectual preventive to the attack of white ants on this species of cane.

From Lieut. Charles Brown, dated Jubbulpore, December 7th, intimating his intention of forwarding to the care of R. Lowther, Esq., of Allahabad, 2 hackery loads of Otaheite sugar-cane, from Major Sleeman's plantation.

Stating that he has advised Mr. Lowther of this intended despatch, and has requested that gentleman to transmit the canes to the society by the first steamer leaving Allahabad. Mentioning that if required, he can send down a further supply next month.

From Dr. H. H. Spry to Dr. Wallich, dated December 17, presenting a small supply of sugar-cane procured from Car-Nicobar, where it grows in a wild state, forwarding a few copies of the proceedings of the Agricultural Committee of the Royal Asiatic Society.

From Dr. Wallich to the secretary, dated December 19, forwarding a letter to his address from Dr. H. H. Spry, and stating that the cane therein alluded to (11 in number) are in good condition, and have been planted out in the society's nursery.

From Lieutenant C. Burnett, dated Beaur, November 29, advising despatch by dak banghy of the following, viz. sample of a species of barley termed "celestial," cultivated in the vicinity of Beaur; sample of maize grown from American seed forwarded by the society some time ago, and sample of nankin cotton, the produce of Captain Dixon's garden.

Annexing a memorandum regarding the cultivation of the cotton seed supposed to be American (of the produce of which a sample of cotton has been forwarded, care of Dr. McLean, who may be expected to reach Calcutta in January).

Alludes to the attempts made to introduce the Otaheite sugar-cane in that part of the country, in which they have been frustrated by the depredations of the white ant, and requesting advice, as to the best means of destroying them.

From R. Watson, Esq., dated December 26, annexing a letter to his address from Mr. J. C. Warner, dated Guttal, December 21, on the subject of a second unsuccessful attempt to wind off the silk from another supply of area cocoons transmitted by Captain Jenkins, and of which a small quantity had been forwarded to Mr. Watson. Suggests, that with reference to the latter part of Mr. Warner's note, a supply of the eggs of the area worm be sent to that gentleman, when a fairer experiment may be made, on the cocoons produced by them.

Specimens of Bhaurulpore tusser wound raw silk, from James Pintel, Esq., were forwarded by L. Shaw, Esq., of which particulars will be given hereafter, as to the mode of reeling it off.

From D. F. MacLeod, Esq., (no date) received December 29, presenting specimens of tusser raw silk from Seonee.

From Dr. Wallich, dated January 3, reporting on a trial made in the society's nursery of samples of Gulph cotton seed received from D. B. Syers, Esq.

From J. Fagan, Esq., C. Assistant Surgeon, Rangoon, dated 8th December, forwarding a specimen of cotton, grown near the foot of the hills by a race of people called "Mace."

From D. B. Syers, Esq., forwarding samples of cotton seed alluded to in his letter of the 25th November last.

Memo.—This is the seed to which Dr. Wallich's report above noted, alludes.

From Dr. Cheek, Secretary to the Burdwan Society, dated December 29, forwarding samples of Virginia tobacco, guinea grass, arrow root, and cheese pumpkin, the produce of the branch society's garden.

From R. S. Humpfray, Esq., dated Barripore, January 5, presenting two samples of paddy, grown by him near Barripore, one marked A, of a description termed "Teel-au-zon," the other marked B, called "Hulleed-zooie," and giving an account of the manner of cultivating, and of the expense attending the same.

From G. Leybourn, Esq., dated January 8, presenting some barley for seed.

From Dr. Hufnagle, dated January 9, presenting in the name of A. Graham, Esq., of Dowlutgunge, Kishnagur, specimens of Indian corn, the produce of several successive generations, raised from American seed received in 1834.

From Dr. F. P. Strong, dated January 10, presenting a small supply of English rye grass seed and Dutch clover seed.

From D. W. H. Speed, Esq., dated January 10, forwarding a stock of sugar-cane said to be Otahete.

From Messrs. Vilmorin, Andrew and Co., dated Paris, April 28th, to the address of H. Piddington, Esq., advising despatch on account of this society of a box containing an assortment of seeds, numerous as to variety, but in quantities so small, as hardly to be divisible.

The secretary has also to acknowledge the following presentations.

A cob of maize received from Sir E. Ryan, length 10 inches, circumference 7 inches, and number of grains, 1,060.

From the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, (received from Messrs. Thacker and Co.) its journal No. 7.

Proceedings of the Committee of Agricultural and Commerce 12 copies.

Also, through the same channel, a copy of the address of the President of the Mexico Botanical Society.

From the Madras Agricultural Society (received through Dr. Wight) a copy of instructions for the cultivation of the Mauritius sugar-cane, and notes on dye lichens.

From Government, 3 copies of a pamphlet, containing remarks on the natural resources of the Tena-serim provinces, by Dr. J. W. Heller.

The Hon. Mr. Melville proposes to open a communication with the Highland Society. Their anxiety to obtain the productions particularly of the Himalaya, that gentleman had well ascertained and was sure they will supply in return any product, which may be desired.

The secretary intimated that he had addressed the Highland Society, last year, and had forwarded a copy of this Society's transactions, but he thought there was scarcely time yet to receive a reply. The meeting was unanimous in its anxiety to be placed in communication with that and all societies of a similar nature and Mr. Melville and Dr. Jackson, offered to co-operate in England and Scotland, towards effecting this object. The latter gentleman also offered to procure for this society any books, or information, that were required from England.

The thanks of the society were directed to be offered for the foregoing communications and presentations.

N. B. The society give the foregoing précis of the various letters and papers submitted to them, with a view to their acknowledgment, and for the information of the public without professing to answer for the certainty of the facts, or the propriety of the reasonings therein contained, which must rest on the credit or judgment of the writers.

JOHN BRILL, Secretary,

Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

Town Hall, Calcutta, Jan. 10, 1838.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NURSERY COMMITTEE.

A meeting of this committee took place at the residence of the secretary on Wednesday evening, the 20th December, 1837.

PRESENT.—N. Wallich, M. D.; C. Hufnagle, M. D.; W. F. Gibbon, Esq.; John Bell, Esq.

The committee had previously visited the Nursery, and found the sugar-cane, recently planted, coming up very regularly, notwithstanding the continued drought. Plot No. 12 of Dr. Hufnagle's plan, was holed ready for the reception of more cane; plot No. 14 was being trenched.

Resolved.—That the ripe cane in plot No. 1, be forthwith cut down and planted out in plot No. 12.

Resolved.—That the ground now trenching be reserved for expected supplies.

Dr. Wallich read an extract of a letter this day received from Mr. Richard, Superintendent of the Botanical Garden at Bourbon, dated 26th October, 1837, stating that he had prepared a case of cactus, on which he intended to transport to this society the grana-fina insect, and promising to follow up this despatch by more in the event of accident or failure.

Mr. Richard also informs Dr. Wallich, that he had made ready 25 cases for the reception of Batavia cane, destined for the society's Nursery.

Dr. Wallich informed the committee, that he had a small plantation of the cactus cochineifer, and in anticipation of this supply of insect, had recently extended it considerably.

In regard to the 25 cases of cane expected, it was resolved that they be immediately planted out on arrival.

The secretary read a letter to his address, received from Captain Brown, in charge of Major Sleeman's cane plantation at Jubbulpore, bearing date 7th December, intimating his intention in reference to the secretary's letter of the 24th February last, to despatch in a day or two, 2 hackery-loads of canes for the society, to the care of Mr. Lowther at Allahabad, with a request that the latter gentleman would take the first opportunity of forwarding them by steam to Calcutta.

Read the secretary's reply to Captain Brown, dated 18th December, thanking him for his attention to the wishes of the society, and with reference to the latter para. of his letter, and anticipating the concurrence of the committee and of the society, (as Captain Brown required immediate notice) soliciting a further supply of 10 hackery-loads, which would make in all, 12 loads.

Read a letter that day received from Major Sleeman, dated on the Ganges, December 14, stating that he had instructed Captain Brown to give the society a supply of cane, and promising to give further information on the question of saccharine-ness, compared with the juice of the country cane, when he should have time to follow up the enquiry.

Resolved.—That as the cotton beds had done their office, and with reference to the original design of the society, with regard to the Nursery, the land now under cotton cultivation be opened for cane cuttings, when they arrive.

Resolved.—That the Secretary's application to Captain Brown, appears to the committee, judicious, and that it be confirmed.

Resolved.—That Major Sleeman is entitled to the best thanks of the committee in giving effect to the society's wishes, as advised in his letter to the address of the secretary read this evening.

A meeting of the committee took place at the residence of W. F. Gibbon, Esq., on Friday evening, 5th January, 1838.

PRESENT.—N. Wallich, M. D.; C. Hufnagle, Esq.; W. F. Gibbon and John Bell.

The committee visited the Nursery, and found that with reference to a resolution, passed on the 20th ultimo, the greater portion of the old stock of sugarcane of plot No. 1, had been cut and planted out.

That the sugar-cane received from Captain Bogle, of Arracan, through Mr. Boaz, had not come up, and from their appearance could not be expected.

That plots 14 and 15 were mostly trenched, and partly dressed with lime.

That the West India ginger roots were now ready to be taken up.

Resolved.—That they be taken up and kept carefully in sand, and that an advertisement be sent to the papers, with a view to collect the names of parties desirous of having a small supply; but that none be delivered until after a month's date of the first advertisement, when intending cultivators shall be entitled to equal shares, receiving a small quantity to keep up a supply in the Nursery.

The cotton seed (Gulf) offered for sale by D. B. Syers, Esq., had partially vegetated in gum-labs only that on the open ground had not sprung up.

Resolved.—That it does not appear to the committee prudent to recommend a purchase of the seed.

HOWRAH SEAMEN'S HOSPITAL.

As there are a good many vessels in the river at this period of the year, an opportunity is perhaps afforded us of effectively drawing attention to the Howrah Seamen's Hospital, and the merit of the party (Mr. J. W. Linton) to whose superintendence it is entrusted. We have before us a small brochure, reciting the advantages of the institution, and exhibiting the names of those captains of ships who have borne testimony to its general utility. Of the number of seamen admitted into the Hospital, not less than 1,104 have been cured, between the month of November 1834 and October last. Every thing in the establishment is conducted on principles of economy without impairing efficiency, and the greatest attention is paid to the comfort of the officer or sailor, who may seek the advantages of the asylum. Dr. Green acts as surgeon and physician to the institution, and the Rev. Mr. Bowyer affords spiritual aid and consolation to the suffering patient. There are besides these gentlemen, other officers attached to the establishment, whose duty it is to attend to the sick tenants. Altogether, the Hospital merits the support of the mercantile and maritime community.—Englishman, Jan. 12.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 6th Jan. 1838.

PRESENT.

Drs. Sowers, Goodeve and Wallich; Messrs. Corbryn and McClelland; Drs. O'Shaughnessy, Rankin, Bain, Stewart and Bell; Messrs. Leslie, McCosh, O'Shaughnessy, Chapman, Porteous, Egerton, Green and Strong, Dr. Huffleagle, Mr. Oyr, Dr. Spry.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read.

From W. Watson, Esq., Garrison Surgeon, Allahabad, stating his wish to withdraw from the society.

From the Secretary of the Asiatic Society, returning the thanks of that body for the three first numbers of the Quarterly Journal.

From Mr. George Parbury, of New Broad Street, London, requesting that the society would constitute him their agent in England.

From J. Jackson, Esq., of Ghazepore, stating that he begged to forward four specimens of calcuth, which he had lately removed with complete success from natives in his district.

From F. P. Strong, Esq., forwarding a resolution of the managers of the Calcutta Public Library, stating that they were willing to receive and take charge of the Society's Library, and to afford the services of their librarian, should it be deemed expedient to remove the books of the Medical Society from their present situation. Dr. Strong stated, that the whole cost of the preservation of the books, should the above offer be accepted, would not exceed 5 rupees per month; (the salary of an extra dultly).

From the same gentleman (Dr. Strong) forwarding the case of a young man who was deaf and dumb, and requesting that the society would consult upon the possibility of affording the patient any relief.

From Mr. Secretary Mangles, forwarding copies of Dr. Helfer's report upon the Tenasserim province.

The following communication was then presented.

History of a case of femoral aneurism wherein the external iliac artery was successfully tied by R. O'Shaughnessy, Esq.

The Secretary then presented his summary of accounts for the past year, by which it appeared, that the

The report of the Committee appointed to enquire into the state of the society was then presented.

[The Committee recommended,

1st. That the Quarterly Journal cannot, consistently with the interests of the society, be carried on in its present form, and the funds ought not to be expended otherwise than by publishing from time to time the transactions of the society by building or purchasing suitable apartments to meet in, and to contain the library and museum, and by increasing these according to the means of the society.

2nd. That the election of office-bearers should be by vote of the resident members, among whom the voting list should be circulated soon after the last December Meeting, that the result of the election may be ascertained before the beginning of the succeeding January.

This will prevent self-election in case of the January meeting being thinly attended, and be the means of avoiding personal and disagreeable discussions, and of making the votes public in so far as the resident members are concerned.

3rd. That instead of two committees, there should be only one, to be called "the Committee of Management and Papers," consisting of the Office-bearers and four ordinary members.

This committee to be elected at the same time and in the same manner as the other office-bearers, and in the event of a vacancy occurring between the period of election, the vacancy to be filled up by the individual who commanded the number of votes next to those of the members returned at the last election.

4th. That no official statement of the proceedings of the society shall in future be published without having been previously laid before the Committee of Management and approved of by them.

5th. That in consequence of the difficulty of collecting the subscriptions from the more distant stations, the secretary shall be relieved from the duties of treasurer, and a person, not a member of the society, be appointed treasurer.

The present committee being desirous of ascertaining if the above opinions meet the wishes of the resident members, they are requested to have the goodness to insert, yes or no, as they may approve or disapprove of each of the five propositions according to the form appended.

This report was signed by two members of the committee, but Dr. Goodeve objected to the 1st proposition, stating that he wished this question and some others to be referred to the Mofussil members.

At the suggestion of Dr. O'Shaughnessy, these propositions were then put to the vote seriatim.

The first proposition was negatived and the following amendment, proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy and seconded by Dr. Goodeve, was carried by a majority of 16 to 4.

That the first proposition, together with the accounts, be referred to the Mofussil members, and that the correspondence therefrom ensuing be referred to a Committee of scrutineers composed of Messrs. Sawers, Bell and Ranken.

The 2nd proposition was carried by a majority of 16 to 2.

An amendment was proposed upon this by Mr. McCosh, seconded by Mr. Bell.

That the rule be applicable to the present election.

This was cast by a similar majority.

The 3rd proposition, proposed by Dr. Ranken seconded by Mr. Green, was carried unanimously.

The 4th proposition, proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Dr. McCosh, was lost by a majority of 16 to 3.

The 5th, proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Dr. Goodeve, was carried by a majority of 16 to 1.

It was then proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Dr. Goodeve, and carried unanimously, that the bye-laws of the society be collected and printed.

The society then proceeded to elect the office-bearers and the ballot box having been circulated, the following gentlemen were found to be elected by a very large majority.

Dr. Sawers, President.

Dr. Wallich, Vice President.

Dr. Goodeve, Secretary and Treasurer.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy, Foreign Secretary.

Dr. R. O'Shaughnessy, Assistant Secretary and Treasurer.

Drs. Ranken, Egerton, Chapman, and Stewart, Members of the Committee of Management.

The President then stated, that in case it should be deemed expedient for the society to remove from its present locality, the Medical Board would be most happy to accommodate it in the rooms of their office, where ample space might be found for the purpose.

It was proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Mr. Chapman, that this liberal offer should be accepted; but Mr. Corbyn having reminded the meeting that it was past 12 o'clock, and consequently that they were encroaching upon Sunday morning, the President adjourned the discussion upon this point till the next meeting.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

Proceedings of the First Quarterly General Meeting for 1838 of subscribers to the "Bengal Medical Retiring Fund."

At a Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the "Bengal Medical Retiring Fund," held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, at 4 o'clock p. m., on Monday the 8th January 1838, agreeably to Section XIX. of the Fund Deed.

PRESENT.

Apothecary to the East India Company, at Calcutta; Gavin Turnbull, Surgeon, returned from furlough; Duncan Stewart, M D, Supdt. General of Vaccine, Calcutta; E W Walter Raleigh, 1st Assist Presy. General Hospital, Calcutta, Henry Harpur Spry, M D Offr. Assist Garrison Surgeon, Fort William; Henry H Goodeve, M D, Professor Medical College, Calcutta; James Gregory Vos, M D, Deputy Apothecary to the East India Company, Calcutta; and John Arnott, M D Assist. Surgeon, doing duty at the General Hospital, Calcutta, Esquires.

The Secretary read the Proceedings of the last Quarterly General Meeting, and the following Report of the Proceedings of the Committee of Management during the last quarter:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT.

Medical Retiring Fund Office, 8th January, 1838.

Para. 1st. Since the last Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, the Committee of Management have received applications for admission to Annuities from the following Subscribers to the Fund, viz.

John Swiney, Esquire, M D, Member of the Medical Board.

George Canning Campbell, Esquire, Superintending Surgeon, (Furlough 1st March 1833) through his brother A D Campbell, Esquire, of the Madras Civil Service.

Thomas Stoddart, Esquire, Surgeon, (Furlough, 6th February 1836.)

Alexander Scott, Esquire, Surgeon, (Furlough 8th January 1834) through his constituted Attorneys Messrs Boyd and Co, of Calcutta.

Para. 2d. Dr Swiney having served as a Member of the Medical Board for upwards of three but not quite four years, he has paid thirteen-sixteenths of the value of an Annuity at his age, conformably to section XXXIII. of the Fund Deed; and having resigned the service from the 31st ultimo, he has been admitted on an Annuity from the 1st Instant, January, 1838.

Para. 3d. The prescribed affidavit of age not having been furnished on behalf of Mr. G. G. Campbell, his admission has been deferred until its receipt; when, on his resignation of the service appearing in General Orders he will be admitted an Annuitant on the usual conditions Para. 4th. The Committee of Management report, that Mr. Stoddart has furnished every document necessary to his admission, accompanied by a letter addressed to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Military Department, tendering his resignation of the service; which letter was forwarded to the Officiating Secretary with the remark that "if Mr. Stoddart's resignation can be unconditionally accepted by the local Government, so as to give immediate promotion in his room, that Gentleman's application to be admitted on one of the Annuities declared this year will be immediately complied with; if, however, the confirmation of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors to his resignation be necessary, owing to his being on furlough, the committee must defer granting him an annuity until the receipt of the Hon'ble Court's orders." The Committee have been informed in reply in Officiating Secretary Lieutenant Colonel J. Stuart's letter of the 11th ultimo, that "Mr. Stoddart's application should be submitted to the Hon'ble Court, it not being within the competency of the local Government to accept the resignation of an Officer on furlough." Mr. Stoddart has had the sentiments of Government communicated to him by the Committee.

Para. 5th. An Annuity has been likewise reserved for Mr. Scott pending his resignation of the service appearing in General Orders. His Attorneys have been advised to this effect.

Para. 6th. It has also been intimated to Mr. Superintending Surgeon Thomas Tweedie (furlough) whose application for an Annuity was noticed in the Committee's Report read at the last Quarterly General Meeting, that the publication of his resignation of the service in General Orders is a necessary preliminary to his admission on an Annuity.

Para. 7th. Surgeon Thomas Munro, M. D., of the 58th Regt. N. I., whose acceptance of one of the first declared three Annuities for 1833 was noticed in the Committee's Report read at the Quarterly Meeting, held on the 10th July, 1837, not being yet relieved from the charge of his Regiment, an Annuity remains reserved for him.

Para. 8th. The Committee beg to notice, that of the seven Annuities offered by Circular dated 11th July, 1837,* six have been accepted; viz. by Messrs Swiney, G. G. Campbell, Thomas Tweedie, Thomas Stoddart, Alexander Scott, and James Hall, leaving only one available, and which the Committee have reason to suppose will be immediately taken up.

Para. 9th. During the present quarter application for admission as Subscribers to the Fund have been received from Surgeons John Turner and William Dyer, and Assistant Surgeon Alexander Smith, M. D., all of whom have just returned from furlough. The Committee will submit their request for the consent of the Subscribers agreeably to the provision of Section III. of the Fund Deed.

Para. 10th. The Committee of Management find, that their ex-Secretary, Mr. Assistant Surgeon J. T. Pearson, has taken some objection to the following words used in the Report of their Proceedings read at the last Quarterly General Meeting: "No regular sets of books of Accounts having been at any time kept in the office of the Secretary to the Fund, the present Secretary has been directed to open the necessary books." As in noticing the fact above recorded, the Committee of Management did not mean to convey any censure against Mr. Pearson, but to urge upon the present Secretary, the expediency of having the accounts systematised and brought up as speedily as possible, they have much pleasure in giving, in his own words, the explanation that Mr. Pearson desires the Committee of Management to offer, "As misconception has arisen of the meaning of the 2d paragraph, page 3d of the Committee's last Report, they have to state that they did not mean to convey an impression that there had been any neglect or incorrectness in bringing up the arrears of account on the part of the late Secretary; but that the irregularity they alluded to, was unavoidably owing to the unsatisfactory and unsettled state of the Fund, pending the sanction of the Court of Directors, which for so long a time interrupted and prevented the business of the Office, and the organisation of a regular system of receipts and payments, and to the requisite documents not having been supplied to enable them to bring up and complete the Accounts.

Para. 11th. Whilst on the subject of the Accounts of the Fund, the Committee of Management are glad to be able to inform their constituents that the Fund Accounts have been brought up as respects the posting up of each Subscriber's Account; but as it is necessary that the balance of the fund, as found by this process, should correspond with that exhibited in its favour on the Government books, and any discrepancy in either account properly reconciled; it will be necessary to wait the receipt of the Accountant General's promised Account of Interest on assets of the Fund in the Treasury. This account will be found useful for check in the adjustment of the interest accruing on each subscriber's account as computed in the Fund Office; and as its preparation is indispensable for the use of the Treasury Officers themselves, to enable them to arrive at the correct balance due from the State to the Fund on the 30th April, 1837, preparatory to investing it in General Treasury notes, as directed by Government, the Committee anticipate that it is, by this time, completed, and that a copy will now be soon furnished to them. Until, therefore, the Committee are favoured with this Account, they cannot carry into effect their intention to furnish each Subscriber with his Account Current with the fund, including Interest, as noticed in their last report. As the arrears, however, due from every Subscriber can now be accurately determined, all such as have not paid up, will be immediately called upon to liquidate.

Para. 12th. The Receipts and Disbursements of the Fund from 1st October, 1837 to 31st December, 1837, are as follow:

Receipts in October, 1837.....	Co.'s Rs.	10,505	3	8

of which 13 propose a reference to Mr. Cunin, and 5 limit the expence to £50; giving a majority of 67 for reference to an Actuary of a London Assurance Office.

Para. 18th The two senior Members in the committee of Management going out in rotation this year conformably to Section XIV. of the Fund Deed, are A. R. Jackson, M. D., and C. C. Egerton, Esquires, and the subscribers have been called upon for their vote in the election of their successors.

By order of the Committee of Management,
Geo. Hill, Secretary.

Resolved.—That the Report of the Committee of Management, just read, be confirmed and adopted by this meeting, and in it the same be printed, and a copy thereof be sent to each subscriber conformably to Section XXI. of the Fund Deed.

Dr. JACKSON called the attention of the Meeting to an editorial article in this month's number of the "Indian Journal of Medical and Physical Sciences," entitled "the last quarterly proceeding and close borough system commenced in the Committee of the Medical Fund," and handed a number of the work to the Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN read the article to the Meeting. It expressed Mr. Corbyn's dissent from the Report of the Committee of Management, read at the quarterly meeting held on the 30th October last, as respecting the Agra proposition, as well as the passage in the Report commencing with the words "No regular sets of books of accounts having been at any time kept in the office of the Secretary to the Fund, the present Secretary has been directed to open the necessary books." Mr. Corbyn observes that the ex-Secretary, (Mr. Pearson,) sent a "full refutation of all neglect on Mr. Pearson's part," implied in the Committee's Report, and that he (Mr. Corbyn) applied to the Secretary for the letter containing such refutation to publish the same in his Medical Journal; but that Mr. Hill, instead of complying with his request, which, as a member of the Management he had a right to expect, he (Mr. Hill) took the orders of his (Mr. Corbyn's) colleagues in the Management, and the result was, that his request was negatived. Mr. Corbyn asks "by what authority or by what law the Committee of Management thus assume such a power," and whether a functionary [in reference to the Secretary] was authorized to disregard the request of a Member of the Management." Mr. Corbyn's remarks are followed by the note of the Secretary to the committee of Management submitting Mr. Corbyn's request for orders; and the votes of the several Members of the Management, with their remarks.

Dr. GARDEN said that Mr. Pearson's letter, which Mr. Corbyn asked for publication, was evidently written under excited feelings, and under the erroneous belief that the part of the committee's Report which he (Mr. Pearson) held objectionable, emanated from the present Secretary, and as the publication of the letter would tend only to prolong controversy, the Committee of Management objected to its publication. Dr. Garden continued, that although the part in the committee's Report respecting the books of the Secretary's office was substantially correct in every particular; yet, as no censure was implied against Mr. Pearson in the notice the committee took of the state of the accounts,

In their last Report, they readily inserted in their present Report the explanation that Mr. Pearson himself dictated, he, as a Member of the Management, could bear his testimony to the zeal and trouble Mr. Pearson took in conducting the details of his office, and he was sure that, had Mr. Pearson continued as their Secretary, the books of the office would have been systematized; but as he quitted the office without having done so, the work has been necessarily left to his successor, and to draw the present Secretary's attention to the state of the Accounts, on communicating to him his election to that office, the committee recorded a Resolution,

"That, Dr. O'Shaughnessy having brought to our notice the total want of system and regularity in the Books of the Office, the Secretary be directed to attend particularly to this Department, and bring the books and Accounts into due order without delay." The substance of this Resolution was noticed in the committee's last Quarterly Report, and which was the subject of Mr. Pearson's annulment. Had the Committee not readily assented to Mr. P.'s wishes regarding the explanation in the present Report, he (Dr. G.) would not have objected to the publication of the letter at the proper time, but pending the consideration of it by the Committee, he certainly did object, as such publication could serve no good purpose and would tend to keep up excitement, and prolong controversy

Mr. SAWHUS, Drs. RANKIN, JACKSON, and STEWART, and Mr. RABEON respectively addressed the Meeting on the mischievous tendency of publishing garbled Statements of the proceedings of committees entrusted with the management of pecuniary Institutions. The committee of Management of the Medical Retiring Fund, the speakers presumed, would have no objection to the publication of all their proceedings, and would rather afford every facility towards, than thwart publication.

The following Resolutions were then put and carried.

Resolved,—That the Secretary was fully justified in not sending any papers to Mr. Corbyn for the avowed purpose of publication in his Journal, without the previous sanction of the committee of Management.

Resolved,—That the remarks published by Mr. Corbyn in his Journal of this month, and read to this Meeting by the Chairman, were premature and injudicious.

Resolved,—That no Member of the committee of Management is at liberty to publish any documents of the Fund office without the consent of a majority of his colleagues.

Resolved,—That the committee of Management will be ready to afford every facility to the publication of a fair and complete account of their Proceedings.

Resolved,—That the thanks of this Meeting are offered to THOS. E. BAKER, Esquire, for his impartial conduct in the chair.

T. E. BAKER, Chairman.

BOMBAY GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL.

Head Quarters, Bombay, 12th January, 1838.—At a general court-martial, held at Bombay on Monday, the 20th Nov. 1837, Brevet-Colonel and Lieut. Colonel J. G. Baumgardt, of Her Majesty's 2d (or Queen's Royal) Regiment of Foot, was arraigned on the following charge.

For scandalous conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman in the following instances:

1st. In having unknown to me, communicated in a letter to Major-General Willshire, of Her Majesty's 2nd or Queen's Royals commanding Poona brigade and station, dated 1st July, 1837, that I had called on Lieutenant Cuyler, of that regiment, then under arrest, and had privately listened to his reflections on the character of another officer of the same regiment, such statement being malicious, unfounded, and injurious to my character as his immediate commanding officer.

2nd. In not having taken the means of contradicting or making known to me the malicious and unfounded report contained in his letter aforesaid, dated 1st July, 1837, to Major-General Willshire, although the falsehood of it had been made known to him, and he had been repeatedly recommended by the latter officer to communicate the same to me.

3rd. In falsely insinuating in a letter to Major-General Willshire, dated 20th August, 1837, that I was aware of the injurious report in circulation against me, but that I had shewn no disposition or wish to institute any inquiry or take any notice of it.

(Signed) JAMES SALTER, Brigadier-General,

Commanding S. D. A.

On which charge the court came to the following decision:

Finding and Sentence.—The court having maturely weighed and considered all that has been adduced on the prosecution, together with what the prisoner Lieutenant-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel A. G. Baumgardt, Her Majesty's second (or Queen's Royal) Regiment of Foot, has brought forward in his defence, is of opinion as follows:—

That he is guilty of the first instance of the charge, with the exception of the term "malicious" set forth in the concluding part, in respect to the statements referred to.

That he is guilty of the second instance, with the exception of the term "malicious," as applied to the report therein referred to.

That he is not guilty of the third instance.

With respect to the preamble to the charge, the court finds the prisoner guilty to the extent of unofficerlike conduct.

The court having found the prisoner guilty as above specified, in breach of the Articles of War, in such case made and provided, does adjudge him to be reprimanded in such manner as His Excellency the Commander-in-chief may be pleased to direct.

(Approved)

(Signed) H. FANE, General.

Remarks by the Commander-in-Chief.—In publishing the charges, finding and sentence in this case, the Commander-in-chief feels it his duty to state, that in consequence of the prosecutor, Brigadier-General Salter, having deemed it requisite that His Excellency should personally give evidence on the trial, it seemed right to His Excellency, with the view of obviating any suspicion that might possibly exist of the case not having been disposed of with perfect impartiality, to transmit the proceedings for approval or otherwise, to His Excellency the Commander-in-chief in India.

Sir Henry Fane has approved the finding and sentence of the court; but in reference to that part of the sentence which provides that Colonel Baumgardt shall be reprimanded in such manner as the Commander-in-chief of the Bombay army shall direct, he has expressed his wish that the task of giving it effect should remain in the hands to which the court had committed it. His Excellency however, at the same time, pronouncing it highly necessary that the proceedings of Colonel Baumgardt should be remarked on in the language of strong censure.

Under this intimation, it becomes the duty of Sir John Keane to observe, that the conduct of Colonel Baumgardt, as developed in these proceedings, has throughout the whole transaction been quite unbecoming his position in the army.

It appears in evidence, that Colonel Baumgardt, in a letter to Major-General Willshire, made an incorrect statement relating to the conduct of Brigadier-General Salter, his superior officer, and the commander of the division, to which he (Colonel Baumgardt) belonged.

As soon it was known to Colonel Baumgardt, that the statement referred to was inaccurate, and of that fact he could not be left in doubt, for it was established by the finding of a Court of Enquiry, which he himself had called, and the proceedings of that court were by himself communicated both to the Commander-in-chief in India and to the Commander-in-chief of Bombay; it obviously became incumbent on him, to undo the injury which in a moment of rashness or inadvertence, he had committed. The feelings of an officer and a gentleman, it might have been expected, would make him ever eager to volunteer a reparation, but Colonel Baumgardt took no measures whatever for that purpose.

The transaction being very properly brought by Major-General Willshire to the knowledge of Sir John Keane, His Excellency, through Major-General Willshire, conveyed his advice to Colonel Baumgardt on the subject, counselling him forthwith to offer a proper apology to Brigadier-General Salter, and at the same time to explain to that officer the manner in which he had received the erroneous information to which he had unfortunately been led to give precedence and currency. This advice, however, which Colonel Baumgardt clearly ought not to have awaited, he thought proper wholly to disregard.

Brigadier-General Salter, on afterwards becoming aware of what had passed, and hearing also of the advice which Colonel Baumgardt had received from the Commander-in-chief, and with which he had not chosen to comply, sent for Colonel Baumgardt, and, in the presence of the division staff officer, put to him the question whether he had written the letter to General Willshire already mentioned. The answer was in the affirmative, and Colonel Baumgardt was proceeding to offer explanations, when General Salter ordered him to be placed in arrest, telling him that the time for explanation had gone by.

In the view the Commander-in-chief takes of this case, it signifies not whether Colonel Baumgardt originally looked on his letter to Major-General Willshire in a public or private light. Relating as that letter did, to the promotion of an officer of his regiment to a vacant company, Major-General Willshire, under all the circumstances of the case, which were very unusual, deemed it his duty to communicate it to higher authority; and when Col. Baumgardt was apprised of this having been done, and received from the Commander-in-chief the advice before mentioned, he has bound to regard the letter as a public document and to act on the advice so offered; and even independently of this view of the case, Colonel Baumgardt's own feelings should have prompted him to repair the wrong, which he had unwittingly done, introducing on false information the character of the general officer commanding his division, to that officer's military superiors. Yet in the defence, made by Colonel Baumgardt before the court-martial which the Commander-in-chief considers as placing his military judgment in a most unfavourable light, he uniformly seems anxious to make it appear, that himself, and not General Salter, is the injured party.

The Commander-in-chief would hold out this case to officers of all ranks, as an example of conduct to be avoided, should they be betrayed into the commission of an act injurious to the feelings or the reputation of another, and especially of those to whom they owe peculiar respect, their first duty and their most honorable course, on being made aware of their error, is to resort to a frank and ingenious acknowledgment, rather than, by maintaining a stubborn silence, to convert the unintentional into a wilful injury.

The Commander-in-chief has experienced the utmost pain in finding himself compelled by a sense of duty to comment in these terms on the conduct of an officer of such high rank and long standing in the army, as Colonel Baumgardt; but His Excellency felt that he had no alternative, and Colonel Baumgardt can only impute to his own misjudgment and obstinacy the unpleasant situation in which he is placed.

In conformity with the sentence of the court, Colonel Baumgardt is hereby reprimanded; and he is to be released from arrest and to return to his duty.

By order of His Excellency, Lieut. Genl.

SIR JOHN KEAN, Commander-in-Chief.

Head Quarters, Bombay, 18th January, 1838.

SUPREME COURT.

MINUTES OF DECREE OF THE 14TH NOVEMBER 1837.

Christopher Martin and } Decree and declare, that other-reus Robert } pursuant to the report of the Spankie, Esq. &c. } Judicial committee of Privy and the other causes. } Council of his late most Gracious Majesty William the Fourth, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, defender of the faith and so forth, and the order of his late majesty thereon made on the first day of March 1837, so much of the Decree of the Supreme Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, dated 23d February 1832, whereby it is "Decreed and declared that the said testator, Claude Marten, having been by birth a subject of the King of France, and having been, at the time of his death an alien, the lands and houses in Calcutta alleged in the pleadings to have been held by the said testator at the time of his death, with the exception of the interest of the said Testator in the house at Chaund Paul Ghaut, which previously to the Decree of the 2 days of December 1822 had been sold, and by the said Decree was declared to have been a part of the personal estate of the said Testator, could not, according to the law of England be devised nor pass by the said will of the said Testator. And whereby it is declared, that there are not the proper parties to these suits nor sufficient evidence before the Court as to the lands or houses or other real or immoveable property which are alleged in the pleadings to have been held by the Testator and to be situate beyond the boundaries of Calcutta, but in places which at the time of the death of the Testator were within the presidency of Fort William, or some of the provinces subject to or forming a part of the said presidency, to enable the Court to determine whether the same would and did pass by the said will of the said Testator. And whereby it is ordered and decreed that in as much as the Attorney General of our Lord the King was not resident within the Jurisdiction of the said Court, and there was no party to these suits who had made any claim to any of the lands or houses or other real or immoveable property on the part and on the behalf of the Crown, the Receiver, appointed by the said Court in these causes to receive the rents and profits of the immoveable property, as well that which is situate within Calcutta as that which is situate beyond the boundaries thereof; but in places which at the time of the death of the testator were within the presidency of Fort William, should continue to receive the rents and profits thereof, and from time to time to pay the same into the hands of the Accountant-General and Sub-Treasurer of the Honourable East India Company (with the privity of the Accountant-General of the said Court.) And whereby it is further decreed and declared, that the rents and profits of the said houses and lands in Calcutta, with the exception aforesaid, of the said house at Chaund Paul Ghaut so declared as aforesaid to have been part of the personal estate of the said testator which had theretofore been received either by the executors or by any receiver appointed by the said Court, together with the accumulations thereon arising from interest, ought to be ascertained, and that the amount when so ascertained ought to be set apart and placed to the credit of a separate and distinct account in these causes to abide any claim respecting the same, which might be thereafter made by or on behalf of the crown; and that all the rents and profits of the lands and houses in Calcutta, except as herein before is excepted, which might thereafter be received by the Receiver of the said Court as aforesaid, ought to be paid in and placed to the credit of the same account; and that in the manner the rents and profits or the proceeds of any sales of any lands or houses or other real or immoveable property situate beyond the boundaries of Calcutta, but in places which at the time of the death of the said testator were within the presidency of Fort William, or the provinces, subject to, or forming part of the said presidency, which might have come to the hands of the said Executors or any receiver appointed by the said Court, or might thereafter be received by any such receiver, and might have been paid or might thereafter be paid to the Accountant-General and Sub-treasurer of the East India Company, (with the privity of the Account-General of the said Court) ought to be ascertained, set apart and placed to the credit of another separate and distinct account. And whereby it was referred to the Master to enquire and report, what part of the funds then standing to the general credit of these causes had arisen from the rents and profits, with the accumulations of interest thereon, of any of the lands or houses situate in Calcutta (with the exception as before mentioned of the house at Chaund Paul Ghaut, declared by the decree of the 2d of December 1822 to have been part of the personal estate of the said testator, and which in the pleadings are alleged to have been held by the said testator, Claude Marten, at the time of his death and that the said Master should also inquire and report what houses, lands or other real or immoveable property situate beyond the boundaries of Calcutta, but in places which at the time of the death of the said testator were within the presidency of Fort William, or the provinces subject to or forming a part of the said presidency was or were in the hands of the said testator at the time of his death, and what was the nature of the tenure thereof, and the estate or interest, if any, which the said testator had in the same; and what regulations or usages had prevailed, and then prevailed in the said provinces beyond the boundaries of Calcutta, as to the right and power of European Aliens to devise or bequeath by will any lands, houses, or other real or immoveable property, of which they might be possessed at the time of their death within the said provinces was reversed.

Decree and declare, that pursuant to the report of the said Judicial committee and the order of his said late Majesty thereon, so much of the decree of the Supreme Court bearing date the 10th day of May 1835, whereby this court did order, "decree and declare, that is as much as there was no party to these Consolidated suits, who had made any claim to the said lands or houses on the part and behalf of the crown, the Receiver appointed by the Court in the three first-mentioned causes should continue in the possession, and to receive the rents, issues and profits thereof, and from time to time should pay the same into the hands of the Accountant General and Sub-treasurer of the East India Company, (with the privity of the Accountant General of this Court) to the credit of a separate account in these consolidated causes to be opened and headed as hereinafter directed. And whereby the said Court did further order, decree and declare, that the sum of sicca rupees four hundred and seventy-four thousand one hundred and fifty-four eleven annas and six pie, being the amount mentioned in the Schedule A, annexed to the therein recited report of the master, and filed on the twenty-first day of November in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, and forming a part of the Funds standing to the General credit of the three first mentioned causes, had arisen from the rents, issues and profits of the aforesaid two houses, situate in Calcutta aforesaid, received from the time of the death of the said Testator, Major General Claude Marten, up to the twenty-ninth day of February in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-two; and that in as much as there was no party to these consolidated suits, who had made any claim to the same on the part and behalf of the crown, the said sum, together with the interest and receipts since the date of the said report of the twenty-first day of November, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, ought to be transferred to the head of a separate and distinct account, entitled an account of the rents and profits of the houses situate within the town of Calcutta, subject to a claim of the crown; and that the said sum and all future rents, issues and profits to be paid in by the said Receiver as aforesaid, should remain under the said head of account in these consolidated causes to abide any claim that might be thereafter made on behalf of the crown. And whereby the said court did declare, that the houses, lands or other real and moveable property and estate of the said testator, Major General Claude Martin, situate without the boundaries of the said Town of Calcutta, but within the limits of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, as such limited in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty two, and which were held by the said Testator, Major General Claude Martin at the time of his death, did not pass by the aforesaid will of the said Testator, Major General Claude Martin. And whereby the said Court did further order, decree and declare, that the said receiver of the said last mentioned houses and lands, should continue in the possession thereof and should receive the rents, issues and profits thereof, and from time to time should pay the same into the hands of the said Accountant General and Sub-Treasurer of the East India Company, (with the like privy as aforesaid) to the credit of a separate account, to be opened in those consolidated causes and headed as hereinafter next directed. And whereby the said Court did further order, decree and declare, that the sum of sicca rupees fifty-three thousand five hundred and fifty-eight, nine annas and three pie, set forth in the Schedule C of the Master's report of the twenty-first day of November in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, being a part of the funds now also standing to the general credit of the three first mentioned causes, which had arisen from the rents, issues and profits of the said last mentioned houses and lands situate without the boundaries of the said town of Calcutta, but within those of the said Presidency at Fort William in Bengal, ought to be carried to the credit of a separate account to be opened in those consolidated causes intitled, "Account of the rents, issues and profits of the real and immoveable property of Major General Claude Martin, situate without the boundaries of the said town of Calcutta, and within the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal," and that the same, together with all future payments to the credit of the said accounts and accumulations of interest thereon, should remain to such credit to abide future claims in effect and substance reversed, as being inconsistent with and contradictory to the terms of the said Report, and order of His most Gracious Majesty, whereby it is directed, that the court shall decree that the houses, lands, and other real or immoveable property possessed by Major General Claude Martin, at the time of his death, and situate as well within the town of Calcutta, as beyond the boundaries thereof, but within the British territories, such as Chandernagore, passed by the said Testator's will and formed part of the general residue of the Testator's estate, declare that if having been by the said committee reported and recommended to His most Gracious Majesty that in lieu thereof it ought to be decreed and declared as herein next follows, and His said most Gracious Majesty having by his order aforesaid ordered, that such report and recommendation should be duly and punctually observed; complied with and carried into execution, this court doth hereby accordingly, in obedience to the said order of His most Gracious Majesty, order, decree and declare, that the houses, lands and other real or immoveable property possessed by Major General Claude Martin, the Testator in the Pleadings named, at the time of his death and situate as well within

Decree, that the sums now standing to the credit of the separate account headed Account of the rents and profits of houses situate within Calcutta, and the sums now standing to the credit of a separate account headed Account of the rents, issues and profits of the real and immoveable property of Major General Claude Martin, situate without the boundaries of the Town of Calcutta and within the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, together with all accumulations of interest thereon respectively up to the date of transfer, be immediately transferred to the general credit of these causes and decree the Accountant General and Sub-Treasurer of the East India Company, (with the privy of the Accountant-General of this court) to make such transfers accordingly. Decree, that the Master of this Honorable court do immediately proceed to advertise and sell the houses and lands next mentioned, that is to say a certain Upper-roomed House with four biggals of land thereto adjoining and pertaining, situate in Hare Street in the Town of Calcutta, and also a certain other upper-roomed House with three biggals of land thereto adjoining and pertaining, situate at Tank Square in the Town of Calcutta. One house and the ground thereto belonging situate on the Circular Road near the said Town of Calcutta now in the occupation of Mrs. Frederick Lindsted. One other house and the ground thereto belonging, situate at Ghazepore, occupied by Mr. A. J. Dick. One other house and the ground thereto belonging, in a very dilapidated state, situate at Benaras, and an old godown and the ground thereto belonging, situate at Cawnpore, in the upper provinces, and that the proceeds of such sale be in like manner carried to the general credit of these causes.

Decree, that the receiver of this court, who is now in possession of the said several houses and lands, do continue in such possession until such sale is completed and confirmed, and conveyance thereof executed to the purchasers and orders for possession given the same, and that thereupon the said receiver do yield up possession to such purchasers respectively, and pass his accounts up to the date of giving up possession and therefore be discharged.

Decree that the said receiver do continue such possession as he now hath of the said house at Chandernagore aforesaid, pending the enquiry hereinafter next mentioned, and until further order shall be made on the termination thereof, and until such further order that the said receiver do and shall account and pay in the rents of the said house at Chandernagore as heretofore.

Decree, in obedience to and in pursuance of the order of His late Majesty aforesaid, that it be referred to the Master of this court to enquire and report, what houses, lands or other real or immoveable property situate at Chandernagore, was or were in the hands of the said testator at the time of his death, and what was the nature of the tenure thereof and the estate or interest if any, which the said testator had in the same, and what regulations or usages have prevailed at Chandernagore aforesaid, as to the right and power of European aliens to devise or bequeath by will any lands, houses or other real or immoveable property of which they may be possessed at the time of their death at Chandernagore, and whether any lands, houses or other real or immoveable property situate at Chandernagore, which was or were in the hands of the said testator, Claude Martin, at the time of his death, hath or have been since sold and the proceeds of the sale paid into the hands of the Accountant General and Sub-Treasurer of the Honorable East India Company, (with the privy of the Accountant-General of the said court) and of what part (if any).

of such lands, houses or real or immoveable property the receiver appointed by the said court is now in the receipt of the rents and profits, and what is the whole amount (if any) of the proceeds of any sales and of any rents or profits received of any such lands, houses or real or immoveable property at Chandernagore, together with the accumulations of interest thereon, which is now standing to the general credit of these causes.

Further decree and declare, that the said Judicial committee having further recommended that so much of the said decretal order of this court, dated the 23d February 1832, whereby it was "decree and declared that this court is incompetent and unable by itself to give effect to the other bequests for charitable establishment and institutions at Lucknow, which is a place beyond the jurisdiction of this court, and not forming any part of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal but that the Governor-General in Council at Fort William in Bengal had the means and was able to give effect to the other bequests for charitable establishments and institutions at Lucknow, and that the same ought to be carried into effect and that it appeared by the report of the Master under an order made in these causes on the 25th July 1831, and which report was dated the 5th November 1831, that the said Governor-General in Council was willing to receive and apply such sums as the court might decide to be lawfully applicable for those purposes should be reversed without prejudice to any question as to the competency and ability of the said court, with any aid or by any means to give effect to such last mentioned bequests according to the will of the said Testator. And his most gracious Majesty having been pleased to comply with the said report and recommendation, and order the same punctually to be complied with, order, decree and declare, that so much of the said decree of 23d February 1832 as has been hereby last recited, is reversed accordingly, without prejudice as aforesaid to any question as to the competency and ability of this court to give effect to the bequest of the said Testator. Further decree and declare, that the said Judicial committee having also further recommended that as to such parts of the said decree of this court of the 23d February 1832, whereby it is "decree and declared for as much as the said Testator Claude Martin, in and by the 33d article of his said will, had expressed his desire and intention, that in case it should be necessary the protection and assistance of the Government should be obtained for the purpose of giving effect to the said last mentioned bequests and Testamentary dispositions, that if the whole sum of sicca rupees 200,000 bequeathed in the 33d article of the said will of the Testator Claude Martin, for finishing of the house of Constantia had not been expended and applied for that purpose, whatever might remain thereof ought to be set apart from the funds now standing to the general credit of these causes and applied as a building and repairing fund for the house and establishment of Constantia, and ought for that purpose to be paid to the Governor-General in Council, or to some person duly nominated and appointed by the Governor-General in Council to receive the same, and out of the same funds standing to the general credit of these causes a further sum of Sa. Rs. 100,000 for the support of a College and School at Lucknow, bequeathed in the 33d article of the said will, together with accumulations of interest on the same, from the death of the said Testator until the setting apart of the same, ought also to be set apart, and the interest thereof from time to time, as the same should accrue and be received, ought to be paid to the Governor-General in Council for the time being or to such persons as he should duly nominate and appoint to receive the same, in order that the same might be applied for the purposes in the said 33d article of the said will mentioned, and that out of the funds standing to the general credit of these causes the further sum of 3 lakhs of Rs. ought to be set apart, and the interest thereof paid to the Governor-General in Council or to such persons or persons as the Governor-General in Council for the time being should nominate and appoint, in order that there might always be allowed and paid the salaries and allowances of the supervisors, servants and other attendants, and the persons to be employed in and about the tomb, buildings and establishment at Constantia" should be reversed, and that instead thereof it should be declared and decreed as herein next follows, that is to say, "if the whole sum of sicca rupees 200,000 bequeathed in the 3d Article of the said will of the said Testator, Claude Martin, for the finishing the house of Constantia hath not been expended for that purpose, whatever may remain thereof, ought to be set apart from the funds now standing to the general credit of the said causes, and carried to a separate account to be entitled "The building and repairing fund for the house and establishment at Constantia" subject to the further order of the Supreme Court and without prejudice to the final application of the same fund, under the directions hereinafter contained or otherwise. And that the said Supreme Court should give all necessary directions for that purpose, and that out of the same fund standing to the general credit of the said causes, a further sum of sicca rupees 100,000, being the amount bequeathed in the 33d Article of the said will, for the support of a college and school at Lucknow, together with accumulations of interest on the same, from the death of the said Testator until the setting apart of the same, be set apart and be carried to a separate account in the causes to be entitled "The Lucknow college and school fund," subject to the further order of the Supreme Court and without prejudice to any question, as to the final application of the same fund under the directions thereinafter contained, or otherwise, and that out of the funds standing to the general credit of the said causes, the further sum of three lakhs of rupees or so much thereof as the said court should find necessary, be also set apart without prejudice to any question as to the final application of so much of the interest thereof as is under the said will applicable to the maintenance of the charitable establishment at Lucknow, and subject to the further order of the Court; but in the mean time any monthly or periodical payments which shall have been directed by the Supreme Court to be paid out of such interest are to be continued." And His Most Gracious Majesty having, by his order aforesaid, ordered, that such last mentioned report and recommendation of the said Privy Council, should be duly and punctually complied with and carried into effect, this Court doth hereby accordingly, in obedience to the said order of His Most Gracious Majesty, order, decree and declare, that so much of the last decretal order in these causes made and pronounced, on the 10th day of May, 1836, as follows, that is to say "and this court doth further order, decree and declare, that a sum of sicca rupees one hundred and thirty-five thousand nine hundred and twenty-five and nine annas has been spent and laid out towards completing the house called Constantia House, out of the sum of sicca rupees two hundred thousand, which the said Testator by the thirty-third article of his will calculated might be required for that purpose; and that the balance of sicca rupees twenty-four thousand and seventy-four and seven annas, ought now to be set apart from the funds standing to the general credit of the three first mentioned causes and carried to the head of a separate account in these consolidated causes, entitled building and repairing fund of Constantia House and placed at the disposal of the Governor-General in Council, pursuant to decree of the twenty-third day of February one thousand eight hundred and thirty-two, and that in case the same and the funds hereinafter mentioned as required or the repairs of the said house, should not be sufficient for that purpose, that such further sum as shall be necessary to be paid out of the fund to the general credit of these consolidated causes on the application of the Advocate-General of the East India Company on behalf of the Governor-General in Council, and this court doth further order, decree and declare, that from and out of the funds now standing to the general credit of the three first mentioned causes, a further sum of sicca rupees fifty-four thousand and eight hundred ought to be transferred to the said separate head of account and fund, entitled fund for repairing and furnishing Constantia House, and paid to the Governor-General in Council, or some person by him duly authorized to receive the same, in order that the works may be executed by Major C. J. C. Davidson, Major of Engineers, in the East India Company's service, or such person as the Governor-General in Council shall appoint. And this court both further order, decree and declare, that Jean Jacques Deverinne, junior, is a fit and proper person, due regard had to the wishes of the Testator, to fill the office of Superintendent of the said building, and promises that in case of his death, removal for misconduct or resignation, the Governor-General in Council ought to appoint all future superintendents, with due regard to the wishes of the said testator, as signified in his will; and that the care and superintendence of the said buildings can most conveniently, and with due observance of the wishes of the Testator, be exercised by the Governor-General in Council, shall also be, and the same is thereby and by the effect of the said order of Council reversed and set aside, and instead thereof, this court both hereby order, decree and declare, that in pursuance of the report of the Master of this Hon'ble Court, bearing date the 21st day of Novr. 1835, and the facts therein found, a sum of sicca rupees one hundred and seventy five thousand nine hundred and twenty-five and nine annas has been spent and laid out towards completing the house called Constantia House, out of the sum of sicca rupees two hundred thousand, which the said Testator by the thirty third article of his will calculated might be required for that purpose, and that the balance of sicca rupees twenty-four thousand and one hundred and seven annas ought now to be set apart from the funds standing to the General credit of the three first mentioned causes, and carried to the head of a separate account in these consolidated causes, entitled, building and repairing fund of Constantia House, to remain subject to the further order of the court, and that in case the same and the funds hereinafter mentioned as required for the repairs of the said house should not be sufficient for that purpose, that such further sum as shall be necessary be payable and applicable out of the fund to the general credit of these consolidated causes, in such manner as the court shall hereafter order and decree, and this court doth further order, decree and declare, that from and out of the funds now standing to the general credit of the three first mentioned causes, a further sum of sicca rupees fifty-four thousand and eight hundred ought to be transferred to the said separate head of account and fund, entitled fund for repairing and furnishing Constantia House and shall be applicable and payable in like manner to the purpose aforesaid under the order and direction of this Hon'ble court. And this court doth further order, decree and declare, that Jean Jacques Deverinne, junior, is a fit and proper person, due regard had to the wishes of the testator, to fill the office of superintendent of the said building, pending the enquiry necessary to carry into full effect the orders and directions of his Most Gracious Majesty in his Privy council aforesaid.

Further order, decree and declare, that in as much as by and under the decretal orders of the 23d February 1832 and 10th May 1836, the amount of the said sum of Sa. Rs. 100,000, being the amount bequeathed in the 33d article of the will of the testator, for the support of a college and school at Lucknow, together with accumulations of interest thereon, from the death of the said testator until the setting apart of the same was duly set apart and carried to a separate account in these causes entitled, fund for the establishment of General Martin's school and college at Lucknow; the said sum so set apart shall remain under the same head of credit, pending the reference and enquiry hereby ordered in pursuance of the order of his most gracious Majesty in his Privy council aforesaid, relative to the appointment of trustees and the establishment of the said school and college. And whereas the said Judicial committee did further report and recommend as hereinafter next set forth, that is to say, "that it should be referred to the Master of the said court to enquire and report to the said court, whether it is in the power of the Governor-General in Council, at Fort William in Bengal, to aid trustees to be appointed by the said Supreme Court, so as to enable them to give effect according to the testator's will to the bequest respecting the charitable establishment and institution at Lucknow contained in the will of the said testator, and thereby directed to be attached to the establishment of Constantia House, or whether any other and what means through the medium of trustees exist for giving effect to such bequest, and that if it shall appear, that by the aid of the said Governor-General in Council or otherwise as aforesaid, effect can be given to the said bequest, some proper persons be appointed by the said Supreme court to be the trustees of the said charity, to whom the interest of the funds applicable for the support of such charity should be from time to time paid to be by them applied and administered under the superintendence of the said Supreme Court, in founding, establishing and keeping on foot the said charity; and that the Advocate General, the plaintiff in the first, and the defendant in the third of the above mentioned causes, should be at liberty to propose proper persons to be such trustees," which said report and recommendation His Most Gracious Majesty was also pleased to order should be duly complied with and punctually carried into effect. This court doth order, decree and declare, that it be referred to the Master to enquire and report, who would be fit and proper persons to be appointed trustees of the fund so set apart, for the maintenance of the said school and college at Lucknow, and of the following fund for charitable and other purposes at Lucknow created and carried to a separate head of credit by the decretal order of the tenth day of May, one thousand eight hundred thirty-six, viz. fund called the building and repairing fund of Constantia House, and of the fund, entitled fund for repairing and furnishing Constantia House and of the fund entitled, fund for the payment of pensioners at Lucknow, and of the fund entitled fund for the payment of the establishment at Constantia, pursuant to the thirty second article of General Martin's Will. And this court doth order, decree and declare that it is hereby referred to the Master to enquire and report, whether it is in the power of the Governor-General in Council at Fort William in Bengal, to aid trustees to be appointed by this court so as to enable them to give effect according to the Testator's will to the bequest respecting the charitable establishment and institution at Lucknow contained in the will of the said testator, and thereby directed to be attached to the Establishment of Constantia House, or whether any other and what means, through the medium of trustees, exist for giving effect to such bequest; and that if it shall appear that by the aid to the said Governor General in Council or otherwise as aforesaid, effect can be given to the said bequest some proper persons be appointed by this court to be the Trustees of the said charity, to whom the interest of funds applicable for the support of such charity should be from time to time paid to be by them applied and administered under the superintendence of this court in founding, establishing and keeping on foot the said charity, and that the Advocate General the plaintiff in the first and the defendant in the third of the above mentioned causes, shall be at liberty to propose persons to be such trustees to be reported upon by the Master. And the court doth order, decree and declare, that by the effect, of the said order of His Most Gracious Majesty in His Privy Council aforesaid, so much of the residue of the said decretal order of the 10th day of May 1836, whereby "it was ordered and decreed by and with the assent of the Advocate General of the East India Company on behalf of the Governor-General in Council, that the Accountant-General of this court do monthly issue a certificate authorizing the Accountant-General and Sub-treasurer of the East India Company, (with the privacy of the Accountant-General of this court) to pay to the Resident for the time being of the East India Company's Government of Lucknow, the monthly pensions due to the pensioners at Lucknow, pursuant to the will of the said Testator. And whereby it was further ordered, decreed and declared, that the said Accountant-General of this court should be authorized to stop the payment of the said monthly pensions until further orders, unless a half yearly memorandum or account of the sums paid should be furnished to him by the said resident; and whereby it was further ordered, decreed and declared, that the Accountant-General of this court for the time being on receiving intimation thereof from the said resident or other good and credible information, should be authorized to notify to this court as the same may occur, the death of the said pensioners at Lucknow, and thereupon to apply for and obtain an order authorizing the transfer from the separate fund for the payment of pensioners at Lucknow, created by and under an order duly confirming the said amended separate report of the Master made and filed on the fifteenth day of August one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five back again to the fund at the general credit of these consolidated causes of so much as was required to pay the pension of the deceased person, has been set aside and reversed, rendered void and of no effect, but that inasmuch as the stoppage of the payment of the pensions and salaries has heretofore occasioned, and may again occasion great temporary hardship and inconvenience, the provisions of the said decree last mentioned ought to be acted upon, pending the enquiry hereinbefore ordered, pursuant to the said order of His late Most Gracious Majesty in His Privy Council aforesaid, and until the termination thereof shall enable the court to transfer and pay to proper persons the principal of the said several funds so created for payment of the sums required to be disbursed at Lucknow, or to give other and fit directions in the premises. And this court doth further decree and declare, that the residue of the said decretal orders of 23d February 1832 and of the 1th day of May 1836, being in effect not only consistent with, but an actual performance of, various injunctions of the said order of His Most Gracious Majesty in His Privy Council aforesaid, ought to be and are hereby confirmed and established. And whereas the said Privy Council did report and recommend to His Most Gracious Majesty, and His Most Gracious Majesty did order, that the said report and recommendation herein next mentioned should be punctually complied with, decree and order, that the costs of this appeal as between solicitor and client of the said Mayor of the city of Lyons, Christopher Martin, Marie Desgranges Martin, Pierre Ballofett and Claudine his wife, and Francois Martin amounting to the sum of thousand three hundred and nine pounds, two shillings and eleven pence sterling, and of the East India Company amounting to the sum of three thousand six hundred and forty five pounds sterling, subject nevertheless, to the deduction of such sum or sums of money (if any) as may have been respectively received on account of such costs under His Majesty's Order in Council in this appeal of the 23d of April 1835 be paid out of the funds standing to the General credit of these causes in manner following, (that is to say) the costs of the said Mayor of Lyons, Christopher Martin, Marie Desgranges Martin, Pierre Ballofett, and Claudine his wife, and Francois Martin to Messrs. Henry Young and John Jackson their solicitors and the costs of the East India Company to Edward Lawford, Esq., their solicitor decree and Order payment of costs in this court as between attorney and client of all parties to these suits being first duly taxed up to and including this decree.

JANUARY 8, 1838.

Before Sir E. Ryan, Knt., and Sir. P. Grant, Knt. Judges.

This being the first day of the first term of 1838, the Judges opened the Court at about quarter after 11 o'clock A.M. On the opening of the court, a great many motions of course were made and disposed; the undenominated one being of some interest we have inserted it.

In the case of Captain R. A. McNaghten versus Mr. Tandy, the Editor of the Agra Ukhbar, for a Libel.

The Advocate General in this case made a motion, that a rule be granted by this court for an order of substitution of service in this case, on the affidavit of Mr. J. S. Judge, the plaintiff's attorney. He said it appeared, that Mr. W. D. Shaw, Attorney at Law, had in a communication with Mr. Judge, given him to understand that he had been engaged as the defendant's attorney in this case, and Mr. Judge after vainly endeavouring in a lengthy correspondence with Mr. Shaw, to prevail on him to enter appearance on behalf of the defendant, enclosed a summons in a letter to Mr. Tandy, who, it is understood, generally resides at Agra, and sent it to him by dawk, requesting him on the receipt of the enclosed summons to acknowledge its receipt and to enter appearance as defendant in this action against him. For this letter Mr. Tandy returned no reply. Mr. Judge then despatched a bailiff from Calcutta by dawk to Agra to serve the summons on Mr. Tandy, but when the bailiff arrived at Agra, it appears that Mr. Tandy had left that city and proceeded to Allyghur, a town not very far from Agra, and the bailiff was willing to proceed from Agra to Allyghur provided his expenses were paid him. To this advance there existed no objection, but the consideration that when the bailiff reached Allyghur, it might so happen that the defendant might have proceeded from thence elsewhere, and thus the bailiff might be eternally pursuing Mr. Tandy with the writ and never be able to serve it on him; or Mr. Tandy might quit the jurisdiction of this court and thus baffle the plaintiff, who has come down to Calcutta on leave to explain some circumstances connected with this case, which as this libel materially affects his character, he felt himself bound to do, and unless this order herein solicited be granted by the court, the probability is that the defendant will avoid the service of this writ until the period of the plaintiff's leave expires. True it is that the plaintiff might apply for an extension of leave, and perhaps the Commander-in-Chief might grant it: but how long could the plaintiff remain absent from his regiment without detriment to the service, to meet the wishes of Mr. Tandy. The Advocate General hereon added that he understood that Mr. Tandy is connected with a paper called the Agra Ukhbar, in which he has stated his readiness to meet the plaintiff in this court, and defend this action, and ascribed the delay to him. If so, why does he not abide by his word and enter his appearance on this summons.

The Chief Justice here observed to the Advocate General, that his allusion as to what has appeared in the Agra Ukhbar on this subject, could not be admitted in evidence, however ingeniously he might have introduced it.

The Advocate General replied, that he was aware of that. He likewise knew that he could enter a return of non inventus to the Sheriff's writ and thus enter up an ex-parte judgment, but as the libel materially affected the plaintiff's character he wished to be personally present in court, and have the writ served on the defendant, to enable the case to be heard, and his character vindicated in open court. The plaintiff did not seek to recover damages, no money would satisfy him: all he sought was a full hearing of his case if not an ex-parte judgment.

The Chief Justice observed, that even if the order prayed for were granted yet even then the plaintiff could not prevent the defendant giving him an ex-parte decree, if he felt disposed to do so, for he might not appear to defend, or let judgment go by default.

The Advocate General said that was true, but that it would show that his client had made every effort to have the matter elucidated. He then said that there was nothing extraordinary in this application, for if he remembered ought in an action in a former term, the Court had granted an order to subpoena the witnesses to the signature of some female witnesses in the case, on whom the subpoenas could not be served, and thus the writ was served by substitution, as likewise in the case of Mullen Mohon Mitter, where one of the parties lived out of the jurisdiction of this court, a writ of substitution was granted.

The Advocate-General then read the affidavit of Mr. Judge and begged that an order be granted for the service of the summons in this case by substitution by serving a summons on Mr. W. D. Shaw, who has stated himself to be the defendant's attorney, and who has a warrant for his appearance in this action, which the defendant has not as yet filed in court, and that an official copy of the said summons be sent by hawk from the Sheriff's office to the address of Mr. Tandy at Agra and another at Allighur, and that this be admitted as good service by substitution.

The Chief Justice replied, that he recollected that this motion had been made before him in Chambers shortly before this term, and he had refused the application as being irregular with leave to the plaintiff to move it during this term if he wished to do so: he then added that the court was still of opinion that this application cannot be granted. Mr. Tandy is a British subject living within the jurisdiction of this court, and if the Sheriff cannot serve the writ on him let him make a return of non inventus and the case can be heard and decreed ex-parte. With regard to a native who lives at Benares or elsewhere and has a gomastah in Calcutta through whose agency he may contract debt in Calcutta, the court has allowed a service of a writ by substitution on the gomastah to be good service, but if the court were to allow the same on this application, suits might be entered against British subjects and ex-parte decrees obtained without their ever knowing any thing about it. The application was refused accordingly.

The Judge, after all the motions were disposed of, said, that the court would pronounce judgment in this term on the suits of Ousely versus Dwarkanath Fagore, and Cockerell versus Dickens, and that it would hear the argument in the case of Turton versus Mangles.

After this the court adjourned at a quarter after 12 o'clock till 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow.—Hurkaru, January, 9.

JANUARY 9, 1838.

Before Sir E. Ryan, Knt., and Sir S. P. Grant, Knt.

IN THE GOODS AND CHATELS OF MRS. S. E. FLOODE.
DECEASED.

The Advocate General made a motion to examine an attesting witness to the will of the deceased, to enable his client to take out letters of administration to the deceased's estate on behalf of Mr. Parlybean, the Executor to the will.

The application was granted, and J. C. Mathews deposed, that he had known the deceased about two months previous to her demise. When she signed the will she was perfectly sensible, and when she died she was about forty-two years of age. She had a son, he is alive and might be about twenty years of age. The deceased was on bad terms with the son; and the son did not live in the same house with her, nor was he present when the will was signed. He learnt of it shortly after her demise. Deponent does not know how the son supports himself. Deponent is acquainted with a person named Parlybean; he was the person who introduced deponent to the deceased. Deponent does not know whether connexion existed between Parlybean and the deceased, but they lived on very intimate terms. The other attesting witness to the will is a person named Langdon. This will was drawn up by Mr. Hudson, the Attorney at law, by the desire of Mr. Parlybean, and he desired deponent and Mr. Langdon to witness its signature. When the deceased signed the will Mr. Hudson was not present. Deceased was then very ill; her complaint was an abscess of the liver, and she died on the 5th of December 1836, four days after she had signed the will, by the bursting of the abscess. She died perfectly senile. Deponent read and explained the will to her both before and after she had signed it, and she was aware that in executing the will she had disinherited her son. She died leaving about Rs. 1,000 property. She died at Kolderpoor. When she signed the will she gave no reason for having disinherited her son. She was desired to sign the will by Parlybean, and she first wrote his name opposite the seal in the will. Deponent then informed her, that in signing her will, she should write her name and not Parlybean's, and then she wrote her name. Deponent cannot conjecture why a woman who was sensible would make so great a mistake as to sign another person's name to her will. Deponent cannot say at what time the deceased's son came to the knowledge of this will—whether before or after the deceased's death, for he was not present when it was signed. Whether the property which the deceased has thus willed away was given to her by the father of her son or otherwise accrued, deponent does not know. Deponent does not know whether Mr. Hudson ever did any other business for the deceased besides this. The deceased was a woman of color.

The Advocate-General wished to have the other attesting witnesses subpoenaed and examined.

The Chief Justice replied, that he could do so, but he must cite the hearing at law and have the will proved and allow the opposite party the chance of cross examining the evidence. This application, he added, had been previously made in Chambers before Sir J. P. Grant, who refused granting the probate on the grounds already mentioned and give the applicant his choice of re-mooting the point in this term.

The Advocate General said, that he believed that his client would not be able to offer any further evidence than what has already been given, even by the examination of the other attesting witness to it, he therefore prayed the court to return the will to him.

The Chief Justice, after consulting Sir J. P. Grant, said that the Judges could not redeliver up the will, after it had been filed in the court. It will be filed in the Registrar's Office for his report on it. If the will is a true will it ought to be filed in this court, and if it is a false will, it ought to be appressed.

IN THE MATTER OF DWARKANATH TAGORE versus R. SWINHOO, ATTORNEY AT LAW.

The Advocate-General made a motion on behalf of Dwarkanath Tagore, Esq. v. Robert Swinhoo, Attorney at Law, to make the latter show cause why he should not redeliver, W. N. Hedger, Esq. Attorney at Law, certain papers which Mr. Hedger had entrusted to him, on his written receipt to redeliver them to Mr. Hedger whenever Mr. Hedger may require them. Here the learned counsel read the receipt of Mr. Swinhoo to the Judge. He then said that in detailing the particulars of the transaction out of which this application originated, he would be as concise as possible.

He then stated, that a person named Mahomud Ajeeb, died some years ago at Illoohy, leaving a Talook there called Dwar-Bashnee between his sons and daughters, and appointed Sheikh Assoollah, his eldest son, his executor, who accordingly administered to the state. Sheikh Assoollah on the 2nd April 1834, mortgaged this Talook to Agah Manomud Cuibullye, a merchant of Calcutta. It was covenanted in this mortgage, that the mortgagee was to pay on the 28th January 1835 to the mortgagee Rs. 4,000 with the interest of the bond up to that date, and the like amount yearly until the whole mortgage was liquidated, and in the event of his failing to fulfil this part of the agreement, it was provided that the mortgagor might at once enter into the possession of this estate and foreclose the mortgage. Subsequently Sheikh Assoollah contracted a heavy debt to the firm of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., he likewise failed to pay the instalments on the mortgage as they became due, and when the mortgagor was about to foreclose the mortgage and enter into possession of the estate, Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., having obtained information of this proceeding, became alarmed for the recovery of the money which Sheikh Assoollah owed their firm, and after consulting their attorney, Mr. Hedger, on the subject, they directed him to get an assignment of the talook made over to them, on their advancing Sheikh Assoollah 17,968 rupees, the amount due with interest on the mortgage, to enable him to redeem it. This was done on the 19th May 1836, and in May 1837, Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. further paid the amount of the arrears of rent to due by the estate to Government, to prevent the collector seizing and letting it, for Sheikh Assoollah had let them get into arrears for a long time, and was indifferent on this point. There is a person named Rajchunder Mookerjee, who is a constituent of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. and had a large sum of money invested in their hands. He consulted Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, as to the best mode of investing this sum and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore advised him to invest it in landed property. Subsequently by the mediation of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, an agreement was entered into between Sheikh Assoollah to sell this Talook to Baboo Rajchunder Mookerjee for 1,35,000 rupees, and it was further covenanted between Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore and Sheikh Assoollah, that the latter was to purchase Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore's house in Esplanade Row, for 40,000 rupees, which sum was to be paid to Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore out of the purchase money of Sheikh Assoollah's Talook to Baboo Rajchunder Mookerjee.

In consequence of this arrangement, a draft was sent by Mr. Hedger, as the attorney of the purchaser, to Mr. R. Swinhoo, the attorney of Sheikh Assoollah, for the amount of the mortgage. Mr. Swinhoo, in reply, wrote back that the sum was insufficient; he likewise wrote to Mr. Hedger to send him the title deeds of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore's house in Esplanade Row for inspection, and Mr. Hedger accordingly sent them to Mr. Swinhoo, who then gave the receipt which counsel had already read in court. On the 13th June last, these negotiations were interrupted, but on the 14th of the same month, Sheikh Assoollah, called upon Mr. Hedger at his office, and prevailed upon him to accompany him to the office of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. and show them the negotiations for the sale of this Talook to Baboo Raj Chunder Mookerjee for Rs. 13,000 were renewed, as likewise the agreement for Sheikh Assoollah, purchasing Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore's house in Esplanade Row, for Rs. 40,000 in conformity with this agreement, Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore delivered to Mr. Hedger, his attorney, a signed assignment of his house in Esplanade Row, to Sheikh Assoollah, with instructions to deliver it to Mr. R. Swinhoo, Sheikh Assoollah's attorney, whenever Sheikh Assoollah would put into his hand the assignment of his talook to Baboo Raj Chunder Mookerjee, signed by him and his brothers and sisters and witnessed by the husbands of his sister, Baboo Raj Chunder not deeming it safe to purchase the talook on any other conditions. On the 31st July last, Mr. Hedger, Mr. Paul, Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore and others, attended to execute and witness the executions of the assignments they were respectively to make to each other. On that occasion Mr. Paul, who is an Attorney of this court, brought to the notice of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore several objections to the assignment made by Sheikh Assoollah to Baboo Raj Chunder Mookerjee. They were these. First, that although the sisters of Sheikh Assoollah had signed the assignment, yet the husbands of none of them had witnessed it. Secondly, that there were several judgments of this court pending for large amounts against Sheikh Assoollah, and his father Mohamed Ajeeb, and thirdly, that there were heavy arrears of rent due by the estate to Government, and lastly, that the share of Mohamed Ajeeb in the Talook of Dooar Bashnee in Zillah Illoohy was only 11 annas in the rupee and not 12 annas as the assignment had stated it to be.

This last objection, putting aside the others, was in itself a fatal one to the fulfilment of the purchase by Baboo Raj Chunder Mookerjee of this estate; he therefore discontinued the negotiations and declined to purchase it. After these negotiations were broken, Mr. Hedger wrote to Mr. R. Swinhoo on behalf of his client, Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, to return to him the title deeds of his client's house in Esplanade Row, which had been entrusted to him by Mr. Hedger for inspection, on his promise to return them whenever Mr. Hedger may require them. Mr. Swinhoo then replied, that if Mr. Hedger could succeed by obtaining an order nisi from the Supreme Court to compel him to deliver up the papers he would do so and not otherwise; for he considered the agreement for the sale of the house and the sale of his client's talook to be in force and binding on the contracting parties, and he therefore would keep the papers in his custody on behalf of his client Sheikh Assoollah, nor could he consider himself justified, if he were to return them to Mr. Hedger on his simple application to him for them, under the existing circumstances of the case. He further intimated that it was his client's intention to file a bill in Equity against Baboo Rajchunder Mookerjee and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, to compel the former to purchase the Talook of Dooar Bashnee for 1,30,000 rupees, and the latter to sell the house in Esplanade Row for 40,000 rupees to him.

The learned Counsel then argued, that this was a case in which there was no necessity for his client to bring an action against Mr. R. Swinhoo for Trover. In this case he submitted, that if this court had the power they ought to interfere summarily and grant an order nisi for Mr. R. Swinhoo, (who has unwarrantably taken upon himself the office of a judge between his client and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, and illegally detained the title deeds of his house, which were entrusted to him (on his written promise to deliver them up to Mr. Hedger whenever they may require them,) to show cause why he detains these papers, and that the court can and has the power to interfere, he submitted, will be proved to the court's satisfaction by a reference to the 3d vol. of Term cases, page 275, in the case of Hughes versus Muir, in which the application was granted, and which case is analogous to this case in Strange's Trails vol. 1st p. — in the case of Strong vs. Home, which likewise was similar to this case and had the application granted. With regard to the case of Mutton vs. Datter in the same volume, the Advocate-General contended that it differed materially from the present case. Then the Attorney received the documents from his client and therefore refused to deliver them up to any other persons. In this case counsel argued there was an anomaly at law, for Mr. R. Swinhoe was illegally detaining Bahoo Dwarakanath's title deeds on which he fancies his client has a lien, whilst Asood Ollah, his client, is in possession of the Talook, and not only enjoying the rents of it, but likewise annually depreciating the value of the Talook and thus injuring the mortgager's interest in it by letting the Government rent accumulate. With regard to Mr. Swinhoe's assertion that he would deliver up to Mr. Hedger the title deeds of Bahoo Dwarakanath's house in Esplanade Row, whenever Mr. Hedger would deliver up to Mr. R. Swinhoe the title deeds of Sheikh Asood Ollah's Talook of Doar Bishnee, he begged to remark that the parties stood in a very different position; for Mr. Hedger's client by having advanced a large sum, had a lien on the title deeds of the Talook whereas there was no such lien on the title deeds of his client's house, and therefore their detention could not be justified.

The Chief Justice, after having ascertained, on enquiry from the attorney of Sheikh Asood Ollah, that no bill had been as yet filed by his client in the equity side of this court, to compel the parties to abide by their several contracts, informed the Advocate-General, that he differed very widely from him with regard to Mr. R. Swinhoe's client not having a lien on the title deeds of Bahoo Dwarakanath Tagore's house in Esplanade Row, especially after the Bahoo had signed an assignment of it to Mr. R. Swinhoe's client. With regard to the cases of Hughes vs. Muir and Strong vs. Home, they differed in some respects from this case, and in the former Lord Kenyon, the judge who granted the application for a rule of nisi, gave a very qualified order. Had there been no contract for sale of the house, and had not Bahoo Dwarakanath Tagore signed an assignment of it, the court might then have taken the matter of a summary interference into their consideration; but as it is, the court would be deciding on a simple application backed by an affidavit the proceedings of an Equity case, and were Mr. Swinhoe's client thereafter to institute a suit in Equity against him for the possession of these title deeds, the order of the court would not be a sufficient reply on behalf of R. Swinhoe to that suit. Had the case been one where an attorney received the papers in trust from his client, and refused to deliver them up to him, the court might have granted a rule nisi on a simple application for the attorney to show cause; but in the present instance they must refuse the application.

Sir J. P. Grant, after remarking that he coincided with the Chief Justice in his view of the case, added that the court is bound to see, and will see, that the attorneys, attached to it, do not abuse the trust confided in them; that there was a trust confided in Mr. Swinhoe, when he received these title deeds, there is not the slightest doubt; but it is a question that after Bahoo Dwarakanath had made an agreement of the house to Mr. R. Swinhoe's client, and then afterwards refuse to abide by it, in consequence of Bahoo Rajchander Mookerjee declining to purchase his client's talook, whether it becomes imperative in him to consider that trust reposed in him to be in favor of his client, or Mr. Hedger. Mr. Swinhoe naturally considered it to be in favor of his client, and such is the view this court at present is inclined to take of it; therefore the application of the Advocate-General for a rule nisi for Mr. R. Swinhoe to show cause why he detains these papers cannot be granted. The application was then refused.

After this motion was made for the examination of a witness to prove the will of one of the Bysacks, which was granted, and the witness examined by Mr. Pearson. After the motions had been disposed of, the Chief Justice enquired, and ascertained from Mr. Dickens, that there was one case set down for hearing on the equity board. The court then adjourned till 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow. — Hurkaru, January 10.

JANUARY 11, 1838.

Before the Chief Justice.

Mr. L. Clarke made a motion on behalf of a person named Bhowanymchurn Roy. He said that this person had been in the March Sessions of 1828 tried and convicted for forgery, and sentenced to be transported to the S. E. Coast of Malabar for seven years. The period of his sentence having expired, he returned to Calcutta in December last. It appears that at the time he was arrested by the Police Office there were Bank of Bengal notes to the amount of Sa. Rs. 3,256 found on his person and 60 gold mohurs in specie. The notes the counsel has been informed are deposited in the custody of this court and the gold-mohurs in that of the Police Office. Counsel therefore prayed the court that the court would pass an order for the restitution of these notes and gold-mohurs to the said Bhowanymchurn Roy.

The Judge replied the court would institute an enquiry regarding the Bank notes said to be deposited in this court, and having ascertained the result of the investigation pass an order regarding them; but with regard to the gold-mohurs said to be lodged in the Police Office, the Judge informed the counsel that this court would pass no order about them as yet, and counsel had better advise his client to make an application regarding them to the Police Magistrates, who no doubt would pass an order on his petition.

The learned Counsel observed, that all that his client required was an order regarding the notes deposited in the Supreme court—he believed there would be no difficulty regarding the coins at the Police Office.

Mr. Edward Black took the usual oaths to-day, and was admitted as an attorney on the rolls of this court.

Mr. C. R. Princep made an application to prove a will by the evidence of one of the attesting witness to it, who he said was in court. Counsel observed that in this case the deceased, after he had executed the will and shortly previous to his demise, had in the presence of the attesting witnesses to it erased the names of two of the legatees mentioned in it, and had thereby, to its prejudice, left the whole estate under the sole control of the executor to the will.

The Judge observed, that under the circumstances mentioned by the counsel in behalf of this application, he would decline to examine only one witness, and desired counsel to have both the attesting witnesses in court by Monday next, when they could be examined and the will proved.

The case of T. E. M. Torton vs. R. D. Mangies, was likewise fixed for hearing on Monday next.

After this a few more motions of no great importance were made and the court adjourned till 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow. — Hurkaru, January 12.

JANUARY 16, 1838.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant, Knt.)

In the matter of Hingun Khan and others v. Beebe Ameerun and others.

Mr. Leith made a motion in this case on behalf of Mr. Thompson, an Attorney of this court, to be exempted from acting further as complainant's attorney in this suit on an affidavit of Mr. Thomson.

The affidavit stated, that deponent had been engaged by Hingun Khan, who had represented himself to be the agent of Roshier Beebe and others. Deponent could not obtain any advance of costs from Hingun Khan, who is already indebted to deponent for office fees in this suit, is further more in jail, for costs due to Beebe Ameerun. Hingun Khan has subsequent to his confinement, applied to this court to be permitted to carry on his cause forma pauperis, and this application has been granted, and deponent, is willing to resign the sole management of it to pauper's attorney; and counsel moved that a rule nisi be granted in the case to serve a notice by substitution on Hingun Khan in jail, to inform him of this deponent's discontinuance as attorney in this case.

The Judge replied, that the applicant must first endeavour to serve the rule nisi on the principal clients in this case, and if he does not know where they reside, he must endeavour to find out the name of the village, and if it is a large village the street in which these parties reside; and after he has done his utmost to serve the order on them and failed, then he may apply for a substitution of service.

The counsel replied, that the parties resided in the village of Belloor, in the Zillah of Khanpore, a great distance from here, and that they were strangers to Mr. Thompson. Further, it would cost Mr. Thompson 3 or 400 rupees to serve this order, even if he succeeded in serving it, which he doubted, and Mr. Thompson was already a sufferer in this case, and could not afford to suffer a further loss.

The judge replied, that he had given his order and he would not alter it.

On a motion made by the Advocate-General, Mr. William Adam, was sworn in to-day as Officiating commissioner of the Court of Requests, in the room of C. W. Bietzcke, Esq., chief commissioner of that court, now absent on leave.

The case of Turton v. Mangles has been fixed for hearing on Thursday next the 18th instant.

After this a few other unimportant motions were made and disposed of, and the court adjourned till 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow morning.—Hurkaru, Jan. 17.

JANUARY 18 1838.

John Moore v. Thomas Driver.

Mr. Advocate General moved for a rule to show cause why the trial of this case should not be postponed, on the ground of the absence of Mr. Crawford, whose evidence is material for the defence. The plaint was filed on the 13th instant, and Mr. Crawford sailed for the Isle of France nine days ago, from whence he is expected to return in a short time.—Rule nisi.

E. K. Hume v. Stephens and others.

Mr. Clarke moved on notice on the part of the complainant, that the receiver appointed in this cause be at liberty to cancel the lease of the real estate of Mary

Hume, deceased, made by him to the complainant; and that it be referred to the Master to enquire and report whether the complainant ought to pay to the receiver any, and if any, what rent for the estate since the 12th of October 1836, and in what manner such rent should be apportioned between the complainant and defendants. The learned counsel moved on the affidavit of Mr. Butcher, the constituted attorney of Mr. Hume, which set forth, that on the 28th of June 1836, the receiver granted a lease of the real estate to the complainant for the term of three years from the 12th of April the same year, he the complainant agreeing to pay for the first year rupees 21,000 and for the second and third year rupees 27,000. Previous to the appointment by the court of a receiver, Mr. Thomas Bird and Mr. J. C. Sarkies had been appointed by Mr. Cracroft, who was then judge of Darca, guardians of the persons and the estates of the children of Stephens, one of the defendants. This appointment by Mr. Cracroft was confirmed by the court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, but afterwards Mr. Sarkies was discharged from the guardianship. In September 1835, an injunction was granted by this court, enjoining the defendants and Mr. Bird to desist from collecting and getting in the rents. Nevertheless they did not desist, and the receiver appointed by the court, has never been able to put the complainant into possession. Under these circumstances, Mr. Hume is desirous that the lease granted to him by the receiver appointed by the court should be cancelled, and that it be referred to the Master in the terms of the order.

Mr. Leith, on behalf of the infant defendants, showed cause against the application, on the grounds that Mr. Hume as lessee under a formal lease, had no right to intervene in this suit to seek a reference to the Master, to reduce the amount which he had covenanted to pay by his lease, and try on the equity side of the court, his legal liabilities and the receiver's legal rights against him. The learned counsel stated, that his clients were interested in opposing any deduction of the amount of the rent agreed to be paid by Mr. Hume, as they were entitled to a moiety of it, and could not consent to a reference to the Master which would entail considerable expense. He asked that the motion should be discharged with costs against Mr. Hume.

The court discharged the motion with costs, reserving liberty to Mr. Hume to renew his application on the same grounds if the receiver's consent can be obtained.

T. E. M. Turton, v. F. and C. E. Mangles.

This was an argument on the plea filed by the defendants.

Mr. Prinsep, with whom was Mr. Sandes, opening the plea, which set forth, that by an order made by the Recorder in the Mayor's court of the city of London, the 10th March 1836, in a cause then pending, wherein defendants were the plaintiffs and complainant defendant, it was ordered that all matters in difference be referred to arbitration. It was also agreed that plaintiffs and defendants should not bring any bill in equity against each other. On the 18th April 1836, the arbitrators published their award, adjudging that all proceedings in the cause should cease, and that the complainant should pay to the defendants £362-6-5, in full of all demands. The complainant before filing his bill in this court, did pay by his agents, the amount thus awarded. The subject of the suit was included in the reference, and was taken into consideration by the arbitrators. The learned counsel stated, that the action at law arose out of advances made in London by defendants to Captain Gillet of the ship Ernand, of which vessel Mr. Turton was the owner. It was agreed to refer disputes to arbitration, and the award was made in London as pleaded. In the mean time before this adjustment was known, complainant filed his bill in the Supreme Court, Calcutta. The award has been paid.

The Advocate General and Mr. Clarke were heard in support of the bill.

But the court allowed the plea, and dismissed the bill, each party to pay his own costs.—Englishman, Jan. 19.

JANUARY 19, 1838.

Lucknawain Moorkeejee v. Paul E. Roussac.

In this case the plaintiff is or was banian to the firm of Roussac, Brothers in this town; defendant is not a member of that firm, but was employed to manage their firm during the absence of the partner in France. During this period he borrowed from the plaintiff sums of money, or government paper, on which sums of money were raised, of rupees 4,900, rupees 6,000, rupees 800, and on the 8th of March last, rupees 3,000, in all about rupees 10,000. For this he gave his promissory notes and undertaking to return the paper. The last note had been endorsed over to a third party, who on its non-payment, brought his action against the plaintiff and recovered damages and costs, both of which were paid. The present action was brought to recover the sums of money abovementioned, and also the costs of the action against the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke for the defendant, admitted that all the sums were proved, save one for 800 rupees, of which the only evidence was that of a stair, who placed the amount to defendant's debit, by direction of the plaintiff, in a Bengal account book. The defendant, however, pleaded a set off, to have deducted and allowed to him from the plaintiff's claims, a sum of rupees 3,500.

It appeared in evidence, that one of the bills, drawn by defendant, accepted by plaintiff, had been discounted by the Bank of Bengal. On this note an action was brought by the Bank, and in its progress the parties assembled at the chambers of Mr. Sandes, the Bank's solicitor where, it was sworn a check on the Union Bank was given by defendant to plaintiff, payable to Moischunder Bonnojee, the plaintiff's nephew. Moischunder was instructed by his uncle to take the money to Mr. Sandes. The trial turned entirely on this, whether the amount of the check was paid by the defendant, on account of the firm of Roussac, Brothers, or on his own account.

The court allowed the set off, and gave a verdict for the amount, claimed, less rupees 3,500.

For the plaintiff, the Advocate General and Mr. Sandes. For the defendant, Mr. Clarke and Mr. Barwell.

H. Kyte, v. Hullothur Day and others.

Mr. Gochrane, on the part of complainant, moved for an injunction to restrain two of the above defendants from receiving, and the sheriff from plying over a sum of rupees 1348, in the hand of the latter levy, seized in an action, in which one of the defendants on the plea side of the court was plaintiff, and Henry Kyte the defendant, under a writ of ieri facias. The grounds on which the learned counsel moved were certificate of bill filled, an affidavit of plaintiff that Hullothur Day was the father of the two other defendants, and had been retained by Kyte in superintending a coach building concern of his, on an understanding that he was to receive five per cent. on all business brought by him to the yard.—That Hullothur had received from Kyte three notes of hand, one of rupees 400, one for rupees 500, and another for rupees 1,100;—that on these he promised to obtain money and pay the full amount into complainant's hand;—that in place of so doing he had received bills to the amount of rupees 3,000, of which it was believed he had recovered the full amount, but had not paid over any part of the same, or of any part of the notes granted to him and his sons. That Hullothur had left the service of the complainant and had, in the names of his three sons, filed three distinct actions on the notes given as before stated. In the one, complainant being arrested, paid the money. In another, Hullothur had obtained an ex parte judgment, and under an execution seized the sum sought to be detained in court by the injunction;—that on the third action he had also obtained an ex parte judgment and was proceeding to execution. It was stated to obtain a rule nisi (the late Rule of Court requiring that all motions for injunction should be on notice) that the money in the hands of the Sheriff was payable to day, and that it was the belief of complainant if it passed into defendant's hands, they would abscond out of the jurisdiction, and the complainant would lose his money, and be without remedy, neither of the defendants having property and the defendant Hullothur having taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act.

The Court said the motion must be on notice, which would restrain parties from taking the money until motion heard. That the affidavit did not state the irreparable injury contemplated by the rule which formed the exception, and that they could not grant the application but on notice which might be given at once.—Englishman, January 20.

JANUARY 23, 1838.

John Moore v. Thomas Driver.

This was an order nisi, obtained on a former day, calling on the plaintiff to shew cause why this trial should not be postponed.

Mr. Advocate General now moved the rule absolute.

Mr. Prinsep shewed cause, insisting that the defendant's grounds were not sufficient; that they were vague and unsatisfactory, merely stating the absence of Mr. Crawford, who, it is alleged, has paid the money for which the action is brought, but nothing was stated to shew, the alleged payment could not be proved by the partners of the firm of Gilmore and Co.

But the court thought the grounds sufficient, and made the rule absolute.

John Aitchinson v. J. A. Currie.

This was a demurrer to the plea of the defendant. The action was brought to recover the amount of wages due to the plaintiff for his services as an engineer in the Howrah Dock-yard. The defendant pleaded the general issue, and the non-performance of a contract, plaintiff having quitted defendant's service without giving notice. To this plea defendant demurred.

The court allowed the demurrer on the first, second, and third counts, and directed an issue to prove the contract.—Englishman, January 23.

JANUARY 25, 1838.

E. K. Hume v. Stephens and others.

In this cause, the order was made, referring to the Master, to enquire and report whether or not the lease ought to be cancelled, on payment of any, and if any, what sum of money, by the complainant to the receiver, and how much money, when received, ought to be apportioned.—Englishman, January 25.

A case of very considerable interest, both in a general and commercial point of view, was at the time we left, in progress of argument in the Supreme court, the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Grant presiding. It was the appeal of the Assignees of Fergusson and Co. against the decision of Mr. Justice Malkin in the Insolvent court, in the matter of the Assignees of David Clark against the Estate of Fergusson and Co., who claimed to be allowed to prove for about six lakhs of rupees. Sir B. Malkin decided in favor of the claim to prove against the estate, and hence the appeal by the Assignees of Fergusson and Co.

Mr. David Clark retired from the firm in Calcutta in April 1827, and on his going out of the house, upon a balance of accounts being struck between the parties, an agreement by way of dissolution of partnership (we believe) was entered into by the other parties with Mr. D. Clark, and he was credited with a certain sum which he left in the house, and which after certain fluctuations, now amounts, according to the Assignees of Mr D Clark, to about six lacs.

The decision of Mr Justice Malkin is appealed on the ground that there was abundant evidence before him to shew, that at the time the partners entered into the agreement with Mr D Clark the house was insolvent; and that there was in point of fact, nothing in the books to the credit of Mr D Clarke. The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith for the Assignees admit, that had the transaction been bona fide, and had the house been solvent at the time of the agreement in question being entered into, the Assignees of Mr D Clark might come forward. And then point, as we understand it, is, to shew that the case in question does not come under that class of decisions, in which payments, or credits in the books to retired partners, consequent upon agreements in going out, have been upheld. The insolvency of the house at the time, and the knowledge of the partners of the fact, vitiating the whole proceeding; and consequently no claim to be set up against the interests of the bona fide creditors—such is, we believe, the nature of the question raised in this appeal case. The counsel for the Assignees of David Clark, Messrs L. Clarke and W.P. Grant (who was a member of the house at home, Fawcett, Bonham and Co) contending that the case of Mr D Clark, comes within the rule of law laid down in the cases of payments by the house to retired partners, under and by virtue of deed of agreement. We shall endeavour to place before our readers the judgment of the court in this interesting case.—Calcutta Courier, January 26.

APPEAL TO THE SUPREME COURT FROM A DECISION OF THE INSOLVENT COURT.

In the matter of the petition of Samuel George and Edward Edwards, Assignees of David Clarke, and the estate of Fergusson and Co.

Appellant—Elliot Macnaghten, Esq., Assignee.

Counsel.—The Advocate General and J. F. Leith Esq.

Attorney.—Mr. Waddington,

For the Respondents.—Counsel.—Longueville Clarke, Esq., and William Patrick Grant, Esq.

Attornies.—Messrs. Wight, Boyle and Thomas.

In the case Mr. David Clarke was the head of the firm of Messrs. Fergusson and Co.; he left India in 1826, and retired from the firm on the 30th of April, 1827, joining the London firm of Fairlie, Bonham and Co. On his retirement, the remaining partners admitted that necesse rupees 8,31,630 stood to his credit, and was due by the house to him, but in consequence of the correctness of this balance having by subsequent investigation been doubted, he voluntarily gave up two lakhs of rupees. But even the amount due to him after this relinquishment frequently varied, from consignments made by him, and remittances made to him, and on the failure of Fergusson and Co., the balance to his credit was 6,54,029. Mr. Clarke afterwards became a bankrupt in England, and the respondents were appointed his assignees. They claimed a dividend from the estate of Fergusson and Co. on the sum standing to Mr. Clarke's credit. This was resisted by Mr. Macnaghten, the Assignee of Fergusson and Co., and a petition was accordingly presented to the Insolvent Court, where it was decided by Mr. Justice Malkin, that the estate of Mr. Clarke was entitled to the dividend and against this decision, the present appeal was presented.

The Advocate General in support of the appeal, contended that the decision below was erroneous as against law and facts. He doubted the authority of Ex parte Peak, the case on which the Council for the English Assignees and Mr. Justice Malkin had principally relied. Sir Thomas Pomeroy, by whom that case was decided, had been undoubtedly an eminent Lawyer; but the greater part of his life was spent in courts of Common Law, and he had never been distinguished for his knowledge of Equity. He cited the case of Anderson versus Malby, 21 Vessey junior, 244, which he stated to be completely in point, and read passages from the Lord Chancellor's judgment to shew the distinction between legal and moral hand. He was far from imputing moral hand or any turpitude whatever to Mr. David Clarke, or any of his partners; but he said, that there was that which in law was a fraud, and which vitiated as between the partners and the creditors, the arrangement which they had made among themselves. Mr. Clarke had retired in April, 1827, and there was a statement of the affairs of the house proposed in March 1823, by Mr. John Smith, the then senior partner, and signed and approved by all the partners, saying, that instead of having any balance to give to Mr. Clarke, that on the day he retired there was an actual debt of 6,63,612 Rs. He then read the notes annexed by the different partners to this statement, and Mr. David Clarke's letter to his brother, admitting his indebtedness, and commented on the notes and letter, to shew that they completely brought the case under the doctrine of Anderson versus Malby and also other cases which he cited. Ex parte Burnaby Cook, 3 L. 239. Ex parte Ruffin 6 Ves. 119. Ex parte Williams 11 Ves. 3. and Ex parte Feil.

Mr. Leith followed on the same side, and in relation to what had been urged by the Advocate General, contended that it was most natural that Mr. Clarke should have been very desirous of retiring from the House and would do much to effect his object; and one who knew the uncertainties, anxieties, and miseries, attending a Calcutta mercantile life for the last fifteen years, would readily comprehend this feeling. He likewise argued that the deed of dissolution of partnership was void for want of consideration as Mr. David Clarke gave no consideration to the remaining partners for the eight lakhs of rupees he was to receive, and for taking on themselves his liabilities.

Mr. Longueville Clarke for the English Assignees, stated, that he should conduct this case in a very different manner from what he would do, or would deem proper, were he appearing for Mr. Clarke or any of the partners. It was an immense sum of money which was at stake, and the question was to which of two bodies of creditors both of whom had been sufferers, the law would give it; he should therefore press every point of law and fact which could avail his clients, a course which the would not adopt, were the question between Mr. David Clarke and his creditors,

In the first instance he denied the right of his friends to be heard, because he said they must shew their right to oppose before their opposition could be entertained. The Assignee only represented the creditors and if they had no right to oppose, he could have none. First he contended that no creditor could oppose, unless he had been a creditor of Mr. David Clarke's, that is a creditor of the house previous to April 1827, and had continued to be so ever since. Secondly, that right would be lost, had such creditor known of Mr. Clarke's retirement and consented to transfer his credit to the remaining partners. This had been decided in the Court of Exchequer so recently as April last, in Captain Hart versus Henry Alexander, 2d Meeson and Welsby 448.

The Chief Justice. The Assignees hold the fund, you demand a payment from them; how can you say they have no right to be heard against making that payment?

Mr. Clarke said the right to be heard, was consequent on the right to resist payment, the right to resist was based on the right to invalidate the arrangement made between Clarke and his partners, but no subsequent creditor, nor any creditor who had transferred his credit, was affected by or could question that arrangement; therefore, it followed that those who were not in a situation to question the arrangement, could have no right to be heard. Now, before the creditors could question the arrangement, they ought to shew that they had a right to do so; but there was not one tittle of evidence in the court below to shew, that the Assignee represented any creditor of Mr. David Clarke's or that any of the present creditors of Fergusson and Co., were creditors in April 1827. The onus probandi was with them.

The Chief Justice. — This is arguing on a circle. The Assignee has a right to resist payment, but it by no means follows that he has a right to enforce it. We think he has a right to be heard, but on being heard, if he does not prove he has right to oppose another question may arise, but nevertheless we must hear him.

Mr. Clarke stated he would not argue against the opinion of the court much less would he do so when the weight of his objection would avail him equally on the consideration of the whole question. He would therefore, go to the merits. He would at once acknowledge the correctness of the law of all the cases cited by the Advocate-General, and he would shew from them, that his friend was in error in questioning the correctness of Peak's case. Nothing in fact could be more clear, more simple, than the law applicable to this case. It was all to be found in Peak's case, and the other cases instead of differing from, supported this decision. This was the law. If the arrangement for Mr. Clarke's retirement was made with the intention of defrauding the creditors, then it was bad; but if not, then it was good. Knowledge of Insolvency by the partners at the time of making the arrangement did not of itself constitute proof of fraud, but it might be coupled with other circumstances by evidence of it. In Peak's case, knowledge of Insolvency without other circumstances was held not to be sufficient; in the other cases, there were strong circumstances coupled with this knowledge, and therefore fraud was held to be proved. There was, therefore, no contradiction in any of the cases, they all established the leading principle, whether or not the evidence amounted to a proof of fraud. Mr. Pearson had disclaimed attributing moral fraud to the partners of Fergusson and Co., but he argued that they had been guilty of legal fraud; he denied broadly that any such distinction could exist in this case; he would take the high ground, and tell the court and his friend, that in his opinion, if the partners gave this sum to Mr. David Clarke, knowing there was a deficiency in the house, that all of them had been guilty of the grossest moral fraud. He would draw no nice distinctions; if the House were not solvent, and completely solvent, then he said that a gross moral fraud had been committed. Having thus disposed of the law, he would now come to the facts. These depend upon oral and written testimony. The oral evidence consisted of the depositions of Mr. T. H. Gardener, a clerk in the house, Mr. McKellegan, the book keeper, and Mr. Fergusson, one of the partners. [Here Mr. Clarke read the three depositions commenting on them as he proceeded.]

The only evidence referred to by his friend, was that of Mr. Gardener's, whose subordinate employment in the firm, prevented his having any intimate knowledge of their affairs; but putting that aside, for he was determined to take the high ground, he challenged his friend to point out one single line which could even imply, that in Mr. Gardener's suspicion the firm was insolvent in 1827. There was nothing approximating to such a notion; how then could this evidence help them? But what said Mr. McKellegan. He had been the book-keeper from 1823, and in reality knew from his peculiar duties the pecuniary affairs of the house better than the partners themselves. He swore that the house was perfectly solvent, that he would have trusted it to any extent, and that Mr. Adam Freer Smith, now an eminent merchant in Calcutta, but then a clerk in the house, and thoroughly cognizant of its affairs, applied for admission as a partner on Mr. David Clarke's retirement. Mr. McKellegan was an independent man, he had never been in the house, and was now the first member of one of the richest houses here. Mr. Fergusson, of whom he would say without fear of contradiction, that no one was more esteemed as a merchant or a man, swore to the same facts. How then could the case? Had these gentlemen perjured themselves? If not, the decision of the court below could not be altered. He liked to put things on the broad and, therefore, what he conceived the real ground. He would therefore ask, could the court with the sworn evidence before them, which they had supposed that they could understand the affairs of Fergusson and Co., in April 1827, better than Mr. McKellegan the book-keeper, and Mr. Fergusson, the partner? If not, they must then be guided by their evidence, or disbelieve it—or in other words, for he liked plain language, they must either believe them and support the decision of the court below, or if they reversed it, pronounce them to be guilty of deliberate perjury. There was no drawing the law; there were no nice distinctions in this part of the case, any more than there were in the other. He now came to the documentary evidence. The court would recollect that when a balance of 18,35,108 was found to be due to the partners in April 1827, they were ranked among creditors of the house. The balance due to them was always treated as any other debt of the house. Now take the first account made up in March 1828, that shews 6,63,612 deficit, that is what is due to creditors beyond the assets; but among what is due to creditors, is what was due to the partners, namely 12,85,101; so that had all the creditors, but the partners, been paid, the surplus would have been 6,21,492. Now the partners might do what they pleased with their own, and Mr. David Clarke having given up two lakhs, the portion assigned to him was only 10,144 beyond the assets of the house. So much for the first calculation; but the second shewed a very different state of affairs; then the deficit, instead of being 6,63,612 in five months after, showed a deficit of 401, thus leaving a surplus, after paying all debts, of 12,84,703.

Look then at this documentary evidence; it was ludicrous to say that it was any proof of the house being insolvent. In point of fact, the proof was the other way.

But the case did not rest here. Hitherto he had confined himself to the appellant's evidence, let him now turn to his clients'. There it will be found that these two accounts were made up not between the partners and creditors, but between the partners themselves. There

It will be found, that there was a fund called the suspense account, which was a fund expressly reserved to meet bad debts, or an evil hour. To the creditors this fund belonged, but the partners never touched it; therefore in making up accounts between themselves, they never referred to it. This fund in 1827 amounted to 62 lacks of rupees, and was not included in the calculations produced by the appellants, as between the partners and the creditors it would be included; and, therefore, the 60 lakhs ought to be added to the calculations produced, which made it ludicrous to talk of the insolvency of the house at that period. Mr. Clarke then went into an examination of the Gloucester Mills accounts, shewing the vicissitudes of mercantile speculations. His property had cost him 10 lakhs, in a few years after it was sold for 2 lakhs by the assignees, and then sold for 6 lakhs by the purchasers from them. Again in regard to debts, there was equal uncertainty, many were esteemed good, which turned out bad, and many were considered hopeless which were paid in full. Mr. Smout and Mr. Andrew Wight were among the latter; he found them noted bad, and afterwards principal and interest paid in full.

Mr. W. P. Grant supported Mr. Clarke. He went at great length into the accounts explaining the nature of the suspense account, and attacking the Advocate General for a want of proficiency in mercantile accounts. He also went at great length into other points not touched on by Mr. Clarke, especially the law relating to the liability of partners as between them and their creditors.

The Advocate-General replied, that it was useless to contend, that the two accounts signed by the partners. In March and October, 1826, did not shew a complete state of insolvency. There the word deficit was used, and over that his friends could not get. There was nothing of suspense account mentioned in them; but if there true nature and character wanted to be defined, look at the desponding remarks attached to them by the partners themselves, and look at Mr. David Clarke's letter to his brother. Would any, but men conscious of, and weighed down by insolvency, have written to that effect. His friend Mr. Grant was wrong in stating that he had ever admitted that he was ignorant of accounts; but this he had done he had admitted and did admit that he was ignorant of that system which is magnificently termed Italian book-keeping a system which to him appeared to have been invented by merchants, with its entry and double entry, for the sole purpose of keeping others in the dark and mystifying themselves.

The court, after short deliberation, stated they would deliver their judgment at an early day.—Hark. Jan. 29.

(Before Sirs E. Ryan, and Sir J. P. Grant.)

RAJAH BURKODACOUNT ROY, versus JUGGOURCHUNDER MOOKERJEE AND OTHERS.

This cause came on for hearing on supplemental bill and answer. The former was filed in June 1836, and prayed an account against the real and personal estate of Doorgachurn Mookerjee, deceased and an injunction from wasting or charging the same, and for the appointment of a receiver if necessary. An interlocutory decree ad computandum had been obtained in April 1835, but the final decree was not dated until the 1st of November, 1837, so that the present bill was filed antecedently to the latter, though subsequently to the former decree. The bill was taken pro confesso against all the defendants except the three infants who had put in their answers in February and March 1837.

Mr Clarke and Mr Lieth for complainant, put in evidence to prove a large ancestral estate in the possession of the present defendants, the representatives of Doorgachurn Mookerjee, who were making away with it to avoid the effect of the decree of this court.

Mr Prinsep and Mr Cochrane for the infant defendants. This is a mere experimental bill, wholly novel and unprecedented both in form and principle. The decree upon which the complainants ground their alleged title to relief from this court, was not in existence at the time when the bill was filed. As to the interlocutory decree of April 1835, it only directs an account, and therefore establishes nothing more than a possibility that a claim might at some future period accrue to the defendants. Smith versus Eyles, Aikyn's Rep, is an authority that a mere decree quod computet does not affect the right of dealing with the property, and that a final decree alone can put the parties in the position of creditors.

Mr Clarke in reply urged, that even the interlocutory decree gave the complainant a right against the estate so far as to entitle him to relief from this court, although it did not precisely define the amount of his claim.

The court postponed judgement, and rose at three o'clock.—Hurkaru, January 31.

MADRAS SUPREME COURT.

During the trial of a case of larceny in the Supreme Court on Monday last, a Christian boy of eight years old, was brought up to the clerk of the crown to take an oath, previous to his being sent before the Grand Jury, when the following dialogue took place.

Sir E. Gambier. Has he learned to read and say his prayers? He has learned a little; he says his prayers. To whom are his prayers addressed? God. Does he know God hears and sees all that he says and does? He does not know. Does he know what is meant by taking an oath? No. If he tells lies and falsehoods, does he know it is displeasing to God? No he does not know. Does he know that it is wicked to say what is false? He does know that. Does he know that God will punish those who swear falsely? He does not. Has he been taught where wicked people will go in the next world? He does not know that. Has he heard of Heaven and Hell? No he has not. Of what persuasion is he? A Roman Catholic. What prayers has he learnt? A moral poem in Tamil. Has his father taught him any prayers? The ten commandments to pronounce. Does he know any commandment about bearing false witness? He does not know it. Has he learnt any commandment? He has learnt ten. Which of the ten can he say? No reply. The boy was sent to the Grand Jury with a message that he was not to be examined on oath as he did not comprehend the obligations of it.

We have given the above, not for the sake of pointing out the ignorance of the witness, for although stated to be eight years old he hardly looked five, and was perhaps confounded at being so closely interrogated in open Court; and still less to question the propriety of persons being strictly examined, as to the sacred obligation of an oath; but to suggest whether something like the foregoing enquiry might not be beneficially extended to a very considerable portion of the persons who go into the witness box; and whether any thing is so likely to impress the natives with contempt for the ceremony of swearing as the slovenly manner in which oaths are usually administered. For our own part, we do not believe that a person who would assert a deliberate falsehood would have much hesitation in breaking an oath; but whilst oaths are legally considered necessary, they certainly ought not to be mumbled over in a whisper, as they constantly are in our courts of Justice and in cases of importance, where the liberty and even life of prisoners is at stake, we can imagine that great advantage would be derived by closely questioning the principal witnesses as in the case of the lad on Monday last.

After several years pretty close attendance in the Supreme court, during which period we have had occasion to watch the evidence with some attention, our decided conviction is, that the natives of this country, as a body, have no more hesitation in asserting what is false in the witness box than they have out of it. We believe our opinion coincides, with that of most persons who have had experience in the courts of Justice; and under these circumstances we contend no means should be left untried to check so enormous an evil. The simplest method we can recommend is to impress the witness with the awful responsibility of calling God to bear testimony to a lie, by obliging him distinctly and deliberately to repeat the oath or allegation in the face of the court, and by warning him that, in addition to the moral penalty which he incurs the court will be always ready and willing to inflict the highest punishment which the law allows for the crime of perjury.—Madras Herald, Jan. 17.

INSOLVENT COURT.

JANUARY 6, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Knight.)

IN THE MATTER OF GOVIND CHUNDER KUR AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Leith in opening the proceedings in this case, addressed the judge, and said that he had on a former occasion obtained an order from this court to examine this Insolvent regarding some landed property which it is alleged on behalf of his assignee, and the creditors of the estate, that he possesses within the jurisdiction of the Zillah of 24 Pergunnahs, and which he has omitted to insert in his Schedule filed in this court by him.

The Insolvent was accordingly sworn. He deposed that he has no separate dwelling house, but he and his family, together with his other relations, live in a house situated on 26 beegahs of ground in the village of Rajhpoor, within the jurisdiction of the Zillah of 24-Pergunnahs. This house was the ancestral property of his grandfather, Doorgah Ram Kur, who shortly previous to his demise, bestowed it by a deed of gift for religious purposes, on the goddess Radha Govindo Gee. The image of this diety is kept within the dwelling house, and is on festival days brought out into the Hindoo-temple. Besides the Hindoo temple there is a Mahomedan Masjid likewise on this ground. Doorgah Ram Kur died leaving 4 sons, Ram Chunder Kur, deponent's father Kishen Chunder Kur, who had 6 sons, 4 of whom are alive, Sambhoo Chunder Kur, who had one son yet living, and Mohes Chunder Kur, who has a daughter. The deed of gift was executed by Doorga Ram Kur, 18 mother's previous to his demise, in Bengally. Deponent was then only 10 or 11 years of age. He does not know whether the registry of this land was transferred in the collector's books to the name of the diety after the deed of gift. He cannot say in whose name these lands are now entered in the collector's office, it might be in the joint names of Sambhoo Chunder Kur and Mohes Chunder Kur; but deponent believes it to be in the name of the idol on which it was bestowed. This land was seized by the collector for arrears of rent, and sold about 4 or 5 months ago, and Baboo Isshur Chunder purchased it for 3,600 rupees. This sale happened before deponent was discharged by this court, but he cannot say whether it was before deponent had made his application for an Insolvency. Deponent was at that time, in the jail of Calcutta. This land deponent imagines to be worth 6 or 7,000 rupees and not 30 or 40,000 rupees. After the seizure of these lands by the collector, deponent's relatives petitioned against the sale to the commissioner of Alipor Division, Mr. Pigou, who, as the land was devoted to religious purposes and as such are not liable to assessment, cancelled the collector's sale. Deponent has no share in any of these lands. Each of the deponent's uncles and cousins look after their own share, likewise his brother Bindlabur Kur; but the lands devoted to religious purposes is under the general superintendence of them all, but Mohesh Chunder Kur as the senior of the family is the nominal superintendent. Deponent's grandfather, besides the afore-said land, possessed a garden house at Rajhpoor, situated on the banks of the River Ganges, which he at the time he made the deed of gift already mentioned, bestowed on the goddess Gunga Mee, and there is no Government rent assessed on it. The spot of ground to the east of Sree Ram Mootee's garden, likewise belonged to deponent's grandfather, who annexed it in this deed of gift as well as the adjoining beetelnut garden of 2 biggahs. The beetelnuts grown in it are appropriated to the use of the idol and not sold. Deponent is unacquainted with Gopaul and Kishen Mohon, nor does he know any ground at Rajhpoor called Amrah Bagan. Deponent's grandfather had a house adjoining Chundy Churn Sircar's at Rajhpoor; this house is converted to an abode for the pilgrims and songsters who worship at the shrine of the diety. Deponent does not know Bhowany Roy, nor is he aware of any lands his grandfather purchased from him. Seekdar Bagan, at the village of Goopy poor, contains 16 biggahs of land; deponent does not know whether it was acquired by his grandfather, or subsequently bought from the savings of the revenue of the other religious estates; it is devoted to religious purposes. Besides the lands already mentioned, deponent's grandfather left many other estates, many of which he has never seen, and does not even know their names. After the death of his uncle, deponent for a short period collected the rents of his share, and at times of the shares of his relatives at their request. Deponent's share was two annas in the rupee. Deponent does not know what was the annual amount of these collections. Deponent collected the rents for about two years and a half. The accounts of these collections are in the custody of the shareholders at Rajhpoor and their gomastah. Since deponent's confinement, his uncles and cousins have separated and therefore these gomastahs are now dispersed; yet some of them may be forthcoming. Umbikha Jadub and Ranchund Boes, moulurirs, who collected and kept the account of these rents and do so still, are residing in Zillah 24-Pergunnahs in the village of Wirzapoor, and can be found if inquired after. Deponent's grandfather had a lower roomed house at Barreapoor called Peach Sahib's garden: this, together with an indigo factory at Erachee, were mortgaged to Baboo Juggeldernath Mullick by deponent's uncle for 5000 Rs. shortly after the demise of Sambhoo Chunder Kur, in 1242. This mortgage has not as yet been paid, and the property was totally sold for arrears of Government rents. Deponent believes that he has entered it in his Schedule as forming a portion of his ancestral property. The rents of Turf Seeta Koond exceed 200 Rs. annually: it is dedicated to the diety, but Kishen Ram poor, which is included in the Talook of Dangah, is not devoted to religious purposes. Deponent had two annas share in Kisto Rampoor. Pergunnah Dangah was sold, together with the other landed property already mentioned, for arrears of Government rents, and purchased by Ramdhon Bose.

Deponent has inserted it in his Schedule. He knows Muddenpoor and Jugguderampore, but he cannot say how they were acquired. There are some estates acquired by deponent's uncle's and cousins in which he has no Ghose.

After denying all further knowledge of any other land, deponent deposed, that since his release he has not collected the rents of any of these lands, but he has been occasionally consulted respecting them, and he has signed receipts for the rents received on behalf of the deity; but deponent did not receive the money, it was collected by sicars employed for that purpose. This money was all earned to the expense of the deity, and none of it devoted to present purposes. The ornaments and plates belonging to the idol are in the possession of the deponent's uncles at Rajpooor. No part of these have ever been sold by either him or his relatives. The lands are all rent free lands, and the deed of gift is in this court; it was delivered by deponent's uncle to Moolloosooden, a friend of his, to have it translated into English by Mr. Smith, the interpreter of the Supreme court. After it had been translated, Moolloosooden gave it to deponent, who entrusted it to his attorney Mr. N. Hudson. Moolloosooden has no employ at present; he lives and boards with deponent's uncle, and what his profession is deponent does not know. This ended the examination on behalf of the assignee.

The Advocate-General here put a question to this insolvent, but before he could answer it, the Chief Justice asked Mr. Pearson on whose behalf he appeared. Mr. Pearson replied on behalf of the insolvent. The Chief Justice then observed, that as the insolvent was already discharged, there was no necessity for this procedure.

Mr. Leith then begged the court's opinion on the testimony of this insolvent, and wished to have him in attendance again on the next Court day to confront his evidence with the depositions of the persons mentioned by him in it.

The Chief Justice replied that the court must take the insolvent's account of the lands as he gives it, and his testimony appears to be consistent enough; but if the assignee wishes to examine him further, he can do so as often as he pleases, by an application to the court, or have him brought up again to confront his evidence by the testimony of the persons mentioned by him; but if he thinks that there are sufficient grounds to make out his case by the evidence already given by the insolvent, he can then, if he chooses, institute a suit in the Zillah 24 Pergunnahs court for the recovery of these lands, as these are situated in the jurisdiction of that court, and not the Supreme court of Calcutta. He then, at the request of Mr. Leith, ordered the insolvent to be in attendance again on the 27th instant the next court day, unless he received an official notice from the court that his attendance was not required.

After this a few miscellaneous motions were made, and the court, after despatching them, adjourned till Saturday the 27th instant.—Hark. Jan. 8.

ALLIPORE COMMISSIONERS COURT.

DEC. 27, 1837.

(Before W. Cracroft, Esq., Judge.)

Kassinath, plaintiff, Luckynarain and others defendants, Rookuee Bewan, widow of Kassinath, the brother of Kassinath, claimant.

Suit of one-seventh Share of 3,57,000 rupees.

The plaintiff stated, that his father and the father of the defendants were brothers. Their grandfather had eight sons, seven of whom died leaving children. The plaintiff's father and the defendant's father joined their property together and accumulated it by their earnings. Plaintiff's father died, leaving plaintiff claimant, and the father of the defendants brought up the plaintiff and his brother, the husband of the claimant, and he continued to give him and his brother their share of the profits of their mutual estates until the year 1235, B. S., when the plaintiff, who had been a dewan in the collectorate of Jessore, was quitted on some charges brought against him; and his brother, the husband of the claimant, being dead, the plaintiff, after the death of their uncle, stopped the share of their profits of the estate. The plaintiff complained for his share of the family estates and monies which he states was 51,000 rupees, and the claimant, on behalf of her husband, claims for an equal amount against the defendants on similar grounds.

The defendants denied that either the plaintiff or the claimant's father ever had contributed to realize any portion of the property to which they had laid claim, or that either they or their father were ever in possession of any portion of it, it being the sole earning of their father and grandfather.

The Judge remarked to the plaintiffs' attorneys, that the property in his client's schedule was very vaguely described, and asked him whether they could either by documentary or oral evidence prove that their client ever was in possession of any portion of the lands, &c. to which they now lay claim, within the last 12 years from the date of their suit being instituted, and the same question was put to the claimant's vakeel. The vakeel of the plaintiff replied, that his client had received certain sums of money up to the Bengal year 1235, as his portion of the assets of these lands, &c., but no annual accounts had ever been rendered to his client of the profits and loss of their mutual estates by the defendants, and the claimant's pleader made the same reply, except that he added, that his client had all along been in possession of the land on which the ancestral household was situated.

The judge remarked, that this might tend to prove the possession of that one house, and after observing that the better mode of proceeding would have been for the claimant to have instituted a separate suit for the share of the property she now claims, postponed the case for the plaintiff and the claimant to prove the most essential point of their claim, which had been denied by the defendants in the outset of their reply, viz., that neither the plaintiff nor the claimant, nor their father or father-in-law, had ever been in possession of the property posterior to the year 1228, B. S.—Hark. Jan. 8.

THE PETITION AGAINST MR. CRACROFT.

We were present in Court on Thursday and Friday last, and read a petition addressed to the Deputy Governor, complaining that Mr. Cracroft, the Civil and Sessions Judge of the 24 Pergunnahs, attended Court between 1 and 2 o'clock daily, and that he appropriates his time to the hearing of only criminal cases. The petitioners also prayed that the Deputy Governor should desire Mr. Cracroft to fix two days in the week for the hearing of civil cases. The petition bore the signatures of Pearee Loll Mundul, and Kistoonund Biswas, both respectable zemindars, the names of two or three vakeels of the Court, and about eight other Bengallee names.

Pearee Loll Mundul and Kistoonund Biswas, as well as the vakeels, denied all knowledge of the petition and declared it in open Court to be a forgery; the remaining names are unknown in the Court, as the whole of the file, have been searched and no suits whether in Court, or by appeals from the native subordinate courts bearing those names have been found.

The fact is, that about a month ago Mr. Cracroft did attend Court for about two or three days at late hours, but he was then in a very sick state, and could have very well staid away altogether, as he was often obliged to quit the Court in a state of fever and debility. We suppose this petition must have originated with some of the subordinate native courts, with whom Mr. Cracroft is rather unpopular, not for neglect of duty, but for having set aside native influence altogether, and for having placed the Omrah on their proper footing, that of clerks, &c. instead of allowing them the dangerous interfering influence they were formerly allowed to practise.

We must confess that we have lately experienced great good in the Judge allowing access to him at all hours of business, as from 11 to 5 and 6 p.m. we have transacted both civil and criminal business, without being put off on account of any particular engagement of the Court. Were all the native pleaders to speak the truth, they would have no alternative but to confess that business has been facilitated ten-fold, nay twenty fold, within the last 10 or 12 months.

As this forged petition has made a little noise as it were, we would not be surprised at several others being sent in within the next month, or two. Mr. Cracroft (we believe it is pretty well known) has made a reference to the Superior Court against the Principal Sudder Ameer of Allipore, and a case is now pleading before him against the moonsiff of Manicktullah, in which that officer has shewn how he can vent his spleen on those who care not for him. The Court was engaged five days in the hearing of Moonshoe Ameer versus Mr. Duncan McPherson, a full report of which we shall soon give, as we consider the case one of great importance to Sounderdun grantees.—Harkuru, January 9.

ALLIPORE, THURSDAY, THE 28TH DECEMBER, 1837, AND WEDNESDAY 3RD TO FRIDAY 5TH JANUARY, 1838.

(Before W. Cracroft, Esq., Judge.)

MOONSHOE MAHOMMED AMER v. MR. DUNCAN MCPHERSON GRANTEES.

The plaintiff appeared by his vakeels, Moonshoes Sarropechunder Ghose, Isaurchunder Moozumdar and Gouruchunder Ghose, and the defendant by Mr. R. Dias.

The Government in 1828, by Clause 1. Section xiii. Regulation 111, of 1828, declared the whole of that extensive forest known as the Sounderbuns, the property of the state, and immediately granted leases to several individuals to clear the jungle and to bring the land under cultivation within a certain term of years, doing which they should hold the lands free. Among those to whom the grants were made, Mr. Duncan McPherson obtained a lease for 2,500 bungalows.

The plaintiff sued for damages, to the extent of 5,800 rupees, and interest, being an alleged loss sustained by him, from an act of the defendant, by which a portion of the plaintiff's land was rendered uncultivable, the defendant having obstructed a water course, the plaintiff used from the time of the Nuddeeah Raja, from whom the plaintiff purchased his estate.

To prove his claim to damages, the plaintiff produced several witnesses, by the evidence of four of whom, Fukeerchaund Geen, Chedam Mundul, Dhullo Gaze and Harroo Mundul, the plaintiff proved that, from the time of the Nuddeeah Rajah at the usual season, he used to cut a certain bund and let his water off through a creek, on the defendant's lands, and to prove his loss, produced certain books of accounts unstitched, alleged to have been kept by one Sunnawoolah, a gomastah in his employ, but this witness said, that he did not make any of the entries, but merely put his signature to them as correct, and that he did not know the names of the individuals by whom those entries were made.

The Judge informed the pleaders of this moonshee, that he could not admit the accounts in evidence, as they ought to have been proved by the evidence of those that made the entries, and that the attention of them by the gomastah was not evidence in support of them.

The pleaders urged that it was not customary to prove semindary accounts by the evidence of ryots.

The Judge said, that he had great experience in the reception of accounts in courts, and that he could not see any reason for receiving accounts, the entries in which are not proved by the parties that made them, but by a gomastah, on whom the court would place no reliance.

Mr. Dias urged, that the manner in which the accounts were filed was objectionable, as they were not books, but merely pages of paper threaded together in the manner of nutshes, which left them open to the mercy of the people about the court; and that there could have been no difficulty in changing any of the pages during the proceedings in the case; besides which Mr. Dias urged that in those accounts the valuation was made by the zemindar at his own valuation, and that that valuation was far from the reputed unproductiveness of jungle borne lands.

The Judge said, he would not receive the accounts in evidence, and had them sealed up, and put his own seal to them, to prevent any persons from having access to them for any improper purpose.

The defendant originally entertained Moonsee Shun-cautoollah and Ramconni Bose, the former the Government pleader of this court, and the latter a vakeel: those individuals had entirely overlooked the principal points urged, and filed answers and replications of a superfluous unimportant nature, and examined witnesses on points hardly connected with the case, and consequently there was nothing to rebut the right to the intercourse claimed by the plaintiff, which though it fortunately happened that by the evidence of Messrs Broadhead, Patkin, McDougald, and James Patton, grantees, all of whom stated that it would be impossible for the defendant to clear his lands and to continue his cultivations if the creeks were left open, to let the plaintiffs water out; and they also proved that the plaintiff had the means of letting his water out by a creek on his own estate; and that the cultivations alleged to have been injured by the act of the defendant, appeared to have always been in the state in which they now are, and that the stoppage of water course had not injured the plaintiff.

Two native witnesses, named Comal Mundul and Nuchoo Moolah, stated that the former had been a ryot of the Moonsee, and the latter of neighbouring zemindar, but had since gone to the defendant's estate, that the Moonsee had been in the habit of cutting the bunds to let his water out, but that he used formerly to let it out by his own creek; which had in latter years become shallow, but that if he would cut it, there would be no difficulty in letting out the water. These witnesses also proved that three parts of the lands alleged to have been injured are in a state of cultivation, and that only the sunken part of it, immediately on the defendant's boundary, was in an uncultivated state.

The Judge here remarked to Mr. Dias, that he would be obliged to receive the evidence of the last two witnesses with great caution, as they had formerly been ryots of the plaintiff, and went afterwards over to the defendant's estate where they were employed as laborers, and that it was natural they would speak in favor of those for whom they were interested.

Mr. Dias submitted that the witnesses were not in the employ of his client, nor were they tenants at the time they gave their evidence, but that they lived by selling the produce of their own labor; they were allowed a certain spot of land for a certain period rent free, which they gradually cleared and cultivated. That they sold the wood and Mr. Dias believed they now had a little paddy on their land. Mr. Dias added, that if the court deprived his client of the evidence of the last two witnesses, he would be at a loss to make any defence, as the case had been altogether neglected and mis-managed by the vakeels that were employed, and Mr. Dias particularly called the court's attention to a most extraordinary proceeding on the part of the plaintiff. That at the time witnesses were produced by Mr. McPherson, Mr. C. R. Martin was Judge, that the defendant produced four native witnesses, and while they were in court, mookhtar of the plaintiff assisted by two peons, arrested two of the witnesses and took them away to the plaintiff's house at Sealdah, where they were detained for the night, and where the witnesses were on the following morning found, Mr. McPherson fearing the plaintiff had exercised his influence with them, and rather than run risk, erased the evidence of those two men he was thereby deprived of evidence by an unjustifiable act of the agent of the plaintiff.

The Judge said, that he could not take cognizance of what had transpired during the time of his predecessor, but that if such an attempt was made at his court, he would make severe examples of the parties concerned.

The Judge informed Mr. Dias, that the plaintiff had proved his right to open the watercourse to let out his water, but that he had failed to prove the damage claimed by him as the accounts could not be admitted in evidence; but that, however, it appeared by one of the witnesses on the point, that he paid Rs 10 for twenty-five beegas of land, according to which the Judge would assess the damage.

Mr. Dias as here called the Judge's attention to a report from Mr. Commissioner Shakespeare, No. 44, dated the 12th February 1837, filed with the papers in this case by Mr. McPherson on the 14th July of the same year, by which it would appear that Mr. Shakespeare made it evident, that unless Mr. McPherson raised the bund and kept it in good repair, he would have found it impossible to bring the land to its present state. Mr. Shakespeare also stated, that he had inspected the spot alleged to have been rendered unproductive, and that the damage claimed by the plaintiff was by far in excess of the injury done.

The plaintiff's pleaders urged, that the defendant had omitted in either of his answers filed, either to deny the injury or to compute it at a sum less than was claimed by their client, they therefore submitted that the full amount of damages awarded.

Mr. Dias submitted that the court would not award more than minimal damages in the case, as there were no means to ascertain the exact amount of injury sustained, if any, and that one of the plaintiff's witnesses had asserted that with exception to two or three beegas of the land on Moola Bheel, the grant was in a state of cultivation, whereas the plaintiff laid damages in Moola, calculating at 200 beegas, 197 beegas of which ought to be set aside. Mr. Dias then maintained that his client had acted in every respect under the construction put by the Revenue Officers on Clause 1, Section xiii Regulation III. 1828, under which certain lands were declared the property of the state, and which lands under cases were granted to individuals, who were empowered to hold them, and use them as actual proprietors of the soil. Mr. Dias here produced and authenticated copy of instructions issued by Mr. Commissioner Pigou, No. 298, to the commissioner of the Sunderbans, the fourth paragraph of which is as follows:

4th—To the fisheries comprised within the limits of any grantee's pottah no zemindar can allege any right, for if he has no right in the land, he can certainly have none in the water, and so long as the state does not think proper to claim such julkur, no party, other than the grantee in possession, can urge a right thereto.

Mr. Dias continued, that the creek by which the plaintiff wished to let his water out was clearly within the boundaries of the grantee's estate, which had been leased by Government to his client, he therefore presumed his client had an undisputed right to close, or to open it, or to use it, to his own advantage; for said Mr. Dias, if that creek is opened, there is evidence to shew that the grantee will injure his own cultivation.

The Judge replied, that all that Messrs Shakespeare and Pigou had urged was very good as fiscal law, but that he did not see that the grantee in this case had a right to exercise a power, which the grantee did not possess, and could not therefore bestow (keeping in mind that the plaintiff had proved his right to the watercourse for a period as great as the memory of man.) If the Government (said the Judge) wished to give the right to the grantee, they ought within seven years, to have stopped the use of the creek, and as there is no evidence to shew that it was done, he had no alternative than to admit the plaintiff's right.

Mr. Dias then observed that he would, if allowed by the court, take an objection to the plaintiff's right on a new ground. The plaintiff appear as the proprietor of a certain land named Hora Bheel, which was granted by Government to Mr. McPherson, and when the commissioner laid down the limits of the defendant's grant, he included the whole of Hora Bheel in it, and, said Mr. Dias, if the objection will be admitted, it will at once decide the question of right, as the plaintiff wishes to pass the route from Hora Bheel through the creek on the defendant's estate. Mr. Dias then said that he require the plaintiff to prove his right to Hora Bheel.

The Judge remarked, that such an objection ought to have been taken at the onset by those who had framed the defendant's answers, and that he would not now admit it. He had sufficient evidence that the plaintiff had a write to the watercourse, by the stoppage of which by the defendant, the plaintiff had sustained loss and ordered that it should be opened when necessary to let the water out. That it also appeared that the plaintiff had a passage on his own estate by which, with a little expense, he could let out the water, but which it was optional with him to do, but the Judge considering that point and several others urged on the defence, and the plaintiff having failed to prove his accounts, it was awarded that the defendant should pay damages at 400 rupees per annum for three years, with costs on that amount only free of interest.

This case will immediately be forwarded to the Governor General by the grantee as one of great hardship, and which may be the means of ruining him eventually.
—Huckery, January 13.

BHAUGULPORE COURT.

JANUARY 1, 1838.

(Before T. Wyatt, Esq.)

A RAJAH CONVICTED OF MURDER.

The Magistrate having, as it is usual with him, examined this case with great deliberation, made it over to this court. We were present in the inferior court during the examination, but omit the details to avoid a repetition. We gave the facts as brought to light before this court by the depositions of witnesses,—premising that the family of the Raja placed before the bar, for the commission of a horrid murder, was at one time very respectable in these parts, but owing to the strange mishap of the Rajas, for two or three generations, being of unsound mind, the zemindaree has been much neglected, and consequently reduced the late Rajas to a rather undesirable state of affairs. The last twig of the ancient stock, now arraigned for the wilful murder of Kokeen, feelban, seems to have a touch of the hereditary malady; for it does not appear in evidence, that there was any cause of irritation given by the poor fellow who has been sacrificed by the Raja, of Koonwur, as he is termed.

The place where the Rajas reside is called Muhwur, in purgunnah Muechaharee, lying in a south-east direction from the station of Bhaugulpore, but subject to the jurisdiction of that district. The Session Judge was aided in the investigation of this case, by the Mahomedan law officer, but no assessors, as in the case of manslaughter, we reported a few days ago,—a circumstance we could not help being surprised at, as this case is evidently a more serious one, and therefore require much more urgently the aid of a jury, than the other.

This horrid case of murder was brought on by the prosecution of Onaree, the brother of the deceased who represents that his brother was in the employ of the Raja or Koonwur Chundun Singh as feelban or elephant driver, and accompanied him to Burhut; that when he arrived there the Koonwur, very unaccountably, commenced beating his servants without any cause assigned (in evidence) for such violent proceedings; that the irritability of his temper rose to such a pitch that he caused his brother to be forced into a room, tied, and cut to pieces. The deponent was also ordered to be caught and carried into the place of execution, but fled for his life without waiting to treat the Koonwur to spare that of his brother. The real cause of all these proceedings appeared to be this. A person by the name of Data Ram, Mahajan, who was in the interest of some persons not mentioned (probably neighbouring litigant zemindars, who had fallen out of some boundary dispute) had been either on a visit to the Raja, or had gone to Burhut on business. While there, the Raja seems to have received some serious provocation from Data Ram, whereupon he sought to do him some serious harm, pursuing him with a drawn sword. Data Ram takes to his heels, and escapes the danger to which he was exposed by the exacerbation of the Raja's temper to a degree, never known by any of the witnesses to have been seen before at any time; but a storm on which he had come to Burhut, and which Data Ram abandoned to its fate in his precipitate flight fell in the way of Koonwur Chundun Singh, and on its carcass he wreaked the vengeance he meditated against its rider. The animal was cut to pieces by him, with his own hands. Having thus shed the blood of the beast, he seems to have grown "desperately wicked," and sought to spend his rage on any object that might fall in his way. Unfortunately for Kokeen, he happened to catch the eye of his master at this awful crisis of this wild, unruly mania, and rued the folly of throwing himself in the way of an infuriated madman. How the catastrophe occurred, the deponent does not particularize; but Jhubbun Dhanuk, is more precise in mentioning the details of the affair. By the Koonwur's order, Manjea, Pulta, Gopal, and Beesoo Goryt, dragged the feelban into a shed or kutcherie standing within an inclosure, through which every thing that was transpiring within, could be seen and was seen by the witnesses. Two of the individuals, (placed at the bar as accessaries to the fact,) by the Raja's direction, tied the two legs of Kokeen to a post, while the other two held him fast by his hands against it on the opposite side. The Raja then drew his sword, and at one stroke, almost severed his head from his body. He then almost cut him in two by a stroke which he levelled at his waist; and finally gave him a wound in one of his legs. Beesoo Goryt, by the Raja's order, caused the mutilated remains of the wretched elephant driver (or mohut) to be conveyed into a neighbouring jungle, but not before they had arrived at an offensive state of decomposition, by having been thrown into one of the close huts within the inclosure before mentioned. In the jungle, the body was put under the carcass of the slaughtered horse of Dataram, in which situation, ere long, the bones of man and beast were indiscriminately commingled. One of the witnesses swore that, at the time of the Tadarook or Soorathul, he discovered the bones of his mohut, by marks of the cuts inflicted by the sword of the Koonwur, deeply left on the neck bone, ribs, and thigh bone of the deceased, which first the court thought to be rather strange. But this witness was almost stone deaf and could not, without his interrogator's bawling with all his might, comprehend nothing that was spoken to him; but he certainly swore what we have stated.

Having finished the dark deed, the Raja seems to have recovered from the effects of his irritation, and began to contrive means to procure the concealment of the murder he had perpetrated. He prevailed on the people about him and in the place (all his ryots) to give it out that Kokeen had died of cholera; and in which attempt to hush up the foul affair, the Suzawul of police of that part of the country, plainly under the control or in the interests of the Raja, takes a conspicuous part.

The Raja, a young man of about 25 years of age, pleads not guilty, and mentions the story of Kokeen's having died by cholera. The four accessaries try to excuse themselves as well as they can; but give a very clear and particular detail of the progress and consummation of the catastrophe. One of the witnesses, Seebun Dhanuk, to our astonishment, spoke the Hindoostanee remarkably well, though he was an inhabitant of the foot of the hills, a site usually occupied by Sountars, Bhoonas and other semi-savage races that have branched out from the great trunk of highlanders occupying the huge range that extends from Behar to the Deccan. But this witness also prevaricated a good deal, and the Court found it necessary to warn him of the serious consequences of being found guilty of perjury. Some of the witnesses being Puharees, were sworn on a little salt put on a knife and washed down into their mouths; while others were sworn on a piece of tiger's skin put in their hands. It was mentioned by some of the witnesses, that the young Raja had exhibited unequivocal signs of distraction, whether as a hereditary malady, or produced by constant addiction to excessive drinking. The words used to express this distraction were burhut (want of self-possession) and buhuka, (straying;), states of mind which might, it is most probable, have been occasioned by the inordinate use of ardent liquors which Beesoo Dhanuk called brandy from the sewus of it, but the liquor was evidently in the highland is of this part of India, that which whisky is in Scotland, namely, muhooka shurah, a liquor distilled from the flower of the bussia latifolia, and sold to an enormous extent all over Hindoostan, to the great misery of the people, but with great advantage to the resources of the state. This is not the first nor the nine hundredth and ninety ninth instance of murder, resulting from the practice of drinking licenced ardent spirits. The description of liquor represented to have been used was remarkably strong or double distilled, called by the witness chounnee (or four annas a bottle.) This in Bengal would be called dertushuk or vulgarly doasta, sufficient unquestionably to drive the most sober head into utter rabidness. The Raj's sanity being called into question, the civil surgeon, who had observed him attentively since his imprisonment on trial, was called upon to depose to the real state of his intellects, which he did, stating that he had carefully examined his looks, manners, and replies to questions put to him, and saw no indication of insanity. The law officer produced his fatwah purporting that the prisoners Maujeen, Pulta Gopal, and Breesoo Goryt, were proved to have aided Koonwar Chundun Singh in killing Kokeen, and were deserving of discretionary punishment by tazeer; and that Koonwar Chundun Singh was found guilty of the wilful murder of Kokeen, and was worthy of the extreme penalty of the law; (aqoobut-i-shudeed), and may therefore be punished capitally. The court concided in the verdict of the law officer and ordered the roodedad to be forwarded to the Nizamut Adawlut for final orders.—Hurkaru, January 22.

CIRCULAR ORDERS.

NO. 3155. ORDINARY COMMUNICATIONS TO THE SUDDER FROM NATIVE JUDGES HOW TO BE FORWARDED.

Considerable inconvenience having been experienced in consequence of the native judges addressing the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, direct, on various subjects connected with their official situations by the public dawk, the Court have instructed the Judges to direct the native subordinate judges to submit through the zillah Judges any communication they may desire to lay before the Sudder Court.

It is to be understood, that the above rule is intended to afford the zillah Judges an opportunity of recording, whenever they may deem it necessary, their own sentiments on the references which may be made by the native judges.

The zillah Judges have also been desired to explain to the native Judges, that the above rule is not to be considered as applicable to appeals preferred by them against any orders passed by the zillah Judges. Such appeals will continue to be preferred in the usual manner on stamp paper and through a regular vakeel or agent.

NO. 2897 DECREES OF THE CHANDERNAGORE JUDGE TO BE EXECUTED BY THE ZILLAH COURTS

On a reference from the Civil Court of the 24 Pergunnahs, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut have ordered that the decrees of the Judge of Chandernagore Court shall be executed through the officers of the zillah Court provided there be no apparent irregularity in the proceeding connected therewith.

NO. 3764 CORRESPONDENCE OF NATIVE JUDGES WITH NATIVES OF RANK.

The Sudder Dewanny Adawlut have circulated the following instructions to the several zillah Judges on the subject of the mode of address to be adopted by native judges when corresponding on matters of business with natives of rank.

1st. Principal Sudder Ameens will correspond direct by Roobocaries with all covenanted officers of Government, except the Secretaries to Government, the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the Board of Revenue or any military officers in regard to whom the present practice is to be continued.

2d. Sudder Ameens and Mooniffs, will forward all communications to covenanted officers as heretofore, through the European Judges except communications to such officers as are parties to suits before them, in which case, they will be addressed direct to the officer whom they may concern.

3d. The native Judges of every grade will correspond direct with natives of rank.

It being desirable that an uniform mode of conducting public correspondence should be introduced into all the Mofussil Courts, the attention of the zillah Judges has been requested to the practical application of the rule above laid down for the regulation of the correspondence of Principal Sudder Ameens with covenanted officers, the result of which the Judges have been requested to communicate on the expiration of six months, together with their opinion as to the expediency or otherwise of extending the same privilege to Sudder Ameens and Mooniffs.

In communicating the above instructions to the native Judges, the zillah Judges have been particularly desired to impress upon them the propriety of observing a proper respect towards all natives of rank, with whom it may be necessary to correspond on official matters, and addressing them in the form and style employed on like occasion by the European judge of the district. In like manner natives of rank will be required to pay proper respect to the native Judges, adopting as a general rule the form of address laid down in the Courts Circular of the 14th December, 1832, No. 74.—Hurk. Jan. 19.

CIRCULAR ORDERS.

NO. 3081.—UNSTAMPED POLICIES OF INSURANCE.

An instance having been brought to the notice of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of unstamped policies of Insurance being received as legal evidence, although the court have no reason to believe that such an irregularity prevails as extant, they consider it proper to direct the attention of the Zillah Judges to the entries Nos. 42 and 43 in Schedule A, Regulation X of 1829, with a view to prevent any instruments of the kind being admitted as evidence, except when they bear the prescribed stamp.

NO. 3127.—TRANSFER OF CASES FOR TRIAL BY NATIVE SUBORDINATE JUDGES.

We have to remind our readers, that from the 1st of January, 1837, Act XXIV of 1837, took effect, and under its provisions the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut have issued the following instructions to the Zillah Judges.

The court have directed the immediate transfer from the files of the Judges, to those of the Principal Sudder Ameens and Mooniffs, of all suits in which the Government or its officers may be a party, and in which the amount of value of the property sued for, may not exceed 5,000 rupees. The Zillah Judges are of course competent to retain under Sections VII, and Regulation XXV 1831, any of the above suits on their own files, provided they see sufficient grounds for so doing; but in reporting to the court (which they have been requested to do within fifteen days) the execution of the present orders, the Judges have also been requested to submit a list of all the suits, that they have so retained, and to explain their reasons briefly for doing so.

The Zillah Judges have in like manner been directed to transfer to the file of the Principal Sudder Ameen all suits preferred under Clause I., Section XXX, Regulation II, 1819, retaining however on their own file, any suits of the above nature, that they (the Judges), think ought to be tried by the Judge, submitting a list of the same, and their reasons for having retained the cases. All suits thus referred to a Principal Sudder Ameen have been directed to be sent as heretofore to the collector of the district for investigation and report; the collector on closing his proceedings will transmit them under Clause VI, Section XXX, Regulation II, 1819, to the Principal Sudder Ameen for decision.

The Act now passed authorizes the Judges, subject of course to the general control of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, to refer any suit above the value of 5,000 rupees to the Principal Ameen for trial. The Superior court have requested the Zillah Judges to exercise this power with a sound discretion, and their attention has been called to the following illustrations:

1st.—No suit above 5000 rupees shall be referred to a Principal Sudder Ameen, in which the documentary evidence may be in the English language, or may involve points of English law, unless such Principal Sudder Ameen is acquainted with the English language.

2d.—On referring any suit to Principal Sudder Ameen above the amount of 5,000 rupees, the Judge will report to the Superior court that he has done so agreeably to a form marked A*.

3d. The Principal Sudder Ameen will forward to the Judge in duplicate a Persian statement as per form marked B, of all suits above the amount of 5000 rupees, that may be pending in his file at the end of the month, and another as per form marked B of all suits above the amount of 5000 rupees, that may be pending in his file at the end of the month and another as per form marked

* The forms that have been circulated will not bear abstraction, but we shall furnish them for the Calcutta monthly Journal.—Reporter.

C of all suits above the amount of 5,000 rupees, that may have been decided or disposed of by him during the month. One of each of the above statements will be forwarded by the Judge to the court with the monthly returns, the other will be retained for record in the Judge's office.

4th.—All summary appeals from the decisions of Principal Sudder Ameen will be made direct by the parties to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

5th.—All petitions for regular appeals will be preferred direct to the Principal Sudder Ameen, who will make up the original record in the manner prescribed by Regulation VI of 1793, Section XI. The package containing the record of the case is to be addressed to the Registrar of the Sudder Court, and it is in the first instance to be sent under the official signature and seal of the Principal Sudder Ameen to the Zillah or city Judge, who having had the parcel properly secured from wet agreeably to the circular orders No. 67 and 70, dated the 19th September, 1823, and the 21st May, 1824, will at once forward it with the usual certificate to the Registrar of the Sudder court. The copy of the record which is required to be made by the regulation last quoted, is to be deposited for safe custody in the office of the Judge.

6th.—All applications for revisions of judgment in suits above 5000 rupees will likewise be made to the Principal Sudder Ameen, and when recommended to be admitted, that officer shall proceed agreeably to Section XIX, Regulation V of 1831, and the application shall be forwarded by the Judge to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

7th.—Precepts from the Sudder court will be either sent direct to the Principal Sudder Ameen, or to the Zillah Judge as may be deemed most expedient; but all returns, unless specially directed otherwise, will be submitted by the Principal Sudder Ameen to the Judge for the purpose of being transmitted by him with the usual certificate to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

NO 3328.—UNSTAMPED SECURITY BONDS DECLARED INADMISSIBLE AS EVIDENCE AGAINST SURETIES.

It having been brought to the notice of the Sudder court, that a practice obtains in some districts of admitting as legal evidence security bonds written on the same sheet of paper with the Principal Deed, where the stamp used was only of the value required for the latter instrument; as the superior court consider the practice as clearly erroneous, they have declared them wholly inadmissible as evidence against sureties. The Zillah Judges have been requested to make this circular known to be lower courts.—Hark. Jan. 30.

SUDDER BOARD OF REVENUE.

CIRCULARS, — SECTIONS VI. AND IX. REGULATION XIX. OF 1793.

No. 77.—The Officiating Secretary to the Sudder Board has informed the Revenue Commissioners, that the Board having had occasion to observe that the provisions of Sections VI. and IX. Regulation XIX. of 1793, have been overlooked by settlement officers and Commissioners, have directed him to draw their attention to the subject, and to point out to them, that vested as they are with the powers of the late Board of Revenue, they are competent to dispose of cases of the nature therein provided for without reference to the Sudder Board.

That the Commissioners will readily perceive, on a careful perusal of the Sections above noticed, that, the Government settlement officers will have to deal with such cases, only when the Revenue of the lands may be payable to the state. On such occasions a separate settlement statement will not be requisite, but the jumma which may be assessed on the lands to be held as a dependent talook, will be included in the gross assets forming the basis of settlement of the estate to which they (the lands) belong, whenever that settlement may be concluded and submitted for the sanction of Government.

The Commissioners have also been requested to issue appropriate instructions to all the settlement officers in their respective divisions for their future guidance.

DUTIES OF REVENUE COMMISSIONERS, AND IMPORTANT AS TO SETTLEMENTS AND SPECIAL APPEALS.

No. 78.—Mr Secretary Mangles, on the 10th of Oct. last, transmitted for the information and guidance of the Board a copy of correspondence, and requested the Board to take the necessary measures for carrying the views of the Supreme Government into effect. This communication also directed that the Commissioners should be required to furnish to the Board a quarterly return of settlements, including farms, as now sanctioned by the Board confirmed by them, one transcript of which ought to be sent by the Board to the Revenue Accountant, and another to Government with any remarks that they desire to offer.

From an extract of a letter from Mr. Secretary McNaughten, dated the 29th April last, it appears he was directed to observe that it appears highly desirable that means should be resorted to for lightening the labors of the officers in the Revenue Department. Mr. McNaughten went on to observe, that at present it would seem that there is a needless waste of supervision in that department, the same work being in fact performed three times over, first by the Collector, then by the Commissioner, and lastly by the Sudder Board; that His Lordship, however, would not delay that letter by entering into details which will best be arranged by the Right Hon'ble the Governor. Mr. McNaughten was, however, desired to suggest that the Collector's report confirmed by the Commissioner, might in some instances be admitted to be final, but if this should be found to be objectionable, His Lordship in Council requested that early attention may be given to the practicability of shortening and simplifying the settlement reports, and thought that for this purpose it might probably be well to refer to the forms in use in the Western provinces, and to the practice adopted in regard to them.

By a letter from Mr. Secretary Mangles of the 13th June last, to Mr. Secretary McNaughten, the former was directed by the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal to request the latter to submit to the Supreme Government, an explanation of the existing rules, for the revision and report of detailed settlements, and of His Lordship's views in regard to the points noticed in the passage of Mr. McNaughten's communication above abstracted.

The form in which settlements conducted under Regulations VII of 1822, IX of 1825, and IX of 1833, are reported by the assessing officers in the Lower Provinces, is simpler (says Mr. Mangles) and more concise than that in use within the jurisdiction of the Sudder Board of Revenue at Allahabad, that is to say (observes Mr. Mangles) the statement prescribed by the Calcutta Board, orders of the 12th November, 1833, of which a few specimens were submitted, and which was drawn up after a careful examination of the returns devised by the Western Board, admits of the record of all the necessary facts with regard to a single mouzah, in a more compendious shape, than the latter, whilst it does not appear to omit anything of which it is essential that the superintending authorities and eventually the Government should be informed.

But the form in question (says Mr. Mangles) is confessedly not suited to present a comprehensive view of the Agricultural resources of a large and continuous tract of country, which was the object for which the Sudder Board at Allahabad had to provide; nor with the single exception of Cuttack, is there any such tract, open to assessment, under jurisdiction of the Lower Board; but on the other hand, the officers engaged in assessing resumpt or lapses, or purchased mahals in permanently settled districts, have in some important respects, a more arduous task than those employed in the general settlements of the western provinces, because they have no data whatever, but those of their own acquisition, to proceed upon, and are therefore necessarily compelled to institute much more minute and careful enquiries, in order to ascertain the proper basis of settlement, in the real amount of rental received by the malgoosar, than those who have the records of former settlements, a knowledge of the ease or difficulty with which the revenue has been collected during the past seasons, good and bad, and the testimony of a very superior class of native officers, (the tehsildars) possessed of great local knowledge to direct them.

Under the circumstances above described, it being understood that the Revenue Authorities in the western provinces rely far more, (in determining the proper amount of jumma to be paid by a mehal or pergunnah) upon the evidence above adverted to, than upon present local enquiries, and that with such evidence to guide them, they form rather general averages for considerable tracts of country than scrupulously assess particular villages, and can do this with safety; it is evident, that the settlement of a single mouza in a permanently settled district, which has either never been upon the public rent roll, or if a purchase by Government, was engaged for at the period of the decennial settlement, without any investigation of assets, must necessarily require far more labor and attention, to preclude fraud, or even to ensure satisfactory certainty, in regard to a proceeding of so much importance to the well being of large classes of the people, than a similar operation within the jurisdiction of the Western Board.

These facts (says Mr. Mangles) which probably satisfy the Supreme Government, that the forms and modes of procedure in use in the Western Provinces, would not be generally applicable to the districts of the permanently settled provinces, when only detached Mehals, (though in some instances very numerous) are to be assessed. Mr. Mangles goes on to state, that as regards Cuttack, His Lordship has long been anxious to reduce the bulk, and simplify the nature of the settlement returns, to which most desirable end, however, the peculiarities of the under tenures obtaining in that Province are seriously opposed. With a view, however, to its attainment to the utmost feasible extent, the Governor has recently obtained from the Hon'ble the Lieutenant Governor of the North Western Provinces, a specimen set of all the returns and reports furnished to the Board at Allahabad, by every class of their subordinate officers employed in the formation, or revision of detailed settlement, and by the Board again to Government, and these it is His Lordship's intention to forward to the Board in Calcutta, in order that, in communication with Mr. Commissioner Ricketts, they may devise the simplest practicable scheme for recording and reporting the new assessment of Cuttack.

With reference to the extraordinary manner in which the lands in Chittagong are intermixed, and the fact that patches only here and there are now being brought under settlement, His Lordship does not desire to interfere with the arrangements which the very able and experienced revenue officers of that district deem most expedient.

With reference to the remark expressed in the 21 paragraph of this circular, "that there is a needless work of supervision in the Revenue department," Mr. Mangles says, that His Lordship would submit, that of late settlements have not been revised by the Commissioners with exception of a small number which they were directed to retain, in order to test the work of each assigning officer, but have been handed direct by the Board, who undertook the duty, in order to relieve the commissioners, and to obviate delay. This plan which was originated by that zealous and indefatigable officer Mr. C. W. Smith, could scarcely, as experience has proved, have succeeded, if he had been permitted to remain at his post to carry it into effect; but in the actual course of events, it has, as the Supreme Government are aware, decidedly failed. It was in fact (says Mr. Mangles), only expedient to shift labor from one overburthened class of officers to an individual, not less burthened, but whose energy was very great, who voluntarily proposed to undertake the arduous duty, and who had certainly far more and better subordinate assistance than the commissioners, measures have been taken to enable the Board to dispose of all arrears; and, if, as His Lordship understands, it is the intention of the Supreme Government to relieve the Commissioners of revenue altogether from judicial functions, they ought to be well able to superintend all settlement business, and to revise the returns of the assessing officers, although business of that nature will be extremely heavy during the next four or five years.

These returns, under existing rules (Mr. Mangles observed), and be handed up to Government only when the parties entering into engagements or entitled to that immunity in perpetuity, when such a party is recusant, and a temporary settlement is, consequently, concluded with another, to his exclusion, or when the term of a temporary settlement or farm exceeds twenty, or if a ryotwar settlement, ten years—all other settlements the Sudder Board are competent to confirm, submitting to His Lordship an annual schedule of all leases granted by them. When the proceedings of the assessing officers are well examined and tested by the commissioner, the labor imposed on the Board, whether they forward the papers to Government, or themselves dispose of them under the rules above described, will be comparatively light and they have been specially authorized to report all settlements requiring His Lordship's sanction, but not presenting any novel features, or involving any important principle, not already discussed and settled, in the briefest possible abstract shape.

Upon the information now submitted, the Governor (says Mr. Mangles) will gladly receive the instructions of the Supreme Council, if they think that any of the checks described could be dispensed with, or any part of the business, forming, arising, or confirming settlement be abbreviated. He apprehends, that the Hon'ble the Court of Directors would not be willing that the power of sanctioning settlements in perpetuity should be delegated to any authority subordinate to his own. The Governor-General in Council is doubtless well aware, how often and how strongly the injunctions of the Hon'ble Court against granting permanent tenures to persons not absolutely entitled by the law to that immunity have been repeated, and it frequently occurs that settlements are reported to him by the Board for confirmation in perpetuity, which the strictness of these orders compels him, on an examination of the claims of the Malgozars, to limit to a term of years. Twenty years (says Mr. Mangles,) is probably long enough for any lease not of a Junglepooree nature, and the latter are, of course, special arrangements. By recent orders, leases granted to the exclusion of recusant maliks have been restricted to years; those perhaps the Board might be allowed to sanction, and the license as to ryotwar settlements might safely be extended to twenty years. No other measures of relief occur to His Lordship.

By a communication from Mr. Secretary McNaghten, addressed to Mr. Secretary Mangles, dated the 9th October last, the former was desired to state, that the Governor-General in Council is not prepared to suggest any abbreviation in the forms now used in relating settlements; but His Lordship in Council is of opinion, that, generally, the proceedings of the assessing officer (although not the Collector of the district) should go direct, to the commissioner, that the commissioner should be vested with the powers of confirmation now belonging to the Sudder Board, subject to a special appeal to that Board on the part of any person deeming himself aggrieved, or to a special reference on sufficient cause shewn at the instance of the settling officer, and should be empowered to mention leases for terms not exceeding ten years, granted to the exclusion of recusant maliks.

It was proposed in Mr. Mangles' letter, that the above power should be conferred on the Sudder Board; but His Lordship in Council is of opinion that it might safely be exercised by the Commissioners, and that the duties of the Board should be chiefly confined to those of general superintendence and control, including of course the significance of appeals from the proceedings of the Commissioners involving complaints of gross irregularity, or security of assessment.

The power (says Mr. McNaghten) of sanctioning settlements in perpetuity, or for long terms of years, on the report of the Sudder Board, should remain with the Government as heretofore.

His Lordship in Council concurs with the Right Hon'ble the Governor in thinking that the license, as to sanctioning ryotwar settlements, may safely be extended to twenty years, and that this power also, should subject, as before, to a special appeal, be confided to the Commissioners.

The Board, in conformity with orders above given, have directed all the Revenue Commissioners to confirm the following settlements, and to promulgate in manner likely to give general information the license given to appeal to the Sudder Board.

1st. Ryotwar settlements for a period not exceeding twenty years.

2d. Temporary settlements, or forms of mehal of which the maliks or persons entitled to a settlement in perpetuity, are recusant and therefore excluded, for a period not exceeding ten years.

3d. All ordinary settlements for a period not exceeding twenty years.

4th. All temporary settlements preparatory to a permanent one.

Settlements confirmed under the above orders being all subject to a special appeal to the Board on the part of any person deeming himself aggrieved, and to a special reference on sufficient cause shewn at the instance of the settling officer.

We call the particular attention of the Reformer to the above circular order and strongly recommend that the Circular Durpan, the Gyananneshun, and all the other native papers should immediately publish translations of it, to enable the zemindars and tenantry to understand the meaning and extent of the orders contained in it.

NO. 79.—SHERISHTA DARS HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR ERRORS IN THE ADVERTISEMENTS OF SALES.

To prevent the frequent occurrence of errors in the advertisements of sales, Mr. Officiating Secretary Dunbar, under the instructions of the Board, has requested the revenue commissioners to issue instructions to their subordinates to hold the Sherishtadars of their respective offices responsible for the advertisements of sales being correct, and for the balance, for the realization of which an estate is advertised, being due one month before the advertisement is published.

NO. 80.—TENDER OF COMPROMISE UPON THE PART OF GOVERNMENT TO LAKHIRAJDARS.

Mr. Officiating Secretary F. J. Halliday, on the 7th November last, with the view of giving effect to the wishes of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, was directed by the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor of Bengal to request that the Board will call upon the several special collectors for an immediate report, whether a tender of compromise, upon the part of Government, on equitable terms, would be generally or largely acceptable to the Lakhirajdars, and if so, what terms should in their judgment be offered.

The Board were also requested to submit their return to this requisition with the least practicable delay.

The Board have furnished the Commissioners of the divisions noted below with copies of the above communication, and have requested them to call on the Special Deputy Collectors for the reports required.

* This circular is not general, but only promulgated to the Commissioners of Bauleah, Bhangulpore, Chittagong, Cuttack, Dacca or Jessore, Moorshedabad and Patna.—Report.

No. 81*.—RETURN OF THE SALES OF ESTATES.

Mr. Officiating Secretary Dunbar, under the directions of the Board, has requested all the revenue Commissioners to call on the collectors within their Divisions to submit returns of all the sales of Estates which have taken place within their respective divisions during the years 1835, and 1836, and of the number of these sales which have been confined or otherwise finally disposed of within those two years respectively.—Hurkaru, January 6, 1838.

Consultation, Friday, the 9th January, 1838.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. M. A. BIGNELL.

Mr. Officiating Secretary Halliday, on the 7th November last, in reply to the address of the Board No. 555 of the 4th instant, informed them, that the Hon. the Deputy Governor of Bengal, was pleased at their recommendation to appoint Mr. M. A. Bignell to be their deputy in their (the Board's) capacity of superintendent and remembrancer of legal affairs, on a salary for the first year of 500 rupees per mensem, and a per centage on the value of the suits which may be conducted by him in person, and decided in favor of Government, agreeably to the scale laid down under the orders of the 21st August 1828, for the Government Agent in the court of the special commissioners. But, (said Mr. Halliday) this scale of remuneration must be left open to revision, in order to its increase or reduction, as it may appear from the result, which the Board were requested to report at the end of that period, to be either too low, or too high.

The Board on the 14th of November forwarded copies of the above orders to the presidency special commissioners, and to Mr. Bignell, informing the former, that Mr. Bignell would conduct all cases on the part of Government, and the latter to attend to receive instructions previous to entering on his duties: but the Special commissioners, Messrs. T. H. Maddock, and E. R. Darwell, on the 16th of that month, addressed the Board enquiring what construction the Board put on the Government orders of the 7th November, as it they considered them to mean that Mr. Bignell should attend personally and conduct the suits in their court in which Government are parties, that the special commissioners would point out to Government the objections, which in their opinion existed to such an arrangement.

In reply to the above, Mr. Officiating Secretary Dunbar, on the 28th November last, informed the commissioners, that the Board considered the orders of Government to imply that Mr. Bignell should plead in person in the special commissioners' courts in all cases in which the importance of the matter at issue, or any other circumstances may seem to demand his personal attendance, and that Mr. Bignell could use his discretion, as to the conduct of all other cases, either in person or by deputy, the responsibility resting wholly with himself.

After receipt of the above, the special commissioners wrote Government, stating their reference to the Board, and urged the following objections to the appointment of an English gentleman to plead in their court on the part of Government,

According to the Board's interpretation, though in principle (observed the special commissioners) the objections that suggest themselves to the constant presence of an English gentleman as the Attorney of Government in their court may be mainly obviated, the principle in which they deem it objectionable remained unaltered. For (said they), Government is aware, that according to Regulation III, of 1828, by which the commissioners' court is constituted, and the rules of practice by which under that Regulation the commissioners are guided, the written pleadings (observed those gentlemen) comprise in almost all cases the entire argument on which judgments is to be based on the decision of the resuming officers. The presence of pleaders on either side, excepting as a matter of form, and for the satisfaction of the court that its judgments are heard visa voce before being embodied on its written decrees, is in most cases of no essential necessity, and to this circumstance may probably be attributed that, as there are no licensed vakils or pleaders attached to their court, and parties opposed to Government are, by rule 26 of the rules of practice, prescribed by the Regulation allowed to appoint any agents, whom they please, to represent them before the special commissioners, their agents are, for the most part, uneducated men, possessing very little knowledge even of the few regulations applicable to resumption suits, whose services we obtained at a trifling cost compared to the value of the stake at issue. But, (said the commissioners) to whatever cause it may be attributed, it is an undoubted fact that the native pleaders in our court are of a very deficient and inferior order of men to those employed in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, or any Judge's court in the mofussil. The Native Government pleader, Hurri-chunder Kur, who has lately been discharged, was the only exception to this description, and his superiority over the other pleaders (observed the commissioners) was sufficiently evident as a security for the interests of Government, without liability to a suspicion that he was allowed to sway the judgements of the court. If (said the commissioners) to such, or far greater superiority in talents and acquirements, in an European agent were added, the circumstance of his being a gentleman, living in the same society as the Judge before whom he pleaded, with the advantage of verbal communication with the Judge in a language unknown to the other parties present, there is reason to apprehend that such suspicion might not always be wanting.

But (said the commissioners,) believing as they think it may be admitted, that in reality it can make little difference in the issue of a cause whether Government is represented by a native or European agent, during the reading of papers and passing orders in the appeals before them, it seems on every account inexpedient that they should admit the appearance of an advantage on the side of Government, which in the minds of the people would be implied from the attendance of an European agent to oppose the native agents employed in their court, and they respectfully submitted to the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor the inexpediency of a measure so calculated to increase the unpopularity of the resumption laws, and to affect injuriously the character of the final appellate court in which they are administered without in any way promoting the interests of Government in the protection of its just rights in cases under adjudication.

Although (observed the commissioners) in their judgment it would have been preferable that the Deputy Superintendent and Remembrancer of legal affairs should have been excluded altogether from attendance as a pleader in the courts, of the special commissioners, the objections which they have urged to his constant attendance would not exist to his occasionally appearing in cases of importance where European, or other equally well qualified agents have been employed by a party opposed to Government. But if the views of the Board in this report coincide with the intentions of Government, the commissioners begged leave to suggest, that the option of attending ought not to be discretionary with the deputy. It (said they) should be contingent on the sanction of the special commissioners notified to him, on his application to attend in any case in which he deemed such a course advisable.

The commissioners concluded by observing, that from their experience of the conduct and abilities of Mr. Bignell as a pleader on the part of private individuals, they felt assured that his personal attendance in their court could have been satisfactory to them individually, and might have tended to facilitate their proceedings, advantages which they should not have wished to forego but for the reasons above stated.

Mr. Officiating Secretary Halliday, on the 26th December last, informed the special commissioners, that the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor was at the outset indisposed to agree with them in opinion that their proceedings would for the most part be conducted quite as well without, as with agents and pleaders, and until (says Mr. Halliday) the Deputy Governor shall learn that pleaders and good pleaders, are unnecessary in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the proceedings of which court are in all essential respects the same as in the commissioners', he will continue to think that the presence of a good bar has a whole some effect even upon a good bench, in that the character of no court is so little likely to be compromised, as that in which the pleaders are upright, intelligent and independent.

If (continued Mr. Halliday), as stated by the commissioners, the agents usually employed in their court do not answer to the character, the Deputy Governor thinks it very probable that the low standard of qualification hitherto deemed necessary for the Government agent in the Commissioner's court, may have had no small share in producing such a state of things. But his Honor (continues Mr. Halliday) is rather inclined to believe that the character of the Commissioner's bar, was, and is greatly improving. Mr. Bignell himself, whose efficiency the Commissioners have admitted, was, it is understood, in good practice in their court before his present appointment. Mr. Baillie, who, like Mr. Bignell, is a pleader in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, who is believed to possess high qualifications, and was indeed one of the persons selected by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut for the situation of Government vakeel in that court, practices in the Commissioner's court, his Honor is informed, with considerable and increasing success, and there are others in practice there, of whose abilities a favorable report is made. It seems (said Mr. Halliday) reasonable to expect, that the number of such pleaders will increase, as they have increased in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, and the Deputy Governor is apt to believe that the employment of Mr. Bignell on the part of Government, will create a demand by opposite parties for the aid of skill and talents in the prosecution of their appeals, and that thus, the evil of an inferior bar, complained of by the commissioners, will, through the very means which they at present deprecate, be at an early period removed from their court.

That Mr. Bignell's employment (continued Mr. Halliday) as a Government Agent in the commissioner's court, would tend, or be supposed by the public to tend to sway the judgment of the commissioners, His Honor never apprehended, and he has too high an opinion of the functionaries who preside in their court, and of their estimate with the public, to admit that any such apprehension need be entertained.

In concluding Mr. Halliday observes, that, after giving to the arguments urged by the commissioners, all the consideration to which both for their motives, and the authority from which they emanate they are entitled, His Honor is unable to concur with the Commissioners, that there exists any necessity for altering the course originally intended, and now pursued by the Sudder Board of Revenue in regard to Mr. Bignell's proceedings.

The Board, on receipt of the two preceding communications, ordered their record, and that Mr. Bignell should be supplied with a copy of the whole of the correspondence.—Hurkaru, January 17.

CIRCULAR ORDERS, 1838.

No. 2, ACCOUNT SALES OF LANDS SOLD FOR ARREARS OF REVENUE.

The Sudder Board of Revenue having had occasion to remark that the account sales of lands sold for arrears of revenue, transmitted to them are seldom alike in form, have furnished the revenue commissioners, with a view to uniformity in future, with a blank statement for adoption in the several collectorates comprised in their divisions.*

No. 3, A KNOWLEDGE OF THE PERSIAN LANGUAGE DECLARED UNNECESSARY FOR THE OFFICE OF DEPUTY COLLECTOR UNDER REGULATION IX. of 1833.

Mr. Officiating Secretary F. J. Halliday, on the 19th December, 1837, informed the Board that in the opinion of the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor of Bengal a knowledge of the Persian language does not appear to be a necessary qualification for the office of Deputy collector under Regulation IX. of 1833.

The Board have communicated the above order to the revenue Commissioners.

No. 4, DEPUTY COLLECTORS APPOINTED UNDER REGULATION IX. OF 1833, MUST BE ABLE TO READ AND SPEAK THE VERNACULAR LANGUAGE OF THEIR RESPECTIVE DISTRICTS.

Mr. Officiating Secretary F. J. Halliday, on the 23rd November last, informed the Board that it appeared desirable to the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor of Bengal for obvious reasons, that deputy collectors under Regulation IX of 1833, should possess at least a tolerable ability to read and speak the vernacular language of the districts to which they may be appointed. The Board have also been directed in future before submitting nominations of individuals to such situations, to satisfy themselves of the qualifications of the nominees in this respect, either through the local officers, or where the nomination may be by the Board, by examination at their own office of the candidate's acquirements. The results of such enquiry, or examinations, are to be reported with the nomination for the deputy Governors consideration.

The Board have circulated the above orders among the revenue Commissioners, and have instructed them that the orders ought to have a retrospective effect, and to ascertain through the several Collectors, and inform the Board of the names of those Deputy Collectors subordinate to them, who may not be able to read and speak the vernacular language of the district in which they are employed, and to inform those individuals that their removal will be recommended, unless within six months succeeding the communication of the orders, to that effect, they attain this indispensable qualification.

No 5, HOW COMMISSIONERS OF REVENUE SHOULD ISSUE ORDERS ON THEIR SUBORDINATES.

The Board, on the 16th instant, instructed the Revenue Commissioners that whenever they may have occasion to communicate to any of their subordinates an order, requiring any particular duties to be performed, or any forms to be substituted for those in previous use, that the Commissioners will exact from such officer a declaration in answer that the order given him, has been duly carried into effect.

* We shall furnish the statement in the Calcutta Monthly Journal.—Reporter.

No. 6, KISTS TO BE REGULATED FROM THE 1ST MAY 1837.

It having been brought to the notice of the Sudder Board of Revenue that, in one of the district's within their jurisdiction, proper attention has not been paid to the Board's Circular orders of the 5th September 1836, directed that Kists should be regulated from the 1st May, 1837, according to the English months and not those of the native calendars, the Board have requested the revenue Commissioners to report for their information whether those orders have been duly carried into effect in the several districts within the division of their respective commissioners.

No. 7, HEAD ASSISTANTS, OR CLERKS TO THE REVENUE COMMISSIONERS, NOT ALLOWED TO SIGN LETTERS ON BEHALF OF THOSE OFFICERS.

By an extract of a letter from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal dated the 18th October last, it appears that Lord Auckland did not think it expedient to authorize the head assistant to the commissioners to sign letters on behalf of those officers. His Lordship remarked that the clerks had already been authorized to authenticate all copies, and to frank all letters issued from the commissioners' office on the public service.

By an oversight in the Board's office the above orders were not communicated to the Revenue commissioners before the 16th instant.—Hurk. Jan. 31.

MISCELLANEOUS.CALCUTTA.

MR. MARTIN.—The Deputy Governor of Bengal has ordered the removal of Mr. C. R. Martin, the Judge of Hooghly, and his being placed on the allowances of a senior merchant out of employ. The charges brought against Mr. Martin, are considered to have been so far established by the investigations held by Mr. W. W. Bird, that His Honor considers it inexpedient to continue him in the high office he held. Much praise is bestowed by His Honor on Mr. Lewis, who first brought to notice the reports affecting Mr. Martin's character which were current in the Hooghly district. Some further investigations, it is supposed, are to take place.

SILVER MUG TO SERJEANT MAJOR COBLY.—Serjeant Major Cobly, of H. M.'s 9th Foot, being about to proceed to England, to take the pension, the officers of the regiment, in token of their sense of his services, have presented him with a silver mug, gilt inside, bearing a highly complimentary inscription. The commanding officer, Colonel Macaskill, Major Barnwell, and the adjutant of the regiment, addressed letters to him expressive of their approbation and good will.

THE CIVIL SERVICE—ORDER OF MERIT.—It is said that the Court of Directors have hit upon a new and very ingenious expedient for the effecting of a further saving in the salaries of their Civil Servants. It is in contemplation to establish an Order of Merit to be conferred on the distinguished, or rather on the to-be-distinguished Members of the Service, and in as much as honors have their worth and intrinsic value, in the estimation of their wearers, the opening to their servants of this new road to honor, is to be accompanied, simultaneously, with certain further clippings and reductions of salary.

MR. F. C. SMITH.—Mr. F. C. Smith, the Superintendent of Police for the Bengal Presidency, embarked on board of the Jellinghae, and proceeded up the river, to join his establishment at Guyah and commence the duties of his office.

THE NOVENA.—The Novena was celebrated at the Roman Catholic Church at Howrah, by Fr. Paul da Gradoly. The Church was brilliantly illuminated on the occasion, and after service, a few fireworks were let off, but not half so many or so good as we were led to expect. The squintings of the pyrotechnic exhibition, shows the good sense of the managing Padre, as it evinces that he knows to make a better use of money, than to waste it on such vain shows.

THE FREE SCHOOL CHURCH.—In consequence of certain alarming fissures in the walls of the Free School, or St. Thomas's Church, the Governors called upon Lieutenant Abercrombie, of Engineers, attached to the Conservancy Department, to examine and report upon the edifice. He has given it as his opinion that the whole of the western face would long ago have come down in a crash if it were not for the belfry, which acts as an abutment in support of that portion of the building. The Governors of the school consequently met on the 11th instant, to look into the extent and nature of that injury, and having satisfied themselves that some measures should be immediately adopted to guard against the probable contingency of the building giving way, have called upon Mr. Parker, the original builder, to take down that part of the Church, and have the necessary repairs effected, the whole to be conducted under the skilful superintendence of Major Hutchinson, of Engineers.

SCHOOL AT BURDWAN.—Government has sent instructions to the Magistrate at Burdwan for the erection of a school in that district, and also to ascertain how far its wealthier inhabitants are disposed to further the project of establishing one.

WARDENS OF THE PRINCIPAL ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.—Messrs. F. Rodriguez and M. Augier, were, on the 15th instant, elected wardens of the Principal Roman Catholic Church, in succession to Messrs. M. Crow and F. Gregory, who have gone out in succession.

STEAM PETITION.—Upwards of 6,000 signatures have been affixed to the steam petition.

THE UNION BANK.—The Union Bank has paid a dividend of twelve per cent. to proprietors, and this has been the result of a quarter, in which the bank's operations have been considerably checked by several causes.

MARINE REGISTRY OFFICE.—Mr. Joseph Young has been engaged in carefully examining the constitution of the old Registry Office, in which he has every aid from the Marine Board, and is preparing a plan for submission to the Chamber at an early date for the new Marine Registry office. There is, therefore, every reason to hope that the scheme, when brought forward again, will be presented to them in a shape deserving of all the patronage of the Chamber and the Public.

BENGAL CLUB HOUSE.—A proposition is to be brought forward at the next General Meeting of the Bengal Club, to purchase ground and build a new and Capacious Club House by joint stock subscription of two lakhs in shares of 500 rupees each.

HOUR OF BUSINESS.—A resolution has been passed on the subject of the hour of business to be observed in Public Offices—the periods fixed are from 10 to 4 or 11 to 5. This reform is attributable to the representations of the Chamber of Commerce, to whom the thanks of those who may benefit by the change, are therefore due.

THE PUBLIC TANKS.—The Conservancy Department has directed the engine at Chandpaul Ghaut, to be worked for seventeen hours daily instead of the usual eight hours. This is with a view to filling all those tanks with which the engine conduits communicate and will be the means of preventing much of the distress which was last year felt from the scarcity of water in those parts of the town which are at a distance from the river.

DEPUTY SHERIFF.—Mr. Bird, of the firm of Messrs. Collier, Bird and Giant, has been selected by the Sheriff, to fill the office of Deputy, during the ensuing year.

RE-UNIONS.—The first Re-union of 1838 took place at the Town Hall on the 2nd instant. The company was more select than numerous; and there was an unusual paucity of the fair sex. The evening went off, however, with great eclat, and those who were fortunate enough to secure partners, kept on the "light fantastic toe" until long after the "witching" hour of night.

NAWAB FICHAL UD DOWLA.—His highness Nawab Fichal ud Dowla arrived in Calcutta on the 2nd instant, from Benares. He has deputed on the Duke of Bedford for England, where he intends to urge his claims to the throne of Oude.

DWARKANATH TAGORE'S FETE.—Dwarkanauth Tagore, Esq., gave a grand ball and supper and pyrotechnical exhibition to the elite of Calcutta Society, on the 8th instant.

SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT FOR THE N. W. P.—It is said, that it has been determined by Government, that there should be a Secretary to Government for the North Western Provinces, and it is likely that Mr. Maxsween will therefore continue in office.

FIRST OPIUM SALE OF 1838.—The first sale of the season, consisting of 4,600 chests of Patna and 2,400 chests of Benares, in all 7,000 chests, took place on the 2nd instant at the Exchange Rooms, with the usual reservation of 130 chests for the French. The attendance of natives was much smaller than usual. A portion of the table opposite to the auctioneer was raised off for the officers of the Board to prevent confusion in receiving the deposit. The Patna opened at Rs. 815 but fell at the third lot to 750, at which price 50 lots were taken by option and the bidding then went on steadily at 765 to 775 till the end of the first moiety of the Patna. The first lot of Benares was knocked down at 750, the second at 715, and the price afterwards declined gradually from 720 to 665. The rest of the Patna was then brought forward, the price opening at 775 and going up gradually to 835, but declining again and closing at 805.

EXECUTION OF DECREES AT SERAMPUR.—Ever since the enactment of the Insolvent act in this country, the Danish authorities have refused to give protection to debtors who abscond to that place, to avoid an enforced payment of the debts due by them. Lately a person proceeded from Calcutta to that town, with copies of three decrees of the Court of Requests, against an individual who had absconded to that settlement; and after having rebutted the defendant's allegations of his having paid the amount of these decrees, he obtained an order for the immediate payment of their amount, and it was only on consideration of the defendant having placed in the custody of the Danish Court, some furniture, &c. sufficient to cover the amount of these decrees, that he had 15 days' time allowed him to pay the money and redeem the pledged articles, at the expiration of which period, if not redeemed, they will be sold to satisfy these decrees.

THE INSOLVENT ESTATES.—A rumour has been in course of circulation that orders either have already been received, or are on the point of being conveyed to the Assignees of the estates belonging to the creditors of the late insolvent agency houses, to the effect of their being required peremptorily to wind up such portion of the unsettled outstandings as relate to Indigo Factories or other real property, the interest of which still remains vested in their hands.

MRS. LEACH.—The managers, amateurs, and proprietors of the Chowringhee Theatre, have presented Mrs. Leach with a jewel, on her taking leave of the Theatre, in consideration of the services she has done the drama here.

SPORTING.—On the 15th January, the first day of the Calcutta Races, Gondolier won Shaik Ibrahim's purse of 400 rupees, beating Pilgrim and Sultan round the course, in 3m 38s.

Jim Crow won Syed Yosseef's purse of 800 rupees, beating Telegraph in a two mile race, in 4m 16s.

Star won Shaik Ibrahim's plate of 800 rupees, beating Remnant in a race round the course.

Gem won Shaik Yosseef's purse of 1,600 rupees, beating Mishap, Heiman and Munriel in a race round the course, in 3m. 43s.

Triptolemus won Syed Hyme Isaac's plate of 300 rupees, beating Jew's Trump round the course.

Pirate won the sweepstakes of twenty-two gold-mohurs one mile, beating Absentee, Gondolier, Rolica and Magnet, in 1m. 56s.

Poluphema won the purse of forty gold-mohurs, beating Jilt-sheet, Haidle and Jessy in 3m. 33½s.

Jim Crow won the sweepstakes of seventy-five gold-mohurs, beating Gem, Star and Remnant, in 3m. 36.

Stoic won a match of fifty gold-mohurs, two miles, beating Paragon in 4m. 9s.

On the 17th of January, the second day of the Calcutta races, Absentee won the Auckland staked, of 100 gold-mohurs, beating Pirate, Begum, Magnet, Master Henry Rolica, Gondolier and Promise, in 4m. 59s.

Jim Crow won the purse of 40 gold-mohurs, beating Blackball, Star, Sunbeam, Dolphin, Stoic, and Paragon.

Comet won the Claven sweepstakes of twenty-five gold-mohurs, beating Affred, Telegraph and Alladin in 2m. 27s.

Ploughboy won the match of twenty-five gold-mohurs, beating Roulette.

On the 19th January, the third day of Calcutta races, Gondolier won the Great Welter of ten gold-mohurs each, with twenty-five from the fund, beating Stoic, Dolphin, Sunbeam and Tadly the Grinder in 4m.

Gem won the purse of twenty-five gold-mohurs, beating Jew's Trump round the course.

Pirate won the sweepstakes of five hundred rupees, beating Absentee, in a two-mile race, in 3m. 58s.

On the 22nd of January, the fourth day of the Calcutta Races, Gazelle won the claret jugs, presented by the Cameronians, added to a sweepstakes of twenty gold-mohurs from the fund, beating Stoic, Star, Odds Bobs, Telegraph, Sunbeam, and Telegraph, in a three mile race, in 6m. 13s.

Comet won the sweepstakes of twenty-five gold-mohurs, beating Pioneer, Rolica and Magnet, in 1m. 57s.

Lieutenant won the purse of twenty-five gold-mohurs beating Affred and Satellite in heats round the course.

Rolica won the sweepstakes for twenty-five gold-mohurs, two miles, beating Roostum, Rulla and Commodore, in 4m 6s.

Rainbow won a match of twenty-five gold-mohurs, beating Roulette.

On the 24th instant, the 5th day of the Calcutta races, the Tagore Cup was won by Absentee, in two mile heats, beating Rolica, Pirate, Gazelle, Gondolier and Roostum, Roostum ran against a post, threw his jockey, and dislocated his own shoulder.

The hack purse of fifteen gold-mohurs, was won by Cadland, beating Bessy Bedlam, Trinette, Vesper and Matilda, in half mile heats.

Lieutenant won the sweepstakes of twenty-five gold-mohurs, beating Tim Crow and Pioneer, in one mile and a half, in 2m. 68½s.

DEATH OF HULIEM MEHDEE.—Letters received from Cawnpore, on the 2nd inst., announce the death of the celebrated Minister of Oude, Hakeem Mehdee, at Lucknow, on the 26th ultimo. The event was not unexpected as the Hakeem had been ill some time. Mr. Macnaghten was to start on the 23th for Lucknow by dak, on a complimentary visit to the King and to return on the 30th.

THE EXPERIMENT.—The new river iron steamer Experiment, is to proceed in a few days to Chittagong, to be employed in river service in that district.

UNEMPLOYED CAPITAL.—There are at present, not less than ten crores of rupees in the Treasury unemployed and unlikely to be demanded for several months to come. It is supposed, that Government are hoarding this money to meet the expenses of the Burmah war, which, by their impolitic conduct they are encouraging and rendering every day more and more certain.

UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS' PENSIONS.—The Court of Directors have declined to assist the Uncovenanted Servants in the establishment of their pension fund in the manner solicited; but as the letter of the Court conveying their decision was written before the last special reference made to the Court on the subject could have reached its destination, the local Government have determined, not to interfere with the present arrangements for the fund, until they receive further instructions on the subject.

MR. JOHN STORM.—Mr. John Storm, has been appointed to officiate for Col. James Young, as Secretary to the Union Bank, the latter gentleman being appointed to officiate as Law Commissioner.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE—ORDIN.—At a meeting held by the Chamber of Commerce on the 23rd inst., a resolution has been unanimously voted, that the Chamber does not deem expedient any alteration in the mode of effecting the sales of opium, as now regulated by Government.

SEVERE FAMINE.—Famine is very severely felt in the upper provinces, and hundreds of people are dying from sheer starvation.

MESSES CAMERON AND AMOS.—Mr. Cameron, the Law Commissioner, goes into council as Fourth Ordinary Member, on the departure of Mr. Macaulay, and he will continue in council until the arrival of Mr. Amos, the new head of the Law Commission.

GOOMSOOR.—An officer of Government at Goomsoor, has recently succeeded in rescuing twelve individuals of different sexes and ages, destined for the sacrifices to the Koordish divinity, and the same active officer expected twenty-four more to be brought into his camp. The full moon is the period for the consummation of the abominable rite, on which period at least one-half of the above number of persons would have been sacrificed. An effective blow has been struck against the system, by the active measures of this officer.

LOSS OF A BRIG BY FIRE.—On the night of the 12th inst., between 11 and 12 o'clock, an outward bound Laccadive brig was totally burnt off Badge-Budge. She had 3,000 rupees in cash on board, half of which was recovered by the owners. The fire originated by a lamp having set fire to the beam, by which it was suspended in the cabin or round house on deck.

FIRES.—Several fires have occurred this and two Native Christians have been victims to the flames, but property has not suffered much.

THE RIVER POLICE.—The officers of the river police have conducted themselves in a very praiseworthy manner since their appointment. Several thieves have been captured through their vigilance, and stolen property recovered.

ALTERED AND FORGED BANK NOTES.—There are several altered and forged bank notes in circulation at present, some of the latter so very admirably executed, that they are easily passed for genuine ones. The best distinguishing mark is, the quality of the paper, the forged notes being on paper considerably inferior to that of the genuine ones.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—A melancholy accident befel a young officer of the Camerounians, Mr. James, on the 20th inst. He was sliding down the banisters of the stair-case leading to the officers' quarters, when he suddenly slipped, lost his hold, and fell to the bottom. His skull was fractured, the joints of his fingers broken, and his body otherwise much bruised. He was lying in a state of insensibility yesterday afternoon, not expected to survive half an hour.

MURDER.—A Daingur woman, aged about twenty-two years, was murdered, between one and three o'clock on the morning of the 23rd inst., in the Fenwick's Bazar. She went to bed with her husband the night before in a room, in which there were eight other men. The door of the room was open, but was watched by people who are to have the mill rent to the Mauritius, as labourers. About three o'clock in the morning, the husband cried out that his wife had been murdered, and the Police soon after coming in, found that her throat had been cut in a dreadful manner, and that life was extinct. A knife besmeared with blood was discovered near the head of the deceased, which was stated to have been seen in the possession of the deceased before. The husband was therefore suspected to be the perpetrator of the murder.

MOFUSSIL.

AGRA.—At sunrise on the morning of the 13th, Sir Charles Metcalfe took his departure. The whole of the troops were drawn out and formed into a street à la militaires, the artillery on the right.

At a Meeting of the Committee appointed at the General Meeting, for making arrangements for the appropriation of the subscriptions for a statue of Sir Charles Metcalfe, Baronet, G. C. B. and for a service of plate to be forwarded to him.

Brigadier Cartwright in the chair. It was resolved:

1st.—That the Hon'ble Captain D'Arrol be requested to undertake the duties of Secretary to the Committee and that he be authorized to incur such incidental expenses as may be imperative.

2nd.—That the Secretary be authorized to collect all subscriptions and to pay the same into the Agra Bank.

3rd.—That a monthly list of additional subscribers be published in the Agra Uthbar, shewing the amount realized.

4th.—That a copy of the proceedings of the meeting held at Agra on the 27th ultimo, be transmitted to the civil and military authorities at the principal stations of the Bengal Presidency, and also to those of Madras and Bombay, and that the co-operation of the Committees of Presidencies be solicited in furtherance of the object in view.

The horrible disease of small pox is at present very rife. It has already made a victim of an excellent and much-loved young officer, of a sergeant of the artillery and, according to report, of one or two men. In the city and suburbs the disease is very common amongst the children of the poor.

His Royal Highness Prince Henry of Orange, arrived at Agra on the 3rd inst., under a royal salute from the fort, the guns of which have had some severe practice lately in this line. His Highness left for Allypore en route to Meerut the next day, under another salute.

Small Pox continues raging with great violence among the natives. Amongst the European population two officers have already fallen victims to it, and six or eight non-commissioned officers and soldiers.

The members of the Masonic Lodge at Agra, "Freedom and Fraternity," walked in procession on St. John the Evangelist's day, from the Lodge rooms to the Church, where Divine Service was performed and an appropriate sermon preached by the chaplain, the Rev. R. Chambers, who selected the 30th verse of the 4th chapter of the first Epistle General of St. John, for his text.

The following is the result of the election and appointment of office-bearers of the Lodge for the ensuing year:

1873. G. Goulard, W. Master; Jacob L. Hoff, Past Master; J. M. D. Ceronio, Past Master; W. G. Lennon, Senior Warden; M. W. Woollaston, Junior Warden; H. Babonah, Treasurer; R. Lloyd, Secretary; D. R. Hodgkinson, Senior Deacon; H. B. Walker, Junior Deacon; J. C. Hoff, Inner Guard; J. Von Nather, Steward; M. Twoomy, Tyler.

This Lodge has been in existence for the last twelve months, having been established by about half-a-dozen individuals who brought up a dispensation from the Lodge at Allahabad, and has 23 members at present.

AGRA.—Grain still continues very dear at Ajmere, grass and crops entirely parched up; unless we get rain about Christmas, the prospect is very bad. Small pox raging badly—Upwards of 3,000 children have died of it within the last six weeks, as well as some adults.

CAWNPORE.—The Governor-general held a Durbar on the 21st, on his arrival at Cawnpore, and gave a splendid breakfast to the Prince of Oude on the 23rd—after which he was formally visited by several native chieftains from various parts of Hindustan. In the evening his Lordship honored a station dinner party with his presence. On the 25th the station gave a ball and supper to the Misses Eden, and the visit of the Prince of Oude was returned by his Lordship on the morning of the same day. The ladies left Cawnpore for Lucknow the following morning, and were to rejoin his Lordship at Futtoghur. Sir Charles Metcalfe arrived in camp on the 31st, and resigned charge of the N. W. Provinces on the following day, the 1st January.

MURGAULPORE.—A petty Rajah, of a place called Mulharwar, has been convicted before the Sessions Judge of Bhargulpore of the wilful and unprovoked murder of an elephant-driver, whom he had tied to a post in a tent, and there, deliberately cut his body in pieces with a sword. The Sessions Judge had condemned the Rajah to suffer capitally, and referred the sentence to the Nizam Adawlut for confirmation.

MIRJAPUR.—A project for a Joint Stock Bank has been set a foot here, with every prospect of success. The Bank will be formed chiefly on the model of the Union and Agra Banks, but will be of a more commercial character than the latter. The extensive money operations at this great trading town, will be highly favourable to it. This undertaking will defeat an intention at one time said to have been entertained by the Directors of the Agra Bank of establishing a branch of their institution at this place.

The Field Officer whose arrest was noticed recently drew down on himself the punishment, for declaring with a considerable degree of candour the strong doubts he entertained of the judgment and capacity of the Members of a Court of Requests, before which he was pleading as defendant. The case has, it is said, been forwarded by the General of the division to Head Quarters.

CUSBAB.—A native arrived from Cusbah, states that the rice crop of the present season has proved a good one in that zillah. The price of basam rice of fine quality is a rupee a maund, and that of a coarser kind, about fourteen annas. Dale sugar, too, is selling cheap; those who have made advances to manufacturers are purchasing it from them at from three rupees and a quarter to three rupees and a half per maund.

BRINDABAN.—A native letter received from Brindaban states that corn of all descriptions has got exceedingly dear in and about that place, in consequence of a complete failure of the crops, for want of rain. Wheat and rice are selling at more than double the usual prices.

DELHI.—A bridge of boats has been made across the Ganges, a little above the fort at Futtoghur, and another is to be constructed over the Ram Gunga for the passage of Lord Auckland and his suite, who proceed through Rohilkund via Bareilly and Meerut to the hills.

A royal salute announced the departure from the Station of His Royal Highness Prince Henry and suite, on their return to Calcutta.

The season has not been so unfavourable in the lower part of the Doab, that is below Cawnpore, as in the Futtoghur, Mynpoore, Etawah, Allyghur, and Agra districts. Grain is selling at Cawnpore, Atta..... 12 seers per rupee.

Gram..... 13½

The crops in the vicinity of Futtoghur promise well, which is entirely to be attributed to extensive irrigation.

The country between Delhi and Allyghur on both sides of the great road appears to be completely dried up, very little sign of vegetation.

Grain at Allyghur and Allah Gunge is selling,

Atta..... 14 to 16 seers per rupee.

Gram..... 18 to 20

At Futtoghur.

Atta..... 10 to 11 seers per rupee.

Gram..... 11

There is so much distress near Futtoghur that instances have been known of people roaming for relief to the almshouse and actually expiring from starvation before assistance could be afforded to them. Representations have been made to Government, and assistance to a certain extent afforded; but, alas! much more must be done before the present urgent distress can be effectually relieved.

The Futtoghur treasury is so completely cleared out, that all payments have been stopped, and the authorities have been authorized to borrow three or four lacs of rupees; as usual, there is a difference of opinion about interest, the Government offering four, the sheriffs wanting six per cent.

The scarcity of money just now is principally to be attributed to the old coinage having been recalled and not a sufficient quantity of the new having arrived to replace it.

NATIVE STATES.

LUCKNOW.—The King is suffering from a dropsical attack, which it is expected, will be fatal. His Royal Highness Prince Henry of Orange, paid a visit to the court and city from Cawnpore.

KABUL.—Nawab Abdul Samud Khan, late commander-in-chief of foot troops of Ameer Dost Mahomed Khan, left his service, but with great disgrace, having been stripped of every fraction by the Ameer, for faults committed at Jallalabad. The Nawab is at present at Bhopalah in the employ of the Ameer of that city, and is raising 5,000 infantry, and is better off than when at Kabul.

The command of the 1st regiment fell on Colonel Ratray (now Fiday Mahomed Khan, Bahadur). The command of the 2nd on Mr. Harlan, as a temporary arrangement.

Mr. East left Kabul recently, not excepting employ there. His trip to Kabul has added nothing to his pockets.

Doctor Lord and Lieutenant Wool of the Navy attached to the British mission at Kabul, have proceeded at Koondun to Meer Moorad Beg, this Chief having invited them over to examine the illness he is suffering from. These are the first Europeans that ever went openly to this country. Captain Burnes and Lieutenant Leech, of the Bombay service, are at Kabul quite well and enjoy the fine winter of that place.

Mahomed Uthbur Khan, son of Dost Mahomed, lately visited the districts inhabited by the Ghulzais and Populzais, who received him with all proper respect and offered the usual tizzurs of fruits, vegetables, chickens, butter, milk, &c. with which he was well pleased. He prosecuted his journey, beyond the territory of Cabool; but all the inhabitants ran away at seeing his army. In returning, the supplies were very short, and both men and cattle suffered severely.

Jaxxon.—The Royal Berce Sal is very ill, and not expected to survive his sickness. His death will open a gate for fresh intrigues in this town.

Livont.—The news-writer mentions, that some zamindars, dependants of Hurree Sing, had made a disturbance, and surrounded the fort Moolkhuzara; but had dispersed on the approach of certain neighbouring chieftains with their followers, and several of them were killed.

Hera Sing mentioned, that he had received a letter from Nehal Sing, Alao Wala, mentioning that he was desirous of seeing the Maharajah. His Highness desired Hera Sing to write privately to Nehal Sing, to desire him to proceed with his whole force to the "presence" with as little delay as possible, as he wished to give him private instructions previous to sending him to Peshawar.

The merchants have discovered a new route between Cabool and the Company's territories, by adopting which, they will avoid many of the duties, delays and inconveniences, attendant on travelling through the Sikh states. From Cabool to Pashung, a distance of forty coss, through an uninhabited district, abounding in wood and water, from Pashung to Serai-sakin-chinar, there are a few houses, inhabited by Patans to be met with here and there. From Sokto-serai, to Serai Dunabund, in three days and nights, during which no animal even is to be seen. From Dunabund it is a four days' journey to Dehrah Ismail Khan, where duty is paid to Runjeet Sing's Custom-house Agents. From Dehrah Ismail Khan, the road leads through Mooltan; Bahawalpoore, to the Company's territories.

Ontala salib is said to have succeeded in quieting the Yuzunzaceans, who have returned to their employments as citizens.

In Cashmere rice is selling at one maund and thirty pukka seers for the rupee, other grain in proportion! The shawl weavers are in great distress, and regret very much having left Loodianah.

The Ameer of Bokharah is ready to assist the Ameer of Kabul with money and troops against the Sikhs. The Ameer of Kabul is thinking of proceeding to Peshawar in person after the winter or during it. The Ambassador from the Court of Persia to Kabul has taken the sulks at Khandar and will not proceed to Kabul in consequence of the English mission having arrived before him. He is still at Khandar and Mahomed Khan Paish Kismut has been sent to Khandar to learn what is the intent of the Persian Monarch's mission. The Ameer of Kabul has this year three missions to attend to—one of Bombay and British India, one of Persia, and one of Bokharah.

The Bokharah mission was to leave Kabul with persons of character sent by Ameer Dost Mahomed Khan to the ruler of that place, to relate the different treaties between the two Ameer's against the Sikhs and Meer Meraud Beg, ruler of Koondus.

Tons.—It is stated that certain of the sameendars of the Wazeeree tribe, with their forces, amounting to fifteen thousand men, made an attack on the Maharajah's army, and, notwithstanding the courage and good conduct of the royal troops, the Wazeerees gained the victory. It is said that fifteen hundred men were killed or wounded on both sides. Dost Sind, an officer of Nehal Sing's army, was amongst the killed.

MADRAS.

surwreck.—On the 9th instant, the ship Elizabeth, bound from Bristol to Madras, while going very fast, ran on shore near Langa Chetty's Choultry, fifty-seven miles south of Madras. The weather was fine and very little surf at the time. At day-light the next morning the Surgeon of the Elizabeth and the Rev. Griffiths, a passenger, landed by catamaran and sought in vain for boats or assistance at Salthas. They walked the whole way for Madras and arrived at Mr. Carver's house on the 11th instant. Mr. Carver immediately hired a number of palankeens and started for the wreck the same night. A traveller who came up from the south on the 12th, states that all the passengers, 16 in number, with several ladies and children, were landed safely on the 11th and reached the Government Bungalow at Salthas. The Elizabeth is a new ship, and when the Surgeon landed had not suffered any damage in her hull. The cargo, it is supposed, will be landed with little damage, but there is no chance of floating the ship, as she has only four feet water under the bow at low water.

colonel stewart. Accounts have been received from Hyderabad, representing the state of the health of the Resident, Colonel Stewart, being such, as to render his immediately proceeding to Bombay, and it was apprehended, ultimately to Europe, absolutely necessary.

BOMBAY.

THE SCHOONER EMILY.—The Government has purchased the Schooner Emily, to be sent to the Gulf for the use of the Resident there.

THE BERENICE.—The Berenice has met with another accident, the effect, it is supposed, of her monsoon trip. From the time the vessel left Bombay (30th November 5 50 p. m.) until ½ past 8 p. m. of the 6th of December, she had run along at the rate of 10 or 11 knots an hour, when of a sudden a tremendous crash was heard, followed almost instantly by a second, which led to the supposition that a bugaboo had been run down or that the vessel was parting asunder. All hands were instantly on deck to ascertain the cause, when it was found that the cover of the starboard cylinder was smashed in pieces, and the steam furiously rushing up. The engine was soon stopped; the starboard connecting shaft unshipped, and the larboard engine set on, by the aid of which and the sails she was able to run along at the rate of 8 knots an hour. On the following morning the piston was examined, and it was found that the lower plate was cracked right in two, with a large piece chipped out near the centre of it, some of the fracture appearing to have existed for some time. The starboard engine is completely disabled, although it is understood that it could be got repaired in Egypt, it is supposed the commander will not take upon him to delay the vessel in the Red Sea for that purpose.

BANGY DAK.—A Bangy Dak has been established on the Post Route leading through Tanana, Nassic, Malgaum, Dolea, Mundlairsie, and Mhow, for the purpose of connecting Bombay with Central India, and the Upper Bengal Provinces. One has also been established on the Post Route leading through Poona, Sholapore and Hyderabad, for the purpose of connecting Bombay with Madras; and one will shortly be established on the Post Route leading through Aurangabad and Nagpore, of the purpose of connecting Bombay with Calcutta.

BRITISH IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.—The Viceroy of Egypt has issued an order, prohibiting the imposition in the ports of Yemen of a higher duty than 2½ per cent. on British imports and exports, coffee included; and has directed that all coffee which may be purchased by the Egyptian Government shall be paid for at the market price.

DEATH OF BHABOO MAHARAJ.—Bhaboo Maharaj, the most respectable jagagirdar of Poona, died on the 25th of December at his house. Bhaboo Maharaj was descended from the venerable Brahmin family of the spiritual tutors of the Raja of Kotapoor, in whose councils he took a prominent and useful part for many years prior and subsequent to the accession of the present chief. He was known to urge upon His Highness a respectful and obedient conduct towards the British Government, and it was this that led to his cruel persecution by the Raja, and induced him to seek a safe asylum at Poona. He had a jahagire of 40,000 rupees, besides a pension from our Government. He has left two sons.

BURHANPOOR.—His Highness the Scindia has lately heard the complaints of the poor ryots of this place, and the former Subadar, Madhoo Rao Subajee, has been dismissed, and a Muhomedan Subadar from Guahar sent in his stead, who is taking proper steps for the protection of the ryots, who are much pleased. It is ordered that the sowcars should not sell sun dry gold, but should convert it into Burhanpoor mohurs and sell it at the rate of it. Respecting adultery, it is ordered, that every one who may be guilty of it, should be required to clean the Chowries with chowdung, from morning to evening; and the female culprit should be made to bring water.

THE ARON LINDSAY.—The Hugh Lindsay expected on the 25th of December.

BURMAH.

The subjects of Therawadhee have commenced aggressions on our subjects by the deliberate murder of the head man of the village of Durray, situated on the north-west extremity of Biloo-k'own. It appears his house was surrounded by robbers on the night of the last day of the year. On becoming aware of their presence, he escaped from the house and was in the act of calling out to his villagers for assistance, when one of the villains fired and shot him dead on the spot. Durray is one of the largest villages in the province, but as the men were employed in their paddy fields, the robbers escaped with impunity. Their numbers have not been ascertained, but, they are supposed not to have exceeded ten, and as they came to the village by the creek from set-ward, there can be no doubt of their being from Martaban; and, indeed, the whole transaction is consonant with what we have repeatedly heard is the intention of the Burmese on that side—to harass our people by a constant system of dacoity, and to cause them to look for safety and protection only by abandoning us and placing themselves under Burmese rule.

The disposition evinced towards us by the authorities of Bilong and Martab in is said to have undergone a most complete change. Whereas formerly, any messenger from Moulmein was invariably treated with kindness and respect, an individual sent there recently with a letter from the Chief Civil Authority, and addressed to the Governor, was not allowed to enter the town, and was treated by the Governor with much indignity. The officer even proceeded so far as to tell him "Things are changed and are not as they were—I am old, but I should like to fight the English again."

It is further said that a kind of levy en masse had been ordered throughout the Burmese empire, and that the most active preparations for war were on foot.

Our position on this frontier seems to be fast verging towards hostilities, unless, indeed, it be intended quietly to put up with every insult and injury that may be offered to us. The terror and distress already suffered by our people, are sufficient warrants for vigorous measures towards breaking up this nest of villains now congregated at Martaban. Those who have gone up the Salween River declare that the state of the villages is most distressing. Women and children resort to the Jungle at night, whilst the men are solely occupied in measures for the defence of themselves, their families, and property.

By the brig Elizabeth, from Rangoon, some letters from that place and from Maulmain have been received. It appears that the Burmese Governor of Martaban, the town directly opposite to Maulmain, had songs sung at a public festival, grossly abusing the English and boasting that the Burmese would go and destroy Maul-main! Reports also are being daily brought into Maulmain, stating that the Burmese were assembling a force at various places in the vicinity and making warlike preparations. A report had been brought down from Koukmoung stating, that the King intended to acknowledge our treaties so soon as his other affairs were settled, but that the last intelligence from Calcutta, which would soon have reached the King, was calculated to do much mischief. It was that the Governor-General does not much regard the King's disavowal of our treaties so long as the Burmese commit no aggression, and that as yet, our Government is of opinion it has no cause to quarrel with the King.

The Bucco Boun, a schooner belonging to Messrs. Trill and Co. of Rangoon, had grounded on the John and Margaret shoal and been deserted by her commander and crew; but hopes were entertained of getting her off.

PENANG AND SINGAPORE.

During the week have been received files of the Singapore Free Press to the 21st of December, and Prince of Wales Island Gazette to the 30th of the same month. In these papers are two letters from Mr. H. C. Pusep, to the merchants of Singapore and to the Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce at Penang, respecting the claims of the latter, on behalf of the merchants of these islands to be placed on the same footing as the purchasers of opium for the China market.

It appears by these documents, that the Government here wash their hands of having determined the scale of distribution by which the Bonus was paid, and throw the merit or demerit thereof on the China merchants. The Penang and Singapore merchants have won nothing by the measure they adopted. On the contrary the former are told somewhat coolly, that "the measures of Government were of necessity taken upon grounds furnished by estimates and general inferences, and the Governor-General of India in Council had not before him such precise information in regard to the state of the market in the Straights as has now been furnished; but his Lordship in Council cannot add the assurance, that if the present information had then been possessed, the Merchants of Penang would have been considered entitled to greater consideration in any respect than they have received."

THE SIR CHARLES MALCOLM.—The Sir Charles Malcolm, put back to Singapore on the 15th December (after being within a few miles of Macao) with the loss of sails, boats and top-masts, all her lower-masts sprung, and in a very leaky state, occasioned by a succession of very heavy weather experienced during the passage from Singapore towards China; but particularly from the 23rd November to 6th December; and it was not until they had scarcely another sail to set and found the water gaining on the pumps, that they bore up, the ship being so completely disabled, that it was quite impossible to make any way against a contrary wind and heavy head sea. The cargo was discharging partly damaged, and after undergoing the necessary repairs the Malcolm was again to proceed on her voyage with the sound part of the cargo.

SINGAPORE.

During the week Singapore journals to the 7th of December last have been received. A proposition has been made, for a Monthly Steam Communication between the Straights and Calcutta, with a view of extending to that quarter, and in some degree to China, the benefit of the Steam Communication between India and Great Britain. In this point of view, the proposed plan has peculiar interest at this juncture, for it is another argument in favour of the comprehensive plan, by which alone the full advantages of a steam communication with England can be extended to the Straights. For that purpose, however, there should be, as has been proposed, branch steamers running between Point de Galle and the Straights.

There has been another severe typhoon in the China Seas, in which the Canton, the Bilwano, the Ariel, and several other craft, were destroyed, or otherwise damaged.

CHINA.

Canton papers to the 21 of December last, have been received. The intelligence they contain is important. Captain Elliott, the Superintendent, has been ordered to leave Canton and return to Macao, after having struck the British flag. The reason assigned for this proceeding by Captain Elliott is, that in consequence of express instructions received by him from the British Government, as to the mode in which he was to communicate with the Viceroy, he had endeavoured to carry these instructions into effect; but that the Government had declined to agree to the conditions demanded by Captain Elliott. Another object has been fulminated against the shipping at Canton, in which the Superintendent is accused, in terms by no means equivocal, of con-niving at the opium smuggling. The sale of the drug was consequently very much retarded. The Hingto Hong affairs remain unaltered.

By the Sylph, Canton Registers to the 12th ultimo have been received. The difficulties in the smuggling trade seem to continue in full force, the deliveries for the first 8 days in December not exceeding 191 chests. As might have been expected, the attention of British Residents at Canton has been directed, under the unfavorable circumstances and prospect of our commercial relations with the Celestial authorities, to the utility of colonizing the Bonin Islands, which, from their close neighbourhood to Formosa, Japan, LewChoo, and the Eastern Coast of China, would form a most convenient and desirable position. A small pamphlet on the subject has been written by Mr. G. T. Lay, formerly naturalist in Captain Beechey's expedition, and now Agent of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Bazar Price Current, 27th January, 1838.)

Indico.—Notwithstanding the auction sale which took place on Wednesday last, there is very little yet doing in this important article, the clearances for France barely reaching 500 maunds, while at this period last year there had been upward of 15,000 exported to that quarter; as, however, the wants of the continent are known to be most urgent, we think, the longer holders remain firm the more likely are they to obtain ultimately fair and remunerating prices, a result which will be further insured should the Company, as is expected shortly, resume their advances.

The quantity put up for sale consisted of 392 chests, of which 296 chests found purchasers chiefly for the French market, as particularised below:

RAW SUGAR.—Transactions have been to a limited extent. The market is very heavy and prices are likely soon to fall to a safe standard again, which has not been the case for some weeks past.

SILK PIECE GOODS.—Active purchases have been made of Corahs for the English market, but the prices of the assortments are expected to give way.

COTTON.—Continues without enquiry. The prices asked in the interior, are much higher than the article is quoted here.

SALT.—Continues in limited operation, attributable to the same causes as stated in our last, and prices remain without alteration.

LAC.—The demand in both Shell Lac and Lac Dye is confined to a few parcels for the English market at former prices.

GRAIN.—A further slight advance is observed on the prices of all descriptions. The demand for Fine and Moonghy Rice continues; but operations are restrained from the want of tonnage.

OPIMUM.—The accounts per the Sylph from China are of the same gloomy cast as their predecessors—although owing to the apprehension of the Ariel and La-Hayes being lost, prices were nominally more firm than could have been expected; when, however, these two vessels were known to be forthcoming and their arrival took place in conjunction with the Ann, Syed Khan, Cowajee and Water Witch, (all likely to reach within a week or two of each other), it was anticipated that a heavy fall would instantly follow, and on the whole we regret to say the prospects of the trade were fully as unpromising as ever.

DINNER GIVEN TO THE HON. G. F. RUSSELL, ESQ.

The Dinner given to the Honourable G. F. Russell, Esq., at the Banqueting room, on Thursday evening, wore entirely the enthusiastic character we had anticipated for it. About 150 gentlemen assembled on the occasion, amongst whom were Lord Elphinstone (who presided at the entertainment), Sir Robert Comyn, the Honourable Mr. Sullivan, Major General Doveton, Sir Edward Gambier, the Honourable Mr. Lushington, Major General Vigoureux, with the heads of all departments, civil, military, and medical. A spacious tent was erected in front of the banqueting room to receive the thronging company, and a very well executed transparency was placed over the entrance to the hall displaying Mr. Russell's arms, supported on one side by the insignia of civil occupation, and on the other by military trophies amidst which the names of Kimey and Goussoor were intermingled, and the whole surmounted by the words, "Russell, Farewell!" This device had a very pleasing effect, and many a heart found a quickened motion when marking its token of adieu. Dinner was served up about eight o'clock in the usual recherché style found at the present day within the walls of that edifice which had been accorded for the entertainment; delicacies and luxuries covered the tables; the wines were cooled to a fault; and excellent vocal and instrumental music heightened the enthusiasm of the more stirring objects of the assemblage. We give below a list of the toasts, with the names of their proposers. Mr. Russell's health, it is scarcely necessary to say was received with the most rapturous cheering, and again and again did the burst of applause break forth, telling in its energy and enthusiasm how honest was the tribute to his eminent public character, and how sincere the appreciation of his private worth. The moment was one of proud gratification to the honoured and valued object of the warm offering; it told that, even amidst the proverbial indifference of Indian life, a guerdon of popular esteem and affection is still within attainment, and Mr. Russell must have felt that the convincing proof lay before him of his having nobly and truly won it. But the tide of recollection carried him back over thirty-five years of honourable service; he thought of companions in its long career, many of whom he beheld around him; he felt that he was about to part from those who had just proclaimed the warmth of their affectionate regard, and we need not wonder, that over come by his feelings, he was able alone to falter forth the expression of his thanks and the saddened words of farewell.

Several very neat and effective speeches were delivered in the course of the evening, and the party went off in the happiest manner, all evidently partaking in one common feeling on the occasion that brought them together, and communicating it to all the social agrémens of the evening.

We extract the following most deserved tribute to the Hon'ble Mr. GEORGE RUSSELL's public service from last evening's Official Gazette.

"The Hon. G. E. Russell, Esq. has been permitted to resign his seat in Council and the Honourable Company's service, from the date of his embarkation to England on the ship True Briton.

The Right Hon. the Governor in Council cannot permit the Hon. G. E. Russell, Esq. to quit India without an expression of his deep regret at the loss which the public interests will sustain by the retirement from the service of an officer whose experience and ability, whose zeal, judgment and temper in circumstances of responsibility and difficulty have been repeatedly recognised by the Government.

The Right Honourable the Governor in Council requests Mr. Russell to accept his grateful acknowledgment of the assistance and advantage which the Government has derived from his services at the Council Board, and his best wishes for his health and happiness in his native country." — Ibid.

FREE PRESS DINNER AT THE TOWN HALL.

One hundred and ninety-six gentlemen sat down to dinner at the Town-hall to celebrate the emancipation of the Indian Press, and to do honor to its noble liberator, Sir Charles Theophilus Metcalfe, who had been especially invited as the guest of the evening the annual celebration, which is on the 15th of December having been postponed to the 9th of February on that account. Mr. Longueville Clark presided in the Chair and Mr. Henry Meredith Parker in the vice chair. At a quarter past seven, the Honorable Baronet arrived at the hall, and was received at the door by the stewards in a body and ushered upstairs. At half past seven the friends of the Free Press dinner was announced, Sir Charles sat at the head of the table, between the Chairman and R. D. Mangles, Esq. There were several native gentlemen present, among whom we noticed Rannauth Tagore, Prossanna Coomarr Tagore, Rustomjee Cowajee, and Manjee Rustomjee, Esqrs. The dinner and the wines were excellent and about nine o'clock the hall being cleared of the servants the first toast was announced.

THE CHAIRMAN.—A bumper, gentlemen, to our youthful Sovereign. Under ordinary circumstances I should have proposed this toast unaccompanied by any remarks, and have left it to be drank with that feeling of loyalty, which I believe is common to the breast of every subject of the British Crown. But the present are no ordinary circumstances: we are assembled here to commemorate a great political event, the liberation of the Indian Press, and this is the first meeting we have held since that Sovereign ascended the throne, who has proved her attachment to the principles we advocate, by continuing the Ministry, who gave reform to England. (Loud cheering). Well then may she be dear to her people. Those whose proximity places them within the influence of the Royal and youthful fascinator, may be pardoned for that fervent enthusiasm, with which she appears to have inspired all ranks in England. Even we, whose feelings must be dulled by the distance which intervenes, gaze on her as a creature of a rare order, on whom endowments have been poured, which, collectively, are seldom attainable. Possessed of the love of her relatives, the affection of her friends, the esteem of the nation; rank, which makes her pre-eminent in the world, fortunes which distance the idea of necessity; talents to rule in public; accomplishments to hallow retirement; beauty to fascinate; youth to enjoy: these are gifts individually estimable, in their union—unparalleled.

Quo nihil magis melioris tuis
Fata donavere, bonique Divi,
Nec dubites, quamvis redeant in aurum.

Tempora precum.

Up then, gentlemen, and with brimming glasses drink to the prosperous reign and happy life of our youthful Queen, Victoria. (The toast was drunk with immense cheering.)

Air.—"God save the Queen."

THE CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen; it is now my duty to give you the most important toast of the evening. THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS IN INDIA. (This announcement was received with the most tremendous applause, waving of handkerchiefs, and the demonstrations of enthusiasm lasting several minutes; the Chairman frequently attempting to continue his address, but swept by the reiterated shouts from all parts of the room. When the burst of feeling at last subsided, he continued.) So much has been said and written, and well said and well written, on the Freedom of the Press generally, that I shall not trespass on your time by descending on the enlarged view of the question, but confine myself to offering two remarks, the one regarding the origin of the periodical press, the other relating to the results to which it has led. To some of you it may not perhaps be known, that the Periodical Press of England owes its origin to the most despotic sovereign who ever swayed the British sceptre. Tyrannical as the race of the Tudors were, no one was more so than Queen Elizabeth. She protected her country from foreign aggression, but she was a despot over her people. Yet was she wise in her generation; and when she found, the liberties, the religion of the people were endangered by foreign invasion, and her crown at stake; she appealed to the nation for support, she roused its enthusiasm through the mighty engine of a Periodical Press, which was then for the first time established. But it was not more remarkable that the Periodical Press should have originated in the act of a tyrannical monarch to protect her empire, than were the results which that Press has produced. Look, gentlemen, at the map of the world, and dwell on the conditions of the countries, where the Press is fettered, and the Press is Free. (Loud cheers.) Look, gentlemen, at America and England, and compare them with any other nation on the globe. In these two states the people enjoy liberty to a degree beyond that, which is any where else to be found: they are wealthy, they are enlightened, while the countries themselves have no rivals in power. It is the people which make the country; it is the Free Press which has made the people. (Loud cheers.) Gentlemen; having briefly alluded to the origin and results of the Freedom of the Press, I now approach the immediate object of the toast, THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS IN INDIA. (Cheers.) Those who are opposed to it, admit the excellency of the institution in other countries, but they allege, that India is not prepared to receive it, and that peculiarities exist here, which make its introduction dangerous. On this point I come to issue at once, and affirm boldly, that of all countries, British India most requires the Freedom of the Press. (Cheers.) I draw no nice distinctions; I admit the local peculiarities which are relied upon, and I assert that it is the existence of these very peculiarities, which imperatively requires that the Press of India should be free. In support of this assertion, I appeal to the former and present state of this country, when the Press was restricted, and when the Press is Free. Many of you must remember the celebrated order of the 5th of April 1823, published by Government for the guidance and conduct of Editors. In that they were told, that they must not publish, nor republish any thing, nor even from the English papers,—which might impute the conduct or hurt the feelings of the King or any of the Royal Family,—the Court of Directors, or Authorities in England connected with India,—the Governor General, Members of Council, the Judges, Bishop, Government Officers, nor disturb the harmony or unanimity of Society. It they could have relied on the veracity of the small note which followed, true it is, that they had slight reason to complain; for the order gravely assured them, that these prohibitions imposed no onerous restrictions on free discussion, or publishing information. (Laughter.) Aye, gentlemen, those who only read the order, may well laugh, but the working of it was not calculable to prove a matter of mirth to the proprietors of the two journals which were suppressed, or to the two editors who were banished. (Cheers.) Such, gentlemen, was the state of the country when the Press was fettered, but what is its state now? Why, the first great point is, that we have the same law for the Press here as exists in England. The English who have come to this distant clime, have not left their liberty behind them; and the natives of the soil find that the English have brought liberty to them. (Cheers) I deny, gentlemen, that natives are desirous of a partial despotism.* Englishmen would banish despotism altogether. I deny that we want an atmosphere of liberty of our own;* but that liberty which is our birth-right we would not part with, and we would share it with our native fellow subjects. (Loud cheers.) In the present state of the country we do share with them the Liberty of the Press; and this is the first contrast between our present and former condition. The next contrast gentlemen, is, that a system has been introduced alike beneficial for the governors and the governed. For the governors it is beneficial, for it not only dissipates discontent, but it discloses it in the germ by exposing the causes by which it is generated. Well did my friend Mr. Tindal say, when speaking from this chair, no man commits treason in a newspaper; and well did he allude to the evidence of Sir John Malcolm, who disclosed the seditious libels which had secretly been circulated among the native soldiery, exciting them to mutiny and the murder of their officers. That, gentlemen, could never have happened in a newspaper. (Cheers.) But now, gentlemen, let me also recall to your recollection the peculiar situation of a Governor-General. In him the fault is not, but it is in the system. He may be the wisest, the most talented, and the best of men, yet when he lands on these shores, what does he know of the country, the people, their language, their habits, customs, or laws? He has to rule the destinies of eighty millions, without possessing those indispensable essentials for governing, experience, and local knowledge. He must either be a useless tool in the hands of those who surround him, or, if he be deaf to their advice, his ignorance is his only guide. To this vast evil one remedy has been found, the freeing of the Indian Press. If injustice be practised, there the injured can complain; if suggestions are to be offered, they can be the proclaimed, and canvassed by the public, who may support their merits, or point out their inutilty. What were the words of Lord William Bentinck to the deputation of which I formed one? I repeat them in the presence of many who heard them with myself. "THAT HE HAD DERIVED MORE INFORMATION FROM THE INDIAN PRESS, OF THE REAL STATE OF THE COUNTRY, THAN FROM ALL THE COUNCILS, ALL THE BOARDS, AND ALL THE SECRETARIES BY WHOM HE WAS SURROUNDED." (Loud cheers.)

Let me now, gentlemen, examine how far the Freedom of the Press conduces to the good of the governed. First, it confers on us freedom of discussion, which is the birth-right of every freeman. The stajesty of the people is no idle phrase, for it imports that, which is really the case, that the true sovereignty is in the nation, and not in the ruler. All kings, all governors, are in fact but the servants of the state, placed at its head for their talents, their knowledge, and their virtues, justly respected for these qualities, and looked up to with gratitude for the benefits they dispense. I abate not one tittle from the honor which is their due, and yield to no man for the respect in which I hold them. Yet is the government of the state entrusted to their care, not because it is their property, not because the people are their selfs or slaves;—but in order that they may faithfully discharge the duties of governing. (Cheers.) Can it be endured then, that the people for whom they hold these trusts are not to question their acts, or that the rights of discussing the measures of their rulers is to be denied to the state, for whose service and weal they have been crowned? Hence, gentlemen, is it, that freedom of discussion is a freeman's birth-right; and by freeing the Press you benefit the governed; by freeing the Press you likewise extend the blessings of knowledge and enlighten the people,—a measure which all allow is of vital importance to India. In those countries where the Press is most free, is knowledge most diffused. It not only imparts instruction, but excites to learning, and the man who is opposed to the freeing of the Indian Press, must be the foe to enlightening the natives. (Loud cheers.) But, gentlemen, a stronger argument still remains. Free the Press, and you strengthen the bond of union between the native and the British subject. (Loud cheers.) Free the Press, and you teach the natives what European countries are; what England is; you make them familiar with your laws, your manners, your arts, your sciences, your comforts, luxuries, wealth and independence; they draw the contrast between the state of things there, and in their own country here; they perceive the difference between the spear and sword, the rapine and violence of the Mahatras and Pindarees, and the protection of property and person by Law. (Loud cheers.) Tell me then, will not the native find himself drawn towards the land and the nation who give him security and justice, in exchange for destruction and plunder? Tell me, will not the bond of union be strengthened? And this is what the Freedom of the Press in India will assuredly achieve. (Loud cheers.) Gentlemen; have I drawn the sketch correctly?—Have I correctly portrayed the past and present state of the country, when the Press was enthralled, and when the Press is free? Have I shown you the blessings it bestows on the governors and governed? If your hearts respond to these sentiments, up, I say, and drink to the "Freedom of the Indian Press." (The toast was drunk with immense cheers.)

Air.—"See the conquering hero comes."

VICE-PRESIDENT.—Gentlemen I have the honor to propose to you a toast that will not, I know, fail to be received with all those demonstrations of attachment and respect to which it is richly and honestly entitled. I have to name to you a nobleman who, though far away, cannot but view with interest all things bearing upon so vital a question as the Freedom of the Indian Press. Gentlemen; I will not for a moment allow myself to believe, that any one whose heart is in the right place, that any one who is upright, honest, benevolent, sagacious, and feele-s of scrutiny into his public acts, full of a sense public duty, can be otherwise than a friend to the Free Press in India. If then, these things give a guarantee of such friendship, assuredly the illustrious person I now name to you, must be such a friend, for all the qualities I have enumerated are eminently his, gentlemen—THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL. (Cheers.)

Air.—"Here's a health to those that's awa."

THE PRESIDENT.—Gentlemen; charge your glasses with a bumper. The toast I am about to propose to you, will speak for itself, and requires no introductory remarks from me. Gentlemen, I give you The Navy of England. (Loud cheers.)

Air.—"Rule Britannia."

VICE-PRESIDENT.—Gentlemen; it is my duty to propose a toast to you, and the labour is the labour of love, or I should say with greater truth, no labour at all, but a real pleasure. Gentlemen; my toast is the British Army. (Cheers) I know there has been discussion infinite touching the politics of the British Army. Whether it was Whiggish or Toryish, Reformatory or Conservative—whether it loved a Free Press or did not love a Free Press,—for my own part, I will own to you candidly, that I don't care one fig what its politics are, or what its feelings are, on the question I have hinted at,—it is sufficient for me to know, that through long years of peril and gloom, the British Army fought and bled, that the hearths and the altars of their country might not be polluted by a foreign foe. (Cheers.) It is sufficient for me to feel that it placed between a terrible enemy and our pleasant fields and native homes, the iron barrier of its indomitable valour. (Cheers.) I can no more bring myself to care for the politics of our brave soldiers, than I can care for those of that glorious chief who led them crowned with victory from the rock of Lisbon to the gates of Toulouse, and from the wood of Songes to the towers of Notre Dame. (Cheers.) But in this assembly my toast has a peculiar title to receive all the honors. The British Army, gentlemen, everywhere met and baffled the most despotic, the most formidable enemy of a Free Press which the world ever saw. Admitting all his greatness, all his magnificent and richest qualities, yet there never lived a fiercer hater, a more inexorable tyrant, where the liberty of the Press was concerned, than Napoleon Bonaparte. (Cheers.) But the hour of retribution came, and the murder,—I will call it by no other title,—the foul murder of the unfortunate Palm of the poor bookseller, whom the despot crushed in wrath and in scorn, was gloriously revenged on the Plains of Waterloo, by THE BRITISH ARMY. (Much cheering.)

* Alluding to the charge brought against the British Inhabitants by Mr. T. B. Macaulay on the debate on the India Bill in the House of Commons.

Air.—“British Grenadiers.”

THE CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen; another bumper, and let this be the fullest you can fill. I have given you the freedom of the Indian Press; I have endeavoured to describe the immeasurable blessings it will confer on this country; but my toast now is the health of him to whom we owe that boon? our distinguished guest, Sir Charles Metcalfe. (Enthusiastic cheering which continued for a long time.) I shall not, gentlemen, detain you long, for more I cannot say, than what I have already uttered, regarding the value to India of the freedom of the Press, nor can I say more regarding our obligation to Sir Charles Metcalfe, than that it is to him, to his wisdom, his decision, his independence, we are indebted for that incalculable blessing. But surprising as are the claims of Sir Charles Metcalfe on us, for this great act, how well are they supported by the history of his Indian life. (Loud cheers.) Look at him in every relation of Society; the hospitable host, the friend of the social circle, the charitable reliever of distress, the munificent patron of useful institutions, the assiduous officer of Government; the statesman who cared for the empire! (Cheers.) Were I to seek for that, to which I might compare him, I should find it in the striking feature of this country, where numerous and magnificent streams flow through, and fertilize vast tracts of land, till uniting together, they form a mighty river, bearing on its bosom the riches and commerce of the kingdom, and constituting the source of all its greatness. So with Sir Charles Metcalfe: his assiduity, his talent; his munificence, his charities, his judgment, firmness, and integrity, are the qualities resembling those rich streams, and uniting in him as they have done, they have given to India, that great statesman who has proved the pillar of her empire. (Immense cheering.) I give you, gentlemen, prosperity, health and happiness to Sir Charles Metcalfe, the liberator of the Indian Press. (The toast was received as it merited, and many minutes elapsed before Sir Charles could obtain a hearing, so prolonged and enthusiastic was the cheering.)

Air.—“Charlie is my darling.”

SIR CHARLES METCALFE, rose and was again greeted with cheers, which were continued in one universal burst for about five minutes. The worthy Baronet seemed deeply affected, but recovering himself, he said:—Gentlemen, you have so overwhelmed me with your kindness, that I find myself quite unable to give expression to my feelings, or to return my thanks as I could wish. I possess not the eloquence of my friend, the president, to enable me to do so; but I believe with him, and with you, that a Free Press is a blessing in any country; (Much cheering) and I perfectly concur in all he has said in praise of it as applied to this. (Cheers.) We have ample proof of the vast benefits accruing from a Free Press in our own country and in America; and it was on this proof that I acted as I did here, respecting the Freedom of the Press. (Cheers.) I will proceed no further on the subject of the emanipation of the Press. Were I before another tribunal, I might defend that measure; (Defending cheers.) but to do so here, is evidently quite unnecessary—perfectly superfluous. (Much cheering.) You are all with me. (Cheers.) I shall conclude, gentlemen, with thanking you, first for the honor you have done me in inviting me to this party in celebration of the Freedom of the Press; (Cheers.) and, secondly, for the exceeding kindness with which you have just drunk my health. (Much cheering.)

MR. DICKENS.—Gentlemen; one cheer more to the honestest statesman we have ever had. (Defending and long-continued cheering.)

C. R. PRINSEP, ESQ.—Gentlemen; we are met to celebrate the anniversary of the Liberated Press of India in the presence of its illustrious liberator; and I am not surprised when I consider it is the last time he will join in its celebration, that his presence should have been hailed with such enthusiasm. But we must not allow the interest of the occasion to divert our attention altogether from the grand object of our meeting, or to forget that much yet remains to be done. It is not enough that the Freedom of the Press should be declared by the statute or advanced by regulation, nor is it sufficient that it should be guarded by all the provisions that the ingenuity of man or of Law Commissioners can devise. No true friend of the Press will rest satisfied until he sees it placed under the safeguard of the sole palladium of civil society—Trial by Jury. (Much cheering.) I see, gentlemen, I have touched a chord that thrills through all your hearts. I am content with that expression of your feelings; but I cannot sit down without drawing your attention to the facts that the Press of India enjoys little of that security. It is only in the King's Courts that it can appeal to a jury at all, and in those courts it has no such appeal, except upon a criminal charge. All its civil liabilities are left to the absolute discretion of the Judges, which English principles and English practice have denounced as a most unsafe tribunal. I have done enough to draw your attention to the necessity of going a step further, and obtaining the security of jury trial in all cases where the Press is concerned. That point gained, all will be safe, all will be permanent. Tories may combine against it, Whigs may job, and Benthamites may blunder on; the Press shall bring its enemies to the ground one after another, when it shall be enabled to launch its weapons from underneath theegis of jury trial. Gentlemen, let us, therefore, drink in a full bumper, Trial by Jury, the bulwark of the Freedom of the Press. (Cheers.)

THE CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen; Mr. Prinsep has just touched a chord which has thrilled through your hearts; I will now cause a chord to be touched, which will thrill through your ears. Mr. Stocqueler, will you kindly commence?

Mr. Stocqueler, with much effect, sang

In the glorious old days of the glorious old Bess, (Though she scarce would have suited the present,
I guess!)

The chronicles say that a Newspaper first,
On the wondering eyes of our Forefathers burst.

Sing Ballinamora Ora

Ballinamora Ora

Ballinamora Ora

Huzza for the Press is now free!

‘T was a real “Court Journal,” you all may be sure,
Telling only such truths as such Queens might endure,
For in those times in ink it was dangerous to dip,
When the ears were snipp’d off, if the pen made a slip,
Sing, &c. &c. &c.

Alas! little better, three lustres ago,
Were we of this land, as all present well know,
When the Sensor with witless and pitiless shears, Lopp'd an Editor's brain though he cropp'd not his ears.

Sing, &c. &c. &c.

And in recenter times when the Licence so dread,
Like a sword was hung over each Editor's head;
Our hopes and our fortunes a breath had swept down,
If a word of reproof made a Governor frown.

Sing, &c. &c. &c.

But Freedom's fair hand hath our manacles snapt,
And the Press in her own sacred panoply wrapt;
And though despots may hate it and dotards may fear,
Yet to liberty's votaries that act shall be dear.

Sing, &c. &c. &c.

Aye, and still by her friends, through the world, shall be lov'd,

His name, who that badge of our slavery remov'd;
And year after year shall resound in this hall,
The glory of METCALFE who freed us from thrall.

Sing, &c. &c. &c.

Then fill every glass with bright wine to the brim,
And freedom shall hallow the toast that's for him;
Let our hearts prompt our voices to thrice three times three,

While we shout through the welkin "The Press is made Free!"

Sing, &c. &c. &c.

THE CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen; my friend, the Vice-Chairman, at the bottom of the hall, and my other friends under his care, have not been uniformly orderly in their proceedings this evening, and I feel a little jealous that at a festivity given in the cause of Freedom, they should have all the disorder to themselves. (A laugh.) As I cannot set, I shall therefore follow the example, and break through the order of the toasts. We have drank, gentlemen, the Freedom of the Press and its Liberator, but there's another to whom the Press owes great obligations. If it needed any argument to recommend to you the object of my toast, I know I need but mention the high opinion which Sir Charles Metcalfe entertains of him, and the sincere esteem with which he prizes him as an enlightened statesman, and a friend of India. Gentlemen, it was Lord William Bentinck (loud cheering.) I say it was Lord William Bentinck who first practically set the Press of India free; for from the moment that he landed on these shores, to the hour that he left them, the restrictions existed but in name. Let me recall to you also, gentlemen, his uniform support of the cause of Steam Navigation. It is he that has sent the boats to the distant provinces by inland navigation; it is he who is nobly advocating the scheme in England; and though he has left our shores, he has not deserted our interests. (Cheering.) I could dwell on many other strong claims he has on your gratitude, but need I do more than give our late Governor-General, Lord William Bentinck, the friend of the Press, the staunch advocate of Steam. (Drank with loud cheers.)

THE CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen; previous to our proceeding to the next toast on the list, permit me to read to you a letter I have received from a gentleman now absent, but who is greatly respected and esteemed by you all; I mean my friend Dwarkanauth Tagore. (Cheers.) Mr. Clarke then read the following letter:—

LONGUEVILLE CLARKE, Esq.,

Chairman of the Free Press Festival.

• MY DEAR SIR,—It is a severe disappointment to me that the departure of the steam packet, only two days before our meeting, deprives me of the satisfaction to which I had so long looked forward, in common with my brother stewards and the friends of free printing, of holding our yearly festival in the presence of Sir Charles Metcalfe. But there is no help for it, and I can only beg you to assure the meeting and our greatly respected guest, that nothing but unavoidable necessity could have kept me away on such a great occasion as the celebration of the privilege of freely expressing our opinions on public measures and men.

It is my duty more particularly, as a native landlord and merchant, and more intimate than most of my countrymen, perhaps, with yours and with the nature of the Government under which this great and rising country is connected with England, to speak out on an occasion like the present. I sincerely believe that the liberating of the Press in India is one of the most valuable acts ever attempted by the Indian Government; it strengthens their own hands, and ears, and eyes, in ruling this vast region, and it is also a guarantee to the people that their rulers mean to govern with justice since they are not afraid to let their subjects judge of their acts.

Yours very truly,

DWARKANAUTH TAGORE.

Calcutta, 6th February, 1838.

THE VICE CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen; I rise under feelings of no ordinary embarrassment, with a greater mistrust, indeed, of my own powers to address a public assembly, very limited as I have always felt these powers to be, than I ever experienced in my life. It can scarcely be otherwise, for while I feel that no words of mine can do justice to the excellence of the good man and good citizen I am about to name to you, I am nervously anxious that one whom I am proud to call a dear and valued friend, should receive full justice at my hands. Hence my mistrust, hence my apprehensions. I am sensible that the public and private virtues of this admirable individual ought to be themes for some tongue "less unworthy of mine," at the same time I feel that my own friendship, instead of inspiring, makes me full of doubts,—doubts lest I should fulfil neither my own ideas on yours of the honor due to the name I am about to propose—yet why should I feel thus apprehensive? It ought to be no very difficult matter to illustrate what is already illustrious. Thank God, the honor due to the name connected with my toast depends upon a more solid foundation than my feeble words! That name is inscribed foremost amongst the foremost on the roll of those most distinguished for mercantile liberality and commercial enterprise. It is amongst the first, if not the very first, on the list of active, able and munificent citizens to whom the whole community is indebted. The name of my friend is revered by many whom he has saved or established in life by his judicious advice or his liberal assistance. It is written in the hearts of thousands who have partaken of his inexhaustible charity, who have had cause to bless his boundless benevolence, confined to no caste, colour, or creed. It shines brightly surrounded with all that is urbane and kind and courteous, on the tablets of social hospitality. It is heard in the halls of our colleges, in the porticos of those literary and scientific institutions which he has supported and enriched. It shines gloriously through an act, a recent act, of charity so princely, so magnificent, that I tax my memory in vain to discover a parallel to it within my own knowledge and experience. Above all, the name of this admirable citizen is inseparably connected with that cause whose triumph we have met this night to celebrate. Gentlemen, need I say after this that it is the name of Dwarkanauth Tagore. (Much cheering.) Here then we have in an individual,—though to a degree so eminent that we cannot expect it to be common,—the qualities and attributes which we desire to foster amongst his countrymen at large,—moral courage, integrity, liberality, self dependence, love of truth, a sense of right, a scorn of wrong, and a freedom from prejudice. (Cheers.) But what if we succeed in our endeavours to create analogous feelings, not only in those immediately around us in this metropolis, but in thousands, tens of thousands, millions, of their countrymen. If we inspire the masses—Aye, there's the rub. The question is a grave one, and demands grave consideration, let us think of it. I do not now address that party, for many of whom I have the highest esteem, but whom I must be permitted to designate as of the Silver-sick and Bara Sahib school, in reverence for whose mighty attributes the worthy Hindoo backed his horse or his ass into a ditch, on the approach of the majesty of the services, in the person of our departed friend, Indophilos—(Cheers and laughter.) the last person in the world, God knows, to require such an act of homage which filled him with astonishment and pity. (Laughter.) I do not, gentlemen, address this party. They are at least consistent. They would still legislate for India not after the A. Z. fashion but from the Vedas and the Koran. They would be great in Sanscrit and Arabic. They would enlighten the universal mind of India with the philosophy of Aristotle and the science of the Jewish Alchemists. They would have the people remain in the same free and happy state as when the successors of Savage levied chout, and the dues of the state were collected from the zemindars by the simple and effective process described in Mr. Harrington's analysis, of tying up their blue legs in company with some half dozen of cats in a pair of loose pantaloons. (Laughter.) As for the Press; no doubt this respectable party would be well content to allow the Press as much freedom and influence as would have been accorded to it, had they ever thought about the matter, by these liberal minded potentates Surajah Dowlah and Tippoo Sultan. But let that pass. This party is at least consistent, and a friend or foe I reverse an honorable consistency. (Cheers.) But I turn from them to another party, full of magnates and dignitaries and Education Committees, and School book Societies and Friends of India, and every thing that is genteel and superb, both here and at home—a party which attempts to carry into practice the in originaus absurdity—I know not how to designate it—the vain imagination of enlightening and educating and civilizing the people of India,—of giving them a love of truth and knowledge, which is in other words a love of freedom, yet at the same time shackling the Indian Press with fetters of iron and manacles of steel. (Cheers.) Nothing appears to me more absurd than this singular delusion—it is to the Greek's foolishness. I trust and believe that this party will not succeed in their sacred efforts again to manacle the Press; but if they do, then it seems to me self-evident that they must be prepared at once, not only to discourage, but altogether to prohibit and put down the study and acquirement of the English language. (Cheers.) Gentlemen; the explosive tendencies of steam and of all the combustible gases in the world are as nothing to those which would exist amongst a people conversant with the language of Milton and Junius, of Chatham and Brougham, of Franklin and Washington, yet prohibited by law from giving publicity to these sentiments with respect to the acts of their Government. (Cheers.) No; if the enemies of the Indian Free Press, to whom I now advert, wish to be consistent,—if they wish even for safety,—let them adopt in their projects of civilization, the civilizing language of Muscovy, or Cossack Tartary; but let them beware of English. For you shall as soon bind the light of the blessed sun with chains of iron as prevent a people familiar with the language of liberty from openly uttering their sentiments on the public measures of public men. (Much cheering.) But we may be told, "When English is familiar to every man who can read or who thinks, we will then place at the disposal of the community the means of publicly expressing their thoughts on the important point of Government, to wit, the Free Press. Giving the party I advert to credit for this intention, yet still surely it is a miserable delusion, it is as if one were to say, here is our charcoal, and our sulphur, and our saltpetre; while they are in separate heaps approach them not, even with a rush light or a dark lantern; but when we have mixed them, and grained them, and glazed them into gunpowder, then throw a lighted torch into the midst of the heap and it shall not explode. (Cheers.) Gentlemen; will these people never learn from experience,—are the lessons of history to be for ever lost upon them? What have we and our fathers seen for the past fifty years in France, in Spain, in Portugal, in Italy? Why, that wherever a Free Press has suddenly grown up amongst a people previously civilized,—mind, gentlemen, I say amongst a people previously civilized but yet wholly unfamiliar with its workings, wholly unprepared for it,—in other words, were the Free Press has not "grown with a nation's" intellectual growth and strengthened with its strength,—there it is no longer a beneficent spirit ministering to civilization, prosperity and happiness, but a revenging fiend "with Ate by her side come bottom hell" to cry "havoc and let slip the dogs of war," to spread strife, blood-shed, and misery. (Cheers.) Think not, however, that because I utter these opinions I undervalue the freedom of the Press. However introduced, its ultimate results are well worth a century of revolutions. I advert only to the facts, and in doing so I again ask, will the party I have alluded to never learn from experience? For I turn from the countries I have mentioned to another—I look "upon this picture and on this." I turn, gentlemen, to the United States. They also passed through the terrible ordeal of civil war; they too saw party in every village, almost in every family; factions in every city,—foreign armies in every field. But what was the result? The storm rolled over, the fiery strife, bloody—mark me, gentlemen—bloody, with few exceptions that history has almost forgotten them, only in the "tan field of lightning men." The hot strife died away, and left freedom, happiness, prosperity and national character, which has nobly manifested itself, in our latest accounts from Home are to be relied upon in the conduct of the American merchants during the recent trying monetary crisis. (Cheers.) Whence is the cause of the mighty difference which I have noticed? I answer confidently in the pre-existence of a Free Press in the present United States; (Cheers.) to the people being familiar with a Free Press in all its bearings, including those political and social benefits to Society to which a Free Press is essential, and which are as inseparable from its constant presence amongst a people, as harmony and beauty are inseparable from the work of creation. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen, I know not by what process of ratiocination it occurs, but the idea of a Free Press is invariably associated in my mind with Highland Whiskey. (Laughter.) I believe there are those here who will bear me out in the assertion, that as soon as the young Gael enters the world, he is made familiar with the virtues of "mountain dew." From thenceforward he never relaxes in the laudable attachment thus early fostered. It is good that it should be so. It is good for the Highland constitution, to enable the shepherd on the mountain, the fisherman on the lake, the hunter in the glen, to contend against the storms of a humid and severe climate. At the age of discretion a pint bicker or quinquina, I believe, is the term of the veritable Farintosh, is but a comforting and wholesome draft; for the drinker hath ever been used to it. But give the same medicine to one who has not been taught to reverence the virtues of this elixir vite from his youth upwards, and instead of promoting a wholesome circulation, a cheerful glow through his entire frame, it makes him a mad, ungovernable savage. (Laughter.) Gentlemen; I pray of you to pardon this long digression; charitably think that I have inadvertently mounted my hobby horse and that he has run away with me. I return to the subject of my toast and I could return to none more worthy or more noble. (Cheers.)

Dwarkanauth Tagore, then, is inseparably connected with our good and just cause. (Cheers.) At the time when all was apathy or dismay; at the time of the passing of the Press Law, Dwarkanauth Tagore and his illustrious friend, who sleeps with the just, alone stood forth to fight the good fight. (Cheers.) On the first celebration of this anniversary, we were told by no mean authority, that Dwarkanath Tagore had spent thousands with no other object than the Freedom of the Press. They went to charges gentlemen,—heavy charges which, after all, is no bad test of men being in earnest. "Kill a man's family," says Byron, "and he may brook it," but keep your hands out of his breeches' pocket." (Laughter.) They went to charges, gentlemen, they entertained counsel to argue against the registration of the Law in the Supreme Court; they petitioned the Parliament; they stood, in short, like those described in the beautiful lines of Moore.

"Night closed around the conqueror's way."

Night, gentlemen, always closes round the way of any conqueror or who triumphs over the Press.

"Night closed around the conqueror's way,

And lightning shewed the distant hill,

Where those who lost that dreadful day

Stood few and faint but fearless still."

Manfully did this little band of patriots stand in the breach; manfully did they continue to hope when "Hope seemed none." (Cheers.) In the hour of our triumph, let not these brave hearts be forgotten. One has, as the French happily express it "gone to immortality." But the noble, the admirable survivor, can still enjoy the applause of his fellow citizens, can still know that his name, "is in our flowing cups freshly remembered." (Cheers.) I call upon you, therefore, to pledge me with hearts and voices, with three times three and all the honors. "The principal survivor amongst the native champions of a Free Press, DWARKANATH TAGORE." (Much and enthusiastic cheering.) Air.—"For Auld Lang Syne."

BABOU RAMNATH TAGORE.—Gentlemen; in consequence of the departure of Dwarkanath Tagore from Calcutta, owing to his ill health, I regret extremely he has been unable to join with you to night for the purpose of drinking the health of our distinguished guest, the liberator of the Indian Press. (Cheers.) But as he is absent, I think it is a duty incumbent on me, being his nearest relation, to return your thanks for the honor you have done him in drinking his health. (Applause.)

J. F. LEITH, Esq.—Gentlemen; the toast which I have the honor to propose, is preceded by the name of a man whom living England honored, and whom dead India has cause to mourn! To you who know the moral and intellectual condition of the natives of this country—the boldness, the independence, the enlightened views of the late Rammohun Roy, (Cheers.) must be convincing proofs of his superiority over the great mass of his fellow countrymen. While these characteristics command for his memory unfeigned respect, they must induce you to admit the appropriateness of coupling his name with the present toast. "The enlightenment of the people of India." (Cheers.) It is no doubt true, that many of his youthful fellow-countrymen, with their present advantages, may soon rival him in mere extent of knowledge, but no other will draw to himself that wonder and admiration which Rammohun Roy's advent excited, at a time when, relatively speaking, moral and intellectual darkness spread itself over the length and breadth of the land. His is the praise of having first, by the inherent force of a superior intellect, burst the swaddling-bands of prejudice and caste, which keep the mind in a state of helpless infancy, to assume the full stature and to assert the natural prerogatives of a reasonable being,—a thinking man! (Cheers.) His name is linked to his country's history, and to the cause of freedom, and must, on account of his unwearying efforts to improve the political and social condition of the people of India, in after ages, ranked among the most honored names of his countrymen, although during his life it was his fate, like that of many now to be found occupying proud niches in the Temple of Fame, to be treated by his country with neglect, if not with scorn. What pleasure would it have given his mind, had he now been alive, to have witnessed our meeting this evening, under the auspices of our honored guest, to commemorate the liberation of the Indian Press, an object most dear to his heart, and by him petitioned for and advocated! (Cheers.) To have witnessed also the impulse which has been given, by the praiseworthy exertions of Government, of Societies, and of private individuals, to the cause of education, the great means for the enlightenment of the people of India. By promoting education we make some return to the people among whom we live for the riches, which are drawn from their country; for through education we will teach them how to improve the natural, and how to create new sources of wealth, and will raise them, in a moral point of view, in the scale of nations. This is our duty. It ought also to be an object of our ambition, as no sure method could be adopted to falsify the prediction, "that were we driven from this country no monument of state or beneficence would be left behind." The enlightenment of the people of India will be a monument of our rule more gigantic and lasting than the Pyramids themselves. They are but a senseless mass to mark the place of sepulture of a few dead kings. Ours will be a living monument to speak to latest ages of the resuscitation of whole people! (Loud cheers.) I have only now to request you to drink to the memory of Rammohun Roy, and to bespeak your best wishes and exertions for "the enlightenment of the people of India." (Drank in solemn silence.)

BABOU PROSUNNO COOMAR TAGORE.—Gentlemen; as a friend of the late Rammohun Roy, and one who was glad to participate, though in a minor degree, in the persecutions he suffered, and as a native of India, I need to offer you my warmest thanks for the honor you have done to the memory of my late lamented friend, and for the interest you have expressed for the improvement of my country. When you hear that we complain of opposition on the part of Government as regards the improvement of our country and the cause of education, I wish you not to understand that we mean to say, that it has totally neglected to perform its duty, but that it has not done so much in this respect as it ought and could have done. The day when the distinctions of color, caste, and religion, and the difference between conquerors and conquered will be totally banished, is, I am happy to say, fast approaching, when we shall be treated not as conquered but as fellow subjects of the British crown. (Cheers.)

Some have thought fit to surmise, that by the diffusion of education among the people of India, the connexion between her and England will ultimately be dissolved. These people, I say, are quite wrong; because, if gratitude be a feeling inherent in human nature, and if education and enlightenment tend to cherish that feeling, how can it be asserted, that if India owe to England, her mother country, a heavy debt of gratitude for her enlightenment, that she will prove an ungrateful daughter! No, on the contrary, education, and allowing to the people of India the exercise of the political privileges regarding the English, as at home, is the surest way of establishing British rule in India on the firmest basis.

Although, gentlemen, you perceive but a small number of my countrymen present this evening to do honor to the occasion, yet I have reason to believe, that it will not be long ere this cause of complaint against them will be removed. The day will soon come when in this hall and on such an occasion, your number will not command so overwhelming a majority, but rather be in the minority.

I cannot, gentlemen, proceed further. Though thoughts I have not language sufficient at command to express them, I therefore conclude with again returning you my warmest thanks for the honor you have done me by the last toast. (Cheers.)

THE CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen, you have drank to two of the earliest and most staunch supporters of the Press; I have now to apologize for the absence of another old friend of the good cause, James Pattle. Domestic afflictions keep him away, or he most assuredly would have been here (Cheers.)

T. DICKENS, Esq., rose and was greeted with enthusiastic cheers, which seemed to affect and embarrass him very much. After a short pause he said.—Gentlemen; your kindness almost overpowers me, I rose to purpose to you the "Indian Press," wishing to dwell upon the subject, but I fear I shall be unable to do justice to it. Permit me to vivify and personify, as far as the past is concerned, that abstraction which we call the Indian Press, and recall to your memory a few, and but a few, of those whom I have known as its avowed and responsible conductors: all friends, I am proud to say, of my own, and all, as you will admit, worthy of the public esteem. The end and aims of the Press of India may be well judged of by a bare mention of the names of those who were engaged in it. Let me recall to you those of Fullarton, of Compton, of John Grant, of William Adam, of James Sutherland, (may I be pardoned for speaking too of myself as one of those men,) of my friend long since gone, Dr. Abel, whom many of you must remember personally, and most knew by reputation. Many recollections crowded upon and make me, however much I desire it, incapable of doing justice to this toast. From those names of its avowed conductors which I have given you, and to the list many more names equally worthy might be added, every one may judge of what has been the general character of the periodical Press in this country. I give you, gentlemen, the INDIAN PRESS. (Loud cheers.)

MR. SAMUEL SMITH.—Gentlemen; though labouring under rather severe indisposition, I rise with pleasure to express, as well as I am able, the acknowledgements of the Press, for the toast just proposed by Mr. Dickens, which has been so flatteringly received by this company. After the very eloquent addresses you have listened to from the excellent Chairman, Mr. Clarke, and other highly talented gentlemen, who have said all that can be advanced on the subject, it would be a vain endeavour to address myself to you on the value and importance of a Free Press. I shall not, therefore, make the attempt. Besides, on two former occasions when I had the happiness to meet many of the gentlemen I now see around me, to commemorate the glorious event of the Emancipation of the Indian Press, I had opportunities of which I availed myself freely and fully to describe the former state of the Press, and express the deep obligations of its conductors to its honorable and magnanimous liberator. (Cheers.) I shall not, therefore, now detain you by any repetition of the experiences of the olden time, when the unfortunates of the Indian Press dragged on a shackled existence, disgusting to themselves, and contemptible in the eyes of the public. From these shackles,—we acknowledge the boon with the most grateful feelings,—they were freed by the magnanimous Act of Sir Charles Metcalfe. (Loud cheers.)

It is true that we had long enjoyed by suffrance, under Lord William Bentinck (and even under Lord Amherst, in a lesser degree,) nearly the same freedom of expression, we have since practised under the law; but none of us knew the day, the hour, when the death, departure or supercession of a liberal Governor by a Tory Lord, an enemy to liberal measures and freedom of discussion, might again plunge us into the depths of that disgraceful thralldom from which we have been liberated by Sir Charles Metcalfe. (Cheers.) The new Governor, finding a Press-gagging law on the books, might easily enforce it unobstructed by the difficulties which would attend the concoction of a new law. What would then have been our humiliating position?

Who that had ever tasted of freedom would again patiently submit to bondage,—to bondage of the worst description,—to bondage of the mind,—to prohibition of the free expression and interchange of opinions between men, by nature and by habit free. Not I, for one, and I had accordingly looked forward gloomily to the daily expected arrival of Lord Hayesbury, and the departure of Sir Charles Metcalfe in 1835. But the bright star of the Indian Press was in the ascendant. Lord Hayesbury came not, and Sir Charles Metcalfe remained our Supreme Governor, long enough to fulfil his noble intention: he passed the glorious white act of 1835,—he gave Freedom by Law to the Press of India. For this one act, if for no other, his memory will live in the grateful recollection of all who prize freedom of thought, freedom of expression, Freedom of Press,—and who does not? England, to which happy land, the head-quarters of the Free Press, our liberator is now proceeding, will receive him with open arms,—will join the friends of freedom in India, in loud acclaim—will hail with joy the arrival on their shores of Sir Charles Metcalfe, the Liberator of the Indian Press. (Much applause.)

Gentlemen, as a member of the once shackled, now free Press of India, I thank you for the honorable mention of our tribe,—for your handsome reception of the toast, and I trust that the Press of India will never disgrace the good opinion which, after some years of trial, you appear to entertain of it. (Cheers.)

CAPT. T. J. TAYLOR.—(Madras Army).—The toast, gentlemen, I have now to propose, requires but few prefatory remarks on my part, for it is one which will at once strike home to every patriot breast. There is one country dear to every Englishman,—one people for whom our earliest sympathies are enlisted. Need I say that that country is Poland? whose heroic struggles, alike in the past and present century, are above all praise, and from the most touching portion of modern history. (Cheers.) On such an occasion as this, when met to commemorate the anniversary of the day on which, after a long but happily a bloodless struggle, the safeguard of our liberties, the palladium of our rights in this country, the freedom of the Press was achieved, the fate of that unhappy people demands our especial sympathy; for of all the sufferers in the cause of Freedom none have experienced such woes as Poland. (Cheers.) Who is not familiar with that tale of woe, and has not mourned over the fate of her gallant defenders? Who has not breathed a heartfelt anathema against the tyrant conquerors of her soil, of her princes, nobles, warriors? How many fell before the oppressor's sword, or expiated on the scaffold the crime of having defended their country! (Cheers.) How many were swept away to the snows of Siberia; others thrust into dungeons,—fit tenelements only for the adder or the toad,—how many linked in chain-gangs on the ramparts of Warsaw, while others hardly less wretched, and stripped of their possessions, were driven forth in banishment and poverty, to seek subsistence, as they best might, in foreign lands! Such was the treatment the men experienced, the women were treated worse. Every insult and outrage that rage could dictate or ingenuity invent has been wreaked on that ill-fated race. Females even of the noblest blood of Europe, were made to labour on the roads, the scoff of mocking soldiery, exposed to insult, outrage, the chain and the scourge; and of their offspring, sucklings were torn from their mother's breasts and dashed headlong from the ramparts of Warsaw, as if in derision of the walls so gallantly defended by their unhappy sires, while others of larger growth were sent off to Siberia or to military colonies thousand of miles distant, and—horrible cruelty!—their names were changed so as to prevent the possibility of tracing, in after years, their present destination. And for what were all these miseries inflicted on this noble people, the bravest of the brave, the most injured of the oppressed? For what, but for claiming fulfilment of a constitution guaranteed to them by the most solemn treaties, and for venturing to dream they might yet be free? They have failed for a time, and misery has invaded their hearths; but the spirit of that race is yet unbroken and the hour of retribution will surely come. It cannot be, that the moan of the widowed mother,—the cry of the fatherless child, or the groan of the patriot, calling in dying agony on his fellowmen to avenge his death, on his God to save his country, will have ascended to Heaven in vain! The hour will yet arrive, when overgrown, bloated Russia, that cradle of treachery and despotism, shall pay in tears of agony and blood for the infamous wrongs she has heaped on Poland. (Much applause.) That the hour of reckoning is not far distant; that Sarmatia may resume her proud place among nations, and justice be rendered to her chivalric but suffering sons, is the hope and wish of every true-hearted Briton. Up then all classes, and with one heart and one voice let us fervently unite in the patriot's toast—"The Regeneration of Poland." (Much enthusiastic cheering.)

"Tyrolese Air."

VICK CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen. Would that I could exchange my feeble voice for the inspiring eloquence of one of those old Spanish ballads of chivalry, which stir the heart as with the sound of a trumpet, while I propose to you our next toast. It is "The cause of Constitutional liberty in Spain and Portugal." (Cheers.) That this holy cause will ultimately triumph I cannot doubt, not for a moment,

"For freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeathed by bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft it is ever won."

But ever while the struggle lasts it affords, if ever earthly events afforded it, an example and a warning to us in this country. The atrocities which have distinguished this fearful contest are the continual theme of liberty. Whence arise those atrocities? Again I maintain what I have but a short time since upheld, that they have their original chiefly in that state of darkness in which the people of Spain and Portugal have been kept for centuries, until now when their eyes are opened they cannot bear the light. I will put a question. Does any one believe that if by any strange chance, a Free Press had been granted on the institutions of Spain in the days of Charles the Fifth, when the intellect of the nation was comparatively young;—does any one believe, I say, that in such a case the revolutions of the few past years, or at least what has been most fearful and deplorable in those revolutions, would have occurred in the days of Ferdinand and Christina, in the days when the intellect of the nation has arrived at maturity in all but the first knowledge of a wholesome liberty? The thing strikes me as a mere impossibility. Bloody revolutions are the offspring of grinding abuses,—of abuses even more fearful than the frantic efforts under which they perish. But with a Free Press in Spain and Portugal exposing abuses from the days of Charles the Fifth, there could have been few or none to overthrow in the days of the two queens who now reign in those lands. Is not this a warning and a lesson to us in India? But the night wears and I will not allow myself to dilate upon it; I will only call upon you to drink, with the honour my toast assuredly deserves, "The cause of Constitutional Liberty of Spain and Portugal." (Cheers.)

Air,—"Ca Ira."

DR. JOHN GRANT.—Much more practised speakers than myself have expressed a diffidence of their own powers in addressing you, gentlemen; you may well believe me then, when I declare that it is with the most unaffected distrust of my own capability to do it justice, that in obedience to the command of the chair, I rise to propose a toast. This is the less surprising, since it is a toast of rather large proportions; reminding me somewhat of the three gentlemen rolled into one. (A laugh.)

I had hoped that I might be permitted to remain a quiet spectator,—a sympathizing listener on this occasion; for though second to no one in the sincerity and warmth of feeling due to it, yet I could have preferred for several reasons giving a silent vote, but one from the bottom of my heart, for the continuance,—the permanent duration of the inestimable boon which we owe to that great and good man, whose presence confers such a deep interest upon, and I may add stamps with a character of solemn patting tenderness, this eve of civic commemoration.

But it may not be; our chairman (who with such rare felicity fulfils his task) has issued his mandate that I should speak, and deeming as I do cheerful obedience to all just behests of the ruling powers, and a proper respect for constituted authorities, the very basis upon which genuine and rational freedom rests, I bow to the wish of our president. Let me not, however, be misunderstood; no lurking or unmanly timidity as to consequences,—no trimming hesitation in declaring openly and freely my honest opinions when decorously expressed (for such I hold to be my inalienable birthright, of which no man can legally deprive me),—I say that no such unworthy feeling entered into the reasons that inclined me to be a listener rather than a speaker here, but a downright diffidence of myself, a grave doubt,—a doubt which still oppresses me, of my own power, (all unprepared as I am and more especially at such a late hour in the evening) to do justice to the toast which I hold in my hand. I appeal to yourselves, gentlemen, if I had not just reason to shrink from the somewhat formidable task of proposing a toast, comprising such a magnitude of interests, such boundless potentiality of good, such sublime aspirations of hope for the well-being of universal man as Constitutional freedom and civil religious liberty all over the world? Do I suppose that there is one person in the room, nay in this great city, who would object to drink that toast? No, certainly, I cannot imagine such a thing possible; I may as readily conceive the weary sojourner in the parched wilderness of this life, preferring the bitter pools of Marah to refreshing draughts from the living rock of Truth! And yet when I look around me, numerous and respectable as this assembly is, I miss many whom I regret not to see among us. Why is this? They differ from us perhaps in mere shades of opinion; and yet I can scarcely conceive but they must concur in the same conclusion, that I am sure all here have arrived at, that constitutional freedom, as civil and religious liberty, cannot co-exist along with a gagged Press. Be that as it may, the march of improvement will on, and the time may come when they will, perhaps, be sorry for having absented themselves this evening. In my own case, I frankly confess that I should consider myself a recreant to a noble cause if I had not attended, not merely from respect to the cause itself but from my esteem and affection for the LIBERATOR. (Cheers.) I fear, at this protracted hour, after so many brilliant and excellent speeches, to trespass long upon your indulgence, but for this circumstance I should have taken a wide range (for this I might freely claim for the nature of my toast), and have glanced at a far gone epoch when civil and religious liberty were but obscurely understood, inadequately secured, and little practised. Tell me of a country where civil and religious liberty are not under the guardianship of a Free Press, and I will reply, that though mere animal happiness may be found there, yet in that country shall you find no high tone of moral enlightenment; no masculine conscience of character; no intellectual greatness! (Cheers.) Taking no advantage of the all-over-the-world freedom of my toast, did time permit, I might have carried you to Consular Rome. I might have asked of you if she was not continually moulded to their own selfish purposes by haughty iron-willed autocrats, glozing, wily priests, and factious demagogues, the people having no Free Press to open their eyes to their true interests, or to keep them broad awake.

to their own rights? I should then perhaps have carried you to Imperial Rome—and treated you to sundry school-boy reminiscences and historical clap-traps. I should have demonstrated to you that there is no Free Press, public opinion must be a nonentity; for that which is tongueless, bound, and fettered, despotism sees not, hears not, fears not, feels not, until some enthusiastic dagger or the drugged cup of death gives the first death-blow to that tyrant, that he has gone too far! I should have edified you with strictures on the dire cruelties, the nameless flagitiousness, the monstrous crimes, the gigantic vices, of the masters of the great Babylon and their creatures; I should have rung the changes on sundry Gibbomassins, and endeavour to follow them with illustrations of my own, proving as I went along that these horrors mainly emanated from the want of a Free Press. I should have refreshed your recollection with the sayings and doings of the dark unrelenting Tiberians—the mad Caligula—the stupid Claudius—the cruel Nero, the beasty Vitellius—the timid, inhuman Domitian and other sons of Belial, whose names have come down through the lapse of ages giving to the moral sense the perception of an oppressive sickening taint of foulest corruption, as hideous as the pestilential vapour of the burning lake of Sodom and Gomorrah!

I should then have taken a bound and alighted in merry England. Do you wish to know how she fared when she had no letters, no liberty of the Press? I content myself with a simple fact recorded by a writer of those times of one of the not worst of her Kings, (albeit he was rather stingy) Henry VII., in whose reign, the gallows was emphatically said to have devoured one hundred thousand souls! Think of that; there was no Free Press to suggest turning these poor wretches to better account than hanging. Bear in mind that they fell not fighting in battle for their country,—that they were not swallowed up in tempests by the roaring ocean, or swept off even by famine or pestilence. No; they were devoured by the gibbet!

Had time further permitted, I should have asked you if many a deed of blood and violence of which England was the scene, would have taken place had there been a Free Press? Whether the executions and the massacre that throughout Europe gave a red glare to the dawning of the reformation would have occurred with even a limited Free Press, or at least whether they would not have been greatly modified by that controlling power? I should have applied the same reasoning to the frightful massacre of St. Bartholomew and the base revocation of the edict of Nantz. But these things some objector will tell me were done by Catholics! I say that they were done by ignorant and furious men and not by Catholics, because they were Catholics. That they were the doings of a dark and sternerage when men were grossly ignorant, tremblingly fearful, and erratically superstitious, for nothing is so cruel as bigotry and suspicion in their hour of power. He who with impartial eye scans history will not bandy recriminations with his erring brother Christian, for be it borne in mind, that Protestants too, in their hour of ascendancy, could be suspicious, oppressive and cruel in their turn, as witness certain acts in the time of Elizabeth, and certain doings in England and Ireland that followed in the times of succeeding sovereigns, of the tyrant Stuart dynasty. Oh! no. Both parties, who respected none unhappy, proceeding of days past away, should forget and forgive, and like Lockitt and Peachum in the play, shake hands saying "Brother, brother! we are both in the wrong." What I would have asked brought Charles I. to the block but the want of a Free Press? I should have also given the usual touch in the bye-going to the cause for which Hampden bled in the field, and Sydney and Russell on the scaffold, and have summed up with the glorious revolution of 1688. Linking the whole as I went along with the liberty of the Press, rather its enslavement! And be assured, (for I have not forgotten it), that I would have paid a visit to France and called at court during the reign of Louis the XIV., Louis the XV. and the Regency of Orléans. Oh! times of shame and overwhelming iniquity, when it was considered distinction by families calling themselves noble, a brilliant distinction, to have a lovely female of their house a king's harlot; when high ecclesiastics and ministers of religion, professing to be servants of the God of purity and holiness, cringed at the levees of unblushing coquette; and when foul dishonour, and fettering corruption polluted the depths of the fountains of social intercourse, bringing disgrace to every hearth; a monstrous perversion of manners big with lurid horrors to come, but which would have been checked or neutralized by the energy and corrective vigor of a Free Press.

But let us pause! Many of us view war and pestilence, tempest and earthquake, as special effects, and resulting from an over-riding first cause. Shall we recognize the Eternal, who will be the just, is also the merciful. Shall we recognize the omnipotent only in movements of chastisement and terror? Oh, be sure that whatever of the blessings of peace and freedom we enjoy, we derive from that everlasting first cause whose essence is love, and who works all second causes to fulfil the counsels of his holy will! So believing, am I extravagant in viewing the freedom of the Press bestowed on us by our late beloved ruler (God bless him for the act!) as the gift of Providence? And do I not exceedingly value it, so considering it and do you not all? To be sure I have heard some sinister reports respecting its abrogation; but I do not believe them. While a reform ministry is in power—while a reformer, ay, an ultra reformer, as I remember, presides at the India Board—while a liberal statesman sits in the chair of India direction, and while a reformer, and a reforming member of the council of India is on his way to watch over the cradle of our young freedom in England—while, I say, Mr. Macaulay, a staunch and declared friend of the liberty of the Press, lives to speak and I write for us—and above all, while we have the liberator of the India Press to be an advocate for us in our dear and common country to which he is about to return, and where I hope he will turn the powers of his masculine understanding and great experience to public account—! For one I have no fear respecting the freedom of the Press. We have now substantially enjoyed this blessing for several years—under one ruler by sufferance, under another (our distinguished guest) by a free will grant! The large, respectable, and brilliant meeting of this night, I but of itself a proof that the benefit is properly appreciated, where is there any good reason why it should be cancelled? While I can legally and without impropriety so I avail myself of the opportunity to declare, that I feel convinced it has done, and is effecting a great deal of good. The cause of education and the general enlightenment, no less than of good and neighbourly feeling between native and Europeans, has made a more rapid progress within the short period that the Press has been free, than for many years before. I firmly believe that the repeal of this liberty would be a serious evil, for independent of the side lights that may be derived by authority from the working of the Press, I am convinced that it possesses in itself a latent power—a sovereign virtue of great force, from protecting the innocent a variety of indefinite ways, for assuaging the insolence of office, the law's delay and the spurns that patient merit of the unworthy takes, and curbing household and neighbour tyranny, and for ameliorating general demeanor and conduct. Depend upon it, that many a choleric man in his ire, and many a quarrelsome one in the effervescence of his ill humour, holds back his hand, when he recollects that there is Mr. Stocqueler over the way or Mr. Smith and bethinks him twice how he indulges in undue violence or wrong. But let not our appreciation of the blessings of a Free Press evaporate amongst the wine cups. Show that you truly value it, by holding a public meeting to that effect, and putting your sentiments solemnly on record. But I have detained you too long for which I beg your pardon; I return you my best thanks for the kind attention with which you have heard me out; I need not request you to fill a bumper to my toast, since you have already done so; let us drink then with all the honors Constitutional freedom and civil and religious liberty all over the world. (Much applause.)

THE CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen; I call upon you to drink to a body, second in importance to none in this country—The Merchants of Calcutta. (Cheers.) To them India is so much indebted, for they have greatly aided in effecting all the improvements which have been made here. In fact, the freedom of commerce and the spirit of improvement go hand in hand. You all will join me in drinking to the Freedom of Commerce and the Prosperity of the Merchants of Calcutta. (Cheers.)

Mr. Patrick returned thanks.

W. P. GRANT Esq.—Gentlemen; I am about to propose to you a toast that I have great satisfaction in giving, and it were I have no doubt will be drank with great enthusiasm! The Trades of Calcutta, I am sure they are a very useful body, and the country should be greatly indebted to them. I confess, I conceive that any man who induces a Hindoo to stoop to put his foot into a new leather, does service to society; and I am sure that he who prevails upon a Mahomedan to huckle a saddle made of the skin of the unclean beast, deserves the thanks of the community. Gentlemen; I give you the trades of Calcutta and success to those trades.

Air—"Money in both pocket."

WILLIAM SPIER, Esq. Gentlemen; in addressing you on the subject of steam navigation, I shall at this late hour make but few observations, being satisfied that it has your best wishes. Already we experience its advantages in the regularity and rapidity with which the late mails have been received from and transmitted to England; but we regard steam navigation in a broader light, we look upon it as in America, peopling her rivers with life and energy, and bringing into connexion the distant points of her immense territory. We anticipate the same results for India; nay, more, we anticipate steam navigation as traversing the globe, connecting together distant nations, facilitating the intercommunication of thought, and giving a new impetus to the growing improvement of mankind. (Cheers.) When we look back upon the history of our race, we cannot but be struck with the vast strides which have been made during the two preceding centuries, by which the earlier world has been left at an immeasurable distance. On advert to the causes of such rapid progress we find the Press in conspicuous operation, (Cheers.) the science of chemistry also, giving new powers to man, —powers so amazing, as to be almost appalling. Commerce has done much in promoting civilization, and last of all, in steam navigation, a new principle is coming into play, and giving a fresh impulse to the world: by it nations, the most dissimilar in character are being brought into approximation; the ignorant with the enlightened, the barbarous with the civilized, the cowardly and enslaved with the bold and the free. Individual efforts may fail; the plans of public bodies may be paralyzed; but these mighty agencies bear irresistibly onward, and carry with them the advancement of the human race. (Cheers.)

To those reflecting on this advancement, it is cheering to remark, that these great general causes of improvement are yet in their infancy: commerce, chemistry, and steam navigation are but commencing; —the Press, if we observe its condition in most countries, is not yet free; some unaccountable influence pervading the press still wraps it in swaddling bands, —some demon of hate still holds the gigantic infant in his grasp, —but good and noble minded men have unloosed, and are unloosing its bands —and it will be free!

I will only mention in conclusion, that no one can have regarded the state of this country —no one can have listened to the appeal we have just heard on the enlightenment of its inhabitants, without wishing prosperity to steam navigation, and to every means of communicating knowledge and improvement to India. (Cheers.)

Air — "When Vulcan forged the bolts of Jove."

VICK CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen; "Justice for Ireland!" I will not be confined afar of behind my very remote Vice Presidential table. No; I will come forward, as I hope the subject of my toast will come forward, into the midst of you and cry "Justice for Ireland!" (Much cheering.) Ireland one might have thought, had already suffered under every variety of injustice which a nation could endure; but no! the poisoned chalice is not yet exhausted, and another act of injustice has recently been hit upon of so strange a nature that I wonder it has not excited more universal attention. Whenever any liberal measure has been carried under any administration since the passing of the Reform Bill the cry enemy, nay of many from whom one would expect better sense, has been, "Oh, that was carried by the Irish Members!" In the name of Heaven what insanity, what tom-foolery is this! What do people mean by Irish members! I know of no Irish members, no Scotch members, no English members; I know only of the British members of the Imperial Parliament, the great council of the British people. (Cheers.) But the cry of "Irish members" of "O'Connell and his tail," and a thousand such absurdities, have gone through England and the same buffalish, gullable people, my own countrymen, though they be, whom I found trembling in 1827 lest some half million of quiet English Catholics should rise up and massacre, and burn, put into thumb screws the entire English and Scottish nations, I now find crying out against every liberal measure that it is carried by "the Irish members." Shame on this folly. Hither the union with Ireland is an union in substance as well as form, or it is not. If it is, then are there no Irish members, all are British members of the Imperial Parliament. If it is not, for God's sake dissolve the union and let the Irish people legislate for themselves. (Cheers.) For own my part I shall never think justice done to Ireland until every title of right, every privilege, every atom of freedom, every form of municipal and local and general Government, is as fully established and as fairly administered in Ireland as in the Irish Kingdom. This is the last toast on record for the evening; were the words the last I should ever utter in this hall they should be "Justice for Ireland." (Much and long continued cheering.)

Air—"Eia go Bragh, and Patrick's day."

THE CHAIRMAN.—Gentlemen; Mr. Parker has just proposed to you the toast of "Justice to Ireland," and admirably and energetically has he depicted the qualities and capabilities of that fine nation which lies on the western shores of Britain. But there is another nation on our western shore more distant in situation, but not less nearly allied, which may be well called the child of England. They themselves term us the old or parent country, and well may we be proud of having such descendants. From us they have sprung, with us they inherit the love of liberty, the attachment to enterprise; while in the pursuit of all of what a nation should be proud, England has met with a forward rival in America. (Cheering.) She alone of all other states has rivalled us in arts, in literature, in commerce, in wealth, in independence, in gigantic strides towards national power, and fiercely and bravely has she battled with us on the ocean —our own —peculiar element. (Mr. Clarke stopped here for a short time, and then added.) I wished and ought to have said much more, but I have lost my voice from cheering.

it is filling this large hall ; I must therefore apologize, and conclude with a toast which needs no recommendation to such enthusiastic lovers of freedom, prosperity gentlemen, to the United States of America. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

DR. HUFFNAGLE.—I wish, gentlemen, for your satisfaction, that some one else was present to claim an American birthright ; as the pleasing duty, however, devolves upon me, accept my sincere acknowledgements. It is hardly necessary to remark that in celebrating an event of such vital importance as that which you have met this evening to commemorate, you would have the hearty concurrence of every American. It has ever been the policy of the United States to facilitate the distribution of public journals, and their circulation there, is perhaps, much more extensive than in any other country ; every man in America takes direct interest in political affairs, and every act of Government must daily pass under the public eye. We depend upon the diffusion of knowledge among our citizens for the security of our institutions, and we regard as our protecting "Aegis" the Liberty of the Press (Cheers.) I will not detain you, gentlemen, but while offering you assurances that your friendly feelings are cordially reciprocated, allow me to observe, that when the line of communication, by means of steam vessels over the western waters shall have been established, our respective nations will be brought comparatively close to each other. The reign of prejudice must then cease—the bounds of amity and relationship between Great Britain and America which must be strengthened, and the Atlantic which rolls between them must forever prove a Pacific Ocean. (Loud cheers.)

JOHN GRANT ESQ.—Gentlemen ; you have already drunk to Sir Charles Metcalfe as the Liberator of the India Press ; I now call upon you to drink to him again not as the liberator of the India Press, but as Sir Charles Metcalfe, one of the brightest ornaments of his age. (Much cheering.)

SIR CHARLES METCALFE.—Gentlemen, will you do me the favor to fill your glasses to drink to a toast I am about to propose. I give you, gentlemen, with the greatest pleasure, the healths of the talented chairman and stewards. (Cheers.) Before taking my leave of you this evening, I cannot refrain from expressing my full concurrence in the various sentiments expressed by the several talented speakers ; and from the eloquence, independence and high manly spirit displayed, I look upon the proceedings of this meeting, as one of the greatest importance. (Cheers.) As far as these proceedings relate to myself, I will ever most fondly cherish the recollection of them ; and consider this evening as one of the proudest moments of my existence ; (Cheers.) and wherever I may pass the rest of my life it shall be my endeavour, in all my future acts and career, to preserve the good opinion, and to continue to merit the degree of estimation which has been expressed for, and shown to me by you all, on so memorable an occasion as the present. (Much cheering.) Gentlemen, I give you the healths of our talented Chairman and Stewards. (Drank with much cheering.)

The Chairman returned thanks.

About a quarter to one A. M. Sir Charles retired, and the greater part of the party, shortly afterwards, followed his example.

A knot of the party, comprising Messrs. Clarke, Leith, Stocqueler, Scott Thomson, Captain Forbes, Captain Harrington, Capt. Vint, Dr. Grant, &c. &c. then took to the high table, and with the help of devilled turkeys and champagne, spun out another hour—one of the "wee short" ones. During this period, Mr. Thomson proposed the health of "Capt. Williams, of the St. George, and a prosperous voyage to the ship that bears Sir Charles Metcalfe." Mr. Stocqueler proposed the healths of Messrs. Turtan and David Hare, and numerous others were drank until the festival was considered complete.—Hulkarn, February 12.

DINNER TO SIR C. T. METCALFE.

About eight the company, which consisted of nearly 200 persons, having assembled, two of the stewards stood before the open door of the dining hall, to prevent any one entering it before Sir Charles, who was conducted to it by Sir J. P. Grant, the president, and the other stewards. After Sir Charles had entered the hall, the rush to obtain admittance was really so great that those who were in the midst of the throng were involuntarily borne forward. Sir Charles appeared to be in perfect health, and not in the least fatigued by having kept up the previous evening at the Press dinner.

After the company had done justice to the dinner, the president, who sat at the head of the table on the left of Sir Charles, rose and proposed the health of Her Majesty. It was not usual, he observed, to preface the toast of the Sovereign with many prefatory observations ; on the present occasion he would deviate from that usual course, in consideration of the sex and age of the Sovereign ; and also because that was the first time on which he had the honor of proposing Her Majesty's health. Her Majesty had been called at a tender age to administer the affairs of a great nation, under the advice of able and experienced Ministers : but these Ministers were of her own young, Modesty, prudence, and firmness had already marked Her Majesty's early career, and there was every measure to hope that she would always sustain such a character. The toast was drank with enthusiastic cheers.

The health of the Queen Dowager was next given from the chair, and drank with all the honors.

In giving the health of the Duke of Sussex and Royal Family, the president alluded to the personal feelings of gratitude he entertained towards that branch of the family, arising from early associations.

Drank with the usual honors and much cheering.

The Governor-General of India in Council was next toasted with all the honors.

The health of Sir Charles Metcalfe was proposed by the president in a most eloquent speech, of which the following is a rough sketch. After some preliminary remarks, he said, that it was now about three years since he had the honor of occupying a similar position to the present in this place, except that on that occasion he had to wish Sir Charles a safe passage over the waters of the Ganges ; but that now the same wish must be expressed in regard to the boisterous ocean. They had not met to consider the conduct of Sir Charles when he acted as the vice president, nor as the Governor General, nor as the Lieutenant Governor of the north western provinces. His conduct was well known to every class of the community, and each man would express his opinion on it. His conduct would be decided upon by the public, to whose judgment Sir Charles was too honest a man not to submit. They had assembled in order to bear testimony to his private character ; to express their sense of his conduct in all the social relations of life. They had assembled to bear testimony to the fidelity and the other virtues he possessed. They had assembled to bear testimony to that kind indulgence with which he always looked upon the failings of others, whilst himself practised the highest virtues. In short, they had assembled to bear testimony to the great excellence of his character, not as a statesman, but as a man. (Deafening and continued cheers.) Every society of which he had been a member had been promoted, and every individual who approached him in distress received relief. His munificence to every institution in the establishment for the happiness of man was well known. To every one he extended his assistance in relieving his distress to the utmost of his power. These things could not be recollected without considering Sir Charles as one of the best friends of this country; one whose memory should be cherished in the bosom of every man. He wished Sir Charles a safe voyage to England, a happy meeting with his friends, and a long life to enjoy the well earned honors he carries with him. (Deafening cheers repeated.)

Sir Charles returned thanks, and alluded to the splendid entertainment, with which he had been honored, and the warmth with which his health had been drank, the recollection of which, after his departure from India, he said, would cheer him through the remainder of his life. He begged the company to accept of his most heartfelt thanks. (Cheers.)

The president then proposed the Bishop of Calcutta, with a few appropriate remarks. Drank with the usual honors.

The president would next propose the health of one who would gladly have been here if his health had permitted. He meant the Deputy-Governor of Bengal. Drank with all the honors.

The British Navy was the next toast.

Captain Crozier, of the brig Victor, returned thanks in behalf of the Navy, of which, he said, he was but an humble member. He hoped the British Navy would always maintain a high station in the estimation of this community. He hoped she would defend not only the shores of England, but also of all her colonies.

The Army, said the president, required as little preface as the Navy. He would, therefore, simply propose the Commander-in-Chief and the British Indian Army. Sir W. Cotton, as the senior officer in the room, returned thanks for the Army.

The Bengal Civil Service was the next given, by the president, who alluded to the high talents and integrity of its members. Mr. Rattray returned thanks.

Mr. R. S. Thomson here sang, "Oh! tell me how to woo the love."

The Ladies of Calcutta was the next toast given from the chair. It was one, said the president, to which every body he was sure would drink with great delight, and one which was well suited to the occasion. He would not enlarge upon their praises; for he feared he would not be able to do justice to the subject. He could not now express himself with so much warmth as he could some years ago. He would, therefore, simply propose, The Ladies of Calcutta.

Mr. H. M. PARKER.—He was sure there was not one in the room who would not readily lay down his life for the fair sex; yet it was strange that no one had arisen to speak for them. He would, therefore, try the experiment, though all the oratory he was master of could not come near the eloquence of their eyes. After a few more humorous observations, which we could not catch, owing to the great distance at which we sat from the speaker, he concluded by wishing the Ladies of Calcutta, health, happiness, and all the blessings that can follow.

The president would now rise to propose the health of a body to whom India, like other countries, owed her prosperity. Commerce was the cause of mutual intercourse between the different separated branches of the family of man, and of their civilization. In this city there were two great names connected with commerce, one a European and the other a Hindoo, who would have been here if business had not prevented. He meant Mr. Cockerell and Dwarkanath Tagore. One who had brought his wealth to this country from England; and the other, though a Hindoo by birth, was possessed of the intelligence and notions of Europe, and had established an agency house. He could not pass over the name of this noble individual, without alluding to his late munificent donation to the District Charitable Society. The president hoped that all the natives as well as Europeans would follow his example. Had he been in Calcutta, the president was sure he would have joined the company in celebrating such an occasion.

After a pause of some minutes, Mr. Johnstone sang the well-known national song.—"Auld Lang Syne."

Success to steam communication between India and England was then given from the president, who alluded to the exertions of Lord William Bentinck in this behalf, as one of the instances of that nobleman's devotion to the cause of this country and its future promotion. Commerce, he said, was the bond of union between distant nations, and steam navigation formed a part of the means of carrying it on. He recommended unity among the supporters of the scheme, and that differences should be set aside in this great undertaking. In conclusion, he proposed the health of Lord William Bentinck, and the firm establishment of steam communication.—Drank with loud cheers.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that as Mr. Parker had set the example of returning thanks for the ladies, he would do the same for the steam communication. He had always been an advocate for steam communication in India. His honourable friend, the president, had not, however, explained whether he meant the success of a small experiment, or the establishment of a general system which would open a communication between England and all the three presidencies of India. From the allusion to the exertions of Lord Bentinck in this regard, which were directed to the general scheme, he however concluded, that the toast must mean that, and in that sense he would acknowledge the compliment. He was glad to observe the question of steam introduced into meetings of this kind, for by constant agitation he thought every thing could be gained.

The Marquess of Wellesley was the next toast given from the chair. This was an appropriate toast for the occasion, in consequence of the friendship that subsisted between Sir Charles Metcalfe and his Lordship, whose conduct in India had now become a matter of history. There was, however, no man who had done more good to this country than his Lordship. The improvements made to this town were among the proofs of his exertions. But the greatest benefit he had done was to introduce Sir Charles Metcalfe into the Indian service.

Drank with all the honors.

The Duke of Wellington.—On the political opinions of the Duke, the president would offer no opinion. The military achievements of his grace were well known to all, and also that this was the country in which he was bred to the use of arms. Drank with all the honors.

There was no subject, said the president, which could interest those who came to this country from England more than the improvement of the natives; a cause in which Sir Charles had laboured with others. He gave the advancement of the natives of India in civilization, and their improvement in knowledge and morals. Drank as usual.

The president, I challenge any man to state an objection to the toast I am about to propose, which is a very appropriate one to the present occasion. I give Liberty all over the world. Drank as usual.

Mr. H. M. Parker proposed the Bar of Calcutta, which was drank with all the honors; and Mr. Longueville Clarke returned thanks, apologizing for his hoarseness, by saying that he lost his voice in a good cause the night before, viz. the Liberty of the Press. (Cheers.)

Earl Grey.—The president, without alluding to his political opinions, as he had done in the case of a great soldier, would now propose the health of an eminent statesman and civilian. He meant Lord Grey, a man who had devoted his life to the service of his country and the cause of liberty.

Sir Charles Metcalfe proposed the health of the President, the Vice President, and the stewards, which was drank with all the honors.

The president returned thanks for himself and his colleagues; and hoped some of the stewards would better be able to return their own thanks.—Hurk., Feb. 13.

METCALFE MEETING.

The meeting at the Town-hall yesterday afternoon was numerously attended, Sir Edward Ryan presiding. The chairman briefly opened the proceedings, stating, in the terms of advertisement, a preliminary meeting had been held at his chambers to consider in what manner all classes of society might best unite in doing honor by a public entertainment to the eminent public and private virtues of Sir Charles Metcalfe.

The Hon. Mr. Shakespeare proposed a resolution, which was seconded by general Macgregor, and carried, that a public dinner be given, and that Sir J. P. Grant be requested to preside, and Sir W. Cotton to undertake the office of Vice-president.

Mr. H. M. Parker proposed a resolution forming the committee. He stated that the list comprised all classes. He alluded to the proposed dinner to be given to Sir Charles by those who appreciate his measure of freeing the Indian Press. But the dinner now under consideration was distinct from all political feeling; it was to show their regard for a great and good man, whose heart was open as day to melting charity, and whose hand was as open as his heart. Mr. R. D. Mangles seconded the resolution, which was carried. The following are the names of the stewards.

The Hon. Sir Edward Ryan,	Dr. Raleigh,
The Hon. H. Shakespeare,	Mr. John Bell,
Mr. James Pattle,	Mr. H. Wollaston,
General Macgregor,	Mr. P. A. Cavorke,
Colonel McLeod,	Mr. James Prinsep,
Mr. Longueville Clarke,	Mr. E. Mollay,
Mr. O'Hanlon,	Capt. T. J. Taylor,
Mr. T. Holroyd,	Mr. D. Hare,
Mr. Alexander Colvin,	Bahoo Poshunoo Comar
Mr. W. P. Insep,	Tagore,
Captain Harrington,	Biboo Ransomoy Dutt,
Mr. R. S. Thomson,	Mr. Rustomjee Cowasjee,
Dr. Ranken,	Dr. Goodave,
Mr. Dove,	Dr. O'Shaughnessy,
Mr. W. A. Shaw,	Capt. D. M. Richardson,
Mr. M. Johnston,	Mr. H. M. Parker,
Mr. Wale Byrn,	Mr. Patrick.

Mr. T. Holroyd moved that the Bishop of Calcutta, and the committee be requested to form a deputation, to wait on Sir Charles and to ascertain his wishes as to the time. The chairman intimated that the Bishop acquiesced in the proposal.

The proceedings were about to terminate when Mr. L. Clarke requested the attention of the meeting. He perfectly agreed with what had been proposed, but he thought this was not sufficient. Something more was due in honor of the man whom they all prized as a private individual, as an officer of Government, and as the friend of every class. He proposed, therefore, that a subscription be opened for a piece of plate, that Sir Charles may carry from India as a token of our reverence, respect, and esteem. Mr. R. S. Thomson seconded the resolution, and it was put and carried by acclamation.

The following subscriptions were immediately put down by way of a beginning.

MILITARY ORPHAN SOCIETY.

Pursuant to advertisement, a meeting of the subscribers to the Military Orphan Society took place, this morning, at the Town-hall. After some discussion the meeting elected Major Colnet to the Chair.

It was then proposed by the Captain Fitzgerald, and seconded by Captain Thomson, that the "report be read." This proposition having been put to the vote was negatived.

Captain Thomson then proposed that the meeting adjourn until Tuesday next at 11 o'clock, which being seconded by the Revd. Mr. Ruspini, was put to the vote and negatived also.

A vote of thanks was then proposed to the chairman for his able conduct in the chair, which was carried unanimously.

In the course of the meeting a proposition of some kind or other was made by Dr. Corbyn, which the chairman declined to put, as it was not consonant to the tenor of the advertisement calling the meeting.

The meeting then separated; but it may be as well to explain that the negating of the proposition that the report be read, was owing to the majority of the meeting being of opinion that they could not proceed to any business, in consequence of the Maddock propositions requiring a quorum of twelve voters, whereas there were only twelve subscribers present altogether, of whom seven or eight had been or were still connected with the management of the institution, and consequently were not entitled to vote.

This is a sorry specimen of the working of the Maddock rules. Ere long we may become converts to the Duke of Wellington's opinion, that public meetings are "all a farce."

As the matter now stands the accounts have not been passed, and moreover they cannot now be passed as the period fixed by the Maddock rules has gone by; the last Wednesday in January is the day fixed upon by the rules; and consequently we presume that the meeting must adjourn to the last Wednesday of January 1839.—Cal. Courier, Jan. 31.

Dr. J. Turner.
Robt. Torrens, Esq. C.S.
Capt. R. Thornhill.
Col. F. Walker.
Col. A. Watson.

Major-General Sir Willoughby Cotton, K.C.H. was requested to take the chair.

The following Resolutions were proposed and carried:

1st.—Proposed by James Pattle, Esq. C.S. seconded by J. A. Dorin, Esq. C.S. and resolved unanimously;

That the Committee's Report be now read by the Secretary.

2d.—Proposed by Wm. Cracroft, Esq. C.S. seconded by Col. F. Walker, and resolved unanimously.

That the report which has been read be adopted by the Meeting, and that it be printed, together with the Abstracts of Accounts, which are highly satisfactory, and circulated to the Members of the Club.

3d.—Proposed by Jas. Pattle, Esq. C.S. seconded by Chas. Trower, Esq. C.S., and resolved unanimously.

That a special committee to consist of seven members of the club, be nominated to take into consideration and report on the proposition of Mr. Dickens, or any other party, to provide a suitable club house on the terms he proposes, and that the following gentlemen be requested to form the above Committee; viz.

Jas. Pattle, Esq.
Col. McLeod.
J. A. Dorin, Esq.
R. Molloy, Esq.

Captain Ouseley.
Lieut. Abercrombie, and
Dr. Geo. Craigie.

4th.—Proposed by Wm. Cracroft, Esq., seconded by Dr Geo. Craigie, and resolved unanimously.

That in order to prevent any sort of altercation or interference with the servants of the club, all expression of dissatisfaction or any communication that members may require to make to the cook or any other servants must be through the Secretary.

5th.—Proposed by Chas. Trower, Esq. C.S., seconded by Robt. Torrens, C.S., and resolved unanimously.

That owing to the insufficient number of sleeping apartments in the present club house, additional and sufficient accommodation be hired for that purpose when required.

6th.—Proposed by Dr. Craigie, and seconded by J. W. Salmon, Esq.

That with reference to the requisition alluded to in the report of the committee, para. 6, and in confirmation of the Resolution of the committee on the subject which followed, the Committee of Management be authorized to expend a limited sum monthly for the purchase of standard works, and more particularly of books of reference maps, &c. with the view of forming the nucleus of a small library for the Club.

This proposition at the suggestion of the chairman, was withdrawn for the present, on the understanding that it was to be considered in Committee, with reference to the state of the club funds.

7th.—Proposed by Wm. Cracroft, Esq., seconded by Jas. Pattle, Esq., and resolved unanimously.

That the thanks of this meeting be given to Mr. Dorin, and the gentlemen of the committee for their services during the past year.

8th.—Resolved unanimously. - That the thanks of this meeting be given to the chairman.

The following gentlemen were elected by ballot members of the Committee Management, for the year 1838.

EXAMINATION OF THE NATIVE MORNING FREE SCHOOL.

(From a Correspondent.)

The examination of the above school took place at the Benevolent Institution, Bow Bazar, last Saturday, the 27th instant. There were five or six Europeans present and a large number of native youth and gentlemen.

The boys were examined by Messrs. Delanougere and Mackenzie in spelling, reading, explanation, grammar, and geography, and acquitted themselves to satisfaction, considering the short period they have been under scholastic exercises. Two of the best students recited Cato's soliloquy and Noval's address to Lord Randolph. Their names are Pronkisto Chuckerbutty and Rowseback Boraul.

As the public are not aware of any circumstances regarding this school, it may be interesting to state that it was established in August 1836, by the young men from the Oriental Seminary, Baboo Madhob Chunder Bysack and Seeb Chunder Dutt, and has been conducted, with the exception of one teacher from the General Assembly's School, entirely by the pupils of the first named seminary.

A small subscription is monthly raised for the expenses in books, charts, tables, &c. &c.

The school is held in the outer rooms of Baboo Hurry Mohun De's premises in Jorshanko, Rutan Sircar's, Garden street, who has given the use thereof for the purpose free of charge. — Ibid.

BANK OF BENGAL.

There was a special general meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Bengal, on Saturday, convened in compliance with a requisition to take into consideration 'the severe losses and peculiarly hard case' of Ruggoo Ram Gosain.

On the failure of Palmer & Co. the bank held certain of their notes which the bank had discounted. On four of these notes, principal amount Rs. 50,000, 40,000, 60,000, and 15,000, Ruggoo Ram's name appeared, and he became bound for his name. Palmer & Co. were, on their failure, also liable to the bank for certain sums of money advanced on, and secured by, deposits of Company's paper. These advances, with interest, the bank paid itself from the proceeds of the Company's paper, which, conformably to one of the conditions of deposit, the bank sold to satisfy itself. But, after satisfaction of the bank's claim for principal and interest on account of the advance secured by Company's paper, there remained a considerable surplus from the proceeds; between two and three lacs, the Bank claimed to hold, and did hold, by way of set-off, against the discounted promissory notes of Palmer, & Co. in the bank's hands. And the bank proposed to apply the said surplus to, in the first instance, the liquidation of such of Palmer, & Co.'s promissory notes as it (the bank) thought the least secured. As this time Ruggoo Ram Gosain came forward to the directors with a representation of his heavy losses by the failure of Palmer & Co. and with a proposition that the directors should, in consideration of those losses, apply, under his guarantee to hold the bank harmless for applying, the surplus proceeds of the Company's paper, to the liquidation in the first instance of three of the four promissory notes bearing his endorsement of Seebchunder Doss, a man of large property. To this proposition of Ruggoo Ram Gosain the bank agreed, and under his sureties (guaranteed to indemnify the bank for the act, and to pay the fourth note in three years, should Seebchunder Doss not have done so before) applied the surplus proceeds to the payment of the other notes bearing Ruggoo Ram's name. The remainder of the surplus was held against the remaining notes of Palmer and Co. but there still was left a balance due on the aggregate amount of those notes. Meanwhile the assignees of Palmer and Co. had demanded from the bank for the general creditors of the estate, whole of the surplus proceeds of the Company's paper, and the bank resisting the demand of the assignees, proceeded to an action at law in the Supreme Court, and a verdict was given in favour of the bank. Against this decision the assignees appealed to the Privy Council, by whom the judgment of the Supreme Court was reversed, and the surplus proceeds decreed to the estate of Palmer and Co. Consequent on this decision of the Privy Council, the bank made its claim of Ruggoo Ram and his sureties on undertaking to indemnify the bank for the appropriation of the surplus to the notes of Palmer and Co. bearing endorsement as already mentioned. Ruggoo Ram, having already settled for the amount of the fourth note (that one bearing Seebchunder Doss' endorsement and on which note the bank relinquished its claim for interest) the bank's demand against him was now but for the balance of principal and interest on the three remaining notes, and for law costs on the appeal. Ruggoo Ram having previously defrayed the costs of the action in the Supreme Court. The bank's claim on account of the appeal costs was afterwards on a representation from Ruggoo Ram given up, and the bank's demand against him remained:

On account of principal....	Rs. 86,980
Ditto interest.....	34,112

Ruggoo Ram has paid the amount of principal, and the interest, as above, Rs. 34,112, he now appealed to the proprietors.

The following extract from the directors' proceedings of the 10th of August last, will give the directors' opinion of their claim against Ruggoo Ram, less their demand for law costs, any claim for which the directors, as already stated, have abandoned.

'Agreed, that the bank's demand is legal, just, and equitable; and that the parties from whom the bank claims that demand are equal to pay it in full.

Agreed, therefore, that the directors, as for the bank, that is, the proprietors, cannot abate aught from that demand, and that the proprietors alone are competent to make any abatement.

'But agreed, to allow indulgence in taking payment of the bank's claim, viz. receiving half of the principal in cost, the remaining half at six months, bearing five per cent. per annum interest, and the amount due on account of interest on the whole at twelve months, bearing the same rate of interest:—Ruggoo Ram and his sureties executing and being at the cost of such legal undertaking to the foregoing effect, as the bank's law officers may draw.

Further, the directors expressed themselves favourably disposed to make the concession, and Ruggoo Ram was at liberty to appeal to the meeting now convened.

The chairman, Mr. Pattle, addressed the meeting. As we understood, he was inclined to concede the interest mainly on the ground that the individual most interested is a native, and, therefore, his severe losses are entitled to particular consideration. But Mr. H. T. Priusep took the question on its merits, and proposed a resolution, in substance, that the interest be remitted. This was seconded by Mr. Cullen and carried, no one opposing or disagreeing. There were about fifty proprietors present. This is the first remission of the kind made by the bank.—Englishman, February 5.

SUN INSURANCE OFFICE.

We attended the annual meeting of the proprietors of the Sun Insurance Office yesterday. Mr. W. Bruce was in the chair. Mr. Rustomjee Cowasjee, Mr. Ezekiel Mushlea, and several foreign gentlemen composed the meeting, which was conducted in a very brief, business-like manner. The balance sheet of the eighth half year exhibits.

At credit of the society	Rs. 3,31,970
Debit amount of premium on risks (amounting to Company's Rs. 24,16,466) supposed to be outstanding at above date....	58,406
Amount reserved to meet contingencies.....	50,128
	1,08,324
Equal to Rs. 2,233 per share.

This office was established 1st January 1834 No deposit made. On the 22d January 1835, a dividend was declared of Sa. Rs- 500 per share. Another on the 1st August 1836 of Sa. Rs- 500 per share. Again on the 21st February 1837, for Co.'s Rs- 500. And at the meeting above noted, it was resolved that a dividend be made of £50 per share, in bills on the London agents and Rs- 500 in cash. This is very satisfactory.

Messrs. W. Bruce, G. Apar, J.D. Dow, K.R. Mackenzie, and Rustomjee Cowasjee were requested to continue their services for the ensuing six months. The meeting separated after deliberating about thirty minutes.—Ibid.

SAILORS' HOME SOCIETY.

Last Tuesday evening the half-yearly general meeting of the Sailors' Home Society was held at the Town-hall, Sir J. P. Grant in the chair.

The report, which was a very interesting statement of details, dressed in plain language and somewhat in the phraseology of sailors, having been read,

The Rev. J. Charles rose to move the first resolution, That the report be printed and circulated.

The learned Divine stated, that when it was announced to the public that it was in contemplation to establish such an institution, every person of right feelings and correct judgment whom he knew, at once concurred in the desirableness of the project. It appeared to him to be a happy conception, a most felicitous idea. He believed the meeting was already aware that the institution owed its origin, and, in a great measure, its successful operation, to the worthy secretary (Rev. T. Boaz). For his own part, he regarded the institution as now fully established; and it was matter of congratulation that so much could be said of it within or short a period of its existence. It was matter of surprise with him that the interests of sailors had so long been neglected or so little cared for, both in England and in this country. They are an interesting people, comprising, as he had somewhere read, one-twentieth of the population of the mother country. This simple fact, the reverend gentleman considered, ought to have awakened on their behalf a deeper and more general spirit of philanthropy. But they are not less an important than an interesting class; to them Britain owes her naval glory; through them, the fame of her arms, of her science, of her literature, and of her politics has reached the utmost bounds of the earth. They are the instruments of her commerce. By their means she lays the whole world under contribution to her wants and wishes; they minister to her luxury and to her wealth. They are not, however, generally, what they should be, and what, as a matter of highest duty, we should endeavour to make them,—a fair specimen of Britain's virtues,—living epistles of her morals and of her glorious faith. Landsmen can exercise their influence, at best but over a limited surface,—within a defined circle. The conduct of sailors exerts an influence for good or for evil on large classes of men,—men of various nations, kindreds and tribes. This influence partakes at present more of the nature of vice: it should be made to bear with the force of moral and religious habits. The reverend gentleman after adverting to some particulars stated in the report, and having repeated his remark that the institution could no longer be considered in the light of an experiment, but as deserving to be ranked among the established Benevolent Institutions of the country, sat down amidst suppressed cheers.

The resolution seconded by H. Walters, Esq. C. S. was carried unanimously.

Rev. Mr. Morton proposed the second resolution, appointing a new committee, and returning thanks to God for his blessing, and to the last committee for their services.

He considered that there was no question but that the meeting would adopt the sentiments contained in the resolution he had the honour to propose. If the institution has done good—and the report states that it has done much good,—if it is a desirable institution,—and the reverend gentleman who preceded him had shewn that it was a desirable institution, and moreover that it was an institution now fully established,—he was of opinion that all the good that has been effected, and all the good that the institution promised to effect, was owing to the exertions of the last committee. But the resolution in his hands contained more—viz an expression of thanks to God for what has been done. He believed that all present would agree in the sentiment with the Church of England, that, "all that is wise, and good, and true, comes from God." A higher authority than the national church has also said, "every good and every perfect gift proceedeth from the father of light." The reverend gentleman felt assured that none would dissent from these sentiments, and therefore that the meeting would not only unhesitatingly, but cheerfully and warmly adopt his resolution.

Mr. Morton stated, that he was unexpectedly called upon to take a part in the business of the evening, and that he was not intimately acquainted with the details of the Home. He was not at Calcutta at the time of its formation: he had, however, learned a great deal from the report which had just then been read. He considered the existence of such an institution in this country to be a blessing. The reverend gentleman here adverted to the mischief and ailments to which sailors are exposed in this port, and to the unfavourable impression which their conduct has produced, and is calculated to produce, on the native mind. If, said he, we desire to see the native population converted from their debasing superstitions and practices, we should seek to elevate the character of our own countrymen; and if we are at all concerned for the spiritual welfare of our brethren, consistency requires of us not to neglect their temporal comforts. The reverend gentleman stated that, according to the view he took of the subject, he considered that chaplains and missionaries had as great an interest in the welfare of sailors as merchants and ship-captains.

This resolution was seconded by Captain Martin of the Duke of Buccleugh, and carried unanimously.

The thanks of the meeting were proposed and accorded to the chairman.

Sir J. P. Grant rose to say, that he took a very deep interest in the objects of the institution. That institution was yet in its infancy, and he believed the Rev. Mr. Charles would agree with him in this view, although he was of opinion that the success of the institution was no longer problematical, and that as such, it required to be nourished and tended and brought into vigorous and healthful exercise. His Lordship fully concurred in the views expressed by Mr. Morton. He considered that exertions should be made to raise the moral and religious character of the seamen who come to this port. Sailors, said his lordship, are exposed to numerous temptations in this country; and not the least of their dangers, is, that they regard the class of the native inhabitants into whose hands they fall to be a simple and ignorant people. We know, his lordship observed, that this is not the case. Cunning and villainy soon rob them of their money and their health. The crimping system too was till lately in active operation to complete their wretchedness. His lordship regarded with cordial pleasure the extent and salutary nature of that influence, which the Home had exerted, in rescuing sailors from the cunning and power of these landsharks. His lordship congratulated the meeting on what they had heard, and concluded with stating, that though he could not take any very active part in the management of the institution, of which he had been constituted the president, his best wishes attended all its operations. His lordship then proposed thanks to the secretary, Rev. T. Boaz and J. W. Alexander, Esq., and to Dr. Maxton for his gratuitous medical advice to the inmates of the Home.

Mr. Boaz rose and expressed his very grateful sense of the vote of thanks accorded to him. It was his heart's desire to see the institution prosper. He considered its prosperity very much depended on the share the community of merchants and ship-captains took in it; with out their hearty aid, he was not very sanguine of success. He begged them to come forward to the help of the committee, both from a consideration of their own interests, and of the benevolent objects of the institution.

The meeting was very thinly attended, but a spirit of cheerfulness and deep interest appeared to pervade it.

P. S.—We have the pleasure to state that the number admitted in the Home during the last half year was 303, out of which 296 have been provided with births. All the departments have prospered as far as they have been tried. — Englishman, Feb. 8.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general meeting of this Society was held at the Town-hall, on Wednesday morning, the 14th February, 1838, at half-past 9 o'clock.

The Hon'ble Sir E. Ryan, President, in the chair.

PRESENT:—The Hon'ble Colonel Rebling. Dr. Wallich. Dr. Huffleagle, W. F. Gibbon, Esq.; Dr. A. R. Jackson, F. T. Fergusson, Wm. Storm, R. Smith, A. Dobbs, M. Staunton, A. Harris, and G. F. McBlintock, Esqrs; Dr. D. Stewart, R. Watson, M. A. Bignell, and John Bell, Esqrs.

The proceedings of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen, proposed at the last meeting, were duly elected members of the society, viz.

L. Saget, W. Vansittart, Thomas Gibbon, James Cosserat, J. H. Bridgman, G. A. Gregg, P. Sutherland, and R. S. Strickland, Esqrs; H. H. Spry, Esq., M. D. Captain W. N. Forbes, William Mackenzie, Esq; Captain F. W. Birch.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members:

W. Moran, Esq., of Tirhoot, Thomas Parkerly, of Kishnaghur, and J. H. Savi, Esq. of ditto, proposed by C. Deverian, Esq., and seconded by the secretary.

The Rev. C. F. Driberg proposed by Dr. Wallich, and seconded by the secretary.

Thomas Blacken, Esq., and Charles Oman, Esq. of Jessore, proposed by Samuel Smith, Esq., and seconded by the secretary.

J. Louis, Esq., C.S., proposed by Sir E. Ryan, and seconded by the secretary.

J. B. Elliott, Esq., C. S. proposed by W. Crocroft, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

R. Scott Thompson, Esq., and Captain H. J. Wood, proposed by the secretary and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

William Ruffton, Esq., proposed by Dr. Huffleagle and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

T. B. Morrall, Esq., proposed by William Storm, Esq., and seconded by W. G. Rose, Esq.

Motions disposed of.

The notice of motion submitted at the last general meeting, proposing to solicit Government to send one of their own vessels to Orabette for the purpose of bringing a supply of sugar cane, was brought forward and discussed.

Moved by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Mr. Storm, and resolved—That it is not desirable to adopt the measure proposed by Mr. Beattie, sufficient means having been already adopted to obtain supplies of sugar cane.

Notices of Motion.

1st.—Proposed by the Agricultural Committee, (on their report of the 8th February 1838.) That with reference to the particular interest which Dr. Montgomerie of Singapore has taken in the proceedings of this society, by sending from time to time supplies of sugar cane from that island, the society's gold medal be awarded to Dr. Montgomerie.

2d.—Moved by Sir Edward Ryan, That the expense of publishing a pamphlet on the subject of Cochineal, prepared by Mr. Bell, be defrayed by the society.

3d.—Moved by Dr. Wallich. That with reference to a letter from Lieut. Kirke, of Deyrah, a small sum be allowed for the purpose of enabling Lieutenant Kirke, to supply the society with seeds raised in that neighbourhood which are said to be equal to English seed.

Read the following communications :

From Mons. Richard, Superintendent of the Botanical Garden at Bourbon to Dr. Wallich, dated Nov 9th 1837, intimating that under directions from the Bourbon Government, he had despatched by the Alcide, two cases of cactus covered with the cochineal insects.

From Captain Charlton to Dr. Wallich, dated 23d January 1838, stating his intention of forwarding a quantity of cochineal insect, in living state brought by him from the Cape of Good Hope, on the ship Sesostriis.

The President drew the particular attention of the meeting to these communications, which had given rise to a difference of opinion as to any of the insects, being the true Mexican cochineal or "grana fina."

The insects from Bourbon and the Cape, had arrived in a very satisfactory and healthy state, and had been seen by Mr. G. A. Prinsep, at the Botanic garden, on their arrival, who pronounced them to be all the wild variety, called in Commerce "grana sylvestra."

Mr. Bell had subsequently inspected the insects, and pronounced those from Bourbon to be the true "grana fina," and those from the Cape to be the "grana sylvestra," and as it was considered advisable to have the insects examined by a committee before this time, he (the President) would read a report drawn up, and unanimously adopted by that committee, which, however, did not decide the question at issue, as none of the members had seen the living insect before, and their deductions were drawn only from the remarkable features which characterize the two varieties.

The insects were exhibited at the meeting.

On the report being read, Dr. Duncan Stewart proposed, seconded by A. Dobbs, Esq., and resolved, that it be confirmed as the report of the society.

Moved by the president, and resolved, that the committee's report be published, for general information.

Read a letter from John Guilding, Esq., dated Baranagore, January 12th, giving it as his opinion, that the Bourbon insect is the true grana fina of Mexico.

Read a letter from Charles Deverine, Esq., dated the 12th January, stating that the Bourbon insect is different from any living cochineal he has seen in India.

The president mentioned that Mr. Bell had collected some information in elucidation of the question at issue, which he had thrown into a pamphlet, and suggested that its issue should be kept back, until the committee's report could be added thereto, when it would be at the service of the committee, and members who might feel interested in prosecuting enquiry.

Resolved, that the present committee be requested to continue their labours, and that all questions and communications addressed to the secretaries be referred to them, and hereafter embodied in a separate pamphlet.

Resolved, that any incidental charges incurred by the secretary, in forming a small experimental Nopalarie, be defrayed by the society.

Resolved, that Monsr. Richard be solicited to send the society a supply of the description of cactus, in which the insect has been imported.

Moved by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Dr. Jackson, that especial thanks be returned to the Bourbon Government and to Monsr. Richard, for the courteous and prompt manner in which they have carried into effect the society's wishes in regard to a supply of the cochineal insect, and that their further, co-operation in this important matter be solicited.

Moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Storm, that the special thanks of the society be returned to Captain Charlton, for having imported from the Cape the cochineal insect, although of the wild variety had been presented at a moment that renders it an object of valuable and interesting comparison.

Read a note from Mr. Marchman of this date, for forwarding one copy of vol. 5, Society's Transactions, and promising to send more in the course of the day.

The secretary wished to have the society's sanction to pay the charges of publication.

Moved by Dr. Jackson, seconded by Dr. Wallich, that as Mr. Marchman executes our printing on the most economical scale, the secretary be authorized to pay his bills on presentation, and the receipt of the works for which each bill is made out. Resolved accordingly.

Read a letter from Monsieur Richard of Bourbon to Dr. Wallich, dated 29th November, advising despatch by the "Robert le Diable" of 18 cases of Batavia sugar cane, intended for the society's nursery.

From Dr. Montgomerie, of Singapore, to the secretary, dated 23d December, enclosing a receipt for seven bundles of sugar cane, part of which he presents to the society.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 25th Jan. and 2d Feb., enclosing separate reports from Mr. Masters on the sugar canes received from Bourbon and Singapore, which are in good condition.

From His Excellency Sir B. Caple, Naval Commander-in-Chief, dated Trincomalee, 14th January, acknowledging receipt of secretary's letter of the 23d December last, requesting his aid in procuring supplies of sugar-cane from the island of Otaheite.

States in reply, that he would be most happy to meet the society's wishes, but that the period of his command is so near a close, he can do no more than recommend the measure to his successor Sir E. Maitland.

Read reports of the Agricultural Committee, dated 17th January and 8th February, 1838.

Resolved that these reports be confirmed.

A letter from Major Sleeman, dated 18th January, acknowledging receipt of secretary's letter of 15th idem, intimating the result of a resolution of the society, at a general meeting on the 8d Oct. last, having for its object the presentation of the society's gold medal, for the introduction by Major Sleeman of the Otaheite sugar cane. Returns thanks for the same.

From Lieutenant H. Vetch, dated 12th January, Fezpora. Acknowledging receipt of secretary's letter of the 22d December, and in reply to it, expresses his gratification at the flattering mark of the society's approbation in the offer of a gold medal for a mound of caoutchouc of the same description and quality as that recently approved of by the committee. Promises to send a mound superior to that before forwarded.

From Dr. A. Campbell, to the secretary, dated Nepal, 28th January, advising despatch of a box containing specimens of the agricultural productions of the Valley of Nepal, each specimen sufficient to sow four or five cottahs of land, and enclosing a list of the same.

From the same, dated 26th January, advising despatch of a parcel containing "Oosh" or the beardless barley of Thibet, and promising to send down, if required, a larger quantity, by next cold season.

From W. R. Cane, Esq., dated Calcutta, 25th Jan., forwarding for presentation to the society a bag of Bourbon cotton seed, considered to be of good quality.

From T. O. Crane, Esq., secretary to the society at Singapore, dated 4th January, intimating the partial failure this season of a large plantation of Bourbon cotton plants, owing, it is supposed, to a blight, occasioned by the excessive dampness of the soil; mentioning that he has drained the ground and sown in ridges, which may tend to remedy the evil.

From Dr. Wallich, secretary to the Tea Committee, dated 13th February, forwarding by direction of that committee a pamphlet by Mr. Bruce, entitled "Account of the manufacture of black tea, as now practised at Suddya," and stating that a number of copies will shortly be placed at the disposal of the society.

From the same, dated 13th February, forwarding for presentation to the Society on the part of Mr. Mosely, supercargo of the American ship Norfolk, a copy of No. 9 of vol 3 of the Horticultural Register and Gardiner's Magazine, and 9 copies of "New England Farmer and Gardener's Journal," for July, August and September published at Boston.

From the same, dated 15th January, giving some information on the subject of a specimen of tea, presented to the December meeting, by Mr. H. Walters on the part of Mr. Wise.

From the same, dated 15th January, enclosing a note to his address from Captain Jenkins, under date the 30th ultimo, forwarding a sample of Moongah silk of a superior description, on which he is anxious to have the opinion of the Silk committee.

From Mr. Veterinary Surgeon H. C. Hulse, dated 12th November, Muttra, transmitting plan of a horse breeding establishment, and conveying much information on the subject of the same.

From Captain Corbett, dated Almorah, 2d January, from W. Limord, Esq., secretary to the Chamber of Commerce, dated 15th January, conveying, in reply to the secretary's letter of the 4th instant the best thanks of the Association, to Dr. Campbell, Offg. Resident at Nepal, for specimens of Nepalese Paper, forwarded by that gentleman through this society.

From J. F. Sandys, Esq., dated 12th January, enclosing copies of two papers lately received from F. Sandys, Esq., of Arrah, the first containing observations on queries regarding the two models of machines for raising water, the second conveying a few practical hints on the erection of No. 2 model.

From Dr. A. R. Jackson, dated 27th January, acknowledging receipt of the several packages of books, &c., intended for societies in England and Scotland, alluded to in the secretary's letter, and promising to forward them to their respective addresses on his arrival in England.

From Messrs. Lyall, Mitheson and Co., advising receipt of a bag of seeds for the Assam Agricultural society, which they promise to despatch immediately.

From J. Vaughan, Esq., librarian American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, dated 5th August, returning thanks on the part of that society for the 2d volume of our transactions.

From Lieut. G. Poolay, R. N., secretary to the Royal Hon'ble Society of Cornwall, dated 3d July 1837, acknowledging receipt of the 2d volume of our transactions, and forwarding in return, a volume containing the first five reports of their institution. Desiring to maintain a mutual correspondence in matters of interest.

From Mr. E. Norris, Assistant Secretary to the Royal Asiatic Society, dated 1st September 1837, annexing an extract of a minute of the committee of correspondence of the Royal Asiatic Society, relative to the different breeds of cattle known in India, and requesting the assistance of this society in obtaining information on the subject.—(Referred to the cattle committee.)

From Dr. C. Huffleagle, dated 2d September, enclosing a paper drawn up by Mr. J. H. Haines, relative to the cultivation and manufacture of sugar in the districts of Benares, Mirzapore Western Ghazepore and Jaunpoor.—(Referred to the Committee of Papers.)

From Lieut. C. Barnett, Adjutant Mhairwarrah local battalion, dated Benar, 1st November 1827, forwarding by the hand of Dr. Maclean, the several packages of cotton, alluded to in his letter of 27th November last, and requesting an opinion as to their quality.

From D. F. McLeod, Esq., dated Bancoorah 3d Feb., advising despatch by silk bhangly of the following obtained at that station; viz. three skeins of tussock silk, two cocoons containing the living chrysalis, a small quantity of eggs and a piece of cloth made of the silk, stating that the texture of the cloth is superior to any he has met within the parts of India.—(Referred to the silk committee.)

From James Prinsep, Esq., dated 27th Jan., forwarding a gold medal, and requesting to be informed if any more be required.

From Mr. J. W. Masters dated 9th Feb., enclosing a paper containing a few remarks on the "food of plants"

From G. A. Prinsep, Esq., dated 9th Feb., offering a few hints for the better preservation and propagation of the cochineal insect.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 12th Feb., 1838, enclosing a note to his address from Mr. Masters containing some observations on certain specimens of soils received from Mr. C. Manly, of Keerpooy, forwarded for presentation to the society, the specimen alluded to, as also some articles of pottery-ware made from them.

From Samuel Smith, Esq., dated 13th Feb., 1838, presenting to the society 400 copies of a report of the anniversary dinner of this society, which he was prevented from inserting in this daily paper, owing to indisposition until it was too late.

From Capt. H. Kike of Deyrah, to Dr. Wallich, dated 23d Jan., on the subject of the growth of sugar cane, &c.

Dr. Jackson presented a supply of seed barley for the use of the Agricultural Society.

JOHN BELL, Secretary.

Agric. Society's office. Town Hall, }
Calcutta, 14th Feby. 1838. }

Report of a committee, convened at the requisition of the president, Sir Edward Ryan, to examine certain samples of living cochineal, brought from the Island of Bourbon, and the Cape of Good Hope.

PRESENT.—Dr. Strong in the chair.

Dr. Evans,	Dr. Goodeve,
Dr. A. R. Jackson,	Mr. W. Storm,
Dr. Huffleagle,	Mr. D. W. A. Speed.

Inspected two samples of living insects, the one brought from Bourbon, sent (under directions from the Island Government) by Monsr. Richard, Superintendent of the Botanical Garden, on Robert le Diable, the other brought from the Cape of Good Hope, by Capt. Charlton of the Bengal Service, on the Sesostria.

The committee are of opinion, that a most decided difference exists between the samples before them.

The Bourbon insect is clothed with a coat of powdery substance, is perfect in form, and large, having only a slight appearance of filament about the tail, which rubs to powder between the fingers.

The Cape insect is completely enveloped in down, and has none of the mealy deposit about it, which so strongly marks the character of the other.

As far as your Committee can decide, the insects before them are as distinct as the grana fini of commerce is described to be different from the grana sylvestra.

The Committee beg to annex an extract of a letter from Monsr. Richard to Dr. Wallich, dated St. Dennis, Isle of Bourbon, 29th November, 1837.

"Je suis bien impatient d'avoir des nouvelles de nos voyageuses cochenilles. S'il en arrive de vivantes à Calcutta, comme je le pense, elles seront peut-être converties dedans, parcequ'elles auront été enfermées et pour ainsi dire, privées d'air; mais ceci ne doit pas vous faire préjuger de leur mauvaise qualité car quand elles sont sur les Nopals, au grandair, elles deviennent presque nues lorsqu'elles sont à leur grosseur."

This extract, your Committee consider fully borne out by the present appearance of the insect, and, although they do not feel competent to say with certainty, that the larger insect is the grana fina, (none of your committee having seen the insect alive) they have observed enough to convince them that it appears far superior to what is described, by the best authors, as the grana sylvestra.

The Committee request that the cochineal be left in the hands of Mr. Bell, for further experiment.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL DINNER.

About sixty gentlemen attended the Dinner at the Town Hall on Monday evening, Sir Edward Ryan in the chair. The chairman immediately after the cloth had been removed proposed (the first public opportunity he had had of doing so) the national toast. He did so with the greatest delight—"The Queen, and God bless her!" The party responded to the chairman's enthusiasm, and the cheers were loud and long continued.

The toasts followed in quick succession. The chairman again rose, and in proposing the health of the Governor General congratulated the society that in the successor of Lord William Bentinck, of whose services it was not necessary to remind them, they had found another great patron of the institution. Sir Edward prefaced the next toast with what he pleasantly termed "a little parish business." He noticed the state of the society's finances, and the successes which have attended their efforts to bring forth the resources of the country. As to the finances, he had good grounds for saying they were in a flourishing condition, exhibiting a large increase on the current year, arising from the rapid augmentation of the number of members. But if their receipts had increased, so also had their disbursements, for the society did not hoard money. He noticed two large items in the latter, occasioned by the publication of the third and fourth volumes of the Transactions, and the reprint of the first volume, strongly recommending these to notice. As to the number of members, he remembered, he said, something on the last occasion with regard to the little encouragement the society had at that time received from the commercial community of Calcutta. On that occasion his friend opposite (Mr. A. Colvin) had taken to himself the observation, and glad he was to say, if they conveyed any reproach, his friend had since done his best, and the mercantile community had entirely freed themselves of censure. In 1836 there were two merchants only on the list; in 1838 there are thirty-two. The civilians had ever shown a warm interest in the society. He had thought it his duty to express this opinion on a former occasion; but if, up to that time, they had done well, they had since done better. In 1836 there were eleven members civilians; in 1837 the number increased to forty-seven. This was matter for congratulation; nevertheless there was another side of the picture, which gave occasion for much regret. He alluded to the want of co-operation on the part of the Indigo planters, who, of all others, the natives excepted, were the most interested in the society's proceedings. He complained of the absence of these gentlemen, to whom he had not alluded on the last occasion, an omission on his part, to which can be alone he hoped he might justly attribute their indifference. However, he now entreated them to add to the number of the society, and expressed a lively hope that they would imitate the example of the merchants. It was a subject of much regret that so few natives had joined the society. They were the parties most interested in its success, and though their feelings would not permit them to attend the commemoration of the society's anniversary, it was expected they would join and aid the monthly meetings by their subscriptions and influence. He noticed the extension of Auxiliary Societies: last year there were six, at present there were twelve in various parts of India. He noticed the Society's Transactions, alluding particularly to the very valuable papers of Dr. McClelland and Dr. Griffiths. But he would not trouble the party longer with "parish affairs," which was indeed unnecessary, as the whole would be stated in detail by the excellent secretary. In conclusion, the chairman gave "Prosperity to the Agricultural and Horticultural Societies of India."

The next toast was proposed by Dr. Wallich, the vice president. He recurred to his early associates, and feelingly exclaimed "what would Dr. Carey have said had he seen our prosperity, and the improvements our influence has produced?" He entreated the meeting to join in drinking, in solemn silence, the memory of that great and good man.

Mr. Cracroft proposed the health of Sir Edward Ryan, to whose exertions the society are not a little indebted for their present flourishing condition. The toast was drunk with much applause. Sir Edward returned thanks, and took that opportunity to inform the members present in what manner the medals had been distributed. We regret much we are not in possession of the correspondence between Major Sleeman, and the society on the subject of the Mauritius sugar cane, which, we understand, in consequence of the perseverance of that gallant officer, now shoots up luxuriant on the banks of the Nerbudda. Major Sleeman's opinions have been adopted by the society. His observations on the flowering of the bamboo well merited consideration. His exertions in other matters are well known, but they were foreign to the objects of the society. To Major Sherman is awarded the society's gold medal. To Mr. Bell, the silver medal for his cultivation of guinea grass, and to Lieutenant H. Vetch a gold medal for his preparation of caoutchouc.

In conclusion the chairman noticed the report of the Committee on Australian Cattle, and a communication from the Royal Asiatic Society requesting information (as we understood,) regarding the "white bullock of Assam."

There were numerous other speeches and toasts during the evening, of which our reporter regrets he has no record. The "Agricultural Association of the United States" brought forward Dr. Huffleagle, who made some very pithy allusion to the entwining of the young hickory twig with the shamrock, the rose and the thistle; also to the friendly co-operation of the cultivators of New Hampshire and of those of the valleys of the Mississippi. Sir J. P. Grant repeatedly addressed the meeting, and Mr. S. Smith returned thanks for "The Gentleman of the Press." But the greatest interest was excited by Dr. Egerton's announcement of Lord Auckland's answer to the Steam Meeting memorial. It was afterwards read from the chair, and received the hearty cheers of every one present.—Englishman, Jan. 31.

ASIATIC SOCIETY.

At the monthly meeting of this society, on Wednesday evening, there were present: D. Hale, Esq., in the chair; Colonel Canfield, Captain Sanders, Dr. McClelland, Dr. Evans, Messrs Jas. Prinsep, Craicoff, Dobbs, Stoeckler, G. A. Prinsep, Bignell and Kittoe.

Major Sherman, Mr. J. W. Grant, Mr. G. A. Prinsep, Asst. Surgeon Arnott, and Dr. Bonsol were severally ballotted for and elected members.

Mr. C. Fraser and Mr. M. Ommamney were proposed as members, and Monsieur Jaubert, the distinguished French littérateur, as an honorary member.

The proceedings of the previous meeting having been read, the secretary called the attention of the meeting to several new books that had been presented to the Society. Among others, were the Sankhya Karitta—a translation from the Sanscrit, begun by Mr. Colebrooke and concluded by Professor Horace Wilson;—Éléments de la Langue Georgienne, (from the Asiatic Society of Paris,) Captain Boudan's Narrative, the Report of the Committee for investigating the Coal and Mineral resources of India, &c.

A letter was read from Professor Wilson, suggesting that Chantry's proposal to furnish a copy of the bust of Mr. Colebrooke (now in the E. I. House) be accepted. It appears that the work will only cost £60. Mr. Jas. Prinsep suggested that a private subscription be raised for the purpose of engaging Chantry to perform the task. Capt. Sanders seconded the proposition, which was carried.

Among the numerous letters (of small importance) read to the meeting, was one from the Court of Directors, ordering forty copies of the Journal of the Asiatic Society from the commencement onwards. The secretary stated, that the early numbers were all out of print. Some conversation ensued as to the practicability of reprinting the whole work, but nothing was decided.

The secretary intimated that Government had granted 1,500 rupees for the printing a vocabulary in the Cochin Chinese and English languages.

The receipt of numerous stuffed birds from Capt. Pemberton (obtained during the march to Bootan) was announced. Numerous copies of inscriptions derived from temples, pillars, stones, &c. were laid before the meeting, together with some spears and arrows from Cuttack and the Goomsoor country.

The meeting broke up at an early hour.—Eng. Feb. 9.

NATIVE INFANT SCHOOL.

The examination of the children belonging to the Native Infant School, which took place at the Town-hall yesterday, seemed to have excited greater interest this year, than the last. The attendance of ladies and gentlemen was decidedly a more respectable one, but very few of the friends and relatives of the pupils, if we could so call them, were seen amongst the audience, perhaps owing to the hour being a little early for Hindoos in general. The number of boys appeared to have been much increased during the past year, and their improvement, indeed exceeded our expectations, in a great measure. Although there was not one amongst them, who was more than six years old, yet the answers they returned to questions put to them, seemed to astonish the whole audience. A bit of brass wire being held up, they described all its properties, namely, that it was flexible, elastic, &c. They went to say so far that it was not perfectly yellow but yellowish. A nose-gay of roses being handed over by the Right Reverend Lord Bishop, they said what colour the flowers were as also their leaves. They did all this in English, which few children of their age could do in their own language; great credit is therefore due to Mr. Perkins and his assistants for the improvement they have made. They repeated the Bengali alphabet, and the tables of weight and money current in this country. They sang a number of little infantile songs, and their performance was exceedingly well considering their age, and the time they have been in the institution, which is only a little better than a year old.

The Lord Bishop spoke highly of the regularity of their movements and their correct pronunciation of English, and touching upon the advantages likely to result from such an institution, expressed a hope that the ladies and gentlemen present would contribute subscriptions so that funds might be raised for the purpose of establishing similar institutions in other parts of the country.—Hurkars, Feb. 13.

METCALFE TESTIMONIAL MEETING.

At a public meeting of the subscribers and intending subscribers to the Metcalfe Plate.

JAMES PARTIE, Esq., in the Chair.

Proposed by H. T. Prinsep, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Grant.

Resolved.—That this meeting enters cordially into the feelings expressed by the meeting of the British inhabitants at Agra, in their resolution expressing their desire to erect a statue in honor of Sir C. T. Metcalfe, and to present him with a service of plate, and doubts not that the community of British India will co-operate effectually in the promotion of these objects.

Proposed by Mr. Longueville Clarke and seconded by Dr. J. R. Marm.

Resolved.—That by combining together the different public subscriptions which are now raising to offer testimonials to Sir C. T. Metcalfe, it would enable the whole Indian Community to express in a more distinguished manner their appreciation of the merits and esteem for the character of that eminent man.

Proposed by Mr. H. T. Prinsep, and seconded by Mr. William Patrick.

Resolved.—That a committee consisting of the following gentlemen, the Hon'ble the Chief Justice, General McGregor, Mr. H. M. Parker, Mr. C. R. Prinsep, Dr. John Grant, Captain T. J. Taylor, Mr. Longueville Clarke, Mr. R. J. Bagshaw, be formed, to collect the subscriptions of the residents in Calcutta, and put themselves in communication with the committees formed or to be formed at the other presidencies and stations, in order to receive the sums that may be forwarded; and that it be an instruction to the committee to call another meeting on our convenient day after not less than two months, and to report the amount available for the purposes in view, with their recommendation as to its disposal, in order that a final resolution may then be come to in respect to the appropriation of the funds.

Hurkaru, Feb. 20.

CAWNPOOR RELIEF SOCIETY.

The Committee of the Cawnpore Relief Society have much pleasure in submitting to the subscribers, and the public in general, the report for the past year, presenting as it does, so favorable an account of the society's funds, and such decided testimony to the efficiency of its operations. They feel grateful that their call for confidence has been so liberally responded to, and that thereby they have been enabled to release many from suffering, and from the horrors of starvation. This exhibition of confidence has not only placed their successors in a position to relieve, but has also encouraged them to the work; and the state of the country, from the failure of both the khurree and rubber crops such, that both funds and encouragement are amply needed.

The money now available, even under the most economical and judicious application, will scarcely meet three months' demand: the committee therefore entreat a continuance of that reliance which they have hitherto experienced.

To the all-wise God alone, who doth not willingly afflict the children of men, is known the extent to which the present distress will range; appearances indicate a lengthened duration, and unless Christian philanthropy exert its genial influence, the sufferings of the past will not bear contrast with those of the future, the contemplation of which is sufficient to unnerve the sternest mind.

The present is not the time to argue the question whether the establishment of relief societies be desirable or not, (the gratuitous support of the halt, the blind, the decrepid, and the detection of the worthless vagrant, intuitively recommends itself to our best feelings,) but it is the time to act; the labourer is without hire, the energies of life are sinking, and the land is filled with emaciation; casting aside, then, the question of the expediency of such institutions, the committee beg that each individual will, during the present grievous affliction, give a portion of his monthly income to meet the exigency—be it only a fiftieth, if universal, it will be sufficient. They are aware that there are some who, though, they do not throw aught into common fund, distribute for purposes of relief to a great extent: but, it may be asked, how can that charity be discriminating and efficient, by which some receive abundance and others not enough? The better half of charity is investigation; indiscriminate alms-giving is often, nay seldom otherwise than baneful, and but a very equivocal evidence of benevolence; that alone is entitled to the dignified name of charity which first assures itself of the existence of distress, and then relieves it;—examples as numerous as revolting could be adduced to support the above assertion, if support it need; but, perhaps it may be enough to testify, that the most abandoned and worthless have practised with much success on the liberality of the Christian public.

At the close of the year 1836; the balance in favour of the society was Rs. 6,074.9.3; at the close of the past year amounted to Rs. 5,625-8-9 exclusive of dependencies not then realized. The statement below exhibits the nature of the receipts and disbursements.

Under the term anomalous is included the Government allowance of Rs. 900 per mensem, and under that of Sundries, the purchase of tools for the emigrants, temporary hospitals and additional servants for the sick, &c. &c. Government have, at the request of the Committee, engaged to provide for the able bodied to an unlimited extent ; and, it is hoped, considering the amount of the sick and weekly not less than 1,300, the former whom are receiving medical aid, that they may be induced to assist towards the support of these also.

The plan of relief hitherto pursued is that of employing those able to labour in some work of acknowledged public utility, paying to each of the men 4 pice, which, in the present scarcity can barely procure a daily meal, and, to all others, as many cowries according to the load and distance to which is carried, as will enable them, by a little exertion, to gain sufficient to supply the demands of nature. The labour has been employed on the public road, parades, and the ground in the neighbourhood of public buildings ; and the work now in hand is the excavation of a large tank near the Dragoon and Artillery Hospitals, and the filling up of the low ground in their immediate vicinity. The number of deaths from exposure and starvation, which have come under the cognizance of the society, may be estimated at 600 since the 1st of September last, and including those throughout the station, at 1,200 by the lowest calculation ; and the average number relieved daily 1,300.

Seven houses capable of holding 14 individuals have been built during the past year, on the premises of the society, which now can afford shelter to 41 persons.

The number of located paupers perfectly helpless is 30.

Respecting their endeavours to suppress vagrancy, the committee have every reason to feel satisfied that they have fully succeeded: the vagrant is known, his wanderings noted, and his trade checked: all that is required to complete the efficiency of this branch of the society's operations is a reliance on the judgment of the committee, by referring every petitioner unrelieved to them. The system of monthly returns of travelling applicants is maturing, and, will tend materially, combined with the confidence of the public, to frustrate the worthless vagrants' speculation. The number of travellers relieved is 32: the number of these considered unworthy 10.

In closing their report the committee desire to express a fervent hope that Almighty God may, of his infinite mercy, bless the means adopted to the attainment of the end designed, and interpose to prevent the aggravation of the present unparalleled suffering from the continuance of the present drought.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

An inquest was held on Tuesday afternoon last on the bodies of a Chinaman named Fasha, and of a native who was in his employ. The circumstances of the case were briefly these. About one o'clock that morning, Fasha and two of his countrymen, taking a servant with them, embarked at the Custom-house ghaut on board a boat, to proceed to Barrackpore. When off Nimtullah street, in consequence of the violence of the tide, and it being extremely dark then, the boat went fowl of a sloop, and was capsized. The accident was noticed almost immediately after, by the police boats, and they hastened to the assistance of the inmates of the boat. After a short chase they succeeded in overtaking the boat which was floating up, near the Baug Bazar bridge: and after hawling it ashore, it was discovered that Fasha, and his servant were dead in the cabin, the latter completely jammed up under one of the seats. The companions of Fasha had succeeded in getting out of the cabin by breaking through one of the windows, and thus escaped a watery grave. All the crew had also been saved.

After due examination, the jury returned a verdict of "accidental death."

About twelve o'clock the same day, a ferry boat from Ghosry, was also capsized at Coomartory ghaut. There were a number of people on board and all being in a hurry to get to land at once, the boat tilted and turned over. Amongst the passengers there were three Sonniasees, who were the only individuals that met their deaths by the accident. On the boat being soon after pulled ashore, their bodies were found under the chopper. —Hurkaru, Feb. 2.

METCALFE LIBRARY.

(Correspondence between Government and the Committee.)

H. T. PRINSEP, Esq, Secy. to Govt. Genl. Dept.)

Sir,—Under appointment as a committee for carrying into effect the resolutions of a meeting of inhabitants of Calcutta to commemorate that act of the legislative council which establishes the freedom of the India Press, by the erection of a public building to be called the "Metcalfe Library," we beg that you will oblige us by submitting to the Right Honourable the Governor of Bengal, that an amount of subscriptions for the above purpose is raised, which we have reason to hope would provide for the erection of a commodious edifice, but which would certainly not be adequate to the purchase also of a sufficient quantity of ground upon which to build it in any eligible situation.

We are induced, therefore, to request that Government will liberally extend its aid towards the accomplishment of an object of great utility, by granting to the inhabitants a piece of ground upon which to raise this monument of public gratitude for one of the earliest acts of the Indian legislature.

We take the liberty to suggest, that the whole of the enclosure to the north of the tank in Tank-square, being unoccupied, that space would afford ground for the building, desirable in every respect; it being so centrally situated as to be accessible to all classes of the community, and most especially to those to whom the establishment of a library is calculated to be of the greatest service; while it is at the same time sufficiently retired from the most noisy parts of the city, and is a situation where a simple but elegant building of the kind proposed might be made highly ornamental to the place.

The objects of the institution will render it of importance to consult the convenience of many classes of persons, to which we believe no other site would be so well adapted. We trust that the consideration will plead as our apology for having taken the liberty to point it out as that which would best answer the purpose contemplated. And we have further to request that should that ground not be available, His Lordship will be pleased to grant some other spot in that neighbourhood for the erection of the "Metcalf Public Library."

We have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servants,

To J. PATTLE, Esquire,

And others, a committee for carrying into effect the resolution of the inhabitants of Calcutta, for the erection of a building, to be called the "Metcalf Library."

Gentlemen,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 14th instant, soliciting the grant of a piece of ground upon which to erect the edifice to be called the "Metcalf Library," and suggesting the enclosure to the north of the tank in Tank-square as a place well adapted for the purpose, and to request, before the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal can decide whether to allow the proposed building to be erected on the site mentioned, that he may have the opportunity of inspecting the plan.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

Secretary to Government.

General Department, Fort William, the 20th July, 1836.

H. T. PRINSEP, Esq. Secy. to Govt. Genl. Dept.

Sir,—We have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 20th ultimo; and, as requested, to hand you herewith a plan for the proposed "Metcalf Library," which has been drawn by a professional builder with reference to the extent of funds that will be at our disposal.

In having this plan before the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal, we shall be obliged by your explaining that it is submitted solely as exhibiting the scale of building, which the subscriptions would enable us to erect. The plan itself has not been decided upon nor considered with reference to eventual adoption, as it is our intention, should the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal accede to the request contained in our letter of the 14th ultimo, to advertise publicly inviting plans and tenders. This however we should not feel fully at liberty to do until we are favoured with the reply of Government to our request.

We have the honor to be,

Sir, your most obedient servants.

And others forming a Committee for carrying into effect the resolution of the inhabitants of Calcutta for the erection of a building to be called the "Metcalf Library."

Gentlemen,—With reference to your letter of the 11th ultimo, and to the previous correspondence on the subject of the "Metcalf Library," I am directed by the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal, to inform you that His Lordship has obtained a report from the civil architect upon the site in Tank-square which has been requested for the "Metcalf Building," and though objections have been stated to the proposed appropriation of the ground in question, yet it appears to his Lordship to be the most eligible of the sites which have been pointed out and that which may be most properly disposed of.

2. His Lordship has also learnt with much pleasure that the curators of the public library are of opinion that it would be of great benefit to their institution to have the use of such a building, and looking therefore to the just and liberal feeling with which the subscribers to its foundation have come forward, and to the general advantage which will be derived from a public library, they will be willing to waive all objection, and to grant to the committee the site in question as soon as he shall be satisfied that a sufficient and substantial building will be erected upon it on condition, in consideration of the inhabitants of the square, that the building do not exceed one story in height and that it be appropriated to no other purpose than to that of a library open upon liberal conditions to the public.

3. The plan is herewith returned.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

And others forming a Committee for carrying into effect the Resolution of the inhabitants of Calcutta for the erection of a building to be called the "Metcalf Library."

Gentlemen,—With reference to my letter, No. 1264, dated the 28th September last, I am directed by the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal to transmit for your information copies of correspondence noted in the margin by Mr. E. D. Barwell, on the subject of the assignment of a piece of ground in Tank-square for the site of a public library, and to state that His Lordship leaves it to you to determine, whether with reference to these objections and claims you think it advisable to persist in the selection of this spot for the proposed edifice.

H. T. PRINSEP, Esq. Secy. to Govt. &c. &c.

Sir,—Understanding that application has been made to Government for the assignment of a piece of ground within the enclosure on the north side of Tank-square, to be appropriated to the erection of a public library, I take the liberty of addressing you for the purpose of soliciting information, whether it is intended to comply with the application, and should such a measure be contemplated, I would humbly request permission to bring to its notice circumstances which would, I trust, induce the Government not to grant the assignment in question.

I have, &c.

To E. D. BARWELL, Esq.

Sir,—I am directed by the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 24th ultimo, relative to the piece of ground on the north side to Tank-square to be appropriated for the erection of a public library, and in reply to communicate to you a copy of the letter addressed under His Lordship's orders to the committee for erecting a public library under date the 28th September last.

2. The right Honorable the Governor of Bengal cannot believe, that an ornamental building of the kind proposed to be erected under the conditions imposed by His Lordship would be other than an improvement to the square, and to the property in the neighbourhood.

3. His Lordship will, however, be prepared to receive, and give attention to any objections that may be urged by yourself or any other parties interested.

I am, &c.

Genl. Department, Fort William, March 1, 1837.

To H. T. PRINSEP, Esq. Secy. to Government.

Sir,—I was honored on the afternoon of the 4th ultimo, with the receipt of your letter bearing date the 1st of March, and relating to the proposed assignment of a piece of ground in Tank-square for the site of a public library.

As to the mere question of local improvement, it would ill become me to venture an opinion in opposition to the one so strongly intimated by His Lordship, the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal, but I certainly was not without apprehension, that the sale of the property called Writer's Buildings, which has for a length of time been contemplated, would be materially prejudiced by a structure raised so immediately in front of it.

I have, however, much more forcible objection to submit to the consideration of His Lordship, viz that the title to the ground proposed to be granted is (unless they have been divested of it in some way of which both the other member of my family in this country and myself are ignorant) in the trustees of the will of Mr. Richard Barwell, formerly of Calcutta, and of Stansted Park, in the County of Sussex, it will not, I apprehend, be necessary at present for me to disclose this title, further than to state, that up to this time Mr. Richard Barwell's estate, pays the ground rent to Government for upwards of eight beegas north of the tank and south of the great road running in front of the Writer's Buildings, as will appear by entries in the office of the Collector of Calcutta. I also find, on searching among some old papers, that reference is made to an agreement by Thos Lyons (from whom Mr. Barwell purchased the property) not to erect a second range of buildings south of the 19 houses during the lease No. 52, to which Mr. Barwell was bound. This agreement I presume, remained in force during the subsequent tenancy of the buildings by the Company, which tenancy as to the greater part of the premises ceased with the expiration of the last charter.

I have to beg that you will convey to His Lordship, my humble and thankful acknowledgments for the readiness with which he has accorded the request contained in my former letter and hope that the nature of my present communication may be such, as to convince His Lordship, that I have not been guilty of any wanton intrusion upon his valuable time, should he require further information, and be pleased to allow me the honor of an interview, I might perhaps put him in possession of what little I know about the matter, in a shorter time than it would take to commit the same to writing.

am directed in reply to state that the circumstances mentioned by you in respect to the title of the ground, within the enclosure of Tank-square, north of the tank, will be made the subject of particular enquiry, and in the mean time the Committee appointed for carrying into effect the resolution of the inhabitants of Calcutta, for the erection of a building to be called the "Metcalfe Library," will be made acquainted with the nature of the objections and claims preferred by you.

Sir,—We have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th, instant No. 411, to the address of James Pattle, Esq. and others forming a committee &c. transmitting copies of correspondence with Mr. E. D. Barwell on the subject of a piece of ground in Tank-square, for the site of a public library; and stating that the Right Honorable the Governor General of Bengal has been pleased to leave it to the committee for the proposed edifice to determine whether they consider it advisable to persist in the selection of the spot in question.

We are directed by the committee for the Metcalfe Library to reply to your favour above quoted, and to request you will be so good as to submit to His Lordship then wish to adhere to the selection referred to; since they cannot find any situation in Calcutta so well adapted in every way for the purpose as the one referred to in Tank-square. The committee, therefore, solicits that His Lordship will obligingly authorize the proper Government officers to put us in possession, that the further necessary steps for the proposed building may be adopted.

SIR CHARLES METCALFE'S VISIT TO ALLAHABAD.

Sir Charles Metcalfe and suite reached Allahabad on the 15th instant, and the steamer Megna having arrived on the following day, and discharged a miscellaneous cargo of matrons, maids and packages, was immediately prepared for his reception. Mr. Colvin gave a ball to Sir Charles on the evening of the 17th, on leaving which he embarked on the steamer, and sailed early next morning.

We have much pleasure in presenting to our readers the valadictory address of the residents of Allahabad to Sir Charles Metcalfe, and His Honour's reply. A large body attended on the presentation of the address, which was read by Mr. Bird.

Pursuant to resolutions adopted at a meeting held on a former day, for the purpose of considering on a public address to Sir C. Metcalfe, on the occasion of his relinquishing his high functions of Lieutenant-Governor of the north western provinces, the residents of Allahabad, comprising all the heads of departments and many of the uncovenanted servants of Government, with some of the officers of the station, proceeded at noon, on the 17th instant, to the Honourable Baronet's tent, which place he had appointed to receive them.

After a few words expressive of his entire approval (individually) of all the Lieutenant-Governor's public acts, and of his pleasure at having been selected as the organ of communicating the sentiments of the meeting, the Chairman (Mr. R. M. Bird) read the following :

ADDRESS.

HON'BLE SIR,—We, the residents of Allahabad and its vicinity, desire to wait upon you on this occasion, with our assurances of regard for your person, respect for your character, and sorrow for your departure.

The immediate cause of your withdrawal, in the full vigor of your strength and faculties, from the discharge of those high functions in which you have evinced so deep and constant an interest, we have learned from your published reply to the address of our fellow-countrymen at Agra, on quitting the seat of your Government. On this point, thus openly declared and set at rest, it would hardly become us to inquire or to remark further.

But under any circumstances, we must deeply regret the loss of an experienced, high-minded, and able Governor, whose established reputation, intimate acquaintance with the concerns of every public department, sound and extended policy, and tried administrative skill could not fail to secure to you the fullest confidence of all under your authority, and, especially, to stimulate and encourage those who have been entrusted with the subordinate conduct of the various branches of the public service.

We beg you to accept our grateful thanks for the hospitality and social virtues displayed during the brief period of your sojourn at this station; for your ready and to every benevolent object; for that kindness and courtesy, as well in official as in private intercourse, which never fails to conciliate affection, and command esteem, and which will not speedily be effaced from our remembrance.

Your judicious measures for the relief of the distressed population during the present calamitous year, and strenuous exertions to obviate the threatened scourge of the last, form a suitable close to a long career of enlightened benevolence, and cannot, we feel, fail to call down on you the blessings of those who were ready to perish.

We now, with all regard and regret, bid you farewell. We trust you may long be continued to be a blessing to all those within the sphere of your influence. We feel assured that, whether you may again engage in public, or enjoy the quiet of private life, you will possess that assurance of the confidence and affection of those over whom you have been called to preside, and that satisfaction in the recollection of a life spent in the service of mankind, which, to a benevolent mind, is a never-failing spring of pleasing recollection and present enjoyment.

SIR CHARLES METCALFE'S REPLY.

To the Residents of Allahabad.

SIRS,—I beg you to accept my warmest thanks for the honour conferred on me by this address.

The assurance of approbation and esteem, at the close of a long public life, is the most gratifying reward of honest service. The expression of such sentiments in this conspicuous manner, is a high distinction, and a manifestation of personal regard, for which I must ever be grateful. The recollection of this testimony of your friendly feelings, and of the other marks of kindness which I have received from all classes of the inhabitants of these provinces, on the occasion of my departure, will be a never-failing source of pride and comfort to me, whatever may be my future course of life. The same would overwhelm me with shame and sorrow, should I ever do any thing unworthy of sentiments which you have so generously expressed.

Among those who have honoured me on this occasion, are some of the most eminent of my fellow servants; who are at the head of the great branches of the public administration in these provinces; and whom I have always regarded as colleagues in the government entrusted to my charge. With such efficient co-operation, the task of administration was easy, and was cheered with every prospect of success. The government is now in the stronger hands of the Governor-General, and I entertain a confident expectation that with his Lordship's beneficent and enlightened views, and with such powerful aid as he will derive from the controlling authorities to whom I have alluded, and from the integrity, zeal and ability pervading every grade of the public service, the prosperity and happiness of these provinces will be greatly advanced; provided, as I humbly hope, it may please the Almighty Giver of all good to grant more favourable seasons, and remove the drought and dearth, which prevail to a most painful extent in some districts; but here, I am happy to see, in a less degree, than in those from which I have recently come.

My administration in these provinces has been exclusively civil; I have not had the usual authority of a Governor over the army. It is only, therefore, to those officers, military, as well as civil, who have acted under me in a civil capacity, that I am at liberty to express the thankfulness which I feel, for their valuable assistance and support. I notice this circumstance, partly because it precludes me from paying officially the tribute due to the merits of the military branch of the public service, for which I have always entertained heartfelt respect and affection, and to which we owe the acquisition and preservation of our Indian empire; and partly because I am proud to state, that, notwithstanding the want of those powers which are usually attached to the administration of a Government, I have invariably received from the officers of the army, consideration, attention, and courtesy, to the utmost extent that could have been expected, if the military as well as civil powers of government had been vested in me—I may say to a greater extent, for there has been more than mere respect for station—there has been the greatest personal kindness, such as I must ever acknowledge with gratitude. This grateful feeling, although the expression of it is called forth on the present occasion, by the friendliness which I have experienced in these provinces, extends beyond local limits. It is not confined to one presidency, nor to any one branch of the army, nor to any particular description of force. Wherever I have served in India, I have always found, on the part of every portion of the army, without exception, in public duties the most zealous co-operation, and the most hearty desire to uphold the civil power; in social life, uniformly, the utmost hospitality, cordiality, and kindness. The impression made on me by what I have witnessed in these respects, can never be effaced, and I trust that it is not presumptuous in me to avow my sense of it. The greatest part of my life has been passed in situations, in which the society has been for the most part military; and the consequence of the intimate intercourse has been on my part a degree of admiration and attachment, which I cannot adequately describe; but, nevertheless, cannot wholly refrain from declaring, on the last opportunity that I may ever have, of giving public expression to such sentiments.

I beg you all, gentlemen, again to accept my grateful thanks for your kindness, with my fervent wishes that every blessing may attend you, and that this Country may be rendered prosperous and happy, more and more, by that devotion to the public interests which does honour to every branch of the public service.—Cut, Courier, February 6.

ENTERTAINMENT TO Æ. R. McDONNELL, ESQ.

The public entertainment given to Æ. R. McDONNELL, Esq., on Saturday last, by the Native Gentlemen of Madras, was in every respect as creditable to them as it must have been most gratifying to their honored guest. We may say without being accused of flattery, since he will have quitted our shores before these remarks appear, that no man ever spent a long life in India more universally and deservedly admired and esteemed by all classes than Mr. McDONNELL; and the Hindoo community in publicly testifying their approbation of his conduct, have "won golden opinions from all sorts of people."

The fête given to Mr. McDONNELL, by his numerous Hindoo friends was a "Subscription Nautch," at the residence of C. V. Juggarow, in Vepery.—All the roads leading to the scene of festivity were lit up with torches for the occasion; and the garden and house were one blaze of light. At half past eight o'clock, the guests, European and Native, began to arrive; and in half an hour the hall was pretty full. The European gentlemen were about sixty in number, principally of the civil and military services; and several ladies were present also.—The following programme exhibits the order of the entertainment above-stairs.

Programme of the Nautch, given to Mr. McDONNELL, Feb. 3, 1838.

First.—A set of three Mahomedan dancing-women, dancing in a circular form round the hall.

Second.—A young Hindoo girl dancing on the sharp edges of swords, which are fixed in a ladder, at the same time cutting pieces of sugar applied below her feet.

Third.—A set of eight Hindoo dancing-women, each of whom separately holding a string fixed in the ceiling; dancing in different ways and forming the strings into nets, ropes, &c. at the same time singing and beating time with their feet and hands.

Fourth.—A set of three Hindoo Dancing girls dancing in the Carnatic form.

Fifth.—A Hindoo dancing girl, dancing in the Hindoo form to an English tune.—Music with European Instruments.

Fiddlers, songsters and some dancing girls form the sixth.

About the middle of the entertainment, Mr. McDONNELL was approached by C. Strenavassay Pillay and G. V. Juggarow, and, whilst the former stood by bearing the cup to be presented to Mr. McDONNELL, G. V. Juggarow addressed that gentleman to the following effect:

"The Hindoos, whom you have this day so highly honoured by your acceptance of the entertainment prepared for you, are proud to number you amongst the warmest of their European friends. It has devolved on me to express the feelings excited by the recollection of your kindness to them. I cannot attempt to say any thing more than simply to allude to the deep regret which pervades our minds at the prospect of being deprived of your presence at Madras, even for a season. In the mean time, however, while we indulge the warmest hopes of seeing you return to us, at no distant period, with increased honours, we beg you will carry with you this trifling memorial of our sincere regard and esteem. We wish you a safe voyage to England, and all possible prosperity." (Loud cheering.)

The Cup presented to Mr. McDONNELL by his native friends is a handsome silver vase, with cover and salver. The cup surmounted with a raven, the family crest, and the coat of arms engraved on one side, with the following inscription on the other as well as on the salver:

PRESENTED

TO Æ. R. McDONNELL, ESQ.

BY HIS HINDOO FRIENDS AT MADRAS, ON THE OCCASION OF HIS DEPARTURE FROM INDIA, AS A SLIGHT TOKEN OF THEIR SINCERE

REGARD AND ESTEEM.

3D FEB. 1838.

Mr. McDONNELL replied to the following effect

"I regret very much that I cannot sufficiently express my feelings at the entertainment given by my native friends. When a man's heart is full he is unable to utter a word. Nothing could have gratified me in this world more than the honour done me this evening. I have been in India for thirty years, and from the situations I have held in the Revenue department, I have had opportunities of being much associated with the natives, and I have liked them very much. Pray accept my thanks for the piece of plate which you have done me the honor to present to me; and which will be preserved in my family from posterity to posterity."

Almost immediately after the presentation of the cup, G. V. Juggarow proposed Mr. McDONNELL's health in a glass of champagne, which was drunk by the European friends with enthusiastic and deafening applause, Mr. McDONNELL then proposed the health of C. Strenavassay Pillay and the Hindoo gentlemen of Madras, in a brief but very appropriate speech, which was also drunk by the same portion of the Company, with hearty cheers.

The entertainment was kept up with unbounded hilarity until midnight. Two sets of dancing girls exerted their powers for the amusement of the company, at the same time, in very different costumes and received great applause. To persons who never witnessed the sight before, nothing can be more entertaining than the novelties, and, to some extent, the grace of a Hindoo dance; and, in spite of what has been alleged to the contrary, nothing can contrast more favourably than it does with the leggetté. To use the mildest word of our own Opera-house. It was said that the value of the jewels on three of the girls who were dancing together, could not have been less than ten thousand pagodas! They were literally covered with brilliants, not excepting their noses, which were positively tortured with precious stones.

The rather alarming exhibition of a young girl dancing on the sharp edges of swords, which formed the second act, was repeated late in the evening; but on the second occasion she cut lines with her heels instead of sugar cane. It appears hardly credible that a delicate little girl should be able to stand on the edge of a sharp sword, and at the same time, by pressing with her heel, cut a line in two on the same instrument.

We must not omit to notice, that throughout the evening the European guests, and especially the ladies, experienced the most polite and unremitting attention from the native gentlemen who gave the entertainment. A room was laid out with every luxury to gratify the palates of our omnivorous countrymen—wine cooled to a fault; and, indeed, nothing omitted which could render the entertainment worthy of the occasion.—Herald Feb. 7.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

To the Right Honorable Lord W.C. BENTINCK, G.C.B., M.P. and the Home Committee of the Bengal Steam Fund.

My Lord,—I have the honor of enclosing for your Lordship's perusal, a copy of a letter, which, on the 20th September last, I addressed to the Secretary to the New Bengal Steam Fund, in which you will perceive that I expressed an intention to suspend to my retirement from the service of the subscribers to that fund, until they had been afforded an opportunity of considering the vindication of my conduct, which I had felt it a duty to address to them. I was not then aware of the communication which had been made to you, and reflection upon the nature of that communication has induced me to judge that a departure from the course which I had designed to pursue, will, under these circumstances, be more advisable than an adherence to it.

The Calcutta committee having referred the selection of an agent entirely to your judgment, I feel that it would be improper that I should persevere in any measure that might embarrass your proceedings, or interfere, in the slightest degree, with the most perfect freedom of choice.

I therefore beg leave most respectfully to tender my resignation of the office which I have now exercised under your control for nearly a year and a half, during the whole of which period, it is satisfactory to reflect, that I have had the good fortune to meet with your entire approbation and cordial support.

I take the liberty to enclose a copy of correspondence arising out of some libellous remarks in the Calcutta Courier on my conduct as agent.

I have the honor to be, my Lord,
Your most obedient servant,
(Signed) R. M. GRINDLAY.

16th Nov. 1837.

Dear Sir,—We have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, in which you tender your resignation as agent to the subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, in consequence of the letter lately addressed to us by the committee at Calcutta.

As the mere agents ourselves of that committee, we should have felt bound to have acted upon the instructions conveyed to us, although opposed to our own opinion, if we did not possess information and personal knowledge as to your services to that cause, which the Calcutta committee are anxious to promote, beyond what was, or could be possessed by them at the date of their letter of the 1st of May last; and which we cannot but believe would have occasioned a very different feeling from that by which, under a misapprehension, they seem to have been actuated towards you at that period.

Under these circumstances, and with the strong impression we entertain, that when they shall become as thoroughly aware as we are, of the zeal and ability with which you have endeavoured to promote the adoption and success of the comprehensive plan of steam communication direct to each presidency, the Calcutta committee will be anxious to do you full justice; we believe that we best study the interests, and the probable future wishes of our constituents, in declining to accept your resignation, until we shall have an answer to the communication which we shall think it our duty alike to them and to yourself, immediately to address to them on this subject; and in requesting you as a personal kindness to ourselves to continue your valuable services to us and to the cause in the intermediate time as our secretary.

That we may, however, pursue the instructions which we have received from Bengal, so far as they do not make us parties to what appears to us an injustice to yourself, we have to request that you will favor us with a statement of your account with the New Bengal Steam Fund committee, that we may transmit forthwith for their inspection and approval.

We remain, dear Sir, your obedient servants,

Wm. Bentinck. Win. Crawford.

Proceedings of the ninth half-yearly meeting of the Subscribers to the new Bengal Steam Fund, held at the Town Hall, on the 19th day of February, 1838.

WILLIAM SPIERS, Esq., in the Chair.

The Report of the Committee having been read by the Chairman,

It was proposed by Mr. Colvin and seconded by Mr. Smith, and carried unanimously:

That the Report including the accounts, be received, approved and published.

It was then proposed by Mr. Colvin and seconded by Capt. Vint, and carried unanimously:

That Mr. Edward Harding be appointed a member of the Committee in the room of Mr. Benjamin Harding, gone to England.

On the motion of Captain Forbes, seconded by Captain Birch,

The thanks of the meeting were voted to the Chairman.

WM. SPIERS, Chairman.

Town Hall, Calcutta, Feb. 19, 1838.

REPORT.

Of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund to the subscribers to the Fund, and to the petitions at the ninth half yearly General Meeting convened under the 10th Regulation of the Original Meeting of the subscribers to the Fund, held on the 22d day of June, 1833.

The Committee of the new Bengal Steam Fund, at this the ninth half yearly Meeting of the subscribers under the 10th Resolution of the original meeting held on the 22d June, 1833, are happy in being able to report that the cause of a comprehensive steam communication is advancing, if not so speedily as might be wished, yet with certainty towards eventual success.

Since the last report presented to the meeting, held on the 19th August last, the evidence taken before a Select Committee of the House of Commons, obtained by Lord William Bentinck, has been received and reprinted for circulation in India. Consequent on that evidence, and the recommendation of the Select Committee of a "continued and zealous attention to the subject on the part of her Majesty's Government and the East India Company," a general meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood was held on the 4th ultimo; at which a renewed petition to the House of Commons, and memorials to the Board of Control were passed, as also an address to the Right Hon'ble Lord Auckland. The petition was entrusted to the Committee to obtain signatures, and to forward to Lord William Bentinck for presentation to the House of Commons. Six thousand and nineteen signatures were affixed to the petition, when it became necessary to despatch it by dak banghy, so that it might be sure of reaching Bombay in time for the Atalanta.

The Hon'ble the Deputy Governor was requested to allow it to be despatched free of charge, with instructions that it might be specially entrusted to the Commander of the Steamer with directions to cause it to be speedily delivered to Colonel Campbell, in order to its certain despatch by the first Alexandria steamer; this was most readily granted. The duplicate copy was at the same time despatched by the Repube. The Committee have addressed Lord William Bentinck, and, according to the tenor of the second resolution of the meeting, of which copy has been forwarded to his Lordship, have solicited his Lordship's continued exertions.

The memorials were forwarded to the Hon'ble the President in Council by the Hon'ble Sir Edward Ilya, the chairman of the meeting, with the request of the meeting, that they might receive such support as the important object might seem to merit. His Honor in Council in reply, has given assurance that they will receive his earnest recommendation. In reply to the address of the inhabitants of Calcutta, Lord Auckland has expressed himself in terms the most favorable towards the extension of the communications to the three presidencies. The Committee congratulate the subscribers most sincerely on this powerful accession to the cause.

They are happy also to be able to report the deep interest taken in their proceedings in another high and influential quarter. The agents of the Committee at Colombo, Messrs. Partlett and Co., report as follows, under date 15th ultimo. "We have detained addressing you to the present time in order to be enabled to report to you for the information of the Committee, the result of an interview we had on the subject with his Excellency the Governor."

"We beg you will be good enough to state to the Committee that his Excellency has authorized us to communicate that, in the event of the plan of steam communication which they contemplate being matured, his Excellency will recommend that the executive Council of this colony should authorize Government to bear a proportion of the expenditure. His Excellency further expressed his wish to promote the completion of the comprehensive scheme as far as lay in his power."

The Committee feel assured that it is wholly impossible the home authorities can resist the force of the evidence taken before the late Select Committee of the House of Commons, backed as it is by the united support of all the Indian Governments. They refrain from expressing as they feel, the value of this support, and especially of that of the Governor-General. They know it to be given under a conscientious sense of its being due to the cause; and they feel satisfied that it must be so received at home.

The Committee have also the satisfaction of reporting that the feeling in favour of the extended communication is gaining ground to the Eastward. Messrs. Syme and Co. have requested, with reference to the enquiries made at Singapore, that 50 copies of Dr. Lardner's pamphlet might be sent to them for distribution. Only twenty copies being left; they have, together 50 copies of the evidence taken before the Select Committee, been forwarded to them by the Sylph.

The Committee did not receive any communication by the last mail from the Home Committee, and they are ignorant whether or not it was the intention of Lord William Bentinck to follow up the report of the select Committee by any motion in the House of Commons. They rely, however, entirely on his Lordship's zeal and judgment; and they feel assured that his Lordship's parting pledge to procure the attainment of the object by every means in his power, as it has been so energetically followed up, so it will never be lost sight of until success is achieved,

The accounts are as usual laid on the table for the inspection of the subscribers. The only items on which any remark seems necessary are those for printing and advertising, and especially the latter.

The first item is, Rs. 1,088 for printing. Of this Rs. 888 are on account of the reprint of Dr. Lardner's pamphlet, and Rs. 200 are for the reprint of the evidence taken before the Select Committee of the House of Commons. For this latter a further sum of Rs. 453,8 will be required.

The advertising charges amount to Rs. 1,587-3-11, and between three and four thousand rupees are still due. This heavy charge has been chiefly incurred in advertising the constitutional scheme throughout India; as well as in giving notice of the reprints of Dr. Lardner's pamphlet, and the evidence taken before the Select Committee of the House of Commons. Measures will be taken hereafter to reduce this charge, should extended advertisements be again required. The actual balance amounts to Rs. 49, 910 12 7, exclusive of £300 in the hands of the Home Committee. The balance, however, is subject to a letter of credit in favour of the Home Committee for £1,000.

By order of the Committee,

C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta held at the Asiatic Society apartments the 3d Feb. 1838.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read :

From J. Funnell, Esq., requesting to withdraw from the Society, because he could not afford the expense of forwarding the Quarterly Journal to his station.

From the brother of the late Mr. Twining to J. Hutchinson, Esq., expressing the gratitude of himself and family for the marks of respect shewn to the memory of their deceased relative by the Medical Society. The writer requested also that they would furnish his friends in Canada with some memorial of Mr. W. Twining, a collection of his writings, his picture, or some similar token.

It was resolved by the meeting, that a set of the Society's Transactions, a copy of the inscription and drawing the monument erected over the late Secretary's grave, and one of the busts taken after his death, should be forwarded to his brother at Halifax.

The following communications were presented :

Sketch of an epidemic congestive fever that became contagious in a gang of convicts in Macnab, Esq. M. D.

Accounts of the cholera which lately prevailed in the Camp of the 2d Troop 3d Brigade Horse Artillery, during its march from Mhow, by G. Brown, Esq., Surgeon of the troop.

1st. The discussion of the Library question was then resumed, and it was resolved, upon the motion of Dr. O.
 Shaughnessy, seconded by Dr. Goodeve, that it would be better not to form any determination upon the subject until the continuance or abolition of the Quarterly Journal shall be decided by the votes of the Mofussil members.

It was resolved also, that it was not necessary to consult the Mofussil members with respect to the transfer of the Library from the Asiatic Society's apartments, should it hereafter be deemed advisable to resort to that measure.

The Secretary then stated to the meeting, that in compliance with the resolution passed in January, he had applied to Mr. G. Hill to know upon what terms he would perform the duties of Treasurer to the Society.
 That gentleman replied that the ordinary terms were ten per cent. upon the collections, but he should prefer a small salary from 25 rupees per month. He stated that he did not wish to make any profit by the office.
 It was more with a view to increase his connexions that he wished to accept it, and the sum above stated would only suffice to cover his necessary expenses.

The Members present considered that this would be to serve a drain upon the funds for such an object.
 The Secretary then stated his willingness to resume charge of the duties, which it was proposed to transfer to Mr. Hill, rather than put the Society to any unnecessary expense, although the Office of Treasurer was by no means the most agreeable part of his avocation, and he would gladly have freed himself of the task if circumstances had permitted him to do so.

It was proposed by Mr. Egerton seconded by Mr.
 Corbyn, that Dr. Goodeve's offer be accepted with the thanks.

It was then proposed by Mr. Hutchinson, seconded by Mr. Allan Webb.

That, with a view to restore the Society to its pristine state of prosperity, those members who have seceded from it up to this period, be invited to rejoin, without being called upon to submit to the formality of a ballot.
 This was carried, unanimously.

Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy's account of the cases, wherein the artery was successfully tied by him, was then read and discussed.

H. H. GOODEVE, M.D.

GRAND BALL TO SIR CHARLES METCALFE.

The Metcalfe festivals are at length over, the public and their distinguished fêted one will now have a little rest, and "gentle dulness" will now re-assume her reign in the place of popular excitement. Well, all earthly things, as some grave philosopher has observed, "have their drawback," and Fame has certainly a share, ay more than its share, of disagreeable appendages. To be the lion of season is one of those enviable distinctions exceedingly beautiful in prospect but very harassing in reality. We think that we shall like it, but find we don't, and fame instead of being a blessing is discovered to be a dead bore. And now could we discourse most excellent wisdom upon this same subject of popularity, but as it is our business to write about a "ball and supper," we shall bring our morality to a close, leaving the philosophical reader to carry on, in his own mind, the train of speculations here suggested whilst we devote ourselves entirely to L'Allegro.

Three public dinners and a huge omnium gatherum ball we should conceive to be full as much as any mortal being, with ordinary faculties of enjoyment, could go through with satisfaction, to himself in the brief space of one week. We doubt not but that Sir Charles thinks the same, and he must now be cordially rejoiced that these things have become matters of retrospect, and that they are now no more of those irksome affairs hanging over his worthy head. The "grand ball" of Monday was, as Sir Charles said at supper, the closing scene of his Indian career. It is very difficult to say whether it were, or were not, the thing that is usually called "a good party." They who esteem quantity above quality must have been fully satisfied by the aspect of the room about 11 o'clock. We have seldom or never seen the Town-hall more densely crowded at a party of this description, nor do we ever wish to see it so again. It was intended to be a fancy ball but there were very few fancy dresses and most of the distinguished present were in their ordinary costumes.

Sir Charles Metcalfe arrived about 10 o'clock, and was received by a phalanx of stewards who escorted their honourable guest into the ball room and then opened their ranks for the burra sahi to pass up to his seat at the extremity of the room. Every third gentleman seemed to be a steward, for wherever we turned our eyes we saw a ribbon and a round non-descript appendage, with certain letters worked upon it which might have been C.T.M. Dancing commenced immediately after the entrance of Sir Charles Metcalfe, and was kept up "with great spirit," (we believe that is the phrase) till a tumultuous rush to the supper-room about 12 o'clock put a stop to the Terpsichorean proceedings.

We shall take advantage of this break in our narrative to say a few words concerning the two or three fancy dresses which appeared to us worthy of notice. There was a clown, who jumped about considerably; a Paul Pry who played on the castanets, and a Neapolitan Minstrel looking gentleman, who played some airs on a guitar. The Fantastic certainly prevailed over the elegant in costume on Tuesday night. Mr. Wynyard was admirably dressed as Pam, or "his Nob"—in other words the knave of clubs, and looked precisely like the incarnation of that redoubtable card in some Brobdingnagian pack. Dr. Evans, as Mother Goose, trotted about on high heeled shoes arm in arm with Moll Eraggon, who found an excellent representative in Doctor Watson. Mr. Aubert was well dressed as Massaroui, or some other conspicuous Brigand. Mr. Henry Palmer in an excellent costume as that arch scoundrel Sir Giles Overreach, and Mr. Pigou as that famous gentleman in the Fortunes of Nigel, the monosyllabic Master Jem Vin,

Of the ladies we know none to particularize; for there were but very few in fancy-dresses, and with those few we have not the honour to be acquainted. It seemed for some reason or other, to be the prevailing notion that it was more distinguished to go in ordinary attire, and consequently amongst the multitude assembled there was but a small sprinkling of fancy displayed.

The supper was plentifully sufficient to feed a moderate sized army after a long march. But we did not see any-body in our neighbourhood attempt to diminish the quantity on the board. A sit-down supper is at best an intolerable nuisance, and we had hoped that the system was almost abolished in the City of Palaces. However as it gave the ladies an opportunity of hearing Sir Charles speak in public, perhaps we may find an excuse for it upon this late occasion. Sir Charles sat at a table in the centre of the supper room, somewhat elevated above the others; a small table, which was occupied by some half dozen of the most distinguished denizens of our Indian Community—Miss Ross, Mrs. Shakespeare, Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. McGiegar, Sir Edward Ryan, Mr. Cameron, and Capt. Prescott. When the assembled numbers had partaken of a little ice, a little jelly, and a glass of champagne, they began to turn their eyes towards the burra table in expectation of the coming oratorical display. Sir Edward Ryan soon rose, and, in a fine clear voice, made a speech well adapted to the occasion. People thumped the table and made a noise—generally at the wrong time—and Sir Charles's Health was drunk with vociferous acclamations from every side. The honorable Barnet then rose and, labouring under considerable emotion, returned thanks sotto voce for the honour conferred upon him, spoke very feelingly upon the subject of parting from so many kind friends, and in conclusion proposed—"The ladies," a toast, which uniformly carries with it a considerable degree of self-negation, for it invariably makes all their heads ache, owing to the noise which it always elicits. Shortly after this Captain Taylor drew the attention of the company to a circumstance in the life of Sir Charles which reflects upon him no little honour. Among the many characteristics of their distinguished guest, (said Captain Taylor) to which public attention had been directed at the recent entertainments in honour of his departure, there was one which had hitherto escaped notice, a characteristic, which men respect, but which the ladies love, he meant Sir Charles Metcalfe's gallantry. (Applause.) The public would have seen in the papers of the day that Sir Charles had served at the storm of Deeg, but Capt. T. had heard since he entered the room, an anecdote connected with that event, which he thought ought to be publicly stated. In the first Maharratta war in 1804, Lord Lake having been induced to believe that some civil servants in camp did not sufficiently appreciate the dangers, or had spoken slightly of the difficulties with which he had to contend, observed one day at dinner that it was all very well for civilians to treat such matters lightly, as they had a precious easy time of it! Sir C. Metcalfe was present at that period, a very young man, and to show Lord Lake that the civil service are not those gentlemen of India who live at home at ease, but were made of somewhat sterner stuff than his Lordship seemed to think, he volunteered for the storm of Deeg, and to the admiration of the whole army, entered that fortress sword in hand, among the foremost of the storming party. (Cheers.) Captain T. added, that it was a remarkable fact, and one on which he dwelt with peculiar satisfaction, that the two most distinguished statesmen the Indian civil service had produced, Mr. Elphinstone and Sir Charles Metcalfe, had always been soldiers where ever they could be so. (Cheers.) The former, the statesman of Poonah, was a soldier at Assaye,—the latter, the statesman of Delhi, was a soldier at Deeg. (Loud cheers.) Having mentioned Mr. Elphinstone's name, he might well pursue the parallel between these distinguished men, for in very many points the resemblance was striking, but that the attempt would lead him to too great length; on no one point however did they more especially resemble each other than in princely liberality and remarkable amenity of disposition and manner to all classes. It was," said Captain Taylor, "my good fortune to be present at the entertainment given to Mr. Elphinstone at Bombay, when that gentleman was then to quit India for ever, as Sir Charles Metcalfe is departing now, amidst the regrets, the tears, and blessings of assembled crowds. In respect to Mr. Elphinstone, it was then well remarked that he had given a useful lesson to all gentlemen who might hereafter rise to high stations in public life in India, by showing that universal kindness so far from being incompatible with dignified office, is sure to command universal goodwill, and that in his own case it would yield him the rare felicity of relinquishing power without the loss of a single friend. (Cheers.) Unless I am greatly mistaken," said

Capt. T., "that rare felicity" is not less the portion of our honoured guest, than it was of Mr. Elphinstone—for without I have misinterpreted the manifestations of public feeling here and elsewhere, of the hundreds present, of the thousands absent throughout India, Sir Charles Metcalfe has descended from his throne of power without the loss of a single friend.—(Loud cheers.) Captain. T. concluded by requesting the company to join him in drinking Sir CHARLES METCALFE'S health with all the honors—as "THE SOLDIER OF DELG." (Great cheering.)

Sir Charles then rose, but would not "own the soft impeachment," and said that Captain Taylor had been partly misinformed upon the subject, although something of the kind certainly had taken place; however, it did not much signify as Captain Taylor spoke exceedingly well, and the company very vigorously applauded. Shortly after this the supper room was vacated, and we, who decidedly agree with Leigh Hunt, that all writers

REPORT OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE IN AID OF THE SUFFERERS BY THE GREAT FIRES IN CALCUTTA IN 1837.

By the publication of the Resolutions of the 9th, 12th, 15th, and 16th May last, subscribers were made aware of the mode of operation determined upon. The Committee, divided into several sub-committees, have patiently endeavoured to act up to those resolutions, and to observe the course of proceeding therein laid down: but they have been obliged to proceed with extreme caution and reserve, having from the first met with considerable difficulty from the desire shewn by many of the people burnt out to take advantage of the benevolence of the subscribers, from their apathy even in their own behalf, and from local considerations affecting individual cases. It has been found that many who solicited aid at first proceeded shortly to build huts for themselves, shewing that they were not in real distress. In several parts, especially in the districts of the town, under the first and second sub-committees, there appears to have been little or no necessity to aid the personal efforts of the inhabitants themselves. The committee at an early date made an arrangement for furnishing tiles in any required quantity to the poor sufferers, a measure by which good materials were placed at their disposal at an uniform and reasonable rate; grants of tiles have been accordingly made to individuals on certificates from the sub-committee, instead of pecuniary assistance, and with beneficial effects.

Finding that the setting in of the rainy season rendered it impossible satisfactorily to carry on their operations, the General Committee resolved the execution of the main object of their association, the erection of tiled huts in place of those burnt down, until a more favorable state of the weather should enable them to resume it.

During the rains the plan pursued was to bestow assistance on such persons as were actually without shelter, to enable them to cover in their huts with any description of available materials, restricting such assistance to those who were in real distress, and only granting the smallest sums necessary for the object. When the season permitted, the operation of tiling and of substituting tiles for the temporary thatching was resumed.

The committee avail themselves of this opportunity to explain their reasons for not making loans of large amount to individual sufferers: in the first place no applicant for a loan has yet offered any sort of security for the repayment of the money, or for its being made good in case of their decease—besides which, the terms of repayment offered by such individuals, are small instalments by the month, extending the period of repayment over one two, or three years; an arrangement obviously inconvenient and difficult to be entered into on the part of the committee, especially when it is remembered that the money subscribed was for the benefit principally, if not entirely, of the very poorest class of sufferers, and not for those whose situations in life secure them comfortable salaries, by means of which loans might be effected in the ordinary way, without application to this committee.

But the principal consideration with the committee is, that although previous to the rainy season their outlay was not very considerable, owing to the causes above assigned, yet as the rains approached and set in, the people without shelter became more desirous of entering into the views of the General Committee, and latterly the applications for assistance became so numerous, that, after the personal observation which most of the members have had of the extent of distress among the poorest people still remaining to be attended to,—the general committee are persuaded they will require the whole of the means at their command for distribution among that class of the sufferers alone.

Early in January 1838, a sub-committee was appointed for the purpose of enquiring whether it might not be possible advantageously to lay out the remaining funds in the erection of lines of tiled huts, across spaces generally occupied by thatched huts, or in tiling small clusters of thatched huts, still found in spaces chiefly occupied by tiled huts. The sub-committee was composed of the following persons; D. McFarlan, Esq., Capt. R. J. H. Birch, Capt. W. Birch, Dr. Vos, Capt. Vint, Baboo Russomoy Dutt, Rustumjee Cowasjee, Esq., Mr. Balston, Mr. Lindstedt, and Baboo Ramdhone Ghose; and they reported that after having inspected a considerable space occupied by native dwellings in the neighbourhood of Fenwick's Bazar, the Free School, Collingah, and Dhurumtollah, they were unanimously of opinion, "1st. That the funds at our disposal would not enable the committee to adopt the course proposed in the first alternative in more than one or two considerable spaces occupied by thatched huts, and that the appropriation of the money to such lines would be to give pecuniary advantage to individuals not standing in need of it and generally to appropriate to special localities selected (referring to the time and labour we have to bestow on the subject) mainly by chance what was in-

TRADE OF THE UPPER INDUS.

By CAPTAIN A. BURNES.

Definition of Derajat.

1st. The country on the right bank of the Indus, below the salt range, till that river is joined by the waters of the Punjab, is known by the name of Derajat. It is so designated from the two principal towns in the tract, Dera Ghazee Khan, and Dera Ismael Khan. Derajat being the Arabic plural of the word Dera. The lower part of the tract, bears the local name of Sindh, and the upper that of Damun (or border) from its bordering on the mountains of Sooleeman. The country itself is flat and in many places fertile, particularly in the vicinity of the two Deras, but to the westward of the river, even at a distance of a few miles, there are no wells, and the soil is entirely dependant on rain, and water from the hills, without which, there is no crop. On the opposite bank of the river in Leia, the Indus overflows to the east, and the land which is exceedingly rich, yields heavy crops, and is known by the name of "Cuchee." From Leia the great ferry of Daheeroe conducts the merchant beyond the Indus into Deerajat, and as the mountains are crossed by caravan route that lead to Cabool and Candahar, and as it is here that the greatest of the Indian Caravans assemble before passing to the west, the Derajat is invested with a high degree of commercial importance.

Caravan of the Lohanees, Camels, &c.,—Its Route.

2d. From Calcutta, by Lucknow, Delhi, Hancee and Bhawalpore: from Bombay, by Paloo, Beacoor, Bhawalpore, Multan: from Umritso: by Jung and Leia, and from Dhera Ghazee Khan itself on the south, by Bhawalpore; all these routes join at the small town of Drabund, about 30 miles west of Dera Ismael Khan. At this point, commences the well known road by the Goomul river to the pass of Goolairee, which is always traversed by the Lohanee Afghans, some of them enter the mountains higher up west of Tak, and also by an inferior pass named "Cheeree," lower down; but all eventually join, about 45 miles from Drabund. These people are pastoral and migratory, and many of them proceed annually into India to purchase merchandize, and all assemble here in the end of April, their families having wintered on the banks of the Indus, to pass into Khorasan for the summer. They effect this in fixed order by three divisions or "Kirees," which, I believe, simply mean migrations, and these bear the names of Na-veer Kharoutee, and Meekankhy, which is that of the branches of the tribes conducting them. The first is the most numerous, and with it, go from 50 to 60,000 head of sheep, but it is with the fact, that Hindoo merchants and foreigners generally travel. The extensive nature of the traffic will be best explained by observing that the custom-house books shew, that 5,140 camels laden with merchandize passed up this year, exclusive of those carrying the tents and baggage of the people, these are rated at the enormous number of 24,000 camels, the Nasseers having 17,000, the Meekankhy 4,000, and the Kharouze 3,000. The tract which they pass, leads by broken rugged roads, or rather water-courses of the Goomul, through the wild and mountainous country of the Wuzarees, but the Lohanees have arms and numbers to protect their property, and that of strangers. They all reach Cabool and Candahar by the middle of June, in sufficient time to dispatch their investments to Bokhara and Herat, and in the end of October as winter approaches, they descend with the same arrangements into the plain of the Indus, bringing horses, dyes, fruits, and productions of Cabool, in return for the goods of India and Britain. The channel of trade is ancient, for in the year A. D. 1503, we find the Emperor Baber campaigning in the Derajat, and stating that he had fallen in with Lohanee merchants, and plundered them of "a great quantity of stine cloth, woad, drugs, sugar (both candied and in powder) and horses," which were the very articles of trade in the days, though 332 years have since elapsed. It is due to the Emperor to state that if he then plundered, in his own civil cities, he afterwards clothed the Lohanee merchants in dresses of honor, when firmly established on the throne of Cabool.

Other Caravan routes from India.

3d. Having given the routes of the Lohanee caravan, I ought now to note the whole of the other roads leading from India to Cabool, but it would be impossible to do justice to the subject by any verbal description. There are three great roads leading from India, the first by Lahore and Attock, the next from the Derajat (already described) and the last by the Bolan pass, from Shikarpore to Candahar, intermediate to these lines lie various routes, some of which have been used even by large bodies of armed men, and, though, therefore, very important, need not detain us here, as they are not at present used by the merchants. I may only observe of that leading from Dera Ghazee Khan across the Sukhee Surwan pass, by Boree, to Candahar, that it has been used in modern times by the kings of Cabool to supply the luxury of mangoes, and that I met persons who had seen the fruit arrive by it at Candahar from the Indus, in 8 or 9 days. The climate of Gores is described in very favorable terms, both by Mr. Elphinstone, and all the natives I have interrogated; and by this route Baber passed up to Ghuzni with his force after the campaign of 1505, already alluded to. His horse suffered from the want of grain, but as a caravan route, this seems not inferior to the Golarce pass, and only to have been deserted of late years; and at the present hour is used by couriers to bring speedy information to and from India. From Dera Ismael Khan, north to Peshawur, there is no direct traffic. The roads are bad, the people are predatory. From Dera Ghazee Khan, south by Dajel and Her and, there are roads leading over low hills to Bag Dadur, and the Bolan pass, which have been used by large Caravans within these 25 years. Dera Ghazee Khan, indeed, and shikarpoor, as I stated when writing on that mart, are always spoken of by the people, as two gates of Khorassan.

Dera Ghazee Khan described.

4th. In a neighbourhood so advantageously situated, the merchant exports the native productions of the soil with profit, and the manufacturer converts them, and the imports from other countries into cloth which accompanies these and the foreign goods that pass through it in transit. Dera Ghazee Khan itself is a manufacturing town, but it is surpassed by Multan and Bhawalpoor, which lie in its neighbourhood; on these two marts I shall be silent, as their commerce has engaged the attention of Lieutenant Leech, whose reports will convey every and the fullest information of Dera Ghazee Khan. I need only speak at one time, its trade with the west and even with east, was brisk, and though it does not now exhibit its former prosperity, from the great influx of British goods, its native manufactures are yet healthy and thriving. It is celebrated for its goodbaddeas and dunnies, or striped and plain silken cloths, which being sought for, and admired, are yet annually exported to Lahore and to Sindh, and considered to surpass those of every other country. To the east it sends its silks, deriving the raw material from Bokhara, and the west. To the west it sends its cotton, and the greatest of its exported manufactures, is coarse white cloth, which is sent to Khorassan, and yet stands its ground with English cloth, as far as demand goes, though far inferior in quality. The demand for British calicoes has decreased by one of this year; on this account last year, the sales effected amounted to 50,000 rupees, and for this, it is under 24,000. Chintzes of different descriptions, with soosie, halis, and some coarse loongees, complete the list. There are no woollen manufactures. The value of all these may amount to about one and a half, or two lacs of rupees, and the greater part is exported. A coarse kind of cutlery, swords, scissors, knives (such as are used by sailors) is made at Dera Ghazee Khan and exported. The bazar consists of about 1,600 shops; 530 of which are engaged in weaving and selling cloth. I annex a list of them. The town has a prosperous appearance, which is a together attributed to the protection of Monsieur Ventura, who was lately in charge of this district. It may have a population of 25,000 people. It is said to have been built by a Belooch about 300 years since, and its name long fluctuated between "Ghazee Khan," and "Hajee Khan." It was completely subject to the crown of Cabool, and fell into the hands of the Sheiks, about 25 years ago. They farmed it to Bhawal Khan, who had no interest in protecting it, and his officers were guilty of gross extortion, but since it was resumed in 1832, it has greatly recovered itself.

Productions, Prices, Revenues of Dera Ghazee Khan.

5th. The country around Dera Ghazee Khan is very rich; the town is pleasantly situated in a flat country about four miles from the Indus and surrounded by gardens and lofty trees, among which the date predominates. It is said indeed that there are 80,000 date trees around Dera. By far the most valuable production of the place is Indigo, 2,000 maunds of which were this year exported to the west. I am informed that this is the full resource of the district. The best sort now sells for 65 rupees per maund, the next for 50, and the most inferior for 32, so that this export alone amounts to about one lac of rupees in value. The dye is inferior to that procured in Bhawal Khan's country, but it is cheaper and has a ready sale in Cabool and Bokhara, besides being nearer at hand. The cotton of Dera Ghazee Khan is superior, being soft in staple, 25,000 maunds are procurable, it is at present exported. Sugar is cultivated, but in small quantities, and only of late years.—The place is rich in grain, the wheat and barley are superior, but the rice is red and indifferent. The price of grain in June 1837, was as follows, the currency being that of Shooja Ool Moolk, and much the same as the Company's rupee, and the maund as that of Shikarpoor already described.

Rice per maund of 40 seers, 80 rupees to a seer	3 Rupees.
Rice, 2nd sort, 1½ maund.....	2 to 1½
Wheat, 1½ maund.....	1
Gram 70 seers.....	1
Ual, or Mohree, 2 maunds.....	1
Moong, or Mash, 50 seers.....	1
Ghee, per maund.....	8½
Oil, per ditto.....	4
Salt per ruja, or piece of 1 maund 25 3½
Native salt, 2 maunds.....	1
Goor or molasses.....	3½
Sugar candy per maund.....	26

Under Cabool, Dera Ghazee Khan yielded a yearly revenue of about 12 lacs of rupees, it now produces 8½ or 9 lacs, and that only within these two or three years.—The country which gives this includes the district of Sungur on the north, and Hunand Dajel on the south, also Bachee across the Indus. It is farmed to the same person who is now Governor of Multan, and it is improving daily. The number of villages around Dera Ghazee Khan is exceedingly numerous; they are nearly all peopled by Mahomedans, and in the town of Dera Ghazee Khan the two tribes are about equal, there being in it 125 Hindoo temples and 110 mosques, great and small, every description inclusive.—The duties leviable in Dera Ghazee, on all sales of cloth are, 1 pice per rupee, which paid at the Custom-house (Chubootra) immediately after the transaction. This is called the old tax mohsool (galacnee) and paid by citizens, —foreigners pay double.

Communication and Transits to and from Cabool, &c.

6th. Dera Ghazee Khan communicates with all the countries around it, by good roads except those to the west, where it is necessary to qualify that term: a list of the marts or places of note may not be useless, and I may prefix to it that goods of every description, quitting Dera Ghazee Khan, pay an ad valorem duty of 2½ per cent. to Asnee, Hunund, Cutch Gaudava, Mitthen, Shikarpoor, Bhawalpoor, Khyrpoor, Ullah Yar, Hyderabad, Multan, Lahore, and Umrutsir, all merchandise whether cloth or groceries, is taxed in this manner. But since the most important route in this line is that of the great caravans to Cabool, I shall particularize the duties there leviable. At the outset, the first charge is as above—

Ad valorem	2½ per cent.
At Sungur, per maund	13 annas.
At Kot Fuga, per camel....	2 rupees.
At Drabnd, do.....	2 ditto.
At Tuk Sewares Khan ditto..	2 ditto.
At Soolemad Khuel, ditto..	1 ditto.
At Ghuznee, per camel.....	8 ditto.
At the gate of Cabool "Goo-shi" or ent tax per camel.....	2 ditto.

Landed at the caravanseries of Cabool, one in forty is taken in pieces of cloth; Indigo, and groceries are compounded for, at 20 rupees per camel load. This is the whole duty of the road. In effecting sales, a brokerage of 1 per cent. is paid, and another rupee is expended in caravansaria hire and postage. On returning from Cabool the duties are as follows on quitting the city.

Ad mulem.....	1½ per cent.
At Drabunt per mule of every kind (if to any but a Shikarporee, the charge is 10 rupees).....	6 rupees.
At Dera Ghazee Khan per mule if advanced from this.....	10 annas.
At Bhawal Khan's frontier per camel.....	3 rupees.
At Bhawalpoot (though the usual route here is via Multan).....	3 to 5½ per cent.

Nothing therefore is more complicated in appearance than these duties; and one is surprised at the novel mode of weighing cloth and levying duties accordingly. The Hindoo merchant of Shikarporee, it will be seen, has a great advantage over the Mahomedan, which arises from its being advisable to give encouragement to a great dealer. The duties in conveying goods to Khorassan are heavier than in returning, probably from the greater value of the articles: the expenses of an investment to, and from Dera Ghazee Khan, to Cabool, and Candahar, are rated at 3½ per cent. the profit in excess is calculated at 25 per cent. and this is generally realized. From Dera Ghazee Khan, to Drabunt, 90 coss, the hire of a camel is 3 rupees; from that to Cabool, it depends upon the supply, varying from 20 to 30 rupees per head.

Of Dera Ismael Khan, its Trade, Revenue, &c.

7th. Dera Ismael Khan, is in these parts next in importance to Dera Ghazee, but is only a third of its size, and labours under disadvantages from its position. About 12 years ago, the town was washed into the Indus, and on a new site about three miles from the river, the inhabitants have again fixed themselves. Till lately the place was held by a Mahomedan Chief, who laid out the new town with order and regularity, having wide streets and a good bazar, but the Sheikh possessed themselves of Dera Ismael, a year ago, and are not likely to work out his plans of improvement, as yet the houses are built of sunburned brick, and the town has an deserted look, but it is said to be a place of much stir and bustle in the winter, when the Athgians return from Khorassan to its neighbourhood. There is a large caravansaria in it, where they transact their business and dispose of much of their goods, for Dera Ismael is their bazar town. It contains 518 shops, but there are no native manufactures here, as in the Lower Dera. The wool of the Lohanees sheep is not sold here, but in Cabool, where an agent, if dispatched, might procure the article in abundance, and, at the same time, the means of transporting it. The transit of coarse white cloth from the Punjab through Dera Ismael to Drabunt is great, amounting to no less than 3,000 camel loads a year. Each package contains about 600 yards of cloth, the guz and English yard being the same, so that we have an export of 1,800,000 yards of this fabric. It is manufactured at Meungana, Jung, &c. also at Rohan, and might be made in Britain. Most of these goods are crossed at the ferry opposite Dera Ismael, and pay much heavier duties than lower down; 2½ rupees being exacted on every maund of weight, while 7 to 10 annas is the demand at Kaheeree, which readily accounts for the caravans crowding at that ferry. The revenue of Dera Ismael Khan amounts to 4½ lacs of rupees per annum, of this 2 lacs and 8,000 are derived from the taxes and town duties from Kaheeree south, to Eesa Khyl north, and the rest from the lands subject to Dera Ismael Khan. Grain and the necessities of life are more expensive than in the Lower Dera, the supplies are also received by the river from Murwut which is a grain country.

Water Communications—Boat-hire.

8th. The Derajat, as I have stated lies along the Indus, and the advantages of the river are so obvious & even not to have escaped the people. The productive soil of Syngur, 50 miles to the north, under the hills from which that district is watered, supplies more wheat and grain than is required, and it is therefore shipped for Dera Ghazee Khan, which contributes still further to keep down the price of provisions at the town. The salt of Kala Bagh is also used all along this line of the river, and brought down by boats, but a few cargoes of it supply the population. The pilgrim boats likewise take in a little cargo, for which I find there is a regulated charge, but as this is unknown to Government, it may be considered a kind of smuggling. So organized however is it, that a weight of 8 maunds may be sent down to the following rates—Dera Ghazee Khan to Mitthen 2 rupees, to Shikarpoor or Roree 5 rupees, to Sehun 7 rupees, to Hyderabad 9 rupees, and to Gora Barre 12 rupees, all this is indicative that there is a channel of trade by the Indus. The only instance however of upward communication, of a late date, is in a Shikarporee merchant freighting a vessel with molasses or goor from Dera Ghazee, to Dera Ismael Khan, about four years ago, and bringing salt in return. The cold season was selected, and the voyage performed in 15 days, the distance being about 160 miles; the downward voyage occupied four days. The speculation was profitable, and the same merchant has since forwarded goor to Shikarpoor. At the opposite season it may be as well to state, that the voyage from Mitthen to Dera Ismael Khan, was made in 19 days, during May and June. The road distance, is about 250 miles, perhaps a quarter more by the river, and as the swell is near its height, the result in a commercial point of view, is encouraging. In navigating the Indus above Mitthen it will not be omitted in the calculations of the merchant, that both men and boats may be hired for one half the sum paid in Sind. The contrary of this is stated in my printed work, and I am glad of an opportunity to correct the error after finding it out by actual experience.

Dera Ghazee Khan, June 13, 1837.

Govt. Gazette, Feb. 12.]

A PETITION TO GOVERNMENT.

We have been informed, that a petition, very numerously signed, the signatures being native, has been recently, within the last day or two sent in to Government. The prayer of which is that measures be taken for the institution of schools to be devoted exclusively to the study of Sanscrit, as a foundation for the formation of one general language, consolidating or superceding the various dialects of Bengallee which now obtain. This petition, which has been handed over by Government to the Education Committee, is worthy, we understand, of serious attention, from the great number of its signatures, amounting, we are told, (for we have not seen it) to thousands, and must be taken therefore to be the expression of opinion prevalent with respect to the great evil now to be deplored, i. e. the want in Bengal of one fixed and generally understood language, having one known character and common to all classes of the inhabitants of this vast and fertile district. The answer of the Government to this petition will be of much interest. Here is a clear admission that in the opinion of many, there is an absolute and crying demand for a national language; we presume, however, that the objects of the petitioners will not be carried into effect; and for many reasons. The new language founded on the Sanscrit, or rather regulated by it, and consisting as we presume it would of a consolidation of the Bengallee dialects, improved by a larger infusion of Sanscrit than is now traceable in the Bengallee, would be to the many an unknown tongue, and would be open to all the objections now raised against the Persian on this score and to more besides. The Persian is not an unknown tongue; it is on the contrary as familiar as Hindoostanee, to a very large portion of the educated Hindoos, and to all or almost all the Mahomedan subjects of Empire. To all that portion, in short, of the inhabitants of the country likely from their position, rank and property to constitute the principal suitors in the Courts of Justice, or likely to be called on to fill situations as officials in these Courts. The only class not likely to know Persian are the lower classes of traders, and the ryots, by far the most numerous, of course, but inasmuch as the new language proposed by the petitioners would be a sealed book to them, to the same extent that Persian now is, we do not see what they would gain by the change. And to the Mahomedan inhabitants, the substitution of the new language for Persian would be a positive evil, as great as the present measure of Government, the substitution of the vernacular in Bengal for Persian. To the poorer class of the population of Bengal, we fear that the present state of education considered, the language of the Courts of Justice must for a long time to come, remain an unknown tongue, be it Persian, or be it an improved modification of the Bengallee on the Sanscrit model. We are told, moreover, that the people themselves if polled, would be found perfectly indifferent to the change. And that to the majority, the Roobicarry, &c. of a Court of Justice, is about as intelligible in Persian as it would be in Bengallee. The knowledge of the written language in the majority of the poor classes being confined to the limited, familiar and colloquial phraseology, appertaining to the dealings and transactions of their particular calling—and comprehending necessarily but a small section of the words, expressions, and idiom constituting the language itself. That the result therefore of their evidence should be taken down in Persian in a Court of Justice, or written out in Bengallee or Oordoo must be, we suppose, a matter of indifference to them; they must under any circumstances confide in the fidelity of the scribe, without having any control over his version of their deposition; and if the scribe be disposed to falsify evidence, he can write one thing for another in Bengallee as well as in Persian, the only difference being that he will be about three times as long in taking down the evidence in Bengallee, as it would have taken him to do it in Persian, with the additional advantage of there being fewer persons capable of understanding what he may have written. In either case the poorer classes, as it appears to us, gain nothing by the change. The proceedings are lengthened by it; the Mahomedan population alarmed and displeased at it; and the labours of the officials about trebled by it, and rendered less efficient withal. Under the present system, by which the exertions of the Civilian are taxed, beyond the power of performance in very many offices, all that he could do is to exercise an active supervision over his subordinates—for the most part of course natives—as it is, it would appear, that with all the brevity and simplicity of the Persian it is generally admitted, that he cannot check the propensities of his Umlah, &c. to deceive him, and the suitors. Now, we will ask, will this supervision in the superior be carried on, when he shall come to have the proceedings of his Court, written in Bengallee or Oordoo? by which his labours of inspection will be increased nearly threefold; and his attention will be called to instruments, and the minutes of the transactions of the day, written in a character infinitely more complicated than the Persian, and in which in nineteen cases out of twenty, we will venture to say, and we speak on the information of persons well knowing the fact, the Civilian himself, is less well read than in Persian. The correspondent of the Hurkaru, X. Y. Z. to whose letter the latter of these observations in some sort apply, has one singular enough argument, upon which he grounds his advocacy of the abolition of the Persian, i. e. that any deficiency, or omissions or mistakes in a Persian document may be concealed from the facility of changing one letter or phrase into another. Now if the credit of the functionary is to depend upon the falsifying of documents, at his pleasure or necessity, to answer the exigencies of a particular case, and that this system of substitution and forgery is the general rule of conduct of officials; it appears to us a matter of indifference in what language the proceedings of the Courts are carried on; because roguery of this sort can be practised in any written character, whether written in a sort of short-hand like the Persian, or in good honest vernacular, such as English or Bengallee. And as the Bengallee character is less generally known than the Persian, we presume detection would be more difficult. This argument, however, if such it must be called, is surely an argument from a particular circumstance, to a general conclusion. Persian documents may have been falsified in some few instances; but the general rule we must presume is that they are not falsified; and to make any thing of this argument it ought to be shewn, that public functionaries generally, are in the habit of concealing gross negligence, by the alteration of the proceedings of their Courts, after they have been registered and signed; and that the practice will be put a stop to only by the substitution of the vernacular for Persian, which vernacular cannot by the same falsifying process be made to exhibit the same result, i. e. the falsification of a document. This is, if we understand the correspondent of the Hurkaru, the amount of his argument in favour of the vernaculars; and we need not say, that to us it appears in the light of nonsense. We do not at all question, that under the present system, the ends of justice have frequently been frustrated by designing officials; but that the use of the Persian is to be held the cause, we cannot admit—corruption must be laid to the door of the system, and not of the language. The mode of taking evidence attested to by X. Y. Z., and liable, as he states, and we believe states truly, to so much abuse, is in itself vicious—a mere farce, by which it is pretended that the witness is examined coram judice, when in point of fact the deposition presented to the Judge, may or may not be the man's evidence. But this evil cannot be cured by the substitution of one language for another. A vide et cetera examination by the magistrate would obviate this evil, but this the press of business does not admit of. The only check then is in the improved morality of the native scribe; which is not much affected, we presume, by the character in which he writes, be it Bengallee, Persian or English. In conclusion, we will ask any body whom it may concern, how many Civilians or natives fit for employment, or capable of carrying on the current business of the country, can write a Ron-bicarry in the Bengal vernaculars? For that is the question which most presses at present, and is more germane to the measure of substitution than the query of the Hurkaru about Bengallee and the understanding of the "great bulk of the population."—Courier, February 23.

SUPREME COURT.

THURSDAY, Feb 1.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

CONYLOLL v. POOROSOOTHEEN DOSS AND ANOTHER.

In this case the bill stated that in 1818, three partners, Tooleeram, Mohunbail and Seteram, possessed establishments as bankers and traders at Patna, Calcutta, Mizapore and Cossimbazar. The first mentioned partner was entitled to a six-anna share, and the other two, who were brothers, to the remaining ten anna share. After the death in 1818 of Mohunbail (who left only a widow surviving a short time) the business was conducted by the two other partners. Seteram died in 1820, leaving three sons, one of whom died without leaving any widow or issue, and the other two, Poorosootheen Doss and Narain Doss are the defendants in this suit. The survivor of the three original partners, died in 1821, leaving an only son, Conyloil, the present complainant, who attained his full age about 1830. The bill alleged fraud during the minority of Conyloil, misappropriation by the defendants of a sum amounting to four lacs, and a falsification of the partnership accounts, whereby a balance was falsely stated against the complainant. The prayer of the bill was that an account might be decreed, and the title of complainant declared to the original six-anna share of the partnership property.

A plea was filed by the defendant, setting forth an instrument bearing date January 1834, whereby the parties had agreed to a reference to three arbitrators. The plea further alleged that a prior oral agreement between the parties, directing the payment of certain sums of money and settling the respective rights of the parties, was produced before the arbitrators, who made then verbal award, in February 1836, by which the above agreement was adopted and carried into effect as their solemn award.

This plea having been set down for argument, the case now turned entirely upon its validity.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the defendants.—It is difficult to conjecture what precise ground of objection is intended to be raised against the plea. This is, in effect, a plea in bar of a verbal award, made by arbitrators duly appointed; and Cor v. Macclesfield, in Dyer's reports, establishes the validity of a verbal award. Then the plea covers the whole bill, because the prayer of the bill is confined to the property which is the subject matter of the award. As to the prayer for a discovery,—the right to a discovery is dependant on the title to relief and this plea expressly negatives such title.

The Advocate General for the complainant.—The objection to this plea is matter both of form and substance. Although the bill distinctly alleges fraud against the defendants, these allegations are not met either by plea or answer. It is quite immaterial whether the instruments set forth be called an award or a release; probably the latter term is more correct; but whatever it be, if fraudulent, it cannot be supported. Now fraud positively alleged in the bill, and not being positively contradicted by the plea, must be taken to be admitted. There ought to have been an answer positively negating fraud. The case of Wright v. Prand, 13 Vesey, lays down the general principle that a transaction will be set aside between parties standing in a certain relation to each other, as guardian and ward, or trustee and cestuique trust, whenever the transaction has arisen out of the influence of that relation. Such has been the case here, and such the relative position of the parties during the infancy of the complainant. But the case chiefly relied upon is Rosche v. Mungen, 2 Schombes and Lefroy, where it was held that where fraud is alleged a release pleaded does not prevent the Court from decreeing a new account, unless the defendant by his answer fully meets the charge of fraud, and it is declared to be immaterial that the bill itself does not state the release. This brings the case precisely within the analogy of the present.

Mr. Cochrane on the same side.—It is a general principle, which requires no authority, that the right of parties cannot be barred either by a reference to arbitration or by release, until a full and true account has been rendered. Now it is admitted here that no account has been rendered at all. But further, a distinct and specific charge of fraud is made out. The books relating to the partnership accounts are alleged to have been tampered with and falsified and to contain fraudulent and forged entries, by means of which a balance is falsely made out against the complainant. Now these are the very books which were produced before the arbitrators, and upon which their award was founded. That award, therefore, must be void. The case of Helps v. Spruile, 1 Mylne and Keen, decides that a plea of a settled account is no bar, unless fraud is negatived, and according to Walker v. Simons, 3 Swanston, protection is to be extended after the party has obtained majority until proper information has been obtained.

Mr. Clarke, in reply.—The case of an award stands upon its own peculiar grounds, and is not touched by any of the arguments advanced or the authorities cited. It is to a certain extent equivalent to a judicial decision, Pitterson v. Peat, 3 Ark., and it is final and binding upon all the parties unless impeached by fraud and collusion on the part of the arbitrators. Now there is no pretence or allegation whatsoever of such misconduct in this case.

Sir E. Ryan.—Would it not be a good ground for setting aside an award that it had been made upon the authority of false and fraudulent documents?

Sir J. Grant.—It surely is law that an award is vitiated by fraud not only when practised by, but also when practised upon, the arbitrators!

Mr. Clarke—This is admitted. But in such a case it would be necessary to set forth all the particulars of the alleged fraud, and to connect them with the award. The bill must be brought expressly to impeach the award and not attempt to get rid of it in this vague and indirect manner. How are the allegations of fraud, connected in any way with the award? It does not appear on the face of these pleadings, but that all the circumstances of the case were fully before the arbitrators; so that even if the books were falsified to any extent there might be other evidence produced before the arbitrators, quite sufficient to enable them to arrive at a just decision. An award is of the same force as a judgment or decree, and a plea of judgment recovered would surely never be held bad upon a simple suggestion—a vague assertion that there had been prior fraud. It would be necessary to connect that prior fraud with the subsequent judgment, and show expressly how it influenced such judgment. That is not done here. From the circumstances, therefore, of the present case nothing more can be inferred than the existence of fraud at some prior period; nothing is shown to affect the validity of the award. The Court, after a short consultation, postponed judgment.—Hurkaru, Feb. 2.

SATURDAY, FEB. 3 1838.

This was the last day of term, but the last cause on the board having been heard on Friday, the Court only took common motions and rose at an early hour. Judgment has not yet been delivered in the appeal case from the Insolvent Court, and some other cases argued during the present term.

Mr. William White Burkinyoung, who arrived from England last week, was admitted an Attorney of this Court.

Monday, (this-day) is the first day of the sittings. At present fourteen causes have been entered on the Plea side, and one on the Equity side.

MONDAY, FEB. 5, 1838.

Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant—Sittings after First Term of 1838.

JOHN LUCAS versus GEORGE KALLONIAS AND OTHERS.

In this cause a motion was made on notice on behalf of George Kallionias, one of the defendants, against whom an ex-parte decree had been obtained, of the date of the 24th July 1837, for substitution of attorneys without payment of costs, and also to set aside the ex-parte proceedings on payment of all costs by the defendant's solicitor. The motion occupied the court the whole day, and excited great interest.

Mr. Cochrane for Kallionias.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith for the solicitor, Mr. Shaw.

The Advocate General and Mr. Clarke appeared to represent the interests of Lucas, the complainant in the original suit, but were not heard on this motion.

Mr. Cochrane, in support of the motion, put in affidavits of his client and the correspondence which passed between him and his solicitor, Mr. Shaw, to prove gross and culpable negligence on the part of the latter. In the early part of the correspondence Mr. Kallionias appeared to be labouring under the impression that he was not within the jurisdiction of the Court, and that there was a conspiracy to draw him within it; but it was alleged that at a subsequent period positive instructions had been given to the solicitor to put in an answer and proceed regularly in the cause. All the letters which passed on both sides were admitted, except two, alleged to have been written and sent by Mr. Kallionias, but denied to have been ever received by the solicitor. Mr. Cochrane contended, that there was both direct and circumstantial proof of their receipt. Letters were read from the deputy post master general, and on affidavit of the Post Office peon, by which it appeared that two letters were received at the post office by the Dacca mail about the time in question, with the address named, and delivered accordingly. It was hoped that if these facts were made out to the satisfaction of the Court, the motion would be granted, and the defendant allowed to come in—and that the Court would not suffer him to be ruined without any dereliction of his own. The defendant was an ignorant man, unacquainted with the forms and technicalities of law, anxious to defend the suit, and furnished with a complete ground of defence, but barred therefrom entirely by an act over which he had no control.

Mr. Prinsep for Mr. Shaw, put in counter-affidavits of his client and of persons employed in his office, positively and expressly contradicting all the charges, and especially denying the receipt of the two letters in question. It appeared, moreover, that several instances had occurred, and were specifically alluded to, where mistakes in the delivery of letters at Mr. Shaw's office had taken place. An offer of arbitration had been made to Mr. Kallionias, but rejected. As to his alleged ignorance of legal matters, it was proved that he had been in an attorney's office. Collateral affidavits were also put in, contradicting some of the matters sworn to by Mr. Kallionias, and throwing discredit on his statements. Mr. Prinsep was proceeding to answer the case as regarded the charges of corruption and collusion, contained in the affidavit of Kallionias, and asked what possible motive could be assigned for the conduct attributed to his client. A wild notion that all the world is conspiring to injure a man, is frequently a forerunner and index of incipient insanity!

The Court here intimated that as the only point in the case related to alleged neglect on the part of the solicitor, the charges of corruption must be abandoned.

Mr. Prinsep then went over the correspondence between the parties. The earlier instructions are so vague and contradictory that no one could safely act upon them. First, the party directs that the jurisdiction should be pleaded in bar; then that no answer should be put in at all; afterwards, that his solicitor should wait until he received further instructions. Nothing definite is contained in any of the letters admitted to have been received. As to the two missing letters, it is not denied that they may have been written, but only that they have ever been received. An agent is not to be mulcted in heavy costs because his client's letter has miscarried. But further, no proof is given of the identity of the letters sworn to have arrived about the time in question by the Dacca mail. Again the circumstance of an arbitration having been offered and rejected, is a strong presumption that the present application is not made in good faith. Surely the Court will not grant such a motion as the present upon such slender and unsatisfactory grounds.

Mr. Leith, on the same side, was not called upon.

Mr. Cochrane, in reply, admitted that the only point to which the case was now reduced, had reference to the receipt or non-receipt of the two letters in question. The evidence is sufficient to establish their delivery and receipt. If they had not been received, surely the solicitor would have written to enquire the cause of the delay, especially when the consequences to his client were so momentous. The case is not one merely of oath against oath—the whole line of transaction, the whole internal evidence of the case, bear out the statement of Mr. Kallionias. It is not a very usual thing for a single letter to miscarry by the general post, and it is a very strange coincidence that these two important letters should be successively lost. Again, it is a suspicious circumstance that the solicitor's dak-book has not been produced, that it might have been examined in open court, to ascertain whether no entries had been made.

Sir E. Ryan.—A motion to change the attorneys in a cause without payment of costs, being contrary to the usual course of proceeding, can only be granted upon proof of fraud or gross-misconduct. The second part of the motion cannot stand on light grounds, but only on strong equitable circumstances; now the charges of collusion and corruption are abandoned, and the only question is whether a case of negligence has been made out. With reference to the whole admitted correspondence between the parties, no definite instructions whatever appear to have been given to Mr. Shaw, and he is not therefore guilty of any negligence in declining to act upon them. Then the whole question turns upon the two missing letters. Now here one affidavit is consistent with the other, for one party cannot deny that they were written nor the other they were never received. The proof derived from the circumstances of the cause is incomplete, and at all events can never amount to such a probability as to satisfy such a motion as the present. Unless a case is very clear, the Court will never summarily interfere, but leave the parties to their ordinary remedies.

Sir J. Grant, entirely concurred in opinion with the learned Chief Justice. Mr. Shaw has fully answered the charge of negligence, and no imputation rests on him whatever.

Motion refused with costs.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1838.

ASSIGNEES OF FERGUSON AND CO. v. DWARRANATH JAGORE AND OTHERS.

The judgment of the Court in this case was delivered this day by the chief justice.

The case was argued in the third term of last year. The action was brought upon a policy of insurance for Rs. 50,000. granted to the insolvent; there was an agreement to prolong or renew the policy if required. After the insolvency of Ferguson and Co. the policy was renewed to the common assignees, who paid the premium when it fell due. The defendants in their plea set off a promissory note, drawn by Ferguson and Co. before their insolvency and indorsed to the defendants. To this plea of set-off there was a general demurrer.

The argument for the plaintiff's was, that the contract upon which the action is brought, is entirely a contract between the assignees and the defendants, whereas the set-off relates to a matter between the insolvents and the defendants, and that such a defence therefore amounts to setting off a debt due from one party against a claim made by another. To this the defendants answered that the assignees are entirely as the representatives of the insolvents, and that the renewal of the policy was but a continuance of the original contract and not an entirely new agreement. But the Court were clearly of opinion that the debt could not be set off, and that there must be judgment for the plaintiff. They cited the cases of Cor v. Listard, 1 Douglas Rep. Evans v. Mann, Cowper's Rep. Widd v. Pryce, 2 Bingham's reports.

Judgment for the plaintiffs.

HOWLAND GRAHAM testis JUGGUTCHUNDER MOO. KERRY AND OTHERS, EXECUTORS OF SUMSEDOCHUNDER MOOKHERJEE.

This was an action for work and labour done, and for money paid by the plaintiff in his capacity of attorney for the testator. Judgment had been obtained for want of a plea, and evidence was now adduced to assess the amount of damages.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant for the plaintiff, were about to prove jurisdiction under the New Rules, but the Court said, that this was necessary only when the case was heard ex parte in order to obtain a judgment, and not after judgment by default.

The attorney's bills were put in and proved to have been duly taxed, and copies delivered to the executors who promised to pay the amount.

Verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed sicca rupees 784.—Hurk. Feb. 7.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 7, 1838.

Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.

DYCK versus DYCK.

Mr. Prinsep moved, that this cause should be set down pro forma on the Equity board, with the consent of parties, for the purpose of obtaining an order for the immediate trial of an issue of law therein. The ground upon which the motion was made, was, that the principal witness, Sir Charles Metcalfe, is about to leave the country immediately.

Motion granted.

BRACKET versus BRACKET and BEEBEE PHICKEY versus HURRANAHAIN.

In these cases heard ex parte yesterday, the Court intimated this morning that the parties could take nothing by their judgments against the parties in default, on account of the omission to give notice under the New Rules to those of the defendants against whom judgment by default had been obtained, that damages against them would be assessed at the time of trial.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY versus RAJCOOMAR SEAH AND ANOTHER.

The Advocate General and Mr. Couchrane for the lessors of the plaintiff.

This was an action of ejectment brought to recover possession of one cottah and eight chutarks of land, called the old Jorahbagaun thannah, in the town of Calcutta. In 1836, an ejectment had been brought for the same premises by the defendants against the present plaintiffs, who then suffered judgment to go by default, and in 1837, the defendants recovered Rs. 1,988 in an action for mesne profits. The Company claimed the premises by virtue of long and uninterrupted possession, but the defendants sought to establish ownership by shewing that their title had been acknowledged by the payment of rent.

Several Thannadars and chowkeydars were produced as witnesses, and proved that the thannah had stood where it was for the last half century. This evidence was corroborated by W. C. Blaquiere, Esq. who has been employed in the Police Establishment since 1789. On cross-examination, it appeared from this gentleman's evidence, that the assessments were paid by the owners of the soil.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Leith) for the defendants, stated the grounds of their title. He would produce evidence to shew that the defendants were in possession of all the surrounding land, that they had continually paid the assessments for the identical property in question, and that they had received rent from the Company, who now sought to disprove their title. The receipts for rent unfortunately could not be produced, as in the year 1831 the defendant's cutcherry was robbed, and their ancestral papers and documents lost. Since the death of the father of the present defendants, it was admitted that no rent had been paid, by reason of the defendants being then under age, and the consequent had management of the estate during their infancy. But it was contended that the recovery of the rents and profits, in the action for mesne profits, was equivalent to receipt of rent.

Captain F. Birch, superintendent of police, was called as a witness, and proved the receipts for assessments from the defendants for the land in dispute. The collector of rents and other witnesses were called to prove payment of rent on the part of the Company; but it did not appear distinctly from their evidence whether the rent was paid for the thannah in question, or only for a cook-room attached thereto.

Sir E. Ryan.—There must be judgment for the lessors of the plaintiff. The proof of the defendant's title has been attempted to be made out; first, by proving that they have paid the assessments to Government, and secondly that they have received rent from the Company, for these premises. Now, as to the first point, it proves nothing. The assessments are made payable by the owners or occupiers of land, by a public Act, 33 Geo III c. 52, and no proof can be drawn from the circumstance that a house has been wrongly assessed. As to the second point, no rent has been proved to have been paid for the thannah, within the last twenty four or twenty five years, to the least, so that during that period there has been a continuing adverse possession against the defendants. The statute of limitations had begun to run during the lifetime of the ancestor of the defendants; it therefore continued to run notwithstanding their intermediate infancy.

Mr. Clarke then applied for leave to move the Court for a nonsuit, on the ground that the statute of limitations did not apply to Mahomedans and Hindoos at all.

Sir E. Ryan.—You can move, but we will not reserve leave, as the Court is quite clear on the point.

Judgment for the lessors of the plaintiff.

The next case on the Board is Deo d. Jaun Beebe v. Abdoolah Barber.—Hurkaru, February 8.

THURSDAY, FEB. 8, 1838.

DYCE versus DYCE.

Mr. Prinsep applied to the Court for decretal orders, to consolidate the original and cross suits, and to direct the trial of more issues at law. This application was made on consent of all parties. The only two points, which required to be ascertained, were, 1st; whether a certain paper, purporting to be a receipt or acknowledgment, was executed by the Begum Sumroo in her life. 2ndly; whether such document was delivered to the complainant in the original suit, as a receipt or acknowledgment.

Mr. Clarke, Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant, were instructed to consent on behalf of the other parties interested.

Order granted accordingly.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF JAUN BEEBE AND OTHERS versus ABDUOLAH BARBER.

Mr. Grant opened the pleadings in this action of ejectment. There were five counts, laying a joint demise by all the four lessors of the plaintiff, and a several demise by each. The premises sought to be recovered, consisted of a house and grounds appurtenant, and other land situated in Mangoe Lane and in Collingah.

The Advocate-General stated the case. The question turned chiefly on a Mahomedan pedigree. Kaloo Khaussamah, the common ancestor, who died about forty years ago, left two sons and a daughter, of whom one son died unmarried, the other, Toraub, left representatives (who were the plaintiffs in this action) and the daughter married and left a son (the present defendant.) The family of Toraub consisted of three widows and three children, one of whom had since died: two of the widows with the two surviving children, were the lessors of the plaintiff in the present action. These representatives of Toraub claimed two-thirds of the estate; because according to the rules of Mahomedan Law a brother is entitled to double the share of a sister (McNaghten's Mahomedan law of inheritance).

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Leith) for the defendant, did not dispute the pedigree of the plaintiffs. He should adduce evidence to shew, that Toraub, who was very young at the time of his father's death, had always lived extravagantly, and had never had done any thing to increase the ancestral estate, that his mother had paid off his debts on several occasions out of her dower estate, that in lieu of the marriage settlement to which she was entitled, he had released his right to the property by a deed of gift. That the premises in Mangoe Lane were purchased under a bill of sale, in the name and with the money of the mother, and, finally, that she had duly executed a deed of trust, by which she conveyed the legal property shortly before her death to the present defendant.

Evidence to this effect was gone into great length. The deed of gift was held sufficiently proved by calling a subscribing witness, who being blind was unable to swear to his own signature, but proved, that such an instrument has been executed in his presence, and by adducing further evidence to shew, that the instrument in question had been uniformly acted upon. It appeared in the course of examination, that one of the lessors of the plaintiff was born before the marriage of her mother had taken place.

The Advocate-General endeavoured to impeach the deed of gift executed by shewing fraud.

But the Court said that this would place him in a peculiar predicament. It was through Toraub that the plaintiff claimed, and even if it was competent for them to shew fraud against him, it would tend at the utmost to establish a case available only in a Court of Equity.

The Advocate-General then considered the points which had arisen on Mahomedan law, and contended, first that by the law of the Mussulman community, one born out of wedlock, is legitimized by the subsequent marriage of the parents, and is not excluded from the inheritance. This point, however, was not material to the case, as it affected only one of the plaintiffs. The learned counsel then cited McNaghten's Law of Inheritance, to shew, that by the Mahomedan law, a co-heir cannot oust another of the whole of his share of the inheritance without the consent of the latter (which is not likely to be very readily obtained;) and that a testator cannot dispose of a larger proportion of the estate than one-third in legacies and bequest. Upon these grounds, he contended, that the plaintiffs were at all events entitled to a judgment quoad part of the property in question.

Sir E. Ryan.—There must be a verdict for the defendant; but we shall reserve leave to the Advocate-General on the point of law to move the Court that judgment, pro tanto, may be entered up for the plaintiffs. The deed of gift or release and the instrument of sale are valid and genuine, the deed of trust is admitted to be genuine, but its validity in law is contested. This, therefore, is the only point remaining for consideration. It may be observed, however, that the whole property is not conveyed away in this instance, for some interest is expressly reserved to the whole family, and the defendant, though possessed of the legal estate, is only a trustee in equity.

Verdict for the defendant, with leave to move that a verdict may be entered for the lessors of the plaintiffs.

Mr. Clarke applied to the Court at its rising, that the case of Walker v. Bruce might be fixed for to-morrow, as it stood next but one on the board and was likely to occupy the whole day. This case relates to an important question of insurance, and several mercantile gentlemen have been subpoenaed to give evidence. The Court appointed it for Monday, as a case is especially appointed for to-morrow.—Hurk, Feb. 9.

SATURDAY, FEB. 10, 1838.

The Chief Justice came into Court this day at twelve o'clock to take common motions. In the case of Mirza Mahomed Mehedy Musky v. Hadjee Ally Tehatany, a verdict for the plaintiff was taken by a consent. His Lordship afterwards sat in the Insolvent Court.

The case of Walker v. Bruce is specially appointed for Monday. It is on action on the case brought by the consignees against the insurers for granting a policy of insurance upon goods which were never shipped at all, whereby the plaintiffs were induced to make advances to the pretended consigners. The principle is novel.—Hurk, Feb. 12.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan, and Sir J. P. Grant.)

DYCE VERSUS DYCE SONSARE.

Mr. Prinsep moved, that the defendant may be at liberty to examine the Hon. Sir Charles T. Metcalfe, Bart., in Court, on Tuesday next, de bene esse, and that the depositions may be used in the issue directed in this cause.

It was suggested and acquiesced in by the court that this was a motion on the equity side.

Motion granted.

J. A. WALKON AND OTHERS VERSUS W. BRUCE,

RUSTOMJEE COWASJEE, AND ANOTHER.

The Advocate General, Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke for the plaintiffs.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant for the defendants.

The Advocate General stated the case. The defendants carry on business as insurers under the title of the Union Insurance Company. They have boats and peons of their own, and state in their policies that the goods insured have been received on particular vessels under the charge of particular peons. In July 1834, one Dear Christian applied to the plaintiff to advance money on a consignment of saltpetre and other goods, and transmitted at the same time four policies granted by the defendant's agent at Dinapore upon the goods in question, in which the receipt of the goods was acknowledged, and they were stated to be embarked on four specified vessels, and in charge of particular peons. Upon the faith of these policies the plaintiffs accepted four bills of exchange to the amount of Rs. 7,500 drawn by Christian, and paid the same when due; but it would be proved that no goods were ever put on board at all, and that the pretended consignors on receiving the money absconded. The plaintiffs therefore brought this special action on the case against the defendant, to indemnify them for the loss sustained by reason of the implied guarantee in the policies that the goods in question had been embarked. Upon these grounds it was contended that the defendants were liable to make good the loss.

The learned Advocate further contended, that the plea of the general issue only put in issue the point whether the goods were or were not embarked on board the vessels, and not any of the facts stated in the indictment.

Sir F. Ryan said, that the Court would not decide before hand what is or is not necessary to be proved. The plaintiffs must make out their own case, and it will be for the defendants afterwards to take objections to the sufficiency of the proof.

W. C. Blaquiere, Esq., produced the policies of insurance, and letters relating to the transactions, under a subpoena duces tecum. These documents had come into the possession of this gentleman as Justice of the Peace in Calcutta, before whom one of the partners in plaintiffs's house made a charge against Christian of obtaining money on false pretences to the amount of Rs. 7,500.

W. H. Jones examined. Is agent for the Union Insurance Company at Dinapore. Was very intimate with Dear Christian in the way of business. The peons are employed by the Insurance Office, and the number of the particular peon entrusted with the charge of the goods is always specified in the receipt. Witness signed the policies in question on behalf of the Company. The goods in question never were laden on board the vessels, but this he did not learn until the time of Christian's absconding. The reason why he did not immediately notify the intelligence to the consignees, was that he did not know who they were.

Cross-examined. The boats are not the property of the Insurance Company, but of the parties applying for policies. Christian was in good credit at the time, and had extensive dealings in the way of business. Witness suffered great personal losses through Christian's default. He had no reason whatever to believe at the time that the goods would not be shipped. He was told that he should be allowed to see the goods weighed, otherwise he should not have granted the policies.

The payment by the plaintiffs of three out of the four bills of exchange was proved.

Several merchants and agents were called to prove the general course of dealing in transactions relating to insurance. It appeared from their evidence that policies are sometimes granted before the goods are shipped; the insurer does not always take the trouble to inquire, but takes it for granted that this is or will be duly performed. His business is only to ascertain that the vessel is seaworthy. The policies are granted according to the terms of the invoice, which generally states to whom the goods are consigned. By the custom of the Calcutta merchants, policies of insurance are considered negotiable instruments, but not until adjustment. The insurance office in the event of loss pays the amount to the indorser, whosever he may happen to be. Generally speaking, banks decline to discount, until they have ascertained from the Insurance office that they have no claim or set, off against the insured.

Mr. Leith addressed the Court for the defence. There is no evidence either of fraud, injury or damage. The case amounts to this, that the plaintiffs by the misrepresentation of the defendants have been damaged. Now the nature of the instrument is not calculated to mislead any party, and even if the plaintiffs were misled, it was entirely through their own negligence. It never can be supposed necessary for every Insurance office, whenever they grant a policy, to examine and inquire accurately whether the goods are on board exactly as described. They may do this indeed for their own information and satisfaction; but they are not called upon to guarantee the fidelity of the transactions for the security of third parties. There is no privity whatever between the plaintiffs and the defendants. The latter might just as well bring their action against the present plaintiffs, and allege that they were misled by credit being given to this pretended consignors. The plaintiffs so far from being accessory to any fraud, are themselves the dupes. They as to the injury which the plaintiffs allege they have suffered, this does not appear from the evidence adduced. Non constat but that Christian, the defaulter, is at the present moment able to pay the amount which the plaintiffs claim. It is submitted, without calling any evidence for the defence, that their must be a verdict for the defendants.

Sir Edward Ryan. This is a case of very considerable difficulty and importance. We shall give a verdict for the plaintiffs, with leave reserved to the defendants' counsel to move the Court to enter a non-vit. The objection raised that there is no proof of damage sustained, has no weight with us. A mere possibility that the defaulter has now funds in his hands to meet the claim, amounts to nothing. The question simply is, whether there has been fraudulent or negligent conduct on the part of the defendants. Now we are clearly of opinion that no fraud whatever has been established, the case therefore is reduced to this point, whether there has been such culpable negligence on the part of the defendants as to mislead and damnify the plaintiff, even with the exercise of a due degree of precaution on the part of the latter. The Court is of opinion that there has been such negligence, and that this has caused loss to the plaintiff. It is clear that the policies were granted without sufficient precaution, and it is equally clear that except upon the faith of those policies the plaintiffs would not have accepted the bills. All that remains, is, whether upon this negligence, without proof of fraud, the action is sustainable. [The Court cited Pasley v. Freeman, 3 Terms Reports 51. Hayercraft v. Creddin, 2 East Reports. 92]

The payment of only three out of the four bills of exchange was proved by the plaintiffs, owing, to the accidental absence of a witness; but the Court suggested to defendants' counsel, that as it was a question of right to be tried, they should admit the fact of payment, provided they were certified of its reality.

Verdict for the plaintiffs, with leave to move for a nonsuit.—Hark Feb. 13.

TUESDAY, FEB. 13, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

• DYCE V. DYCE SOMBRE.

Sir C. T. Metcalfe, whose evidence was to be taken de bene esse in this issue, entered the Court this morning in company with their lordships, and was accommodated with a chair beside the bench. The Court immediately called upon the defendant's counsel to proceed with the examination. Mr. Prinsep requested permission to confer with his client for a few minutes, as the result of the conference might dispense with all necessity for examining Sir C. T. Metcalfe.

After the common motions had been disposed of, Mr. Clarke rose and stated to the Court, that by consent of parties, a verdict for the defendant would be taken in this issue, that the cause would be set down on the Equity board, and a decree taken by consent, dismissing the suit.

Sir Charles then retired, their lordships and the bar rising on his leaving Court.

BROWN V. DYCE SOMBRE.

In this suit between General Brown (the executor) and the defendant in the above suit, Mr. Leith moved for an attachment for want of answer to the amended bill. No further time for putting in an answer is allowed, after a amending the bill, and by the new Equity rules, a fresh subpoena is unnecessary.

Motion granted.

RAJNARAIN ROY V. JADAUB CHUNDER.

Mr. Prinsep opened to pleadings.

The Advocate General stated the case. The plaintiff resides at Calcutta. He was returning one night at a very late hour to his own house, after having made merry with some friends, and on getting out of his carriage, was attacked by the defendant, assisted by five or six others. The assaulting party beat him severely with a stick for ten or fifteen minutes, and endeavoured to take a gold chain forcibly from his neck. The plaintiff retired into an adjacent dwelling house, and could not venture out for some time through fear of the defendant's violence. For this outrageous assault, the action was brought.

Two witnesses were called to prove the particulars of the fracas. It appeared that the night in question was very dark. One of the witnesses was himself assaulted, and had brought an action in which he recovered judgment ex-parte. The plaintiff had been subjected to a similar assault before, but he and the defendant were occasionally on tolerable terms with each other.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the defence were not called upon by the Court.

Sir Edward Ryan.—There must be a verdict for the defendant. Mr. Advocate, we do not believe your witnesses.

Verdict for the defendant.

J. WIMBLE V. A. R. JACKSON.

Mr. Grant opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated the plaintiff's case. This was an action of a sumpt brought by Captain Wimble, the master of the ship London, against Dr. Jackson for breach of contract. The defendant had agreed to take three cabins to England for the sum of Rs. 6,500, and the ship was fixed to sail early in January 1838. On the application of the defendant, who wished to remain until the arrival of Dr. Grant in the Scamtris, the day of sailing was afterwards changed to the 12th; but afterwards requiring further time, he again applied to the plaintiff for an extension of the delay, but as a steamer had been already engaged by the plaintiff to tow the vessel down the river, he was unable to comply with this request. After some correspondence on the subject had passed between the parties, the defendant intimated that he should not be able to sail in the London, and Captain Wimble accordingly, with the view of lessening the sum to which the defendant would be liable, endeavoured to let the vacated cabins. It would be proved that this was done with the sanction of the defendant, who, himself wrote out and paid for the advertisements. One of the cabins was afterwards let, and the plaintiff was, of course, willing to subtract this sum from the whole amount of passage money for which the defendant had agreed. This action was brought to recover the difference.

The correspondence between the parties was put in and read, on admission in the cause.

R. C. Paton was called as a witness.

The Advocate General endeavoured to establish his incompetency, by a preliminary examination whether he had not given security for costs, but in this he was unsuccessful.

Witness proved that the vessel was consigned to the old firm of Bagshaw, Ailan and Co. One of the three cabins was afterwards let to Mrs. Liptrop for about £200, on account of Dr. Jackson. Captain Cunningham was also allowed to go in one of the vacated cabins (the awning cabin) but he had already taken a lower one, which was not afterwards let to any one else. The London sailed after all on the 7th January, because Captain Wimble was positively informed that Dr. Jackson did not intend to sail with him.

J. H. Storkeler proved that an application was made on the part of Dr. Jackson to advertise the vacated cabins in the ship London. An advertisement was afterwards inserted in the beginning of January, by Allan Paton and Co. These advertisements were put in and read.

Captain Liptrap proved that one of the cabins was engaged for his lady, on the 28th December. He communicated on the subject with Messrs. Allan and Paton. He was referred by Mr. Stocqueler to Dr. Jackson.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Leith) then submitted that the plaintiff must be nonsuited. No ownership whatever has been proved in Captain Wimble, and even if he was part owner, the other owners ought to have been made parties.

Sir E. Ryan.—There are two answers to your objection; in the first place, Captain Wimble has such an interest in the vessel as to enable him to sustain the present action, and no other owners appear upon the face of these pleadings. But again, under the New rules, the only question on these pleadings simply is, whether this contract was entered into between these parties, and whether either had a title to make it.

Sir J. Grant, would say nothing upon the second reason assigned by the learned Chief Justice, but he fully concurred in the first.

The Advocate General then proceeded. It has been proved that the plaintiff agreed to delay until the 12th if not the 15th of January. Now it is absurd to say that this is only an alteration, and not an abandonment of the original agreement. The second contract was clearly entered into, in lieu of the former.

If so, the contract has not been performed by the plaintiff. The ship sails after all on the 7th of the month, and, moreover, one, if not two of the cabins are let to other parties. By this act of the plaintiff himself, the defendant is absolutely incapacitated from fulfilling his part of the agreement. But it is further contended that the contract has been rescinded altogether, and Dr. Jackson wholly released from his responsibility. All the evidence goes to prove that Mr. Paton, in letting the cabin to Liptrap, acted not as the agent of Dr. Jackson, but entirely on account of the ship.

The learned Advocate here called witnesses, by whose evidence it appeared that Captain Wimble had been heard to say that he had agreed to remain until the 15th of the month, but he had altered his intention because one of his passengers made violent objections to the delay. It further appeared that Captain Cunningham had paid 800 or 1,000 rupees, in addition to the passage-money for the lower cabin which he had engaged, for leave to occupy the awning cabin vacated by the defendant.

Mr. Prinsep, in reply, contended at considerable length, first, that the second arrangement was no specific contract, but merely a provisional qualification of the former, for the convenience of the defendant. There was no consideration for entering into such an agreement; it was essentially through special favour towards the defendant, and upon his making default even after these advantageous terms had been offered, the matter naturally reverted to the original arrangement. Again, there is no proof whatever that the contract was rescinded. All the subsequent arrangements were made on behalf of Dr. Jackson, as being still interested in the matter. The fact that was let to Liptrap was let under the sanction of the defendant himself. As to the objection that one of the other cabins was let without authority to Cunningham, this rests on very vague proof. But even if it were positively proved that this was the case, that the Captain had let an empty cabin just as the ship was on the point of sailing, surely this does not annul the contract altogether. Whatever money Captain Wimble may have received ought at most to be subtracted from the amount of damages. Lastly, it was contended that even if the plaintiff had omitted to perform some minor particulars, it was competent for the defendant to bring a cross action.

Sir Edward Ryan.—This case is somewhat entangled by the pleadings, but the justice of it is quite clear. There are four issues before the Court arising upon the general plea of non-assumpsit, and the three special pleas. We think the first issue must be for the plaintiff because under the new rules it merely puts in issue the general contract, and that contract has been clearly proved. The 3d issue as to rescission of the contract, and the 4th as to inability on the part of the defendant through the plaintiff's own act must be found for the defendant, though we are of opinion that these third and fourth pleas had better not have been pleaded. We next come to the 2d issue, and this raises the real merits of the case. The second plea ought in strictness to have stood alone, and upon this the defendant is entitled to a verdict. If the vessel had remained until the 12th, the plaintiff would have been entitled to recover, but by sailing on the 7th he has damaged the defendant to this extent, that he has deprived him of the opportunity of getting rid of the cabins during the intervening period. It stands thus therefore;—the first issue must be found for the plaintiff, the three others for the defendant, and the defendant is of course entitled to general verdict.

Verdict for the defendant.

At the rising of the Court, the Chief Justice intimated that he should only take motions to-morrow and that the Equity Board would be taken on Thursday and Friday.

The case of Horechunder Saha v. Macpherson, set down yesterday on the Law Board by special order, is appointed for Saturday, the last day of the Sittings.—Hurkaru, February 14.

FRIDAY, FEB. 16, 1838.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

Some contested motions, which had stood over, were taken this day, but they involved nothing of public interest.

IN THE MATTER OF JOYKISSEN BYSACK.

The Advocate General moved for a commission de lunatico inquirendo, to be directed to John Farley Leith, and Richard Marshall, Esquires, Barristers-at-law, to enquire concerning the state of Joykissen Bysack. Affidavits were put in, stating that this party was a member of a joint Hindoo family, that for several years past he has been in a state of mental imbecility, and totally incapable of managing his affairs. The family are jointly entitled to considerable property, and an Equity suit has been long pending, in which Joykissen Bysack is a party; but no steps can be taken for want of a committee to manage the estate. It may be recollected, that in the recent case of Unnomoney Dossee v. the Bank of Bengal reported in the Hurkaru, witnesses were examined with reference to the state of mind of this very individual, who was a party interested, and the nonsuit of the plaintiffs was owing entirely to the unexpected evidence given in this matter.

Motion granted.

The case of Horechunder Saha and another, v. Macpherson, is specially appointed for to-morrow.—Hurk. Feb. 1.

SUDDER NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

CIRCULAR ORDERS, 1838.

No. 198.—ADOPTION OF A GENERAL REGISTRY OF FINES.

The Sudder Nizamut Court have been pleased to direct the adoption by the Judges and the Courts subordinate to them of a general register of fines. The object of the Court in prescribing the use of the registry, is to provide against the misappropriation, on the part of any of the ministerial officers, of monies paid into Court, but it is not intended to present the adoption of any additional checks which the Judges may consider necessary.

That Court have requested that due attention be paid to the entry in the register of all fines immediately they are imposed,—to the issuing of peiwannahs to the Nazir to realize the amount of such fines,—and to the examination of the Register at the commencement of every month be the head Clerk, Sheristadar, Nazir and Treasurer of the Courts.—Mark, Feb. 21,

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

HEARING.

Remanded from Saturday, the 27th January to Saturday, the 10th day of February, 1838—Joseph Snialson Morton of Sooterkin lane, in Calcutta, veterinary surgeon and livery stable keeper.—Mr. Cartiadeil, Attny.

“No Creditor shall be allowed at the hearing to oppose the discharge of a prisoner, unless he shall have given notice of his intention to the chief clerk, three clear days before the day of Hearing.”—Office of Examiner, 2d February 1838.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

DEPARTURE OF SIR CHARLES METCALFE.—At 7 o'clock on the evening of the 15th instant, Sir Charles Metcalfe embarked at the Cooly Bazar, on board the St George, for England, under a salute from the fort. By some mistake H.M. “Cameronians” were drawn up at Chaudpaul-ghaut, where also several gentlemen took their station, to pay the last compliment to the respected Baronet. A numerous assemblage, however, in spite of a most untoward morning (for the fog was very thick) were ready to receive Sir Charles and accompany him to the beach. The scene was most impressive; Sir Charles himself, in wishing his friends “good bye,” was completely overpowered, and in many, who might have been supposed to be made of “sterner stuff,” there were evident symptoms of the deepest emotion on parting from a long known and valued friend. Here admiration for the statesman, indeed, was lost or forgotten in affection for the man. The feelings seemed too deep for utterance; and, in silence and sadness, the chief ornament of British India, after a distinguished service of near forty years, departed for his native country.

DONATIONS OF SIR C. METCALFE.—Sir Charles Metcalfe has given a donation of one thousand rupees to the Parental Academic Institution. Sir Charles is patron of that institution, and the Committee of Management, with the sanction of the constituent body, have endowed two “Metcalfe Scholarships” to mark their grateful sense of the warm interest Sir Charles always took in the welfare of that institution. The Metcalfe scholars now are, masters Cook and Knox, especially appointed by Sir Charles.

One of Sir Charles Metcalfe's last acts here, was to bestow one thousand rupees upon the District Charitable Society.

By date of the 23d instant accounts of the final departure of the St. George from the Sand-heads, on the 17th instant, were received. The following extracts from vessels on the station will shew that Sir Charles Metcalfe was honoured to the last moment.

“EASTERN CHANNEL.—On the ship St. George making her appearance, I dressed the * * * in all our flags, and on her passing, manned the yards and fired a salute of fifteen guns, which was acknowledged.”

“SAND HEADS.—I regret to state I could not pay my respects to Sir Charles Metcalfe to the extent I had intended, on account of the state of the weather (blowing hard from the N.W. and being under reefed-top-sails). We were, however, enabled to salute him with fifteen guns, under the union jack at the main, which was acknowledged by the ship. The floating light also saluted him with the same number of guns, dressed out in all her flags.”

ACCIDENT ON THE RIVER.—Capt. Wootton, H.M. 44th, proceeding to join his regiment at Ghazee-poor, had embarked with his lady on board a pinnace lying at Clive Street ghaut. About one in the morning of the 30th ultimo, he providentially awoke and on putting his foot out of bed, was surprised to find it immersed in water half leg deep. Immediately awakening his wife they rushed out of the cabin, but before they could reach the door, the vessel fell on her beam ends. Both were floating. The gentleman nevertheless lost not his presence of mind, and with great exertion dragged his unfortunate lady to the side of the vessel above the water, and in a dinghy sent her to a friend's boat alongside himself remaining to try and secure anything that might float up. In the state in which he had left his bed, he remained for two hours on the wreck, till, with his own hands, he secured the vessel with a hawser to the shore, and then rejoined his wife, with the melancholy conviction that everything they possessed in the world was lost. Capt. Wootton had just returned from England via Sydney, and all his outfit and that of Mrs. Wootton, laid in at some expense, was in an instant snatched from him, grateful that their lives were spared. The dandies ran away one and all, and were never seen the whole night. The manjee, it appears, had never slept on board. One wretch, in trying to escape, seeing Mrs. Wootton clinging to the side of the boat, deliberately put his foot on her shoulder as a stepping-stone and pushed her under the water, from which her husband again saved her. The next morning Capt. Harrington, Master Attendant, sent his boats and assistant and righted the vessel. Every thing recovered, as may be readily supposed, was immediately spoiled, and the unfortunate officer ruined, after travelling so many thousand miles, by the carelessness of the serang and crew; for it appears they having neglected to haul the boat out by the anchor stern at the ebb tide, she had grounded by the head, and on the rush of the flood, immediately tilted. The serang, though he had tremblingly acknowledged his absence to Capt. Wootton, in the presence of a friend, declared at the police office that he was on board and, that the pinnacle sunk in consequence of the "bore," when there was none took place that night.

STEAM NAVIGATION.—The steam petition, with upwards of 6,000 signatures, was despatched on the 4th instant, one copy by the Bombay dak for the Atalanta, the other by the Rapulse. Additional names were in course of being added daily. The Steam Association is progressing rapidly. The shares amount to 2,471 held by 702 individuals.

IRON STEAMERS.—The following is an extract of a letter, dated Jettinches accommodation boat, off the mouth of the Gooty, thirty miles below Benares, 6th February, 1838. "We left Ghazepore on the evening of the 4th, and brought too a little below the reef of rocks which run across the river above Ghazepore. We passed these on the morning of the 5th through the only navigable channel now left, and were making excellent progress with fresh easterly wind till 2 p.m., when we were run into shallow water about 100 yards below the mouth of the Gooty. The steamer stuck and when her Captain had nearly been successful in extricating her and us, after an hour's exertion, the main shaft of the engine snapped in two, leaving us and herself perfectly hors de combat. Had a spare shaft been on board, we might have proceeded with a few hours' delay; as it is, however, the only alternative left us, is to warp and track the flat up to Benares, there shifting for ourselves in the best way we can.

The freight for Allahabad, it is believed, will be forwarded by hackery from Benares.

February 7th, 10 A.M.—We shall be at Benares this evening, being now only ten miles from it. We have about 500 coolies on our goon. We have had a refreshing shower of rain this morning. The banks of the river from Buxar up to this appear highly cultivated and the crops are very forward."

UNION BANK SHARES. The sale of shares of the new stock of the Bank not claimed by absentees and other parties through neglect or want of means, went off with great spirit on the 16th instant. The business began at noon, and some few of the shares were sold at 310 premium. The bidding, however, rapidly rose to 325 and then steadily, but gradually, advanced to the maximum; the last share was sold at a premium of 370, and several previously at 360 and 365. The average was 337, and the whole number of shares sold was 48. In many cases parties who were entitled to, and who have lost the opportunity of claiming shares at par, have nobody to blame but themselves, and have done so through mere neglect and want of ordinary attention to their own interest.

COMMERCIAL INSURANCE COMPANY.—The fourth half yearly meeting of the Commercial Insurance Company, was held on the 19th instant.

They have assets in the hands of agents in London, Bombay, Madras, Singapore, Canton, Mauritius, Calcutta, and funds otherwise available amounting to Rs. 4,77,036

Deduct average ascertained but not adjusted, and premiums on outstanding risks Rs. 1,95,094

Total (add fractions) 2,80,244

showing funds equal to a dividend of Rs. 800 per share, leaving the society available assets amounting to two lacs, a standing capital according to their deed of copartnery. This dividend was ordered to be made forthwith, payable in Calcutta, and not in London, as heretofore.

The society has been in existence two years. It consisted at its commencement of one hundred shares of Rs. 1,000. At the end of the first year the profits, one lac, were added to the Company's capital, making it two lacs. At the third half yearly meeting a dividend of £50 sterling, payable in England, was declared.

MEETING OF THE PROPRIETORS OF THE SUN INSURANCE.—We attended the annual meeting of the proprietors of the Sun Insurance Office on the 31st of January, Mr. W. Bruce was in the chair. Mr. Rustomjee Cowasjee, Mr. Ezekiel Mushlen, and several foreign gentlemen composed the meeting, which was conducted in a very brief business-like manner. The balance sheet of the eighth half year exhibits.

At credit of the Society Rs. 3,31,970

Debit amount of premium on risks (amounting to Company's Rs. 27,46,466) supposed to be outstanding at above date 58,406

Amount reserved to meet contingencies 50,128 1,08,324

Above par Co's Rs. 2,23,345

Equal to Rs. 2,233 per share. And it was resolved that a dividend be made of £50 per share, in bills on the London agents, and Rs. 500 in cash. This is very satisfactory.

Messrs. W. Bruce, G. Apcar, J. De. Dow, K. R. Mackenzie, and Rustomjee Cowasjee were requested to continue their services for the ensuing six months.

FIRES.—Several fires have occurred during this month, but, through the activity of the fire-extinguishing department, they have all been put out before they had done any great damage.

FIRE RELIEF COMMITTEE.—The report of the General Committee to aid of the sufferers by the great fires in 1837, has been published. It appears that the sum subscribed, including the donation of Rs. 20,000 from Government, was little short of Rs. 50,000: but a very small proportion was furnished by the higher class of natives. There are a few honourable exceptions, but compared with the number capable of contributing, they exhibit a contrast most deplorable. The committee have exercised a sound discretion in not making loans of large amounts to individual sufferers, and have done much good. The main object of the subscription was certainly to relieve the poorest, those whose position was not likely to afford the means of saving from their earnings or wages.

DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY BY CANNON BALLS.—During the practice of the artillery at Dum-Dum, between the hours of ten and three, on the 14th instant, several trees were injured and some houses slightly damaged at the village of Kadity, which is situated to the north-east of Dum-Dum. The number of balls that fell amongst the habitations of men is estimated at about thirty; much risk of life and property was therefore incurred; and, indeed, it is feared that some casualty or other would possibly have taken place, had not all the people, run out of the village at the sight of the first ball, and placed themselves beyond the reach of the shot. About fifteen or sixteen families have since removed their homesteads elsewhere, never to return to that village again.

MONSIEUR DUPUIS' FANCY BALL.—This long advertised entertainment was given at Monsieur Dupuis' Rooms in the Durrumtollah Road, on the 30th ultimo.

At about a quarter after eight o'clock p. m. we entered the rooms and were quite dazzled with the blaze of beauty which greeted our sight.

The young Masters and Misses, fancifully dressed, excited our highest admiration, and to see them trip through the mazes of the dance, was really a pleasing sight. There were in this picturesque group a few over-grown youths, who presented a sad contrast to the younger dancers, and whose movements only excited our risibility. The two ball rooms were thickly crowded, almost to suffocation, by upwards of 1,000 persons, which in convenience was increased by the unusual warmth of the weather.

There were some lovely faces and forms that adorned this assembly; and many who did not covet entertainment from the dance, contented themselves with gazing on features surpassingly fair. We regret to add that there were a few persons, however, who, wishing to procure the utmost for their money, were ever and anon quaffing plentiful potations, the free use of which caused them to conduct themselves in such a brutal manner as to excite this disgust of every body present; and some of these would-be-thought gentlemen, we have been told, on being turned out, striped and had a very serious warfare with their fists, in the spacious court-yard of the premises. This circumstance caused many of the fair damsels to quit the ball room, to the regret of the lovers of dancing.

We are really surprised to find persons who lay claim to the title of gentlemen, and who would be ready to call any person to a serious account for disputing their right thereto, so far brutalize themselves as to behave in the manner in which the individuals we have alluded to did.

Oh! would some bard the gift give us
To see ourselves as others see us.

However exalted or lowly the station of a man may be, it cannot excuse his conduct.—indeed the more exalted the position, the more reprehensible does the misdeed appear.

Honor or shame from no condition rise—
Act well your part, 'tis there the honor lies.

The remainder of the company retired at three a. m.

Excepting the very juvenile portion of the assembly, we only perceived two young ladies in fancy dresses. They wore in the costume of Swiss peasant girls; but amongst the gentlemen fancy dresses were more numerous. We noticed the following costumes. Charles the 2d, Orlando, a Greek Peasant, a Vakeel of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the Red Rover, a Sailor, a Spanish Peasant, Glenalvon, some Turks and some in dominoes; but by far the greater portion of the Company, wore plain full dresses.

SMALL POX.—The small pox is now extremely prevalent in Calcutta, and its suburbs; especially amongst our native fellow subjects, numbers of whom have been bereaved of their relatives by this destructive malady. Several families have lost their children through it, and one particularly had no less than six children, all of whom have fallen sacrifices to the distemper.

SMALL POX.—Small pox is not so rare in Calcutta as was formerly the case, and the vaccine department, established under the superintendence of Doctor Duncan Stewart, stand ready to check the distemper, which is, as usual, introduced by the native inoculators.

ERECTION OF A SANATORIUM AT ARRACAN.—The sickness and mortality which at certain seasons prevail at Arracan, and the consideration of the great expense to which the officers are subjected by continually moving to more congenial climates, has induced the Government to sanction an expenditure of about Rs. 12,000 for the erection of a sanatorium. The site selected by the medical officer is an elevated position contiguous to the sea shore, about two or three miles distant from the station of Akyab, and is considered, after a careful investigation, extremely suitable for so desirable a purpose.

NATIVE LIBERality.—A native gentleman by name Nilmoney Day, has forwarded Rs. 500 through Government for the use of the poor in the Bindabun, near Muttia. The monies are to be expended in purchasing common food; and this good man has been persuading his intimates to follow his example.

DONATION OF DYCE SOMBRE, Esq.—Dyce Sombre, Esq., has presented the managers of the Parental Academic Institution with a donation of one thousand rupees, for which, the only return they have had it in their power to make, has been a letter expressive of grateful acknowledgments for the same.

PRINCELY DONATION.—On the 5th instant, Dwarkanath Tagore, bestowed upon the District Charitable Society, the magnificent sum of one lac of rupees! to be secured to the society on good mortgages and placed out at interest for the benefit of the numerous poor who are maintained from the funds of that excellent institution. The donation is to form a separate fund and to be called the "DWARKANATH FUND," that the memory of the princely donor may thus be associated in perpetuity with the noble object he always had at heart.

FREE SCHOOL.—The report of the free school shows that this most useful and benevolent institution continues most fully to deserve the patronage of the public. Upwards of 400 children of both sexes, the offspring of indigent Christian parents, are supplied with lodging, food, clothing and instruction. They are admitted between the ages of five and nine years, and are instructed in English grammar, writing, arithmetic, history, geography, and the elements of Christian knowledge; besides which the girls are taught straw bonnet, lace and needle work. An unsuccessful application has been made to the Government through the Bishop of Calcutta, to relieve the institution from the expense of the Church attached to it.

THE SAILORS' HOME.—This institution, by the last report, seems to be in a flourishing condition.

PRINCE OF ORANGE.—Prince Henry of Orange, arrived from the moussil on the 13th instant, and left Calcutta for Holland, on the 17th instant.

PRINCE HENRY OF ORANGE.—It is said that His Honour the Deputy Governor has received letters from His Royal Highness Prince Henry of Orange, and from Captain Arriens of the Bellona, off Kedgerie, expressing their acknowledgments, in the warmest terms, for the kind and hospitable reception, both public and private, which their party has experienced. The Prince speaks highly of the attentions which he received from Captain Cairne, his A.D.C., temporarily appointed during his visit.

COURT MARTIAL.—The young officer who was tried at a court-martial in Fort William the other day, and whose case excited considerable interest in the military circles, has been honorably acquitted.

ARTILLERY REVIEW.—The artillery was reviewed at Dum-Dum on the 12th instant, by Major General Sir Willoughby Cotton, and gave great satisfaction.

JUDGESHIP OF THE SUDDER DEWANNY.—It is said, that Mr. W. Cracroft and Mr. P. Nibbett are the candidates for the vacancy in the Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut, occasioned by the retirement of Mr. C. Harding, one of the Judges of that Court, who proceeds to England on furlough.

THE DROUGHT.—The great drought which prevails threatens the most disastrous consequences to the poor. The tanks around Calcutta are now as much dried up, as they usually are in the month of May, and almost all agricultural operations being suspended, grain is daily rising in price, so that the inhabitants of the suburbs, have the uncheering prospect of experiencing great inconvenience from hunger and thirst during the next warm season.

FAMINE.—The want of rain has caused the most disastrous results throughout the whole of the upper provinces, and a most severe famine prevails. The following is an extract of a letter from Tirhoot on the subject :

"In verity and truth we are threatened with the most calamitous season ever known. Here is the middle of January without a drop of rain since October ; with three-fourths of our lands not yet prepared for lack of moisture, vegetation actually withering, and, in short, every prospect not only of no indigo, but really of a famine for want of means to cultivate the first necessities of life for the inhabitants. The scarcity is already severely felt, and the natives are crying out that this must be such a season as that of the great famine about twenty-five years ago, when no rice could be sown, and all that was, became inundated before the end of June. I look on this season for planters as one of those that fix an era of—alas ! what we meet most frequently—unmitigated destruction and ruin."

THE OPIUM SALE.—The second opium sale of the season took place on the 5th instant, at the Exchange, and went off very steadily, although the attendance appeared much less than that of the sale last month, and the number of bidders much fewer. The quantity put up was 1,500 Patna and 800 Benares, besides six chests Benares of last year's provision : eighty chests Patna and fifty chests Benares of the French privilege, belonging to the January sale this year.—Prices of Patna ranged from 700 to 725 Co.'s rupees, Benares from 610 to 615 Co.'s rupees.

THE BLACK ACT.—The following is an extract of a letter from Mr. Tutton, to Mr. Dickens, in reference to the Black Act.

"Things as to the Black Act remain precisely in the state they were three months ago ; but I am preparing for my Parliamentary campaign, and hope by next month to have something to communicate. I fear it will not be favorable.

I am most anxious, as you may suppose, to hear what you and the Committee think of my attempt to get into Parliament. I am now going to endeavour to open the return at Worcester, a very radical place, and think I should be nearly certain of being returned for it, if the present election is set aside. Crawford, you know, has lost his return for Preston. We, the Indians, have been exceedingly unlucky on this occasion. Crawford's return would have been a great thing for us ; for he is well acquainted with Indian matters, has taken up the Black Act business con amore, and has helped me, without any apparent jealousy and dissatisfaction. I have written a letter to Dworkanauth, and in it stated rather more fully what I am about at Worcester ; but I have been so interrupted that I have not time to write to you as I had intended. I am much better in health than I was."

COAL SURVEY.—The survey upon which Mr. Homfray was employed last year, on behalf of Government, to ascertain the practicability of bringing coals from the Coal and Soane river districts, left off with an urgent recommendation for its being continued in the present year, and in hopes from some very promising appearances, of establishing the connexion of the great Palamoo and Coal river coal fields, with several sites along the banks of the Soane both to the north and south of the Coal river. These sites have been again explored, and some of them ascertained to contain coal. The samples which have been dug, although not of the very best description of coal, are said to be sufficiently so to encourage the continuation of the research in those parts of the country below the range of hills which skirt the south-east bank of the Soane. There are a vast number of distinct deposits of carbonaceous black slate with admixtures of coal, in various proportions, on both banks of the Soane. There is also that interesting deposit of the lias, which was also noticed and identified to be the long suspected and true lias limestone—perhaps one of the most valuable acquisitions to the present internal resources of this hitherto unexplored country. There is also a bed of thick carbonaceous black slate in the nullah near to Biljegaon, but nothing of the character of true coal has yet been discovered.

SOUTH AMERICAN COPPER.—The practical effect of double legislation is beautifully illustrated by the position of the two American ships, which have lately arrived, and which must away to sea again, under the late order or regulation of the Court of Directors with their cargo unbroken ; or, at all events, if they remain, can only do so, with the most valuable part of it unsold, viz. the South American copper, unless the President in Council will sanction infringement of the regulation, on the ground of its taking the parties affected so completely by surprise. Indeed it may be questioned whether under the commercial treaty with the United States, which was laid upon the table of both Houses of Parliament, the prohibition against American vessels bringing the produce of other countries can be legally enforced. The case is now before the Government, on the representation of the Collector of Customs for its decision.

A BIELARIN SHIELD.—It has been stated, that the commander of the ship Syrathish, which vessel lately arrived at this port from the Malay coast, brought out a shield which had been captured from the savages in Torryla Straits. The shield is in the shape of a tortoise, and in its set, in a state of preservation, the heads of the captain of a ship which belonged to this port, and was lost some time since, and seventeen of his crew and passengers. The heads bear all the scars of wounds which were inflicted on them. The captain's head is put in the place representing the head of the tortoise and a boy's is at the tail, and either of the crew's on each side. A facsimile of the horrid shield, as drawn from the original, is in the possession of Messrs. Sheldon and Co.

EXHIBITION OF VEGETABLES.—The show of vegetables at the Town Hall, on the 29th of January, far exceeded anything that could have been expected, with reference to the unusually unfavorable season. The cauliflower was beautiful and would have vied with any in Covent Garden. The cabbage was also very fine. The peas were excellent, and there were two fine baskets of English or rather Cape broad beans. Carrots from Cape seed were superior to preceding years, onions and lucks, though few were large and good and the red beet and salad were in good season. Only two baskets of artichokes were visible. Potatoes very fine. Of native vegetables, the pure white and red bringals were most conspicuous; the celery, though good, was not sufficiently blanched. The scene was altogether attractive, and the number of ladies who graced the ball, rendered it doubly so.

In the evening the members of the society dined together, when several toasts were drunk & speeches made.

ADVANCES ON SHIPMENTS OF GOODS TO EUROPE.—A report gains ground that the Government are about to resume the system of advances on shipments of goods to Europe.

THE OCHTERLOONY MONUMENT.—Government have sanctioned the estimate completing the plastering of the Ochterloony monument and repairing it. The amount is about Rs 460.

LORD CARDIGAN.—Lord Cardigan forfeited his passage in the Repube, and took up cabins in the Juliana for Madras, from which place his Lordship and the Countess proceeded to Bombay. This change of plan arises from a desire on the part of the Lord to be present at her Majesty's coronation, which he would have in all probability missed, had he sailed in the Repube.

COLONEL COCK.—Colonel Cock, it appears, has been appointed to the command of the Dinapore division of the army, with the rank of brigadier, during the absence of Major General W. Richards, C.B., or until further orders.

Government have come to the resolution of issuing new Company piece and receiving old sicca piece, in exchange for Company rupees—sixty-four of each denomination of piece to the rupee. This will be a great relief to every class of persons who pay or receive money in fractional part of the rupee. The words "and further orders" are of course mere words of form, for it would be doubly cruel in the poor ever again to leave them at the mercy of the postals, so long at least as the old defaced piece remain in circulation.

THE GOVERNOR'S PRIVATE SECRETARY.—The appointment of private secretary to the Deputy Governor, is given to James Hutchinson, Esq., for whom Ross D. Mangles, Esq., has been hitherto officiating. Mr. Hutchinson, has just returned to Calcutta from the Cape.

MR. A. DOWNS.—Mr. Doble, the Master in Equity, has returned with his health perfectly restored. This gentleman took the oath to Her Majesty, and resumed office on the 29th inst.

ANNUAL MELAH AT SAVOOR.—The annual melah or fair at Savoor, commenced at the end of December and continued up to the 20th of January. A party of the 24 Pergunah indefatigables, an European officer, and the full guard, attended. The booths of all sizes and descriptions far exceeded the past year's assemblage, and were estimated at so many as seventy thousand, and the number of people at as many as six hundred thousand; and it is stated that articles of Asiatic produce were sold and exchanged to so large an amount as twelve lacs of rupees. The assemblage was, as usual, comprised of natives of Lahore, Delhi, Oude, Seringapatam, Bombay and the lower provinces, and a great many from the Nepal and Burmese states. No remarkable accidents occurred beyond a large boat laden with tobacco having suddenly foundered; all lives on board were however saved. No affrays, or assaults have been reported, and from all accounts the melah was conducted very quietly.

FAILURE.—The failure of an eminent Shroffing and Banking House, trading in the Burra Bazar, occurred on the 1st instant, under the name of Tarachund Day and Madob Churn Day. Their liabilities are reported at twenty lac. of rupees.

QUARANTINE AT MALTA.—The severity of quarantine at Malta is greatly mitigated, indeed done away with. Passengers arriving in the Alexandria steamer, provided they do not land, are shipped into the London steamer, in the port, and proceed at once on their voyage, saving thus the delay of twenty or thirty days, which is the period for performing quarantine allotted to even clean bills of health.

PECHEROAUM EXPEDITION.—A letter from Assam states that the commissioner and Major White arrived at Sudea on the 29th of January, and that Lieut. Miller had gone with seventy-five men to endeavour to take the Pechee Gaum, who had been fighting with the Let Gaums. It is expected that Lieut. Miller will have some trouble.

AQUEDUCTS.—Just before the Chief Magistrate left Calcutta in November, several estimates for additional aqueducts were submitted to Government through the Military Board; but the one nearly finished in Lyon's Range, New China Bazar Street and Clive Street was especially recommended for sanction, and the chief Magistrate ordered its immediate commencement pending sanction; that it was sanctioned either last Tuesday week or the Council day before it, and the sanction forwarded the other day by the Military Board to the Conservancy Department; the Deputy Governor rejected the remaining projects submitted with the exception of that for an aqueduct along Baitakhana, from Wellington Street to the Circular Road, but suspended his sanction for that work until he should receive the estimate.

DACOITY.—The treasure belonging to the Stud depot at Buxar, has been attacked and carried off by a band of dacoits accompanied by a party of horse. The gang is understood to have amounted to about fifty or sixty men altogether; and the guard allotted for the protection of the treasure being very small, it made no resistance. The attack was quite unexpected, so much so that the sentry was disarmed, and the chookeedar who alone offered to oppose the party, was speared in the head, and disarmed. The dacoits, it appears, had been hovering about the town of Buxar for the purpose of carrying off a large sum of money which a Mahajan expected from Patna, and of which the dacoits had received intimation; but, being disappointed in that, they attacked the stud treasure and carried off an iron chest containing twenty thousand rupees in cash, and about five thousand rupees in bank notes belonging to the stud; and about two thousand rupees worth of silver plate, the private property of Captain Thomas, in charge of the depot, who had lodged the same in the treasury for greater security.

AFRAYS.—There are rumours in town of a serious affray, attended with loss of life, in the neighbourhood of Sheorghetty on the Benares road, in which some European soldiers are implicated. A collision has occurred at Kedgera between some sailors at H.M.S. Victor and the Custom-house authorities; and the former were kept on shore in confinement during the night. Jack was rather "glorious" and pretty considerably pugnacious. The Custom-house officers acted, it is said, with much judgment, having seized their refractory visitors, three in number, and bound them hard and fast in the tent, before they could obtain assistance from the rest of the boat's crew, who put off to the ship, in ignorance of the "durance-vile" of their most unfortunate, and unwary mess-mates.

ACCIDENT.—A dāk boat with seventeen packets on board, while rowing up to Hooghly on the 29th of Jan., capsized opposite to Bullopoore by the violence of the bore. Ten of the packets were recovered; but no trace of the rest was discovered. It is said the native merchants have lost a good deal of money by this sad accident.

ABOLITION OF PERSIAN.—The use of the Persian language in judicial and revenue proceedings, is abolished in the Bengal division of this Presidency, by order of the Deputy Governor under the recent act. The measure is to be carried into effect gradually, but the change is to be completely effected by the 1st January next.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—One of those distressing accidents which it is but very little to say throw a gloom over the whole meeting, took place on the Race Course on the 31st of January; they really make us wish at the moment that there were no such things as races to permit of the possibility of their occurring. A horse may be spared, but the highest gratification derived from racing is far too dearly purchased at the expense of a man's life.

After the start for the second heat for the Cup, a loose horse was observed galloping about. Absentee and Lieutenant went round the Course at tremendous speed, were neck and neck past the hospital, and rating it for the turn in, when the horse, which had been gradually making for that corner, and which some riders had vainly endeavoured to stop, rushed clean across the racers, and the whole three, with the (two) riders, were instantaneously on the ground. The horses recovered themselves, but Hardy, who was riding Lieutenant, never moved again. His appearance indicated some dreadful concussion of the brain, and the medical gentleman who first saw him, pronounced him at once dead.

MOFUSSIL.

DEATH.—Robberies are of daily occurrence in Delhi, and the soldiers are the principal sufferers, some of them having been robbed of property to a large amount.

MURDER.—An extraordinary case of prolific partition occurred in the Regimental Bazaar at Meerut recently; the wife of a native of the weaver caste, at her seclusionment gave birth to three children, a male and two females, none of whom survived until the next day.

On the 20th instant, some serious accidents occurred at Meerut in the second Brigade of Horse Artillery, when at half exercise a Non-Commissioned Officer was thrown completely forward from his horse which falling over him occasioned his being carried off the plain in a senseless state. One gunner had, while in the act of loading, the extremities of his right arm entirely carried away and the right side of his face thoroughly disfigured; he was conveyed to the hospital in a very pitiable state. This accident was at first attributed to the injudicious management of the gunner serving the vent, but the wounded appearance of his thumb, must exonerate him from the censure justly attached to neglect of duty at his very responsible station.

SAUCON.—The crops are fair to Saugor this season, than they have been for several years past.

NATIVE STATES.

LUCKNOW.—Advices from Lucknow, of the 26th January, state, that the late Hukeem Mehdee has been succeeded in his office of Minister of Oude, by Mowlavee Gholam Ghaya; formerly a moonshee, on a salary of twenty-five rupees. Ahmed Ally Khan, nephew of the late Hukeem, still holds the appointment of General in the Oude service; but being rather on bad terms with the present minister, intend shortly to leave Lucknow for Futehgurh; but it is questionable whether the King will permit him to do so. The King is carrying on his economical measures, discharging the servants of the state, and clipping the salaries of those that are retained. Nawab Rowshanoodowleh, the ex-minister and his son, Sobhan Ally Khan, are still confined to their houses, but fell confident of being reinstated. The former made an offer to his Majesty of 25 lacs of rupees for a re-appointment to the Premiership; but Lucknow, the King thinks, has had too much of his ministerial measures already. Nawab Tuhower Jung seems to be enjoying himself. The Resident gave him the use of one of the King's palaces to reside in, with elephants, chobdars, &c. He has been to all the palaces, gardens and other places of public resort, and is said to like the city and the people of Lucknow. On the 19th of January, the Resident introduced him in form to the King, who was surrounded by his principal nobility and gentry. The King shewed him much civility and attention, and on his taking leave made valuable presents. Nawab Tuhower Jung, it is said, intends leaving the city shortly, with an intention of visiting the whole of Upper India. The King was so ill that he would not see any one, unless on urgent and pressing state business.

LAHORE.—It is reported that the Maharajah received letters from Cabul, stating that Captain Burnes was endeavouring to persuade Nawab Dost Mahomed Khan to make peace with Runjeet Sing. The Maharajah hearing the contents was quiet for a time, but afterwards said that he would not make peace with Dost Mahomed Khan unless he gave Peshawar as a Nuzurakh.

The Maharajah being desirous of getting about one hundred European soldiers in his service, asked Mr. Cantell, how he was to procure them. Mr. Cantell said that the Maharajah could not entertain them without the sanction of the British Government, agreeable to the existing treaty.

A shookee was sent to the Kamdar of Derah Ismail Khan, ordering him not to be afraid of the Zamindars, but to endeavour to bring them to submission.

A Shooka was sent to Mirs Reop Ball, ordering him to go to Indura Mathoival with two hundred Sowars, and there decide impartially the case of Kund Sing and Runjeet Sing, Loodhiana and if they do not act upon his decision, he should dispossess them of their jagheers and report it to the Nazoor.

His Majesty received an order from the Ucker Nuzers of Huzara, which stated that Ibrahim and MAHOMED KHAN ZEMINDAR, of the districts skirting the Hills, are instigating the other Zemindars to keep up a disturbance.

An urzee from SATNA MULL, Nazim of Multan, was received, the contents of which were that as BOHRAM KHAN, Muzaree, had formerly kept up a row in this district, it is now, by his Highness's kindness, brought into subjection. A shooks in reply was sent to him desiring him to give to the said BOHRAM KHAN, a valuable khelut and send him to the presence; when something would be done for his support.

An urzee from the UKHBAR NUWEERS, of Cabul, was received, stating that DOST MAHOMED KHAN, the ruler of Cabul, has an intention of coming over to Peshawar. His Majesty said that when he will march against us, some sowars and artillery will be sent, who will prevent him from crossing the river Attock. DEENA NATH represented that the Frenchmen of His Majesty's army were a great obstacle to his coming.

HERAT.—By the letters received from Herat, it appears, that the invincible forces of Iran have marched from Mushed and encamped at the fort Kooryan, which is in the territory of the ruler of Herat, where both rulers had a great fight, and the ruler of Iran gained the day. He has established his thapah there. The Ruler of Herat fought incredibly well, but being short of ammunition gave up the field, and retreated into the fort of Herat, to which the Persians have layed seige. It would be well for the Herat chief if he will negotiate with them because he is not able to escape, and they will ruin him.

KAFRISTAN.—The customs of the tribe of Kafree are quite different from those of Hindoos and Mussulmen; they are called Atish Parust, fire worshippers; their places of living are in the hills of Bejore, Teran, Budukhsan, &c. &c.; they earned their livelihood by cultivating those hills; and they were never subject to any people, but a few years ago the son of the Ruler of Cabul subdued them, consequently knowing that they were under subjection, they assembled in a body and hut their gates against him and he, has left their boundaries and pitched his tents near a place called Bumean.

SUOPAL.—The Government have at length enforced the Salic law in this country, and the Nawab has been installed in security on his throne, in spite of the pertinacious efforts of the Begum to supplant him.

MADRAS.

THE CREW OF THE ELIZABETH.—The crew of the wrecked ship Elizabeth, who had behaved in a very obstreperous manner, after making free with the beer barrels on board, have been reduced to obedience by the Assistant Collector without military aid, and they are to be sent up to Madras forthwith.

SALE OF THE WRECK OF THE ELIZABETH.—The wreck of the Elizabeth was sold by public auction on the 2d of February, for the ridiculously low price of four hundred and fifty rupees. This was not from want of bidders, however, as there were many natives present prepared for the purchase, but the wreck lies so far out, and is so completely broken in pieces, that there is little prospect of any part of it being saved. The Walt was lying off the wreck, making preparations to bring up the remainder of the cargo, rigging, figure-head, &c. &c. which have been saved by the indefatigable exertions of Capt. Stanley and his crew.

HYDERABAD.—The sickness and consequent mortality among the European soldiers, have almost entirely disappeared, and the measures which Government have at length adopted will effectually prevent their recurrence, for the barracks are undergoing alterations on such an extensive scale that they will in a few months assume an appearance superior to any on this side of India.

CHOLERA AT ADNER.—Intelligence from Adner of the 27th of January, states that cholera had ceased for seven or eight days previous, in Her Majesty's 63d regiment; but the disease was still very prevalent amongst the natives all around the station. Orders have been received by the officer commanding to encamp H.M. 63d, if the cholera should continue amongst them.

SECUNDERABAD.—A private letter from Secunderabad dated the 22d of January, states that the present cold season has been the most sickly ever known; cold coughs, and fevers were so prevalent that there was scarcely a house which had not a patient in it. No fatal cases, however, had occurred up to that time from the influenza which was raging. On the 15th January, a thermometer exposed in the garden early in the morning, fell to 50d. during the day it seldom rises above 72d in a closed room.

His Highness the Nizam left the city of Hyderabad on the 20th January, on an excursion to Inajapoor, a place about 8 or 10 miles distant, accompanied by his Ameer, his Court, and some of his relatives.

MURDER.—A seacunny belonging to the Lady Flora, lost his life on the 29th January, by being stabbed and otherwise wounded, under very distressing circumstances. A Coroner's inquest returned a verdict of wilful murder against the party who inflicted the wounds.

SALE OF COMPANY'S PAPER.—There was a sale of Company's paper at the office of Messrs. Arbuthnot on the 4th of February, amounting to nearly three lakhs of rupees, belonging to the late Laudable Society. The attendance at the sale was very numerous both of natives 2d Europeans; and the bonds fetched about 2 per cent. above the previous nominal rates. The highest premium of the loan of 1825 and 26 was 6½ per cent.

ON DITS.—The orders have either been received by the last overland mail, or an intimation given that such are coming out, to sanction a continuation of full batta to the native troops stationed at Hyderabad, Nagpore and Jaulnah; that Major Robinson has been instructed to return to his duty, thus stamping with illegality the course pursued in his removal; that Captain Sprye, the Deputy Judge Advocate General, is to receive £500 as a compensation; that Captain Alexander, the Fort Adjutant, has been relieved from the heavy sum for which Sir Frederick Adam's first rendered him responsible; that Mr. Langley, late of the 3d L.C., is permitted to draw a Captain's pension or a special pension of £100 a year, and declared eligible for such official situations as that he was prevented continuing in.

EXECUTION.—On the evening of the 27th of January, the sentence of death passed upon the private of the 14th regiment for shooting the subadar-major, was carried into execution. There was no parade or show made but merely pickets from the two regiments under the Captain of the day to keep the peace and prevent the encroachment of the crowd, which was immense. The culprit, was brought from his place of confinement in a bandy drawn by buffaloes, and to the very last maintained the most cool and determined obstinacy and doggedness of manner, declaring his innocence and calling the officers murderers. The act of lashing him to the gun was the work of a few seconds. The signal was immediately given by the officer commanding the artillery dropping his glove, and as instantly obeyed by the man with the post-fire, and the murderer was no more. On the day of his death he stated to an officer of his regiment, that his enemy was the former subadar of his company; from which it may be inferred that he intended to shoot this native officer, but the bang with which he was intoxicated misled him.

THUGS IN MADRAS.—A noted thug has been taken to Madras in custody, who states that about two hundred of his craft are quietly following their vocation in the town of Madras!

DEPLORABLE LOSS OF HUMAN LIFE.—A short time since a party of about sixty convicts were on the march from the district of South Arcott to the Bangalore road in hupleat to be employed in repairing the roads, suddenly, and without any known cause, the whole party commenced an attack on the peons in charge, and a desperate affray ensued; nine of the convicts were killed on the spot by the peons, about twelve men desperately wounded, and a number variously stated at thirty or forty escaped altogether. This occurrence took place about fifty miles from Madras, and it is not reported whether there was a military guard or whether the convicts were ironed in the usual manner.

MR. RUSSELL.—The Honorable Mr. Russell has been splendidly fêted at the Banqueting Room by the society of Madras.

BOMBAY.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—Report says that the Commander-in-Chief, Sir J. Keane, will go to the Cape by an early opportunity on sick certificate. His Excellency not having sufficiently recovered by his late voyage, to stand the fatigues of another court-martial campaign, which has already commenced with unusual briskness. An entertainment has been spoken of, or hinted at, as a tribute of respect to this able and excellent functionary.

COURT-MARTIAL.—A Court-martial was held on Brevet Colonel J. G. Baumgardt, at Bombay, for scandalous conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in the following instances, charged by Brigadier Stacey:

1st. In having, unknown to me, communicated in a letter to Major General Willshire, of Her Majesty's 2nd or Queen's Royals, commanding Poonah brigade and station, dated 1st July, 1837, that I had called on Lieutenant Cuyler, of that regiment then under arrest, and had privately listened to his reflections on the character of another officer of the same regiment, such statement being malicious, unfounded, and injurious to my character as his immediate commanding officer.

2d. In not having taken the means of contradicting or making known to me the malicious and unfounded report contained in his letter aforesaid, dated last July 1837, to Major General Willshire; although the falsehood of it had been made known to him, and he had been repeatedly recommended by the latter officer to communicate the same to me.

3d. In falsely insinuating in a letter to Major General Willshire, dated 20th August 1837, that I was aware of the injurious report in circulation against me, but that I had shewn no disposition or wish to institute any inquiry or take any notice of it.

The court having found the prisoner guilty, adjudged him to be reprimanded in such manner as His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief may be pleased to direct.

COURT OF ENQUIRY ON COMMANDER LOWE.—The Court of enquiry on Commander Lowe of the Berenice, has terminated in the honorable acquittal of that officer from all blame. So far from there having been any carelessness in the management of himself and the other officers, the utmost vigilance was displayed by all on board. At the time the vessel struck, the presence of mind of Captain Lowe prevented the accident from assuming a much more serious complexion.

ASSAULT AND ROBBERY.—A Frenchman living in Bombay was walking along with a warrant officer of the Artemise from the Apollo bunder to the Fort. They were followed from the bunder by eight parrees, and, when they had got as far as the corner of Forbes-street, close to the office of Messrs. Jeejeebhoy Dadabhooy and Co., one of the men laid hold of the former Frenchman, and made a grasp at his pocket. The other parrees surrounded the man; and when he saw his situation and felt himself seized, he raised an umbrella and struck the person who had hold of him. Upon this he was attacked by the whole party and knocked down. A small bag containing money fell out of his pocket, and four rupees which rolled out of it were snatched by one of the parrees. His companion interfered, for his defence and was also knocked down in the attempt, he too losing several rupees. The parrees after this made off, finding that nothing further could be done quietly in the affair. The Frenchman, as well as they could, communicated to two police peons who were standing quietly looking on at a few yards distance from the scene of the scuffle, which had taken place, showed them how they had been treated, and pointed out where they had been attacked. The peons, however, remained where they were, and would not stir a foot to endeavour to secure the offenders.

EXPORTATION OF SALT FREE OF DUTY.—It is said, that Government has come to the resolution, pending a reference to the Government of India, of allowing all salt taken for exportation, to any port within the territories included under the Honorable Company's Charter, to be shipped free of duty, or in other words, on the same terms as before the introduction of the new law.

THE BERENICE.—The Berenice reached Bombay on the 24th of January, but not the harbour, having struck upon the south-west prong, in attempting to enter the port. The Berenice was standing towards the harbour about 7 p.m., her distance being at that time, about fourteen miles, and the night extremely dark. At this moment two lights were observable in the direction of the port, but which was the true one could not be ascertained, there being nothing to distinguish the one from the other. Upon the two lights being so discovered, Capt. Lowe directed the purser to go below and address a letter to the Superintendent of the Indian Navy as to the circumstance of such two lights being visible, and the impossibility of distinguishing the true one. Capt. Lowe being extremely anxious to discharge his duty by landing the mail as early as possible, the vessel continued to stand in until about 9 p.m., when the water suddenly shallowed to eight fathoms. At order was instantly given to put her about, but before the next throw of the lead she bumped and upon going round took the rock and stuck fast. It was soon discovered that she was on the south-west prong, but as far as could be ascertained she had sustained no damage from the concussion.

DISTRESSING FIRE.—On the 22d of January last, the village of Khandalah took fire, and the whole of the native part of it was reduced ashes. The bungalows in the neighbourhood were not affected by the conflagration, but the distress which this said calamity must have inflicted upon the poor inhabitants of that delightful spot, will be very severely felt.

MARINE POLICE.—The Government has nominated as committee composed partly of the principal merchants, to take into consideration the question of a marine police.

THE CHOLERA.—The cholera still prevails in Her Majesty's 63d regiment at Arnee. The wards of the hospital are stated to be quite full, there being therein no less than eighty patients.

SINGAPORE.

A Singapore Free Press of the 4th of January, state that the Water Witch, from pilot the 13th of December, had arrived at Singapore on the 1st of January. The Dutch, it appears, had perfidiously captured the Boonjal chief, who had made such a stubborn resistance to their inroads into the interior of Sumatra, and had sent him to Banda, the state prison of the Dutch in India.

PIRATES.—The pirates have again commenced their depredations in the vicinity of Singapore. A raft, on which were seven persons, was attacked by these sanguinary wretches off Passoris, a village situated a mile or two beyond the Red Cliffs on that Island. The pirates on their first approach called out for some tobacco, and being told there was none to give, discharged several blunderbusses at the raft and killed two of the people. The rest attempted to escape in sampans, four going in one, and only one in the other. The latter was soon overtaken and murdered by krisses, notwithstanding his earnest supplications for mercy, which were heard by his companions, who were enabled, however, to reach the shore and conceal themselves in the jungles. All their property was plundered.

PERSIA.

Letters received in town on the 18th instant, from Persia, speak of the successes of the Shah in his expedition. One or two strong holds had fallen, and it is supposed that the Shah is by this time before Herat.

BURMAH.

The following news has been received from Burmah.

On the 12th January, a despatch-boat reached Rangoon in five days from the new capital, Umerapoor. The intelligence brought down was at first carefully concealed, but some of it at last transpired. It appears that the Shans of Monary, to the east of Ava, have refused to submit to the new King of Ava; that His Majesty, imputing this refusal to the mismanagement of the officer whom he had appointed as Governor-General over the Shans, had with his usual haste and recklessness of human life, ordered the said Governor-General, and six of his principal officers to be executed, and despatched a force under a Woondouk to coerce or cajole the Shans. The late Woongee of Rangoon, who had once before been confined and squeezed, has been again imprisoned. A Rangoon officer of the former Government has been executed for travelling through the country, and the chief of the lower chokey in the Rangoon river, is ordered to be embowelled, because he claimed, as his hereditary right, the fees of office belonging to that chokey. The late King is on the river off Umerapoor guarded by 500 men, and his son, the young prince, is without any followers. Mentaggee and the other ministers and officers of the late King, continue in prison.

Mr. Blundell, the Commissioner of Moulmein, deputed Dr. Richardson to proceed to Bileng, the seat of the chief Burmese Governor in that quarter, and demand redress for the late murder and depredations in our territories. Dr. Richardson was treated in a more inhospitable and ungracious manner than what any British officers ever experienced before in this quarter. The petty officers of Maritaban stopped him; and when he at last reached the neighbourhood of Bileng, he was met by a party of soldiers, who would not allow him or his followers to enter Bileng, and kept them outside under a strict guard. The Governor pretended not to be a Bileng, and Dr. Richardson was obliged to return to Moulmein without having seen the Governor or accomplished any of the objects of his mission, except communicating the demands of the Commissioner to a subordinate Burmese officer, who, of course, denied all knowledge of the parties that had committed the late murder and robberies.

The good people of Rangoon, now that the Commissioner has clearly proved that these late incursions into our territories were committed with the knowledge and at the instigation of the Governor of Bileng, pretend that that chief has turned rebel against the new King of Ava, and that he has been acting contrary to the orders and wishes of his Majesty! It is however said, that the present governor of Bileng is a very old and confidential personal friend of the present King's, and that his son is in immediate attendance on his Majesty and in command of his body guard!

AKYAB.—Letters have been received from Akyab, dated 12th instant. The steamer Experiment arrived there on that morning, and fired a salute, which was answered from the shore. At the instance of the medical officer of the station, a dispensary is about being established at Akyab, where natives will receive medicine, and medical advice, or attendance gratis. A subscription had been raised for this humane purpose, and the worthy commissioner was, as usual, foremost with his purse. Surveying had been carried on at Akyab with some activity, and the impression seemed to be that, in the course of next year, a harbour wharf, a light-house, and sanatorium—now matters merely visionary—will be objects of reality. Scarcely any sickness prevailed at Akyab by the latest dates. Those officers who had been ill, had all recovered.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

INDIGO.—The market now evinces considerable animation, and purchasers finding that the holders will not give way, have been buying pretty freely at the recent sales, where prices have ranged from similar rates to five rupees advance on the previous currency. The continued drought is much against the sowings for the coming season, and loud complaints of want of rain are coming in from Tirhoot and all the upper provinces.

RAW SILK.—Prices are giving way and there is very little enquiry for the article, the exports to Great Britain have however been extremely heavy since the commencement of the year.

SILK PIECE GOODS.—No amendment has yet been remarked on the quality of corahs, and until that is the case they promise no good in English markets. The prices of the assortment remain as reported in our last.

COTTON.—Without enquiry, and remains without alteration.

SALTPETRE.—From the limited operation consequent on the scarcity of tonnage, and the accumulation of a large stock in the market, prices continue to give way. The transactions reported, are principally on French and American accounts.

SUGAR.—Is also in limited enquiry, but we have no change to notice on our last quotations. A few purchases have been made during the week for shipments to Liverpool.

SMALL LAC.—Very little yet doing for the English market, and we have no change in prices to notice. The purchases reported, are principally on American account.

LAC DYE.—Dull of sale, and prices continue low.

DRY ORANGE.—Remains at last week's currency. The transactions reported, are for France and America.

HIDES AND HORNS.—Are in limited enquiry, and operations are confined to a few parcels to America. The stock in the market is large, and prices are giving way.

OIL SEEDS.—A few transactions in linseed continue to be made; but prices have experienced a slight fall since our last.

SAPFLOWER.—Without enquiry, and remains without any change in price.

GRAIN.—The scarcity of tonnage, has suspended operations in rice, and the prices of the day are reported at a decline on Patna, Patchery and Moonghy rice.

OPIMUM.—So little of the new drug remains in the hands of the Bazar speculators for sale on the spot, that prices are quite nominal. Old Benares has declined considerably, and is in fact unsaleable on any terms.

THE CALCUTTA MONTHLY JOURNAL.
ASIATIC NEWS.

ARRACAN.

Aeng, 20th Dec. 1837.—In entering on the subject of my present communication, I am not ignorant that a very able and excellent report on our eastern frontier has been written by Capt. Pemberton, and was published on a limited scale at the expense of the Supreme Government in 1835. It is, therefore, with extreme diffidence, I venture my crude observations before the eye of criticism.

The only value, I may flatter myself, that is likely to be felt for my "pencilings by the way," is the novelty they possess. It is probable that no description of the pass of Aeng has appeared in print since the publication of Capt. P.'s report, and it is on this supposition I send you the communication in hand.

During my progress I took daily notes of every thing worth recording, and, knowing general taste is never satisfied by a mere route description, the physical characteristics of a country, I have endeavoured to blend the amusing with the useful, thus designing the captivation of readers of every calibre.

Those few who have already perused or have in possession Captain Pemberton's description of this celebrated pass, will, I have no doubt, grant me an especial indulgence, and I beg them particularly to consider me, in reference to the captain, as a cockle-shell following in the wake of a seventy-four. However, if I cannot be so instructive, my style of description may be more pleasing to the general mass of newspaper readers, than it is possible for an official report to government to render him; he must walk steadily the plank. I may vault from earth to heaven, digress from this point to that, "without any circumstance whatever," as Mr. Weller senior has it. But a truce with thy nonsense to thy noyes, Oh! Mugh.

On the 12th of Dec. L—— and your correspondent left Aeng and proceeded on foot towards Jeddinchakain, the first halting place en route to the Yoomadong mountains.

Our camp consisted (coolies included) of near 150 men. The coolie of this country is generally of the Keyn tribe, and as coolies they are very useful, neither bullock, nor wheeled vehicle of any kind being procurable. The road for about a mile runs through partially cleared jungle, among which the gurjun and jarool trees flourish as grandees of the forest. After completing this distance, we crossed the Aeng river by a bamboo bridge. The river here was not fordable, and the tattoos were obliged to swim half the distance across; in width it appeared about 100 yards. On the right bank is situated the new village of Aeng, by Captain Pemberton denominated Yodowest, but I could find no native who knew the place by this name, they all call it upper or new Aeng; and of the two villages this has by far the most respectable appearance and the best bazar. The Sogree is himself a Shan, and all the Shan itinerant merchants bring their goods to the market of the new village, instead of to the old as formerly. The site is, of course, more convenient for all traffickers coming from the east; it not only saves them a trifling distance, but the passage of the river.

Here we paid a visit to the Sogree, whose person and establishment deserves to be honoured by an elongated paragraph, much more prolix than his worship is likely to receive from me: however, I shall expend a line or two on him, and proceed on my journey.

My friend the Sogree, as I have stated, being a native of the Shan country on the north-east frontier of Burnah, has much the appearance of a Chinese. Though venerable from apparent age, his person is ridiculous; he looks more like a skeleton vivant than a man (as one in authority should be) prone to obesity. He has further the misfortune to possess but one eye, which gives his cadaverous visage a most grotesque expression, resembling nothing that I know of either in heaven above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth; but if I could not help smiling at the figure the man in office displayed, I was not the less pleased by his activity in procuring us tattoos for the journey: this being our principal object in paying him a visit. Whilst the old gentleman was thus usefully employing himself in our behalf, I could not but regard with admiration the commanding presence of his lady, who strutted about to and fro with the dignified demeanour of a Lady Mayoress, little suspecting the sly flirtation carried on betwixt his daughter, a damsel of promise, and a gentleman who shall be nameless. At length the tattoos were brought, the one for L—— had the semblance of an ancient European saddle on its back; that destined for your humble servant was equipped, according to the most approved primitive, or antideluvian style, on each side dangled two rusty implements probably intended to do the office of stirrups, the base of whose angles I could cover with the breadth of three fingers, and so unsatisfactory was the tout ensemble that I did not on the present occasion attempt to mount, rather preferring to pad the hoof or mount the elephant which accompanied us. Accordingly, we again pushed forward as we had come, for L—— was as much inclined to walk as myself.

The road on this march runs over tolerably level ground, but two bridges are required to replace those now in decay over two small nullahs, whose banks are very precipitous. The road, generally speaking, was good, but impracticable for wheeled carriages for want of bridges over the nullah above noted. We crossed the Aeng river by a bridge similar to that at the new village of Aeng, at a place called Zademow ghaut, but the stream was here fordable; on the other side there is a small village peopled by expatriated Burmans. On the line of road, I observed wild plantains and a creeper resembling, in all but the aroma, the hop. On the breasts of the hills adjacent, grew a considerable portion of bamboo mixed with jungle tree of various kinds, though no other particular change showed itself on the general features of the country. About a mile and a half in advance of Zadenow, we again found the river crossing our path at a place bearing the appellation of Khongwa Zukan. Here we exalted ourselves on the elephant, there being no bridge, but the river was not deeper than two or three feet over this passage. About two miles from this place we reached our halting ground, Zennet Chakain, where a shed has been erected capable of receiving and giving shelter to perhaps one hundred men.

The river runs close by, and a bath after our journey being determined on, we enjoyed ourselves luxuriously, for the water was clear as crystal, and as cold as we could conveniently bear it. On the reverse side was a high rocky bank, overhung by a luxuriant vegetation, which gratefully shielded us from the rays of the sun. The encamping ground is (including the space covered by the shed,) not larger than two hundred men can conveniently bivouac on.

At noon the thermometer was 90° in the sepoy's pall and 85 under the shed. Feeling the heat rather unpleasant, we made a retreat into the jungle for the purpose of enjoying a little refrigeration, but were soon driven out again by an army of musquitos, who seemed desirous to monopolize the shade themselves to the exclusion of all intruders.

We were now beyond the influence of the tide, and as the old village of Aeng is forty-five miles from the mouth of the river, I expect the tide, excepting at spring, does not flow many miles above. As it was here I first made the observation, I may as well describe some peculiarities regarding the Kyens, who acted as our coolies. They are a hill tribe and little better than savages; however, they are very useful in carrying burthens up and down hills, where men of the plains find a difficulty in carrying themselves. Every article that can be put in a basket is carried in one of an oblong formation, having a loop fixed to the top made of split cane, and a strip of split cane goes round the centre, the former, the Kyen puts over his head, fixing it round his temples, while he fastens the ends of the strip below round his waist, this keeps the basket in a firm and proper position, and gives the man the free use of his hands while travelling. Other articles such as tents, beds, &c. are either slung on a bamboo or carried on a kind of bamboo ladder, supported by two or more men according to the weight.

As soon as night began to approach, I noticed the simple people making a shed for themselves from the bamboo covered by its leaves, to arrest the heavy dew that invariably falls in this climate. This would be the best plan for sepoys when marching in this country; to suppose a tent can be carried for an army of any size, would be entirely out of the question. The coolies receive here three annas a day, so high is labour on account of the thin population of the province. The encamping ground here is capable of being made available for a regiment, supposing we bivouac and bring no tents, or at least do not pitch any. The jungle is not of such a nature, but that if every man carried a dow or axe of the country he might soon cut a convenient place to esconce himself in for the night; and, in marching a regiment through this province, it would be desirable that every man should carry a dow on his knapsack: it seems to be a sine qua non among the people of the province. At sun-set the thermometer was at 72°.

13th.—Two hours before sunrise ther. at 62°; marched at day break for Surrowah, supposed distance eight miles. The whole of this march is through a bamboo jungle, in many parts forming an arch over the road, which was saturated with dew dripping from the foliage above. We now seemed to have left what little civilization we had before seen, entirely behind us, for only a single Kyen hut perched here and there on the side of a hill, partially cleared of its bamboos and other jungle, was to be observed the whole of this march. We passed two steep ghauts, one at an encamping ground called Peenozukan, the other immediately on our approach to Surrowah, besides two small hill streams, whose banks were very muddy and precipitous. From Peenozukan we enjoyed an extensive view of the hills around us, embellished with all the beauty of light and shade derived from the lustre of a rising sun. I had mounted the elephant at the foot of the last hill that intervened 'twixt us and our journey's end, but found the descent so very precipitous on arriving at its summit, that I preferred trusting my own legs for the slippery adventure of descending; the hill being of a red, firm, clay soil, was of considerable advantage, or I might have gone down considerably faster than would have been desirable. At the foot of the descent, we crossed the Surrowah river by a bamboo bridge, though it was fordable, being no where over the part where the bridge was erected more than four feet if quite so deep. This brought us to Surrowah or Thorowah, as it is pronounced by the natives. Here the Arracan locals have a post for the protection of the inland trade between Arracan and the countries at the Yoomadong Mountains. A number of Shan travelling merchants were here on our arrival, and I made some trifling purchases of cloth, twenty-five hauts for the rupee, and of Shan pawn boxes at one rupee each; these are japanned, with fast, or pukka colour, and so perfectly pliable to the pressure of the hand. The bathing place here I thought preferable to that at Zennet Chakain where the rough pebbles form an uncomfortable footing; here the bottom was composed more of fine sand than pebbles. Here I relieved the old detachment by the new, and right glad were the former to leave the jungle, some having been located here upwards of two years. I found ten sick; these were permitted to proceed in dingies to Aeng; the river being navigable as far as the Thorowah, by small boats of this kind, at this season of the year. Here I should have ended my labors and have returned, but for circumstances which it becometh me not to mention; at least I am not aware I am at liberty to make public the reason of my advancing further towards the frontier. Thermometer at noon 88°.

14th.—Thermometer at 4 A.M. 72°, altitude of Thorowah 147 feet: march at daylight accompanied by a guard of 1 havildar, 1 naick, and twelve sepoys, for our especial protection through the dangerous country we had to pass. At the very commencement, we encountered a hill that set us all piping, and before we reached its brow I was too glad to ascend the remount on the elephant, who was sorely put to it, he, too, for instead of walking she bent on each knee at every step upwards. There were but few trees of any size to be seen on this portion of the road, bamboo being predominant every where. About half way on our descent of this vast branch from the great line of the Yoomadong Mountains, we crossed a hill rivulet well situated to refresh cattle and the wayward traveller. After the fatigue of the ascent on either side, crossing this small stream, we still kept descending for half a mile, when we had another steep ascent before us; indeed these ascents and descents formed the principle features of the road on every march, excepting that we had more of the former than the latter to plod over, ascending on an average one foot in twenty. Two halting places were noticed on this march, both on high ground, but no water, excepting at considerable distances below; on these places grew a few trees, but bamboo jungle obscured the sight as far as the eye could reach. At the last of these open halting spaces called Mungzakon, we had a very extensive and magnificent view of the hills, including parts of the Yoomadong principal range.

The road on this march in many parts was excessively narrow, not more than two or three yards wide in many places. Much clearing is requisite, and my progress on the elephant was considerably retarded by branches of trees and bamboos intercepting the passage. On the descent from Mengzokun, we met about 100 laden bullocks, going to Aeng with merchandize from the Shan country, which lies on the north-east frontier of Burmah. The cattle were in fine condition, but the loads did not appear heavy, and it is usual for the conductors of this trade to be ten or eleven hours on a common stage of ten miles; they make it a custom to rest at almost every convenient spot to smoke, &c. and that they may always stop when they are inclined, they take the necessary precaution of carrying water with them in large hollow bamboos, tied in bundles of three or five; these they take in such quantities as to serve for themselves and cattle for at least as many rests as they require, where water, as on this road, is a scarce article. About half past eight, arrived at Guatcha or Netzazokun, on the ridge of a connecting link overlooked by a steep ascent, on whose summit a large encamping ground is found, but we preferred for our small party the lower ground, on account of the water being nearer. Descending to the right, I found the spring. Very little water was procurable, but where the rock, which is of a soft slate, scraped, and a cistern formed, enough water would be found for the cattle of a considerable camp. A temporary dam of mud and bamboos alone partially retained a very small pool at the foot of the spring. The rain, for our own use we caught from a split bamboo thrust into the fissure, from whence this valuable element flowed, or rather dribbled; by this means we increased the flow, and at the same time avoided the contamination we must have incurred by drinking the water from the muddy pool below, into which one of our niggers uncereemoniously trod, disturbing the secreted sediment at the bottom; to say nothing of the agreeable tincture his foot must have given so small a body of aqueous fluid. The descent to this spring is of necessity serpentine in formation, and a mere foot-path through the bamboos, its distance from the road may be computed at about 200 yards. Distance of Guatcha from Sorrowah computed at about five miles. Not even a Kynah hut visible, or one resident inhabitant since leaving Thorowah. Thermometer at noon 84°, altitude above the sea according to Pemberton, 1,476 feet.

Start at about three p.m. and proceed as far as Waddai or Waddat, immediately at the base of the ascent on leaving Guatcha, a fall of the hill above has taken place, carrying part of the road with it, and rendering the passage unsafe, or apparently so for an elephant, our's however managed so well as to get by without falling down the precipice on the left. The road must be cut farther into the side of the hill to make it safer, or on the first shower the mere foot-path now remaining will assuredly descend into the deep ravine below. The ascent after the first part became more gradual, the road running round the shoulder of the vast hill we were advancing over; the road was tolerable and passable for artillery excepting at the place above mentioned, where a new road of about fifty or sixty yards must be made. Arrived at Waddai about five o'clock, visited the spring which is on the right of the road; more abundant than at Guatcha, but a greater distance by 100 yards.

Our ground was on the road, as most of the encamping places are; before us for our especial comfort and contemplation, we had the view of a steep ascent, upon whose steep and rugged sides it would behoove us to wend our way on the following morning. Face of the country, covered with bamboo unlimited to sight.

15th.—Thermometer daylight 64°: commence our march to Karowkee by winding up the hill before us; find the road little better than a watercourse or ravine, intercepted occasionally by blocks of sand-stone of considerable gravity; on the summit of this elevation is a large open space capable of encamping a brigade, but no water nearer than from whence we came below, or probably at the foot of the hill, in front among the ravines formed by the inferior roots of the great eminences around. The road from this point is much better, and no considerable descent is made. Our old friends, the bamboos, we now remarked, became scarce, and superseded by fine forest trees at about three miles from Waddai. And now, Mr. Editor, while we traverse about two miles of tolerably level road, let us discourse of the sporting qualities of the country. Until we had attained this point, our guns had not once reverberated among the hills, or startled silent nature by a report. This march, however, we took the precaution of leading or heading our small and trusty band, making the baggage follow in the rear, supported by a naick and four. We had just cleared the brow of the hill, when we espied a gallant cock strutting on the verge of the road, but the gaily plumaged hero was wide awake to the villainous effect of the saltpetre compound, and after a vain pursuit we advanced gun in hand. Alas! there was little use in this, for the only birds that fell in our way afterwards, were four chikories, one of which I sent ever the precipice far into deep jungle, where no mortal foot e'er had or could have trod, save for his own protection. A sportsman on this road had better leave his gun in case, for although there are a few fowls and chickorees, yet the thick jungle and the steepness of the hills on every side almost prevents the possibility of bagging. On leaving the bamboos, we got into a more open jungle, and gradually into a magnificent forest, the altitude of many of the noble trees we saw was immense. Most of these, were on the side of the Nodong mountain, around whose colossal form our circuit lay. I here note some angiospermous shrub from whose white bulbs I pressed a number of black round seeds. I regret I have not brought any with me, as the colour of the plant was very agreeable. Here also we made acquaintance with a variety of mosses encasing the trunks of trees and clothing stones with their verdure. A species of palm tree was here discernible. My geological notes only refer to the nature of the road itself, and that part of the soil which was exposed on the side of each hill around which the road has been cut; at this height about 3,000 feet, in a depth of incision of about four feet, a stratum resembling fuller's earth embraced another of the depth of two feet, consisting of ferruginous soil, winged with slate approximating the appearance of coal; detached masses of this slate rock, by exposure to the air, had become of a lighter complexion. The road requires much clearing, the trunks of several trees now lying across it, inconvenience the traveller very considerably. On reaching the highest part of Nodong, we began to breathe much pure air, and it was evident to our sense of respiration, that we had attained a considerable elevation above the close jungle of the minor hills. Here too, we enjoyed a more extensive view than hitherto, shut in only on north-east by the still greater altitude of the Yoomadong range and the cone of our supporting height, which intercepted the picture to the south-west. After resting here awhile, we made a considerable descent over a very bad road impracticable for artillery in its present state, but capable of being made available at no great expense of time or labor.

After overcoming all obstacles without any accident occurring, a gently rising ground brought us to the foot of Natyagain or Naregain, at a halting place called Karowkee, at an elevation of 3,165 feet above the level of the sea. Here we found water and a better ground for our camp than that generally used, by making a descent to our left; here we were within 100 yards of the spring which issued from the interstices of the magnificent Natyagain, beneath whose commanding presence, we were encamped, shaded by the lofty and gorgeous foliage of a forest whose mighty tenants bent gracefully their sun-gilded boughs to the mountain breeze.

But amid romantic scenes, the little wants of life will force themselves upon our recollection, as well as in the crowded city or the solitary cell. Soon therefore had we the satisfaction of watching the arcana of our breakfast preparations, while the truant smoke ascended, courting in wantonness the morning air. Well might human nature be a prey to appetite, after such a wait as we this morning had taken.

After discussing eight or ten eggs mingled with some thin slices of an especial basket of my own selection, and making an addenda of sundry sardines, plum jams, and Wilson's biscuits, confirmed by no given quantity of Bass's imperial; we lit our manillas and began contemplating the ascent of Natzagain, whose lofty and o'erthrowing brow we had fully determined on forming an acquaintance with. Accordingly, taking a few men with us we set out about twelve o'clock for the purpose. And here Mr. E., I must confess, I became amenable to the Martin act, id est, had the circumstance occurred in Great Britain or Ireland. I have no where stated that I had urged or exacted assistance from the miserable looking tattoo, whose garbure had the honor of my previous notice. But to ascend Natzagain I had no alternative, for had I attempted to scramble up, I should (like merry Jack) have so larded the lean earth, that every soul who might attempt to track me, would have made as much progress as a turnspit at work, a squirrel in a trundle-cage, or a gentleman at the tread mill. I determined to mount the equine quadruped out of mercy to my fat sides, and for stirrups, I supplied my extremities with supports by stringing a small rope double over the saddle; inserting my feet in the dependent loops. Thus the shalowl of a Hudibras in horse equipment and person I marched me up the hill, nearly finding my way to the ground, though on more occasions than one my villainous apology for stirrups and leathers, not being properly made fast on the saddle, began trimming like a member of parliament who cannot make up his mind as to which side he may find it his interest to support, first on one side, then on the other, according to my preponderance of pressure. At length, by dint of a most strenuous exertion on the part of my tattoo, who was much better and stronger than his looks at first led me to suppose, I found myself safe on the summit of the mountain, and 4,590 feet above the sea.

Here a most splendid panorama presented itself, for on one side at a distance, perhaps of sixty miles, like a reflector, interspersed by numerous blemishes, lay the Bay of Combermere, with all its connected estuaries resembling streaks of silver on an emerald ground; above and about us, rolled vast volumes of murky clouds, obedient to the sightless couriers of the air, ever and anon unveiling the mountainous region below to our wondering gaze. Having satisfied our curiosity on this side the mountain we made an advance 'over the border' and there we stood, as Moses stood, and viewed the landscape o'er, though the atmosphere on this side was misty. We children of the mist saw with admiration the vast champagne country, as it were, flowing with milk and honey before us. The descent on this side is much more precipitous than on the other, averaging one foot in ten. From the point on which we obtained our observation, the Irrawattie and Man rivers are distinguishable, gliding through what possessed the appearance of a highly cultivated country. The mountain eminences on the Burmese side extend but a short distance from the great range, at least by the coup d'œil with which I was obliged to content myself, such was the impression effected.

We now returned to our own side the boundary, and drank success to the next war.

The few sepoy-s we took with us seemed to look with envy on the fine plain of the Irrawattie, so different was the aspect of their own country, compared with what they beheld on the Burmah side.

On the summit of Natzagain, a few posts, and a double trench, still mark where the Burmese had a line of stockade for the defence of the pass, while a hollow, whether natural or artificial, I could not determine, has evidently served for a reservoir for the retention of rain-water. The only inhabitants of these hills appear to be apes. While we were ascending, we heard them making a kind of barking noise, but did not get a sight of any. The ascent to the summit is carried up the face of the mountain in a zig-zag formation, but is very difficult on account of the looseness of the ground and slate rock, with which it abounds. About half way on the ascent, was a large pile of stones, and every man as he passed by, added to the heap, by throwing a stone on the monster. I enquired the reason, and was informed, that it was a species of devotion paid to the spirits of the mountain, by the observance of which they hoped for strength to overcome the difficulties of the ascent. After enjoying ourselves in the cool mountain air for half an hour, we made the best of our time in descending; the only difficulty being in keeping a proper equilibrium, and a firm footing on our precipitous path. Thermometer at moon in tent at Karowkee 70°, sunset 65°. On the 16th at daylight 62°. This morning returned to Waddi, but having exhibited the general character of the country on my advance route, and noted every difficulty worth recording that may be expected by others, whose lot it may be to follow this track hereafter, recapitulation is unnecessary and uncalled for, I shall therefore conclude by a few general remarks, with an addenda of some particulars obtained from native report, of a route called the Paing, or Peang road diverging in a north easterly direction from Waddi, across the Yoomalonga into Ava as far as the banks of the Irrawattie. In the course of narration I have had occasion to mention a hill tribe called Kyens, but there is one practice current among them which has met with neglect from my pen. In former times, report says, the women of this tribe possessed an uncommon share of loveliness which rendered them objects of attraction to the oppressors of their country, and led to the abduction of the fairest and most beautiful among them, by the ruthless hands of foreign despots. To prevent these occurrences the chiefs and elders of this oppressed clan devised the cruel operation of tattooing the faces of their female offspring, deeming the beauty of women, as nothing compared with the loveliness of chastity. I made no particular enquiries, but give it as my opinion, that no matron had a voice in the conclave when the tattooing act was passed, and the young ladies were positively excluded. The process of creating fire by friction, also came under my inspection; but this is an act of savage life very generally comprehended, I merely notice the circumstance in a casual manner, as being a means of ignition generally in use among these, as with savages in other quarters of the globe.

On the inland trade from Shan and other states tributary to the Burmese monarch, I must quote rather from report than ocular demonstration. The number of bullocks annually visiting Aeng, or Yowadeat averages 10,000. The imports consisting of the following variety, viz, bees' wax, called juce, khut, an astringent eaten with pawa, showuskah, a bark used in the arcana of a lady's toilet apparatus, cotton, kapas, threads, red, black and white, shan pawa boxes, sweet oil, a small kind of onions, tall ka goor, a coarse sugar, Burmese dhows, for wood cutting; silks of various patterns, some very pretty, and resembling Scotch plaids, mustard seed. The returns are mostly, salt, dried or salted fish and beetlenut.

* Aeng in P's report stated to be only 3,000 in the year 1831 and 1833.

The silk appears common enough, (not in texture,) for every man who can afford it generally glories in a silk. At Akyah I have noticed chupkuns in addition, made of black velvet, richly flowered, generally worn by the Mughs on high days and holidays; these I presume are imported from China.

Of the road commonly called 'the Paing road,' I have learnt the following particulars from those who have passed over it, viz. the Shans.

Route from Waddi in Arracan to Choungpawgaine on the Irrawattie; so pronounced by the natives to me.

ARRACAN.

1st. Dubbrubang—on the Aeng river, distance four miles, encamping ground small.

2d. Tantobatu—water scarce, distance ten miles.

BUNMAN.

3d. Shakaguen—village and chokie twenty-five huts fourteen miles.

4th. Ihenahun—village and chokie, twenty huts, eight miles.

5th. Paing—300 huts, on the Khekeong nullah four miles.

6th. Mongkeong—road, or in the bed nullah, eight miles.

7th. Keothewah—Keong, road ditto, distance thirty-six miles.

8th. Choungpawgaine—Irrawattie river, distance twelve miles. Distance from Waddie to Choungpawgaine, by native calculation of two miles to the koss, about..... 96 miles.

From Aeng to Waddie about..... 24 "

By this route total. 120 "

Distance from Aeng to Membo on } 102 " the Irrawattie via Nazagain }

N. B.—In the above distance, both may be made ad lib., the road being along the bed of the nullah, from which water can be procured in the driest season.

Here are two branches by which two divisions might debouch on the plains of Ava, by regulated marches at one and the same time. But I have reason to suspect the Paing pass is not practicable for artillery or wheeled carriages of any kind. The Shans, whom I questioned, said it was too rocky way; thus we may easily suppose when one half the route has no better claim to the name of road than what the bed of a hill stream may chance to afford. However, in the case of a rupture with the Burmese, there is every probability that a light division may traverse this route if capable of carrying provisions for twelve days, leaving a depot at Waddie, where a stockade may be formed, as a support to the advanced divisions on either route. For this purpose, there is a very advantageous site at Waddie, commanding a watering place, and immediately on the main road. The only disadvantage of this position is on account of its being commanded by the steep ridge in its immediate front, though the distance is so great as to be scarcely within the range of musketry. But once our divisions ahead, there would be no fear of an attack on the depot, in their rear especially, if both the Paing and Nazagain routes are in occupation.

I shall here bring my account to a conclusion by remarking, that the probable expense requisite to make the Aeng Pass on the Arracan side practicable for the passage of artillery, and to build wooden bridges over five hill streams flowing between Aeng and Sarrowah, to obviate the obstruction formed by them at all seasons, would not exceed Rs. 5,000 and it is to be hoped, when an official report of the present state of the road shall have been made to Government, that honorable body will be sufficiently alive to its own interest, and the protection it naturally owes to its subjects, to accede to the just claims this (politically speaking) important province, has on the distribution of money from the public purse.

DISTRESS IN THE UPPER PROVINCES.

It has rarely, if ever, been our lot to record the proceedings of a meeting so highly honorable in every way to the humanity and public spirit of the inhabitants of Calcutta, as that which took place yesterday afternoon at the Town-hall, having for its object the consideration of the best means of alleviating the distress of the population of the western provinces. Notwithstanding the numerous calls which have been lately made upon the finances of the community, for worthy and honorable purposes, every body seemed to feel that the present was an occasion which left no excuse for parsimony, founded upon past liberality and indulgence. But we must briefly record the proceedings.

At about half past four the meeting began to assemble, and by five, upwards of one hundred and fifty persons, comprising the principal inhabitants of the town, and a great many natives, had collected.

The Lord Bishop being called to the chair at the instance of Sir Edward Ryan, seconded by Mr. W. W. Bird, His Lordship obeyed the call, and addressed the meeting at some length, expatiating upon the condition of the perishing thousands—stating what the Government had done towards the mitigation of suffering, and what it now behoved the public at large to do. His Lordship was glad to see so many natives assembled on the occasion, and in his own simple but impressive manner exhorted them not to be backward in the work of benevolence at a crisis so momentous to thousands of their countrymen. Mr. R. D. Mangles, to whom had been entrusted the first resolution, rose when the Bishop had concluded, and, after elicitingly adverting to the obligation imposed upon men of all creeds and kinds to perform the offices of charity to the poor and the hungry, read the following paper, which sufficiently explained what had been done by the Government of the north western provinces, and what was expected from the private bounty of the community at large:

NOTE.

By J. Thomason, Esq., officiating secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor, north western provinces, dated

The efforts of Government for the alleviation of the distress in the north western provinces have been directed:

First.—To a suspension of the demand for the Government jumma.

Secondly.—To the employment of the able-bodied destitute on works of public utility, such as the construction of roads, the excavation of tanks, &c. &c.

Thirdly.—To the preservation of the public peace, and more especially to the protection of the trade in grain.

First.—The regulation of the demand on behalf of the Government has been left chiefly to the Sudder Board of Revenue, in whose views on the subject, the Government coincide. They entirely suspended the first kist or instalment, and made the two next very light, throwing the weight of the collections on the latter kists. As, however, the year has advanced, the agricultural distress in the centre of the Doab and along the right bank of the Jumna has greatly increased, and of course all attempts to realize the heavier kists will be abandoned. In the districts where the settlement has not been revised, the suspended demand will be allowed to lie over till the revision of the settlement, and will then be recommended for remission or realized according as the circumstances of each village require. In the districts where the settlement has been revised, an attempt will be made to recover, during the latter years of the lease, the suspended demand of this year, in conformity with the principle on which the settlement was made. The realization of this expectation evidently, however, depends on circumstances which cannot now be foreseen. Tacaveer advances for seed grain have also been largely given, and this mode of relief may be here appropriately mentioned.

Secondly.—The employment of the able-bodied destitute, on works of public utility. This was at first restricted in amount, but as the distress increased, the magistrates have been empowered to grant employment to any amount with a view to the support of the people, and not with any expectation of a profitable return for the capital laid out. Inclination to work was in fact adopted as the test of degree of destitution. Gratuitous support of the infirm was not given, as this appeared a more appropriate object for the private charity of individuals, which was generally and liberally bestowed throughout the country.* It did not also appear practicable to lay down rules which should admit of this mode of relief by the Government, without liability to very great abuse. The officers employed in the construction of the grand trunk road, were also empowered to expend each Rs. 2,000 per mensem, in the employment of the destitute, and a supply of blankets to the most deserving was sanctioned. In the Cawnpore district, where the revenue and magisterial functions are performed by different persons, the deputy collector has been especially empowered to employ the destitute in the distressed pergunnahs of his district, as far as may be practicable, in the neighbourhood of their villages. It is anticipated that this may be advantageously performed through the agency of the tahsildary establishments, under the personal superintendence of the deputy collector.

Thirdly.—The preservation of the public peace, and more especially the protection of the trade in grain, extensive disorganization of the agricultural population, has been the natural result of the distress. It first arose in Rohilkund, but was checked there by a timely fall of rain. It then broke out in the Allypore and Farruckabad districts, and last of all in the Delhi division. In the last case it was quickly and entirely suppressed, but in the former, although its extreme violence lasted only for a short time, a frightful increase of crime has continued for a long period. Stores of grain, boats laden with grain, and Banjerry bullocks have been the main objects of attack; but in many cases, violent and desperate men have been able to work on the necessities of their fellow creatures, and engage them in more general schemes of depredation. The natural liability to disorders of this kind was heightened by the freedom of the trade in corn, proclaimed and enforced by the Government, and some unaccountable impression which obtained currency amongst the people, that crimes of the kind would be forgiven at. The distressed districts are mostly corn-growing countries, where large quantities of grain are usually stored in the several villages by capitalists, who buy up the surplus produce of plentiful years. An ignorant population were driven to exasperation, when they saw these stores opened before them, and the grain for the want of which they were starving, exported to a better market.

As soon as occurrences of this nature were foreseen or reported, full authority was given to the commissioners to strengthen the police sufficiently to provide for the public peace. The energetic measures which were consequently adopted, proved successful, and confidence was soon re-established.

Subsequently events have confirmed the soundness of this policy. As the season advanced, although the distress increased, and prospects became more gloomy, the grain merchants opened their stores as soon as they were assured of protection, and price fell rather than rose. It only remained by affording employment to the destitute to place within the reach of the food which was exposed for sale.

It is hoped that these measures may have some effect in lessening the injury which the country will suffer from this heavy affliction, and it is gratifying to hear from every quarter, that wealthy landed proprietors are emulating the example of the Government and not merely abstaining from any demand on their tenants, but even expending large sums for their support. It must, however, be some time before the country can recover. The cattle have perished in numbers; the people have emigrated, or been swept off by the diseases which want and exposure engender, and time will necessarily elapse before the cattle can be replaced or the villages re-peopled.

(Signed) J. THOMASON.

W. H. MCNAUGHTEN,

Secy. to the Govt. of India with the Govr. Gen.

Mr. Mangles mentioned that the revenue remitted by the Government amounted to not less than sixty lacs of rupees. He added that what was now required of society was not grain—for of that there was sufficiency—but money wherewith the local authorities might purchase food for those who were without it. Mr. Mangles finished by proposing the following resolution, which was seconded by Russomoy Dutt, who earnestly dwelt upon the importance of his countrymen's coming forward on the present occasion. "The Government," said the worthy Baboo, "has done its duty"—the Europeans would doubtless do their's—it was for the natives to shew that they were not backward, when so serious a call was made upon their bounty.

Resolved, that authentic information has been received of the existence of the extreme distress, in consequence of the draught in certain parts of the north western provinces, and that, under the orders of the late Lieut. Governor, measures for the relief of this distress have been taken by Government by the remission or suspension of the public demand for revenue, and by directions given to the civil authorities to afford employment without limit to all persons willing to work. But the Lieut. Governor did not deem it expedient to sanction the grant of eleemosynary aid from the public coffers to persons unable to work. That this meeting is of opinion that it is the office of private charity to step in to supply the void above alluded to, by affording, as far as possible, the means of support to the aged and the young, and to those too infirm to labor."

The resolution having been unanimously carried, Sir J. P. Grant addressed the meeting with his usual good sense, good taste and feeling. He recapitulated some part of what had already been laid before the meeting—added thereto some facts of which no mention had been made—urged expedition in the collection and transmission of subscriptions, and by way of encouraging all who had the means of contributing in ever so small a degree, not to be deterred by the smallness of their donations: he spoke of the acceptability of the "widow's mite," and mentioned two or three instances of large accumulation through trifling donations. Sir John then proposed the following resolution which was seconded by Rushtomjee Cowasjee :

"That with this object, a subscription be opened at both the banks, books be circulated and other measures taken to invite the contributions of the public, and especially of the native community for the relief of the dreadful distress known to exist in the north western provinces."

Baboo Prosonno Comar Tagore proposed the third resolution, prefacing it with the highly gratifying information that his friend Neilmony Day, on hearing of the prevailing distress had sent up to Government 500 rupees, to be applied to the purposes of relief, and the munificent Dwarkanauth Tagore (whose bounty is as boundless as the deep) had authorised the subscription of a similar sum, if any attempt should be made in Calcutta to assist the sufferers in the western provinces.

3d Resolution.—That the following gentlemen be requested to form themselves into a committee to realize the subscriptions, and to dispose of them to the best advantage for the contemplated object :

Mr. Thos. Holroyd, Mr. W. Bird, Capt. Birch, Mr. W. Martin, Mr. Tucker, the Archdeacon, Mr. W. Prinsep, Mr. George Alexander, Rev. Mr. Fisher, Rossomoy Dutt, Prosonno Comar Tagore, Ramcomul Sen, Radacaut Deb, Nilmony Deb, Rushtomjee Cowasjee, Muttyloll Seal, Mr. J. W. Alexander, Mr. Lindeman, Mr. E. Macnaghten, Dr. St. Leger, Rev. Mr. Charles, Mr. Alexander Colvin, and Mr. A. De Souza.

The business of the meeting having now nearly concluded, Sir Edward Ryan proposed, the thanks of the assembly to the respected chairman, our amiable Diocesan, whose promptitude to answer the calls of distress, Sir Edward very happily and justly eulogised. Mr. W. Bird seconded the proposal with much becoming warmth, and in the course of a well-delivered speech did the Press the honour to acknowledge its instrumentality in directing public attention to the subject which the meeting had assembled to discuss. Sir John Peter Grant then, with much good humour, deposed the Bishop, and usurping the office of Chairman, put the resolution of thanks to the vote. The resolution being carried by acclaim, the Lord Bishop remarked to the meeting, (which was then dispersing,) that he thought the business of the day could not be better finished, than by every person present putting his name down at once for as much as he felt disposed to subscribe. The hint was promptly taken, and in the course of a few minutes, nearly fifteen thousand rupees were subscribed on the spot: the Bishop and Mr. Maddock subscribing one thousand each; Mr. G. Cheap, Mr. Wm. Prinsep, Mr. James Prinsep and Mr. W. Carr (by Mr. W. Prinsep) 500 rupees each; Sir Edward Ryan, Col. Powney and Mr. T. Smith, 300 each; Mr. Shakespear 200, Mr. Mangles 250, Mr. W. Ainslie 200, Mr. Hutchinson 200, and numerous others 100 rupees and 50 rupees each, while many natives of humbler rank and limited means, gave their gold mohurs. We should mention that when Sir Edward Ryan was addressing the meeting, he put in the following paper, containing subscriptions raised by Rushtomjee Cowasjee, the perusal of which elicited loud applause :

When all present had signed the subscription paper, the meeting broke up, Mr. Mangles suggesting that it be an instruction to the committee to send up authority to the relief committees in the interior to draw monies for the purposes of buying grain to the extent that may at any time be subscribed. He seemed to think, and with good reason, that expedition in the present case is half the battle.

"We are too much pressed for time to go further at present into the question of what is required of the country in this great emergency; but we shall not fail to recur to the subject until every Englishman and every native has done his duty."

We conclude by announcing, for the guidance of such of the committee as were absent at the close of the proceedings, that the committee will meet this afternoon at the Town-hall at four o'clock.—Courier, Mar. 31

MEETING AT THE SAILOR'S HOME.

At about quarter past 9 o'clock the meeting at the Sailor's Home took place where the number present amounted to ten gentlemen, among whom we noticed Messrs. Colvin and Cragg, Captain Vint, Balston, Frazer, and the Reverend Mr. Boaz. It was moved by Captain Vint, and seconded by Mr. Colvin, that Captain Frazer be requested to take the chair. It is necessary to say that several others joined afterwards.

Captain Frazer opened the proceedings of the day, by observing that when he was last in Calcutta, about three years ago, when an establishment like the Sailor's Home was acknowledged by many of his nautical friends to be greatly needed, and it rejoiced him considerably to find on his recent arrival, that a Home had actually been established. This intelligence was the more acceptable under the peculiar circumstances which brought him to Calcutta. The men of that unfortunate ship the Royal William, lately commanded by him, had now a comfortable home to receive them, where they were perfectly happy, and from whence they might hope to obtain respectable employment. He would not trespass further upon the time of the meeting with any observations on the utility of such an establishment, to which he was happy in giving his personal testimony.

Mr. Colvin stated that to give stability to such an institution, and successfully and permanently to promote its interests and usefulness, required the mutual co-operation of the commanders, owners and agents of vessels. That an unanimous determination on the part of commanders would render the assistance of others of secondary importance, and he hoped to find them associated together for this exceedingly useful and beneficial purpose.

The Reverend Mr. Boaz conceived that before proceeding any further in the business for which the meeting had assembled, a brief relation of the causes which induced the establishment of the Home, would be of service to it, and profitably occupy the attention of the gentlemen present. Long before the successful establishment of the Home, his attention was directed to those sinks of corruption denominated Punch Houses; which, with the pernicious system of crimping, extensively prevailed in Calcutta, fostering the demoralizing effects of idleness, the natural bent of the human mind under temptation, and its uncontrolled indulgence in the use of ardent spirits. He determined to make the attempt of establishing a Sailor's Home, and was glad to say, that with the assistance of his fellow creatures and under Divine blessing, he had been enabled to carry his intention into effect. The success which had attended similar establishments in London, Liverpool, Leith, Boston and other sea-port towns, it was to be hoped would also crown their endeavours. In fact he had no doubt of the result, if the Home received the support of the mercantile and shipping community, whose well doing as well as that of the sailor depended upon its continued and respectable existence. Already he was happy to announce, one of the principal punch houses had been induced to close its doors, and he hoped that before the close of another year, all the minor sinks would cease to exist. From a statement which he held, drawn out from the police reports, it appeared that within the last six months, or from June to December, out of about 700 seamen, who had been living on shore, 386 were accommodated in punch houses, 303 at the Home, and the rest it might be supposed were in hospital, or straggling about the town. As a satisfactory evidence of the great utility of the establishment, and the benefits derivable from its operations, it was worthy of remark, the men who had resorted to the Home, were generally of good character and sober habits, and consequently when employed, invariably found capable of undertaking the performance of active duties, whereas men obtained through crimps, or from the purlieus of Loll Bazar and other places, had from long indulgence in liquor, and other debilitating vices, become so nervous, irritable, and shameless, that it was with difficulty they were made to keep to their engagement, while they proved unfit to do any manner of work, for some time after they had been on boardship.

Our time and space will not permit us to proceed as minutely into matters as we could desire; we shall therefore close this imperfect, but we nevertheless hope, acceptable report, with merely stating, that a general disposition to support the excellent institution seemed to prevail, and which practically carried into effect, cannot but permanently benefit the seamen of the port, and secure the interests of owners and commanders of vessels. We shall again revert to the subject on some future occasion.—Herk. Mar. 1.

FIRES AT BHOWANIPORE AND DESTRUCTION OF GRAIN GOLAHS.

About fortnight, or twenty days ago, a great fire occurred at Bhowanipore, which nearly destroyed the whole of the extensive Bazar at the place, consumed about 20,000 mannds of rice and grain and did not cease until a hundred and eighty thatched houses were swept away.

At the commencement of the present week another five destroyed about a hundred and fifty houses in the vicinity, grain and articles of consumption were also burnt. The Conservancy officers did their utmost, but a high wind and a burning sun rendered human endeavours almost useless, as the fire spread rapidly from one point to another.

We some time ago called the attention of the authorities to the necessity of protecting the grain golahs. The extensive, or perhaps large as yet exist at Balleghat and Tallygherry. If the two last mentioned depôts are burnt, the laboring classes may be reduced to the distress that now exists in the north western provinces. Government should either protect the golahs, or purchase the grain and deposit it in some secure place.—Herk. Mar. 1.

THE FIFTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SOCIETY CONNECTED WITH THE PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

The above meeting was held on Thursday evening, the 1st instant, and consisted of about fifty gentlemen, chiefly subscribers to the institution and parents and guardians of the pupils.

On the motion of Mr. M. Crow, seconded by Mr. C. F. Byrn, the Rev. Mr. Boaz was called to the chair; and with a few usual prelatory remarks, called on the secretary to read the report. This document commenced by lamenting the loss which the institution had sustained during the year in the death of Mr. Lomner, the head teacher of the school. It then went on to detail the arrangements that had, in consequence, been necessarily adopted; one of which was, that several of the pupils of this school, who had been for years engaged in the work of education, had been promoted. This practice was followed by other public schools in Calcutta, and it was a cause of great satisfaction to the committee to think that the institution was enabled, to a very great extent, to look to itself for instruments for carrying on the work of education. The quarterly examinations had been held at the stated periods, and the annual examination took place on the 15th of December last. The report then enumerated the various branches of education in which the pupils had been examined, which was followed by extracts from the new-papers giving an account of the examination. The improvement in the tone of education pursued at this and other similar institutions was adverted to and mention made that this was the oldest institution of its kind, and had a large share in producing that improvement. A list of the prizes awarded at the last examination, with the names of the successful candidates next followed. On the 28th ultimo, the number of pupils in the school amounted to 213. The resignation of Dr. Halliday, of the medical charge of the school, in consequence of his departure from Calcutta, and the appointment of Dr. F. Corbyn in his room, were noticed, and the reports of these gentlemen regarding the health of the pupils, which went to establish that the children had been remarkably healthy, in consequence of the great care and vigilance exercised over the culinary, the clothing, and other departments connected with their comforts. The pecuniary difficulties of the institution were the next point noticed; but a sub-committee had been formed to remedy the evil, and its arrangements had effected great savings, so that it was hoped this measure, added to the realization of the outstanding balances, would, in some degree, relieve the institution. The departure of Sir C. T. Metcalfe, and his parting liberal donation of a Rs. 1,000 to the institution, as well as another thousand from D. O. D. Sombre, Esq., formed the last topic of comment in the report, and it concluded with expressions of gratitude to all the supporters of the institution.

Mr. Kirkpatrick.—This institution is one of the first of the kind, and had, at its commencement, struggled with great difficulties; but it has successfully overcome them, which must be a source of satisfaction to all connected with it. The report had made allusion to the progress of the other seminaries, every one of which was, like horses in a race, endeavouring to gain the vantage ground in obtaining favour. Under such circumstances, and with a disinterested public, industry alone could command success. They would paralyze the best candidate for their favor, leaving alone those that were going backward. By this an estimate could be formed of this institution. It has been progressing onward, which in itself is an evidence in its favor. The meeting were not now called upon to record an opinion formed on the spot by the perusal of the report, but an opinion formed long before from other circumstances. Mr. Kirkpatrick alluded to the death of Mr. Lomner, and to his zeal and undivided energy in behalf of the school. Considering the small recompense he got, how he wrote out his constitution in performing the duties of this seminary, he might be justly said to have fallen a victim to the cause of education. The annual exhibition was not, he thought, sufficient to enable the public to form a proper estimate of the qualifications of the pupils; he would suggest a plan followed in academies in England, which was to select one or two of the higher classes for examination, and propose to them a series of questions which had been registered, and record the answers which might be elicited in the course of examination. This would not only enable those who were present to form an opinion but the published report embodying these answers would enable those at a distance to judge of the school.

He then moved, that the report now read be approved and published for general information. Seconded by Mr. S. Chill, carried unanimously.

The chairman, in putting the question, remarked that Mr. Kirkpatrick had compared the schools to race horses; but he thought that a school to do well, required, like a horse, to be fed well. The meeting, therefore, could not properly approve of the report without doing something towards wiping off the debts of the school. He had been lately at a meeting of the Sailor's Home, where, under similar circumstances, every one present had subscribed, which example he expected would be followed here. The Wesleyan Societies in America, always kept themselves a little in debt in order to stimulate public charity; but he for one did not approve of debts, and would like to see the whole wiped off, and if the others subscribed he would add his mite at the end.

A subscription paper was here handed round, and we observed several put down their names; but we have not been able to ascertain the amount subscribed.

Mr. C. Pote expected nothing but unanimity on the resolution he was about to put. It was not necessary to talk on a subject which had been completely exhausted by having been spoken of in every possible term of eulogium. The name of Sir Charles Metcalfe (Cheers) recommends him to all India, nay to all the intellectual world, which has regarded his career, and borne testimony to his usefulness. Mr. Pote would, therefore, simply read the resolution, and expect the unanimous concurrence of the meeting. He would, however, submit one observation which had that moment occurred to him. The long experience of Sir Charles Metcalfe in India, and his mature judgment were well known to all. Now this great, good, and experienced man had marked out the Parental Institution for his especial patronage, which circumstance was an evidence in its favor, and the example of so great and good a man ought to be followed by all who have the good of India at heart. Indeed such an example could not fail to produce its due effect; the Chairman had already pointed out the means and it was for the meeting and the public to follow it up.

Alluding to the paucity of examiners at the annual examination, he regretted the circumstance; but singled out Dr. Corbyn as an individual who, notwithstanding his arduous professional avocations, had always been at his post for the ten or twelve years past, and performed this public duty. The institution he therefore thought, owed a great obligation to Dr. Corbyn. The following resolution was then moved by Mr. Pole, and seconded by Mr. H. Andrews, and carried unanimously, with enthusiastic cheers, every one present standing up.

That concurring fully in the observations embodied in their report, this meeting desires respectfully to record its grateful sense of the liberal and encouraging disposition so uniformly evinced by Sir C. T. Metcalfe towards the institution.

The chairman related an anecdote of Dr. Dodridge. The Doctor had been to see a good girl on the bed of sickness, and observed to her as a consolation that every body loved her: she, in the simplicity of her heart, replied, because she loved every body. The same might be said of Sir Charles; every body loved him because he loved every body.

Dr. Corbyn, had some experience in the progress of education on this side of India; and looked upon some of the leading public seminaries as doing the greatest good: but this institution he regarded as the principal among them. Here education was given in all its most useful branches, and civil and religious liberty formed the great foundation of the structure. The education was solid: the pupils learnt not by rote, but their understanding was cultivated. Their compositions had astonished many Englishmen. A gentleman who had closely examined the classes at the last annual exhibition, had lately met him and expressed his astonishment at the answers which the boys had given to his questions in Latin. This was Mr. Picaus, a man fully capable of judging on such a subject. This was the reason that Sir Charles Metcalfe patronized this seminary; he had told Dr. Corbyn, that he considered this institution of great service to the public, not only as a source from which well qualified public servants could be obtained, but also as a means of encouraging morality in society, by making useful men of so many who without education would have proved an evil to the community. These were the causes of the general patronage and good-will which this institution enjoyed. He moved the following resolution:

That this meeting begs to offer its best acknowledgments to his friends and supporters of the institution for the continuance of their aid in promoting its interests.

The Rev. Mr. Campbell, in seconding the resolution, observed, that this institution had laid the public under great obligation, by giving the first impulse to scholastic education in India. The first discoverer was always entitled to greater praise than those who followed up his footsteps. He had heard of objections to the variety and extent of studies pursued in this school; but considering the comparatively short time which children were kept in school in this country, he thought it was necessary to give them information on a variety of subjects. Schools and universities only laid a foundation, the finish could be given by individual exertions afterwards. He adverted to the arrears not paid up by parents and guardians, and said they ought to be ashamed of it. This institution he said was based on liberty and Christianity, and served as a nucleus for the diffusion of knowledge to the most parts distant provinces of India to which young men brought up here would resort. He thought it a duty of those who had been educated at this seminary to support it with their purse. The resolution was carried unanimously.

On the motion of Mr. P. S. De Rozario, seconded by Mr. C. Kerr, it was resolved unanimously, that Mr. W. Byrn and other gentlemen forming the committee of management, be re-elected for the ensuing year, and that Mr. Byrn be requested to continue in the office of secretary to the institution.

The secretary then announced that Messrs. D'Costa and Sturmer had resigned their seats in the committee, and Mr. H. B. Gardner said, that he had been authorized by Mr. James Wood to say, that he also begged to withdraw, in order to make room for others who might give to the committee a fresh impulse. He said Europeans as well as East Indians were supporters of the institution; but the committee consisted exclusively of the latter, he would, therefore, propose that the Rev. Mr. Boaz, now in the chair, should be added to the list of its members.

Mr. M. Crow, adverting to Mr. Gardner's remark on the resignation of Mr. Wood, observed, that as one of the management, it was not his intention to address the chair, but an opportunity having presented itself he would take advantage of it. An observation similar to that of Mr. Gardner had been made at the last annual meeting, on which occasion it was stated, that new blood ought to be infused into the exhausted veins of the committee, in order to give fresh impulse to its motions. In consequence of this observation, some new members had been added to the committee, and that, he (Mr. Crow) was selected as one of the number. The report he said, adverted to certain improvements made in the course of the year in the important department of finance, by a sub-committee of the management. He begged to state distinctly, that none of the new members were in this sub-committee, and that, therefore, in the credit due to its measures of economy, the new members had no further share than that of approving of those measures. Mr. Crow concluded by proposing, that Messrs. P. S. De Rozario and J. Graham be added to the committee.

Mr. Kirkpatrick observed, that Mr. Graham was at that time absent from Calcutta and could not, therefore, enter upon his labours as a member of the committee; he therefore proposed that Mr. Wood continue to occupy his seat until Mr. Graham's arrival.

Mr. Pote commented at some length upon the infusion of new blood into the exhausted veins of the committee, and, we believe, proved that it was good or better than that of any new member who could be chosen.

The Rev. Mr. Boaz and Mr. P. S. De Rozario were then duly elected.

Mr. Kirkpatrick, supported by Mr. Gardner, requested that a statement of the funds be laid on the table.

Mr. Crow observed, that there could be no objection to the measure itself; but that it was informal and out of order, inasmuch as it was contrary to a standing law of the society, the purport of which was, that none but subscribers to the institution were eligible to take a share in the financial management, and that the present meeting, being composed of many who were not subscribers, it was not competent to vote on the question.

After a good deal of desultory conversation on this subject, the proposition was withdrawn, and an abstract of the accounts having been placed on the table, and Messrs. Kirkpatrick and Gordon expressing themselves satisfied, the proposition was withdrawn on the ground pointed out by Mr. Crow.

The thanks of the meeting were then voted to the chairman, and its members retired. — Hurk. March 3.

DWARKANATH TAGORE.

As some misrepresentation appears to have gone abroad in respect to the nature of Dwarkanath Tagore's munificent bequest to the District Charitable Society, we have sought and obtained information upon the subject, and now beg to lay it before our readers, in the shape of a copy of the letter of the trustees to the society:

The Hon. SIR EDWARD RYAN, Kt., &c. &c. &c.
President of the District Charitable Society.

Honorable Sir,—Our friend Dwarkanath Tagore prior to his leaving Calcutta, requested that we would undertake for him the necessary arrangements connected with the disposal of one lac of rupees, which sum it is his desire to appropriate to the accomplishment of some charitable object in this city. Dwarkanath desired that the disbursement of the amount so to be appropriated, might be in some measure connected with the operations and objects of that excellent institution, the District Charitable Society, and for that purpose he requested us to place ourselves in communication with the president. In now soliciting your permission to do so, we have the satisfaction of knowing, that we could not apply for advice or aid to enable us to carry the present bequest into effect to any one so well qualified to afford both in the most valuable degree or more capable of entering into the charitable views and benevolent intentions of our friend. It is the desire of Dwarkanath Tagore that, to whatever branch of charity the fund may ultimately be appropriated, it should be called Dwarkanath Tagore's Fund. The interest on the one lac of rupees before mentioned will be devoted to the maintenance of this fund, the principal to be invested in good mortgages in the name of certain trustees; the detailed wishes of the donor on these points are in our possession.

In conversation with ourselves, Dwarkanath Tagore appeared to be under an impression, that one class of indigent persons in this city, viz. the poor blind, were peculiarly objects for charitable consideration, next indeed to the lepers; and there seemed a feeling on his mind that the amount already adverted to might with the greatest benefit to humanity be principally, if not solely, devoted to the relief of the class in question. On this point, however, nothing need now be determined, but as it would doubtless be desirable to consult the wishes of Dwarkanath Tagore in the appropriation of his gift, and he may continue to entertain in the sentiment he expressed to us, touching regular alms or a kind of Asylum for the destitute blind, we shall feel greatly obliged, if you would give directions, for our being furnished with any information which the records of the District Charitable Society can afford, respecting the state of the poorest class of blind persons in Calcutta. The means the poorest class have of obtaining assistance in the progress of diseases of the eyes; and the numbers and condition of such as, deriving no benefit from the aid afforded, are ultimately deprived of the blessing of sight. We need scarcely add that we shall at all times be happy to do ourselves the honor of waiting upon you personally respecting any matter connected with the donation, the nature and extent of which, we request you will do us the favor to announce to the District Charitable Society.

We have the honor to remain, Hon. Sir,

Your obedient humble servants,

(Signed) H. M. PARKER.

W. PRINSEP.

PROSUNNOCOMAR TAGORE.

Calcutta, Feb. 20, 1838.

We are informed that upon the receipt of the above, the District Charitable Society resolved to endeavour to obtain accurate knowledge regarding the condition of the blind poor in Calcutta, and in the mean time nominated a sub-committee to confer with the central committee, as to the best mode of appropriating the money. —Englishman, March 4.

COURT MARTIAL ON CORNET ROCHE.

The court-martial on Cornet Roche, which has lately been published to the army, calls, in our opinion, for some commentary, with the view of placing that young officer's case on a footing even more creditable to him than what his essentially full acquittal makes it appear, although backed by the opinion of the Commander-in-Chief, which leaves no slur attachable to the Cornet's character. We are well acquainted with the facts of the case, as given in evidence, and nothing can show more strongly how impossible it is for even the most mild and the best conducted officer (in all social relations) to pass through his professional life without being subjected to trial by court-martial. Here is an instance of a young man of quiet, gentlemanly, and extremely inoffensive manners, dragged before a tribunal of military justice, at the very outset of his career, because he was subjected to the outrageous abuse of an ill-mannered mate of a ship, and, after much forbearance, repeated it by knocking the offender down, as the charge alleges, but by only, as the fact was, pushing him off from him indignantly with his open hand. There was not only not the slightest aggression on Mr. Roche's part towards his vulgar abuser, but there was not even such instant chastisement as the usual infirmity of human temper would have excused, for the insult; and yet Mr. Roche has been made the object of what it is not too weighty a description of term, persecution for several months, on shipboard and shore together. He was a passenger on the Thomas Grenville, coming out with several officers, including one of the lieutenant colonels of his regiment, to join; and it appears from official documents which we have seen, that he was kept in close arrest, and not allowed to come upon deck when any other of the passengers were there, nor before nightfall, nor after eight in the morning, and all this for no reason, other than that he had resented a rude man's insolence, to the extent we have described—having never given the slightest provocation to call the insolence forth! Mr. Roche had only just entered the service before he sailed from England, so that he was totally without experience, and therefore, when the vessel touched at the Cape, he did not know how to seek the protection of the Governor or Commander-in-Chief there, and it seems, Sir Benjamin D'Urban (we must suppose either misinformed, or strangely misunderstanding the true statement), enforced the close arrest—nearly as close as a felon's could be —so that it absolutely required the Doctor's sanction for the prisoner's taking the air on deck. It is very surprising to us how the court-martial could have sentenced Cornet Roche to even a reprimand upon the evidence which we know was before it; for to say nothing of the extenuation, for even undue warmth (had any been displayed) to be found in youth and inexperience, there was the strong evidence not only of the respectable passengers, male and female, and of the captain of the ship, but of some of the witnesses for the prosecution, that the demeanour of the accused had been uniformly mild and condescending to every one, and that he was the last person on board whom any of them would believe disposed to give offence to a human being. There was also proof that such were the character and disposition he had been rated for, before he entered the army at all, and among those who had good opportunities of appreciating both; for, in a newspaper which happened to be on the files of the Cameronian's mess, or library, (the Cork Constitution of July, 1837,) was a testimony of that nature which it gives us much pleasure to lay before our readers.

'At a meeting of the firmers, tradespeople, &c., of the parishes of Corkbeg and Trabolgan, on the 27th instant.

The following address was unanimously resolved on:

JOHN CALLAGHAN, Chairman.

TO EDMOND ROCHE, ESQ., THIRD LIGHT DRAGOONS.

SIR.—The firmers, tradespeople, &c., of the parishes of Corkbeg and Trabolgan, have heard of your intended departure from amongst them, with the most acute feelings of regret. Your accustomed urbanity of temper, and your uniform charitable position to all—have endeared your memory indelibly in their hearts.

We sincerely wish you every success, and trust that Divine Providence will prolong your existence, and that they will have again the pleasure of beholding an individual whom they shall ever respect and love.

ANSWER.

'It is with the greatest pleasure I have read your address. I regret exceedingly that my income did not permit me to be more liberal to the poor of your neighbourhood. I trust that Divine Providence will bestow on you the blessings of plenty, and that, when I again visit my native soil, I shall see you all happy and contented.'

July 28.

In addition to all that, we have the avowed opinion of the court that the accused only struck (the verdict, very rightly, does not find the knocking down) the male 'after great and continued provocation'; and yet he is sentenced to be severely reprimanded,—this young and naturally peaceful man,—because his spirit could not brook the wanton and protracted abuse heaped on both his countrymen and himself. We do think it was very thoughtless in the court to brand a young officer, under these circumstances, with such a penalty on the very threshold of his professional life; and we rejoice to find inferential evidence to the fact that the Commander-in-Chief did really deem the sentence unnecessarily harsh, though he does not seem to have thought disapproval to be politic—perhaps with reference to the regimental situation of the virtual prosecutor. His Excellency confines his formal reprimand to the mere acquiescence in the court's desire to that effect, but remarks, that 'the interference of the 3d. mate of the Thomas Grenville with Cornet Roche, and the gross and vulgar language used by him, both with reference to the Irish generally, and to the Cornet personally, go far in extenuation of the Cornet's misconduct.' Much approving of the tenor of that observation, we think we can fairly object to the use of the phrase 'misconduct,' with which it terminates. His Excellency, we know, not infrequently employs words in their originally strict sense, which have come, in ordinary parlance, to convey stronger sentiments than, perhaps, they always did (there are many instances of such terms, in our language) and the word misconduct is, in military cases especially, understood to convey the impression of some very heinous course of action, and to such only is it ordinarily applied. In the case before us, we believe neither civil nor military society will pronounce it to be atrocious in any one to act as Cornet Roche acted; and we are quite certain, that neither the purely military, nor the gentlemanly, feelings of Sir Henry Fane are dissatisfied with his conduct, because, if such had been the sentiment, the reprimand would have been properly couched in terms of infinguation. We have scarcely any personal acquaintance with Cornet Roche, nor with any one who knows him; and we are actuated in these remarks solely by a desire to set a young officer quite right with the Indian community, at his first starting as one of their social members.—Englishman, March 4.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 3d. March 1838.

L. T. Watson, Esq., Assistant Surgeon, by H. Chapman, Esq., seconded by Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy.

—Maxwell, Esq., of the Madras Service, by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Dr. Gooden.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read:

1st. From the secretary of the Asiatic Society, returning thanks for the 4th and 6th numbers of the Society's journal.

2d. From Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., the Society's Agents at Madras, forwarding their account current and stating that they had a balance in their hands in the society's favour of 674 rupees.

3d. From D. Macnab, Esq., forwarding a communication upon dysentery and other algine fluxes produced by bad rice.

The following works were presented to the library:

1st. Report of Mr. Bruce upon the culture of tea in Assam by the tea committee, through their secretary M. W. Wallch

2d. Report of the coal committee by their secretary Dr. MacClelland.

2d. Journal de Medicine de Société Royale de Medicine de Bordeaux, for May 1837.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy took the opportunity of informing the Society, that, after many attempts he had succeeded in finding iodine in the confeval of the salt-water lake. We had previously examined a great number of the plants of that and other salt-water morasses, and found them all destitute of this substance. The confeval is however, richer in iodine than any of the algae fuci, he had ever examined or read of. It contained about a grain of iodine to the seer (2lbs.) of the moist weed. The confeval could now be obtained to the amount of hundreds of tons on the surface of the salt-water lake. The process of preparation is very ample. The confeval is gathered and dried before the sun, then burned, and from the ashes soda and iodine are obtainable in such quantities, that the soda will pay the expense of the manufacture, and give the iodine for nothing.

Mr. MacNab's paper on congestive fever was then read and discussed.

PROSPECTUS OF A SOCIETY TO BE CALLED THE "LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY."

- 1st. The objects of this society are to promote the general interest of landholders.
- 2d. To promote cordial and friendly communication between all classes interested in land, without distinction of colour, caste, birth-place, or religion.
- 3d. To diffuse information on all subjects connected with the interest of the soil.
- 4th. To compose and settle differences and disputes amongst landholders.
- 5th. To endeavour to obtain a legal limitation to the claims of the state for the better securing of titles.
- 6th. To make respectful representations to Government when any regulation shall be promulgated injurious to the general interest of all connected with the soil.
- 7th. In the same manner to ask for such new enactments as may be deemed important to the interests of the landholders and others connected with the soil.
- 8th. To ask for the repeal of all existing laws that may be prejudicial to the same classes.
- 9th. To extend the assistance of the society to individuals when we think a general principle is involved, in order that such cases may be appealed to superior authorities.
- 10th. To defend ourselves by legal means against the resumption measure, now in progress, and any further attacks of the same nature, or any encroachment upon the principles of the permanent settlement.
- 11th. To contend for the fulfilment of the pledge, by proclamation, to extend the permanent settlement to the north west provinces.
- 12th. To assist landholders living at a distance in their business with the courts and public offices of the presidency, and generally to furnish them with advice on all matters properly connected with the objects of the society.
- 13th. To carry into effect the above objects, it is proposed that the following officers be chosen.
- 14th. A committee of twelve persons to be elected by ballot; four to go out by rotation at the expiration of each year, and their places to be filled by ballot. The same persons may be re-elected.
- 15th. The committee to be empowered to add to their number, if expedient, subject to confirmation by the next general meeting.
- 16th. The committee shall choose out of their number a president, vice president, and treasurer.
- 17th. The president, or in his absence the vice president, to have the casting vote in all divisions where the numbers shall be equal.
- 18th. All divisions to be settled by ballot.
- 19th. The secretary and assistant secretary to be nominated by the committee, and appointed by a majority of the members.
- 20th. The secretary to find his own establishment, subject to the approval of the committee, who will pass his account monthly.
- 21st. The public regulations, and such other books or papers as may be necessary, to be kept at the office of the society.
- 22d. A meeting of the committee to take place the first Monday in every month; and whenever called especially by any two of the committee or any five members of the society.
- 23d. Any five of the members of the committee when present at a meeting will form a quorum to conduct the business of the society.
- 24th. A general meeting of the members to be held quarterly on a day appointed by the committee.
- 25th. The election and expulsion of members, and all questions whatever relating to the concerns of the society, may be directed by a majority.
- 26th. When a member may wish to retire, he is to give one month's previous notice.
- 27th. In case of death any one of the heirs and representatives of a deceased member shall, with the consent of the co-heirs, have a hereditary right to be elected as a member and be exempt from any fresh entrance fee.
- 28th. Every person desirous of becoming a member of the society must apply to the committee through their secretary.
- 29th. The only qualification necessary to be eligible for election as a member, is a desire on the part of the candidate to promote the general objects of the society.
- 30th. A member may vote by written proxy on general questions.
- 31st. Absentees of absent members may attend meetings by permission of the committee.
- 32d. Each member to pay an entrance fee of five rupees, and an annual subscription, in advance, of twenty rupees.
- 33d. The committee is authorized to receive donations to any amount from any member or other person willing to promote the objects of the society.
- 34th. The committee are to be earnestly recommended to endeavour to establish branch societies in every district of the British India Empire, with the view of establishing regular communications on all subjects connected with the object of the society.
- 35th. No person to vote unless his subscription be paid up.
- 36th. The funds to be kept in a bank, as may be ordered by the committee from time to time, or otherwise invested at their discretion.
- 37th. Current expenses to be drawn for by the secretary, countersigned by two of the members.
- 38th. Extraordinary expenses only by order of this committee entered in their proceedings.
- 39th. Secretary to keep proceedings at each monthly meetings, in English and Bengally, duly signed by the chairman of the committee, and to keep an index of all communications with Government or public officers which may decide general principles for easy reference of members.
- 40th. Members of the society and others having disputes may refer them to one or more member of the committee, who will arbitrate on matters connected with the objects of the society.

RAJAH RADHAKANT BANADOO, Chairman.

METCALFE TESTIMONIAL MEETING.

TOWN HALL, 19TH FEBRUARY, 1838.

At a public meeting of the subscribers and intending subscribers to the Metcalfe Testimonial.

JAMES PATTLE, Esq. in the chair.

Proposed by H. T. Prinsep, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Grant.

Resolved.—That this meeting enters cordially into the feelings expressed by the meeting of the British inhabitants at Agra, in their resolution expressing their desire to erect a statue in honor of Sir C. T. Metcalfe, and to present him with a service of plate, and doubts not, that the community of British India will co-operate effectually in the promotion of these objects.

Proposed by Mr. Longueville Clarke and seconded by Dr. J. R. Martin.

Resolved.—That by combining together the different public subscriptions, (which are now raising,) to offer testimonials to Sir C. T. Metcalfe, it would enable the whole Indian community to express in a more distinguished manner their appreciation of the merits, and esteem for the character of that eminent man.

Proposed by Mr. H. T. Prinsep, and seconded by Mr. William Patrick.

Resolved.—That a committee consisting of the following gentlemen: the Hon. the Chief Justice, General McGregor, Mr. H. M. Parker, Mr. C. R. Prinsep, Dr. John Grant, Captain T. J. Taylor, Mr. Longueville Clarke, Mr. R. J. Bagshaw, be formed, to collect the subscriptions of the residents in Calcutta, and put themselves to communication with the committees formed or to be formed at the other presidencies and stations, in order to receive the sums that may be forwarded; and that it be an instruction to the committee to call another meeting on some convenient day, after not less than two months, and to report the amount available for the purposes in view, with their recommendation as to its disposal, in order that a final resolution may then be come to in respect to the appropriation of the funds.

The committee have the gratification of announcing that a public meeting was held at Agra on the 20th of February, the day after the meeting at the Town-hall, when the following resolution was passed:

Copy of resolution passed at a meeting held at Agra on Tuesday, the 20th February 1838:

“R. D. Duncan, Esq., in the chair. It was resolved that, with reference to a second public meeting at Calcutta, on the subject of a testimonial to Sir Charles Metcalfe, held on the 6th instant, when in amendment of the decision of a previous meeting limiting the measure to the inhabitants of Calcutta, resolution was passed to the effect that measures should be taken to render it general for all India. This meeting views such resolution with pleasure; corresponding to the disappointment to the supporters of a general measure which the result of the former Calcutta meeting was calculated to produce. That this manly combination and unity of effort throughout India on the part of all interested in the measure, was the object mainly aimed at in the resolution of the public meeting held at Agra, on the 30th November last, and the same that has invariably guided the Agra committee in their subsequent proceedings, more especially in their addresses to influential parties at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, which conveyed copies of the above resolution: though from circumstances too late probably to be brought forward or attended to at the above Calcutta meetings. That this virtual adoption by the Calcutta community of the same principle of general combination and union, sanctions the anticipation that, throughout India, a sum may be raised (probably seventy or eighty thousand rupees) equal to both objects suggested in the above Agra resolution, and that this meeting therefore, with the greater confidence, still earnestly recommends both the erection of a statue and the presentation of a service of plate. That, however, should the voice of the subscribers in other parts of India be in favour of any other testimonial of a character of more direct utility than a statue, the Agra subscribers will readily defer to their views, and be prepared to forward accordingly the amounts of their subscriptions—at present about Rs. 13,000 to the committee at Calcutta, with whom, from their metropolitan locality and influence, it is understood, must rest the duty of carrying such measure as may be adopted into final effect. Also, that this resolution, with a copy of that passed on the 30th November last, be forwarded to the chairman of the Calcutta committee, with the request that they be submitted for their consideration.”

Resolution of the 30th November referred to above.

That this meeting is of opinion, that in acknowledgment of the distinguished services rendered by the Hon. Sir C. T. Metcalfe, Baronet, to the whole of British India, as well as of his administration of the affairs of those provinces, both a statue should be erected in his honor and a service of plate presented to him; but that the erection of a statue is the primary object to be accomplished. As the adoption of one or both of these measures must depend upon the co-operation of the inhabitants of other parts of India, as well as upon considerations which it is impossible now to foresee, the final appropriation of the sums raised at this station must be placed at the disposal of a local committee. It should be made a direction to the committee to aim primarily at accomplishing both of the above objects, or otherwise to carry into effect the wishes of this meeting to the best of their ability, and for this purpose to place themselves in communication with other bodies of individuals, who may elsewhere interest themselves in the same cause.

The following is a copy of a letter circulated by the directions of the Calcutta committee throughout the presidencies of Madras and Bombay, and the different stations of India, and the committee now publish it in this form, that it may become more generally known, and in the hope that it will be acted on even in stations, where it may not have been received.

Calcutta, 27th February, 1838.

SIR,—The committee appointed at the public meeting at Calcutta of the subscribers and intending subscribers to the Metcalfe Testimonial, have directed me to forward to you the following copy of the resolutions passed at the Town-hall on the 9th instant, and also a list of the subscriptions. Anxious to give effect to the first resolution, the committee desire me to solicit the favor of your assistance, and hope that this appeal to the community of all India will be circulated by you through your district or station. The committee likewise begs, that should any subscriptions be obtained, you would favor them by returning this list to me, and likewise assist them in the remission of the funds in any way most convenient to yourself.

I have the honor to remain,

EXAMINATION OF THE HINDOO FREE SCHOOL.

TOWN HALL, SATURDAY, THE 24TH MARCH, 1838.

DAVID HARE, ESQ. IN THE CHAIR.

This institution was established in December 1834 by Gobind Chunder Bysack, of Bhanstullah, Burrah Bazar, but is now conducted by Chunder Mohun Bysack. It educates about 130 boys in the rudiments of English Grammar, History, Arithmetic and other useful qualifications. The pupils are divided into six classes.

At this as at the two last meetings not a native of wealth or influence appeared; this apathy is particular, and those zealous in the cause of promoting the enlightenment of the natives of India, should stir their native friends to take some interest in these institutions. The ex-students of the College may be very well qualified to instruct their countrymen, but their efforts unaided must prove unavailing.

Besides Messrs. D. Hare and R. Dias and Rajah Kallee Kissen we knew nobody else. The examination was conducted by the three gentlemen above named.

The sixth class spelt out of No. 1 of The Spelling Book, but were very backward indeed.

The 5th class read out of No. 2 of the above book, as badly as the former class.

The 4th class read of No.—Reader, No. 2 Spelling Book went through exercises in English Grammar and Arithmetic.

The 3d class read very correctly out of No. 2 of The Reader, and acquitted themselves in Grammar, Geography and Arithmetic to the satisfaction of all present.

The 2d class read from No. 3 of the Reader, Chifts' Geography, and answered Grammatical and Geographical questions with aptness and facility.

The 1st class read remarkably well out of No. 1 of The Postical Reader, answered Geographical and Arithmetical questions, gave historical references with quickness, and acquitted themselves very creditably.

The prizes were distributed by the chairman, and the pupils seemed proud of every mark of distinction conferred on them by our philanthropist.

After the examination the following recitations were delivered with correct emphasis and enunciation by the boys named below.

Fortune.....	Bejoy Chunder Bose.
Night.....	Omes Chunder Bose.
Virtue.....	Omes Chunder Bose.
The Cigar.....	Khutter Mohen Bysack.

Mr. Hare addressed the meeting, stating that his friend the Rajah was indisposed, but desired Mr. Hare to say, he was pleased with what he had witnessed. Mr. Hare then said he had attended three of the examinations by the pupils of the institution, and he was glad to say that during that period several of the elder boys had qualified themselves and are in employment. He hoped that at the next examination he would be able to say as much. "Education," said Mr. Hare, "is making great progress among the natives," and he hoped its ardent benefits will be felt by the influential gentlemen, and urge them to render some assistance to the efforts that have been made to improve the intellectual condition of the Bengalees.

A native gentleman then returned thanks on behalf of the proprietors of the institution, and trusted they would continue to merit the support that had been bestowed on them.—Hurk. March, 26.

The visitors dispersed at 1-30 p.m.

EXAMINATION—HINDOO BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

BISHOP'S PALACE, TUESDAY, MARCH 13, 1838.

The Right Rev. Daniel Wilson, M. D., in the chair.

The annual examination of the pupils of this institution commenced about 30 after 11 a.m. this day. Among the visitors, we recognized, the Venerable the Arch Deacon, Captain Marshall, Doctor Webb, the Reverend Mr. Fisher, Messrs. David Hare, A. F. Smith and several other gentlemen. We cannot help expressing great surprise at the absence of the natives of influence, save Rajahs Kallee Khriehen and Radahcant Deb.

The examination was conducted by the Venerable the Arch Deacon, Messrs. D. Hare, R. Dias, Rev. Mr. Fisher, Rajah Kallee Khriehen, and some of the ex-students of the Hindoo College.

This institution was established in 1831, by Baboo Shurdabershad Bhose, at present, the head teacher of the Company's School at Rajeshye. That Baboo at first supported the institution. The expenses are, however, now paid by subscriptions from both the Christian and native communities. It is now conducted by Rajah Kissen Hurry Bhose. It contains about 325 pupils who are instructed in the Classics, History, Mathematics, Geography, English Grammar and the Bengallee language.

The 4th class went through No. 3 of the English Reader, Murray's Abridgement of Grammar, Geography, Arithmetic and short translations from English into Bengallee.

The 3d class read from No. 4 of the English Reader, No. 1 of the Poetical, Murray's Grammar, Arithmetic, translation, parsing and the History of India.

The 2d class read parts of No. 5 of the English Reader, portions of Gay's Fables, the History of Greece, English Grammar, Geography, Mechanics, and Geometry.

The 1st class read Book 31 of Homer's Illiad, Enfield's Speaker, answered questions in Roman History, went through English Grammar and the exercises.

This class evinced great efficiency in Geometry, Algebra, Arithmetic, Mechanic's Astronomy and Geography.

After the examination, the following recitations were delivered exceedingly well by the youths named :

Soldier's Dream.....Ummer Chander Bunnerjee
Mark Antony's Soliloquy over the body of Cæsar,— Dwarkanauth Sein.

Merchant of Venice Act 5, Scene 1st.

Lorenzo.....Benemadub Ghose.
Jessica.....Dwarkanauth Sein, Stephano.....Ranchunder Doss.
Launcelot.....Umeschunder Bannerjee.

Act 3, Scene 1st.

Shylock.....Parankhishna Mookerjee.
Tubal.....Nobinchunder Deb.

A calm after a shower....Umeschunder Bannerjee.

After the english recitations, a scene from Rajah Vickett of Gour, in Bengallee, was gone through by a few lads, much to the entertainment of the English gentlemen present, and we may add that the novelty of the thing took better then any thing else, though we thought it occupied too much time.

Some excellent specimens of penmanship were laid on the table, and did credit to the boys. Their handwriting appeared very bold, and we did not find erasures in any of the books exhibited. About 150 prizes were distributed among the most efficient scholars, and we learnt that they were procured by subscription among the several committees in Calcutta.

The Right Rev. Chairman then addressed the assembly, saying he was much gratified at the examination and that the several classes had acquitted themselves remarkably well in the different branches of their studies.
The pre-ent efforts of the pupils indicated their future eminence, and His Lordship felt assured that if the work of knowledge be preserved in as has been done, the natives of India may hope for a speedy release from those yokes which ignorance and superstition had burdened them with. The prizes bestowed this day, were so many stores of knowledge, which, when attentively looked into, would answer in the places of wealth, and if promulgated carefully among their brethren, would be memorials of the struggles of the present generation for the welfare of those who will hereafter succeed them.

There is no sight, said His Lordship, more gratifying than the promotion of knowledge in this great country Hindustan, and those natives of wealth who aid in this praiseworthy duty, ought to feel proud of being the reformers of their country; and while engaged in the emulating and difficult undertaking, his Lordship was of opinion they ought not to forget to inculcate religion and morality, the aids of all knowledge. As the sun rises after the darkness of night, so will knowledge rise transcendant and throw down all impediment. His Lordship strongly impressed upon the minds of the pupils, the strictest adherence to love, benevolence, charity and honesty in all their dealings, and if the pupils practised those virtues in their search after knowledge, they will of themselves discover how necessary Christianity has been to the welfare of mankind in general. His Lordship concluded by thanking the visitors, and expressed a hope that they would annually observe the progress in the efforts of the institution.

Rajah Kalee Krishen, in behalf of the managers, returned thanks to the Right Rev. Chairman for His Patronage and the annual use of the palace, and hoped the rising character of the institution will always entitle it to His Lordship's consideration.

The examination concluded at 3 P. M., when the visitors retired, — Hurkaru, March 14.

THE AGRA BANK.

Annexed we give the report of the directors of the Agra Bank for the half-year ending December 1837, together with an abstract of the bank accounts for the same period. The whole shows that the establishment is in a state of high prosperity and rapidly advancing in public estimation.

Report of the Directors read to the Proprietors of the Agra Bank at a General Meeting held on the 1st of March 1838.

After more delay than we could have desired, or than is likely to occur on further similar occasions, we have now to report the result of the operations of the bank, during the half yearly period ending on 31st December last.

The bringing up of the books has been retarded by the difficulty of recruiting with skilful hands, an establishment that has for some time been found quite inadequate to the increasing importance and multiplicity of the bank's transactions, and has been still further delayed by the repeated indisposition of some of the most efficient office assistants.

Means have been taken, and others are now under consideration, which will have the effect of simplifying the accounts generally, as well as placing them on such a footing as will greatly facilitate a resumption of the practice of publishing, with the strictest accuracy, the prescribed periodical statement.

At our last general meeting the correspondence with the Lieutenant Governor of Agra on the subject of a bank note circulation, was laid before you. The question has been referred by the Governor General to the Home authorities; and, allied as it is to other propositions regarding banking in India, that have been long before the Court of Directors, we may expect ere many months elapse to learn their decision on the matter.

The state of credit generally during the period under review has been particularly inauspicious to our hopes of rendering the bank extensively useful to commerce; and, looking to security as our first object, we have not hesitated to forego some portion of profit, rather than employ any part of the funds at our disposal, in business attended with apparent risk. But, though considerable suma have thus remained unemployed throughout the season, the accompanying abstract of profit and loss will shew that the prosperity of the bank has in no way diminished, and that, though the gains might have been still greater under a less cautious course of proceedings, they still range at the high rates which have been generally realized by the bank.

The new stock, the holders of which will share in the profits of the half year, commencing with the 1st of January, amounts to Rs. 500,000.

Having negatived the proposition that was made to you by the secretary to take to the bank fifty shares that were reserved for that purpose, by the Oriental Life Insurance Company, with the view of obtaining for the directors of the bank, the privilege of at once deciding, on application for insurance, without incurring the delay of a reference to Calcutta, we were in danger of losing altogether the important advantage to the bank of such a concession. Five of our number, however, with the secretary and assistant secretary, having become proprietors of the greater part of those shares, the Oriental Company have agreed to constitute them into a committee for the purpose originally proposed, and thus a very great accommodation has been obtained for constituents, as well as much facility in conducting its business without any responsibility on the part of the bank, which, we trust, will meet with your approbation.

With so large a paid-up capital, it appears to us useless, as well as inconsistent with the practice of similar institutions, to hold reserved funds beyond what may suffice to cover all doubtful debts.

Hitherto there have been none that can be properly considered as of that description; but, as in the various transactions of the bank there may possibly turn out to be some losses, we would still recommend that, after setting aside Rs. 80,000 for a dividend at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum, the balance should be reserved to meet any such unforeseen casualties.

The following statement of the assets and responsibilities of the bank, and of profit and loss from 30th June to 31st December last, will shew that the sum to be thus reserved, amounts to Rs. 13,179-3-5.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general meeting of this society was held at the Town-Hall, on Wednesday morning, the 14th of March, 1838, at half-past nine o'clock.

THE HON. SIR E. RYAN, PRESIDENT, in the Chair.

Present:—Dr. Wallich; Dr. Huffleagle; Col D. McLeod; W. Storm, Esq; T. Leach, Esq; C. K. Robison, Esq; R. Watson, Esq; A. Beattie, Esq; W. Makenzie, Esq; Dr. Strong; W. K. Ewart, Esq; W. F. Gibbon, Esq; Dr. H. H. Spry; C. Tiebeck, Esq; A. Dobbs, Esq; A. Grant, Esq; D. Hare, Esq; J. H. Stocqueler, Esq; C. R. Princep, Esq; M. A. Bignell, Esq; R. Smith, Esq; C. A. Dyce, Esq; E. Preston, Esq; Capt. W. N. Forbes; J. W. Masters, Esq., and John Bell, Esq.

Visitors:—Messrs. Brockman and Stafford introduced by Dr. Strong, Wm. Deat and C. Brownlow, Esqrs.

The proceedings of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last meeting, were elected members of the society.

W. Moran, Thos. Parker, and J. H. Savi, Esqrs.; The Rev. C. E. Driberg; Thos. Bracken and Chas. Oman, Esqrs.; J. Louis, Esq.; C. S.; J. B. Ediot, Esq.; C. S.; R. Scott Thompson, Esq.; Capt. J. H. Wood; Wm. Rushton and T. O. Morrell, Esqrs.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members:

Geo. Palmer, Esq., (Purneah) proposed by J. F. Cathcart, Esq., and seconded by the secretary.

Major-General Oglander, proposed by Lieut. Sibley, and seconded by the secretary.

F. L. Beaufort, Esq., C. S., proposed by Col. McLeod, and seconded by the secretary.

Thos. Brae, Esq., proposed by Thos. Leach, Esq., and seconded by W. Kettlewell, Esq.

H. Fitzgerald, Esq. (Tirhoot), proposed by the secretary, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Geo. Osborne, Esq., (Chunar) proposed by the secretary, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

W. Hudson, Esq., proposed by the secretary, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

W. Dent, Esq., C. S., proposed by Dr. Wallich, and seconded by Captain Forbes.

The proceedings of the last general meeting were read and confirmed.

Motions of which notice was given at last meeting, disposed of:

No. 1.—The Agricultural Committee's recommendation to present Dr. Montgomerie of Singapore with the society's gold medal, was brought forward and discussed.

Mr. C. K. Robison proposed as an amendment, seconded by Mr. A. Grant, that the silver medal be substituted for the gold medal, which amendment being put to the vote was carried.

No. 2.—The president's motion that the expense incurred by the secretary in publishing a pamphlet on cochineal, be defrayed by the society. Resolved, that the society bear the expense.

No. 3.—Dr. Wallich's motion, recommending that a sum of money be placed at the disposal of Lieutenant Kirke, of Deyrah Dhoon, was next brought forward.

Dr. Wallich informed the meeting that he had been reminded by the secretary of an offer made by Dr. Campbell, of Nepal, similar to that for which he sought the aid of the society in behalf of Deyrah Doon, which had remained in abeyance, waiting the decision of the committee. Dr. Campbell's letter, and Dr. Wallich's notice of motion had, therefore, been before the committee since last meeting, and the result was a recommendation that a trial should be given to the valley of Nepal, as well as that of Deyrah Dhoon.

Proposed by Mr. Robison, seconded by Dr. Wallich, that this motion of Dr. Wallich, in its amended form, as recommended by the Agricultural Committee, be discussed and settled at the next general meeting. Agreed accordingly.

Notices of motion.

No. 1.—Dr. Wallich's original motion, No. 3, of last month's proceedings, with the amendment recommended by the committee, viz.

That 200 rupees be placed at the disposal of Dr. Campbell, of Nepal, and the same sum at the disposal of Lieut. Kirke, of Deyrah Dhoon, for the purpose of enabling those gentlemen to furnish this society with seeds, plants and grafts of European vegetables and fruit trees, in an acclimated state as an experiment, to be discontinued if the trial does not succeed.

No. 2.—Proposed by C. K. Robison, Esq., seconded by W. Keir Ewart, Esq., That this society make some acknowledgment to Signor Muti, for his exertions amidst many difficulties in cultivating the white mulberry tree, in the Decran, by which the production of silk has been rendered eminently successful, both in quality and cheapness, and that for this purpose the gold medal of the society be awarded to him.

REPORTS.

Read reports of the Agricultural Committee, on meetings held on the 26th February and 10th March.

The secretary brought to the notice of the meeting that a vacancy existed in the committee appointed to conduct enquiry respecting the cochineal lately imported, and the president having named Dr. Spry, that gentleman agreed to act.

The secretary read to the meeting a report drawn up by him, respecting the two varieties of cochineal committed to his care by the society, and on the wild insect common in India, which he has brought under cultivation, to contrast with those imported from Bourbon and the Cape.

Proposed by Mr. Robison, seconded by Dr. Strong, that this report be made over to the committee.

Proposed by Sir E. Ryan, that as the attention of the society has lately been given to the improvement of wool, the assistance of their visitors (Messrs. Brockman and Stafford, who are now about to depart for Australia) should be requested towards importing merino rams from that colony, and that the matter be referred to the latter committee for the arrangement of details, &c.

Resolved accordingly.

Notice.—A meeting for this purpose will be held on Saturday morning the 17th instant, at half past 9 o'clock, and the attention of the committee is urgently requested.

Read the amended rules of the society, as revised by the committee of papers, under directions from the society, which having undergone a few slight verbal alterations, were discussed.

Proposed by Mr. Robison, seconded by Dr. Strong, and resolved, that the same be confirmed and adopted, as the rules of the Agricultural Society of India.

From Senhor G. Mutti, dated Bombay, 31st January, 1838, presenting to the society a copy of his guide to the silk "culture in the Deccan."

From J. Luttie, Esq., dated Bombay, 9th February, 1838, presenting on the part of the Agricultural Society of Western India, two copies of Senior Mutti's silk culture guide.

From Dr. Wallich, dated March 9th, presenting a copy of the same guide.

From Dr. H. H. Spry, dated 7th March, presenting to the society a copy of his work on "Modern India."

From the same, dated 9th March, requesting to be furnished with a supply of Otaheite sugar cane for trial at Russapugla, the soil in that quarter being considered well adapted for its growth.

From H. Piddington, Esq., dated 16th February, offering to forward a French translation from the Spanish, of a valuable pamphlet in his possession, on the subject of cochineal.

Memo.—The secretary had since received the pamphlet, a part of which Mr. Piddington had translated into English for the use of this society in 1825, and Mr. Bell had completed the translation which was this day submitted.

From Monsieur Parquin, dated 23d February, stating that after a careful examination of the cochineal insects lately received from Bourbon and the Cape, he can affirm that the Bourbon insect is the true grana fina.

From the same, dated 1st March, presenting to the society a quantity of American mame, and a stocking made from the nankin or Siam cotton.

From Mr. Assistant Surgeon J. T. Pearson, to Sir E. Ryan, dated 24th February (Jaunpore), on the subject of cochineal.

Resolved.—That the pamphlet, Mr. Parquin's and Mr. Pearson's communications, be handed over to the committee.

From Lieutenant C. Brown, dated Jubbulpore, 15th December 1837, forwarding the promised Otaheite Sugar-cane cuttings from Major Sleeman's plantation.

From Dr. Wallich dated 23d February, enclosing a report by Mr. Masters, on the condition of the sugar-canes received from Jubbulpore.

These canes, 1,147 in number, are reported in most excellent condition, not a single failure; the canes had been carefully packed in bundles of 10 each, and bound from end to end with hay bands, and kept constantly moistened with water.

The average length of these canes was 9 feet—the average circumference 6 inches.

From W. Forster, Esq., to the secretary, dated "Melville, Mauritius, December 26," advising the despatch per Moir of 4 casks containing sugar-cane tops which have been transmitted for the use of the society, at the request of the Hon'ble W. H. L. Melville.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 2d March, enclosing Mr. Master's Report on the sugar-cane tops received from the Mauritius, which states that they have arrived in a living though very weak and sickly condition. Memo.—These cane tops were packed in dry sand, but too many were packed in each cask.

From G. U. Adam, Esq., dated 24th February, enclosing copy of a letter from Mr. N. Savy, dated Port Louis, 26th November, 1837, to the address of Messrs. Scot and Co., of Mauritius, which intimates the despatch of 11 bags of Seychelles cotton-seed, carefully selected at Mahe, for the use of this society, and states that a further supply will soon be forwarded. These 11 bags have arrived by the "Moir."

From Dr. Wallich, dated 20th February, enclosing a letter from Mons. Parquin, presenting to the society a paper containing hints respecting the management, &c. of sugar-cane in the Islands of Mauritius and Bourbon.

From Rajah Kalikrishna Bahadoor, dated 23d February, forwarding for presentation to the society, a sugar-cane, called "Pooree Oak"—16 feet in length, and 5 inches in circumference.

From Lieutenant Vetch, dated Tezpor, 13th February, advising the despatch of a maund of caoutchouc; giving some information as to the method pursued in preparing it, and offering to render any further assistance on the subject.

From J. F. Royle, Esq., M. D., to H. H. Spry, Esq., M. D., dated London, 12th July 1837. Enclosing a sheet of his forth-coming work, entitled "Illustrations of the Botany of the Himalaya Mountains," which affords information respecting caoutchouc yielding trees found in the districts of Assam and Sythet. Adding further information as to the best mode to be adopted in the collection of caoutchouc.

From Captain F. Jenkins, dated Rungpore. Upper Assam, 3d February. In reply to the secretary's letter on the subject of area-cocoons, states his intention of having a quantity of the living cocoons and eggs forwarded for further experiment. Enquiring if sugar-cane can be propagated by means of seed? Acknowledging receipt of books, cotton, &c. seeds.

From W. Keer Ewart, Esq., dated 27th February 1838, forwarding some cocoons received from Senhor Mutti, of Bombay.

From Major E. Gwatkin, superintendent of the H. Co.'s stud, Baupper, dated 7th February, acknowledging receipt (through the Military Board, of a quantity of guinea grass seed, and oak seed sent by the society.

Stating that he has made experiments both in the huskless oats and Italian rye-grass received some time ago from the society that he has failed with the former, but succeeded with the latter, offering to forward some oat seed the produce of a small quantity received from the Cape.

From R. Lowther, Esq., dated 14th February, acknowledging the receipt of secretary's letter of the 18th December last, on the subject of transmitting sugar-cane from Jubbulpore.

Advises despatch of two letters of mangel wurzel seed, recently received from England, gives an unfavorable account of the vegetation of the American cotton seed sent up by the society last year, and distributed by Mr. Turner in the Bundelcund and Allahabad districts, owing, it is supposed, to the unprecedented drought.

From Baboo Pearychand Mittra, dated 26th February, forwarding a small sample of the wild cochineal insect, received from Bancoorah, as picked indiscriminately from the jungle.

From F. Campbell, Esq., secretary to the Branch Agricultural Society of Midnapore, dated 22d February, giving an unfavorable account of the vegetation of the several varieties of cotton seed, received from the society, and distributed by him in that district.

From the same, dated also 22d February, forwarding a small parcel of a very singular description of cotton seed, grown at Dholboon, a village about 90 miles to the N. W. of Midnapore, together with a sample of corn, and giving a short account of them.

From Ross D. Mangles, Esq., secretary to Government, revenue department, dated 26th February, acknowledging receipt of eight copies of vol. 5. Transactions of this Society, for the use of Government, and asking for two complete copies of vols. 1 to 4.

From Baboo Rajkissore Mookerjee, dated Hazareebaugh, 22d February, forwarding a sample of cotton, the produce of Sea Island seed, received from the Society, and asking for further supplies for his distribution in that district.

From Colonel L. R. Stacy, dated Dacca, March 4th, intimating his intention of establishing a small experimental garden at that station, and requesting a supply of plants, seeds, &c.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 6th March, forwarding 39 copies (one copy previously sent) of Mr. Bruce's "account of the manufacture of the black tea, as at present practised at Suddya."

From Dr. A. R. Jackson, dated 17th February, acknowledging receipt of, and promising to have delivered to their respective addresses, several more parcels containing copies of the transactions of this society intended for societies in England and Scotland.

The following presentations, in addition to those already voted, were submitted.

From the Coal Committee—A copy of "Reports of a Committee for investigating the Coal and Mineral resources of India."

From Mr. G. Pratt, a specimen of cochineal which had been in his possession 18 years.

From Don Ramon de la Sagra, through Dr. Wallich, the prospectus of a work about to be published by him to be entitled, "The Physical, Political and Natural History of the Isle of Cuba."

From W. F. Gibbon, Esq., two samples of wool, viz. one from an important merino ram; one from a lamb of five months.

Mr. R. Smith, submitted at the meeting, an artificial hive, full of bees, and invites those interested in the question, to visit his garden in Park Street, any morning between seven and nine o'clock, where they may be seen working.

Dr. Strong presented a bag of buckum wood, grown at Russapughla, together with some seed of the same.

Dr. Huffleagle presented some leaves of American maize grown in his garden very prettily variegated.

Mr. Brownlow, presented a bottle containing seeds of the figus elastica, but they appeared to be all spoiled.

The thanks of the society were ordered to be offered for all these communications and presentations.

JOHN BELL, Secretary.

REPORT OF THE COAL AND MINERAL COMMITTEE.

One of the last measures of Lord William Bentinck's active administration was, the appointment of a committee to investigate the mineral resources of the country, more particularly with reference to inland steam navigation. One half the expense of this invaluable improvement, which the country owes likewise to that enlightened Governor General—is absorbed in the price of coal. It was, therefore, self evident, that until this item of expenditure could be reduced, economy in other departments of the undertaking could be beneficial only to a very limited extent. The object to which the attention of the committee was directed was to ascertain whether other mines lying nearer to the main line of inland communication than the Burdwan mines, could not be wrought to advantage, so as to furnish this article at a cheaper rate. The committee divided the different fields of investigation among each other, and appointed Dr. McClelland their secretary. The present report, which is the result of their labors, has been drawn up under his direction.

The exertions of the committee, consisting of six gentlemen, engrossed with public duties in Calcutta, have necessarily been confined to the examination and arrangement of the documents which have been furnished them from the archives of Government, or through the researches of individuals. The active measures which the committee have undertaken are these. First, Mr. Homfray, the best practical miner in India, was deputed to survey and report on the Palamow field of coal. His report is unfavourable as far as it relates to the supply of steam vessels on the Ganges from this source. Secondly, The committee encouraged Mr. Erskine, of Elambuzar, to re-open three or four coal seams connected with the great Burdwan basin, situated nearer to the Adjthan to the Damooder, and 2,000 maunds of this coal have been delivered at the depôt at Cutwa, at four annas the maund. Thirdly, Mr. G. Loch, of the Civil Service, has despatched a thousand maunds of Chirra Pronjee coal to Dinapore, at six annas the maund, under the auspices of the committee. Fourthly, A supply of coal from the Chilmary Hills, on the western face of the Ganges, has been secured, and will be despatched when the season permits. Fifthly. The committee have ascertained that the coal which the Rajmahal Hills promised to furnish has not turned out according to expectation. Other localities of coal have been discovered, if not through the instrumentality of the committee at least during their existence. This report of labors, on which we shall subsequently offer a few remarks, closes with a list of all the sites of coal at present known in India.

The first section of the report contains general remarks, which wind up with these valuable observations :

" In the foregoing situation coal has been traced from Burdwan to the westward, across the Valley of Palamow, and from thence through the district of Sohagpore to Jubbulpore, and the neighbourhood of the Sak, and the Tow, a river in the Narbudda territories, 420 miles distant from Burdwan. Observing nearly the same parallel of latitude, it is found in the province of Cutch, whilst it is extended in the same line across the centre of India to the N. E. extremity of Assam, forming a zone that stretches from 69 to 93, E. longitude, embraced in an opposite direction between the 20 and 25 N. latitude, Chauda on the Warda river, Cuttack and Arracan being its southern boundary, whilst the Vale of Callinger west of Allahabad, the Teesta river at the base of the Sikkim Mountains, and Upper Assam, form the northern limit.

" There are, however, two situations in which coal has been found distinct from this extensive and well defined belt, namely, Hurdwar and Attok ; the first near the source of the Ganges, and the second near that of the Indus. Although situated in the plains, yet both these situations appear to be too closely connected with the Himalaya, and too much detached from the tract now under consideration, to allow of their being considered in common with it. In the researches of infancy of this nature, for such we must as yet consider the state of our information upon the subject of coal, it would be wrong to attach exclusive importance to the peculiar distribution of the mineral just noticed, further than to observe, that this distribution appears to be highly favourable to all these objects for which coal is desirable.

" Cutch, the extreme western limit of what here might be named the carboniferous zone, is placed in the most favourable situation for yielding supplies for the navigation of the Indus, the coast of Malabar, and the Red Sea. The Nerbudda river extends 700 miles along the very centre of this zone, and coal in three situations is already found on its banks. The Soane, the Ganges, and the Hooghley, are each intersected by it, and the Braniaputra, and probably the Irrawaddi, are extended parallel to it throughout their navigable extent.

" Now, on the other hand, this belt had been extended from the panjah towards the south, scarcely a navigable river, but the Indus alone would, in such cases, be approached by it, and the interests of navigation would be as little benefited by the presence of a carboniferous zone, as if the valuable production by which it is distinguished, were hurried beneath the table-lands of the Himalaya. It is, therefore, sufficiently encouraging in this early stage of the enquiry to find the general distribution of coal so favourable, nor need we, as is evident from the Attok and Hurdwar coal, despair of finding supplies available for the navigation of the northern portions of the Ganges and Indus as soon as enquiries are directed in those remote quarters to the object here in view.

The second section contains a very valuable geological disquisition on the difference of level in Indian coal fields, it is too long for quotation, and too strictly scientific for the general reader.

The third section refers to Silhet coal district, which the committee places first in point of importance, not on account of its accessibility,—for the distance of its locality from navigable streams, has as yet prevented its being brought into use.—But on account of its superior excellence, it is the finest coal hitherto discovered in India, being found to be 10 per cent. superior to the Burdwan coal. Mr. Colebrooke first directed the attention of Government to it, in 1813, and Mr. James was soon after sent to explore the mines. But the Khassya Hills had not then come into the possession of the British, and the valuable mines concealed in their bosom were unknown. Various indications of coal at the base of the hills were discovered by Mr. James and by Mr. Stark, but from that time to the present no attempt has been made to survey those localities, or to ascertain by what means the coal they contain may be turned to the benefit of the country. The Chirra coal was discovered in 1831, about a mile distant from the Sanatorium, forming a large portion of a precipice. It may be delivered at the foot of the Hills, or at Pundua, at four annas the maund, which is the usual charge for portage by the Khassyas. The report says, " If the demand for this coal were sufficient, the expense of conveyance might be much lessened by casting it from the pit to the brow of the mountain, and for the remainder of the distance employing either mules or bullocks, except at the more difficult passes, where a man might be stationed to receive the loads : such improvements in the mode of conveyance would imply a certain outlay in forming better roads ; but even without this, Mr. G. Loch has afforded a practical proof of its value by the delivery of 1,000 maunds of this coal at Dinapore, including all charges, and under every disadvantage, for 425 rupees the thousand maunds, being 350 rupees less than the contract price." Why the committee doubt that the demand for this coal is insufficient to encourage exertion, we are at a loss to comprehend. It is unquestionably the very best coal in India, and the demand for it must, therefore, always be great. If it can be conveyed by a very circuitous route from Chirra to Dinapore for six annas the maund, we do not see why it could not be transmitted by a more direct route to Calcutta, at the same rate ; and Chirra coal for the steam engines in Calcutta, at six annas the maund, would be universally preferred to Burdwan coal at five annas. But placing the manufactories in Calcutta out of the question, after the experiment so successfully made by Mr. Loch, this mine of coal ought, above all others, to draw the immediate and close attention of Government, for the purposes of inland navigation. If the coal can be delivered at Dinapore, which the committee admit, at six annas the maund cheaper than the coal now conveyed to that place from Calcutta, it can be delivered at six annas the maund cheaper at every depot above Dinapore, as far as Allahabad, and for a still less sum at every depot below that station, down to the point where this coal, coming from the eastward, enters the Ganges. This is by far the most important discovery which has been made under the auspices of the committee, and Government will shew a great disregard of their own interest and the welfare of the country, if the question is allowed to lie dormant. We have not the documents before us from which we lately drew up the abstract of receipts and expenditure, in connexion with inland steam navigation, but we should think that a reduction of six annas the maund on all the coal that is used between Rajmahal and Allahabad, would effect a saving of twenty-five thousand rupees a year, upon the present consumption. In addition to this advantage in price, the coal would be ten per cent. superior to that which is now used. Here then is a field for the exertions of the committee, in which an abundant harvest of benefit may be immediately reaped. But why, in the prospect of such advantages, should not officers of Government be employed in discovering some cheaper plan of conveying the coal from the mine to the river, than the barbarous and primordial mode of carrying it upon human shoulders, which is now in use ? Just at this juncture, we have a body of sappers and miners, and of scientific officers engaged in the neighbourhood of Chirra in constructing a military road to Munpore. Why could not this circumstance be improved; and the engineer establishment, before they quit this part of the country, be set to discover a more scientific mode of conveying this coal to the river? We hope the question will attract notice in the highest quarter. If through the instrumentality of the officers now engaged on the Munpore road, means could be created by the construction of a good road, of diminishing by one half, the price of this coal, as it reaches the point of embarkation, would not the whole expense thus incurred be refunded in two years, even if the establishment of steam vessels should not be doubled?—Friend of India, March 16.

MILITARY FUND.

The directors beg to submit to the subscribers of the Bengal Military Fund, the case of Mrs. Margaret Kelly, widow of the late Major Kelly of Her Majesty's 24th regiment of foot.

A claim was made by this Lady on the 19th January 1836, to be re-admitted to the benefit of the pension she enjoyed from the late Bengal Military Widows' Fund, in right of her first husband (Captain John Graham of the cavalry, see No. 1.)* but, as the rule of that institution (see No. 2) only granted pensions during continuance in widowhood, she was informed with others situated like herself (see cases No. 3) that her claim was inadmissible.

Major Adair of Her Majesty's 24th foot in a letter dated Dumfries, 20th April 1837, (see No. 4) having solicited an appeal to the subscribers from this decision, which having been approved of by three directors, it is therefore submitted to the subscribers for their decision, in doing which the directors will briefly state the grounds on which this and other ladies' claims to re-admission on subsequent widowhood, who were annuitants of the late fund have been rejected.

The late fund was established in the year 1804, from which period to 1st November 1824, when it was incorporated with the present fund, not a single application was made for re-admission on second widowhood. On the establishment, however, of the present fund rule 24 of which (see No. 5) admitting an annuitant to the benefit of the pension, she may have enjoyed in right of her first husband's subscription on subsequent widowhood, several claims were preferred by annuitants of the late fund for re-admission, but rejected by the directors as their re-admission was inconsistent with the rules and practice of the late fund, which only granted pensions during continuance in widowhood, whereas there is an express rule in the present fund for re-admission on subsequent widowhood, to the benefit of which parties whose husbands died before the present fund, was established, or the said rule adopted could not be entitled.

Thirty-eight annuitants of the late fund have re-married and if the precedent of this nature is once admitted, it may prove detrimental to the interests of the fund.

By order of the directors.

H. MARTINDALE,

Secretary Military Fund, Calcutta, Military Fund Office, 28th February 1838.

(No. 2.)

25.—The widows of members shall receive, from the day of their husbands' decease, and during their continuance in widowhood, the regulated pensions.

(No. 3.)

Copies and extracts of secretary's correspondence relative to previous similar applications.

To MAJOR W. L. WATSON,

Deputy Adjutant General.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st instant, and to acquaint you, that the directors regret that they cannot consistently with the regulations of the late Bengal Military Fund afford any assistance to Mrs. Browne, late Mrs. Colonel Morgan.

To Mrs. _____

MADAM.—The directors regret that, agreeably to the rules of the late widows' fund, to which your late husband was a subscriber, you are not entitled to be re-admitted to its benefits. The rule quoted by you, article 26th of the military fund, not being applicable to you as Lieutenant Smith died on the 6th December 1824, and the Military Fund was established on the 1st November 1824.

To MESSRS. COCKERELL, TRAIL AND CO.

Agents Bengal Military Fund, London.

GENTLEMEN, Mrs. Hind, late Mrs. Thornton, widow of the late Major Thornton, and late a pensioner of the late Bengal Military Widows' Fund, is not agreeably to the rules of that institution entitled to be re-admitted to its benefits. The rule (26) of the military fund under which the executors of the late Colonel Hind (who never subscribed either to the old or the present fund) have claimed her re-admission, is only applicable to the widows of the subscribers of the military fund established the 1st November 1824, nearly fifteen years after the decease of the late Major Thornton, you are, therefore, requested to discontinue the payment of a Major's widows' pension to that lady, and recover from her such sums as you may have paid to her.

(No. 617)

To Mrs. _____

MADAM,—The directors regret that agreeably to the rules of the late Bengal Military Widows' Fund to which your former husband was a subscriber, you are not entitled to be re-admitted to its benefits. The rule quoted by you, article 26 of the Bengal Military Fund, is not applicable to you as Captain Campbell died on the 22d November 1818, and the Military Fund was established on the 1st November 1824.

(No. 24)

To Mrs. _____

MADAM,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 31st ultimo, and to acquaint you, that your re-admission to the pension you formerly enjoyed from the late Bengal Military Widows' Fund, is inadmissible, agreeably to the rules of that institution, as already communicated to you in my letter No. 647, of the 12th ultimo.

The directors regret, that your late husband should have been misinformed regarding your re-admission by the agents of the fund in England, and it is also to be regretted that he did not apply to this office on the subject, but the directors have not the power to act contrary to the rules laid down for their guidance.

(No. 360.)

To MRS. ANN GILES.

No. 5, Tavistock Place, London.

MADAM,—Agreeably to the rules of the late Bengal Military Widows' Fund, to which your former husband,

* Omitted as unnecessary.

Major William Willy Kitchen, late of the 15th regiment native infantry on the Bengal establishment, was subscriber, your re-admission to the pension you enjoyed in right of his subscription is totally inadmissible. The rule of the present Bengal Military Fund (by which you claim re-admission to the benefit of the pension you formerly enjoyed) being strictly inapplicable to the widows of the late institution.

I have, &c.

(Signed) H. MARINDELL,
Secretary Military Fund.

Calcutta, Military Fund Office, 1st July 1833.

(No. 518.)

TO MRS. MARGARET KELLY,

MADAM.—Agreeably to the rules of the late Bengal Military Widows' Fund, to which your former husband Captain John Graham, of the cavalry, was a subscriber, your claim to re-admission to the pension you enjoyed in right of his subscription, is totally inadmissible. Pensions by the rules of the institution continuing only during widowhood and not claimable on subsequent widowhood.

(No. 4)

TO H. MARINDELL, Esq.

Secretary Bengal Military Fund.

SIR,—Your letter to Mrs. Kelly, under date the —, was duly received by that lady; she is much concerned to learn from it, that her re-admission to a pension from the Widows' Fund, had not been sanctioned by the directors. Upon the reasons which are assigned for this judgment, viz., "that such pensions continue only during widowhood and are not claimable upon subsequent widowhood," at the request of Mrs. Kelly, I crave permission to remark on her part, that although the original rule 17 of the Widows' Fund decreed a suspension of the stipend upon re-marriage, it contained no prohibition against its renewal upon second widowhood. Its terms on the contrary are general, that the pension shall continue "during widowhood," and apply to any and every occasion during which the claimant may be so left. To limit its duration to first widowhood is an extension of the rule unwarranted by its letter, and quite against the spirit of the institution, which intends not only the (partial and temporary) relief, but the continuing support, while necessary, of the "Widows of Officers." On the revision of the fund rules, which took place in 1821, the wording of the relative articles 25 and 29 continued equally strong and general, the phrases then used are "during continuance in widowhood," and "in a state of widowhood."

The general practice in such societies, and indeed in law, is, that where a deprivation or penalty is intended it shall be expressed, and in such cases, the affidavit on which depends the continuance of the indulgence to the widow, declares that ever since the husband's decease she has continued and then is a widow.

In what may be called the sister fund, of the Indian army, viz. Lord Clive's Bounty, the declaration required is equally direct and explicit; oath is made by the claimant that she has not contracted marriage with any other person since the death of her aforesaid husband. The meaning here is well defined and cannot be mistaken; what is intended is declared, that a marriage would involve the forfeiture of the pension.

The practice of the British army is very different from that which the judgment of the Military Fund directors has for the first time made known to Mrs. Kelly. The compassionate allowance or Royal Bounty to the widow of an officer is not (See His Majesty's Warrant, 13th June 1836,) forfeited on her re-marriage, but continues during every subsequent coverture and widowhood, nor is it like the pension of the widow, of the Indian Officer, purchased by high subscriptions during his life, but it is a free and gratis grant.

The late Captain Graham subscribed to the widows' fund from its commencement to his death in February 1816, a period of nearly 11 years—all the return for this long subscription which his widow has hitherto received is her pension for barely two years. If the directors would but recollect the large amount of capital, nearly 13 lacs of sicca rupees transferred in 1824 from the Old Widows' to the New Military Fund, the claim to some share in the benefit thereof of the widow of an officer, who so contributed to it, would, I believe, be found deserving of further and favorable consideration. This principle, that the benefit of the continued support and increased rate of interest then promised by the Court of Directors should not be limited to the parties connected with the new institution has already been largely acted upon when they increased by one-third, the pensions of the old fund incumbents; by that increase a majority of those widows now receive larger pensions from the new fund than it grants to its own subscribers,—when therefore what is asked is not preference but equality, involves an innovation but proceeds on existing usage, and incurs but a paltry expense for a praiseworthy end. I cannot but think that a respectful appeal to the long well-known liberality of the Bengal army will not be made in vain when the very dependent state of their petitioner is thus brought under their notice. I beg, therefore, that the directors will permit the reference of this distressing case to the compassionate consideration of the army, should the present communication not suffice to establish in their opinion the claim of Mrs. Kelly to restoration of her pension.

I have, &c.

DUMFRIES, } (Signed) JAMES ADAIR.
20th April 1837. } Major H. P. late of 24th regiment.

(No. 5.)

ARTICLE 24TH.—If a widow pensioner on the fund marries, her pension is to cease during her coverture, but in the event of her again becoming a widow, she shall be re-admitted to all the benefits she may have enjoyed from the fund during her first widowhood, in like manner as if she had not re-married, but subject, of course, to all the limitations and conditions prescribed by the regulations in the first instance. If the second husband shall also have been a subscriber to the fund the widow will receive however only one annuity, taking that which may be the greatest, that is to say, according to the rank of the first or second husband, whichever may be the higher.—Hurkaru, March 20.

SECOND MEETING FOR THE FORMATION OF THE "LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY."

In pursuance of a requisition which had been circulated sometime previously, upwards of two hundred of the most respectable zemindars assembled last Monday at 4 1/2 p.m. at the Town-hall. Among these we perceived the following distinguished individuals, Rajahs Boradacaunth Roy, Raj Narain, Radacaunth Bahadoor, Kaly Kishen Bahadoor, Baboos Prosonnocomar Tagore, Ramcomul Sen, Ramanath Tagore, and other members of the Tagore Family, Baboos Lakhinaraia Mookerjee, Abhoy Churn Banerjee, Promothonath Deb, Ram

Rutton Roy, Oodychund Bysak, Raj Kishen Chowdhery, Sottichurn Ghosal, Mothooranath Mulk, Moonshy Ameer, Mahommed Ameer, and the Mooktears of several opulent rajahs and zemindars, who could not attend the meeting. We likewise observed several European gentlemen, among whom were Mr. T. Dickens, Mr. Geo. Prinsep, Mr. David Hare, and several other distinguished members of the community. The whole of the proceedings, with the exception of what fell from Mr. Dickens, was in Bengally, and, although considerable difficulty was experienced by us in preparing this our first report of proceedings conducted in that language, yet by the obliging assistance of a kind and talented friend, we can assure the reader that the substance of the speeches will be found fully given and as accurately reported as under circumstances it was possible.

Rajah Radhacrunth Bahadoor being called to the chair, stated that the honor which had been conferred on him was due in the first instance to the Rajah of Nuddeah, whose family was the most ancient among the zemindars of Bengal; but this Rajah, although he had been expected, was not present at the meeting. In his absence he thought the chair was due to Rajah Baradacrunth Roy, whose family stood next in point of antiquity; but as the meeting had done him the honor of calling him to the chair, he would thankfully accept it. Under the British rule, he observed, the people had continued to live happily, until certain regulations, connected with the resumption operations, had been promulgated, which made all very anxious, and a gloom has been cast on the landholders. On the other hand, what good had the Government done for the people? When, some years ago, inundation laid waste the southern parts of the country the Government suspended its demand, for some time, but afterwards recovered it with interest, which measure ruined many estates and gave considerable trouble to the people. The resumption of rent-free-lands was, however, the greatest grievance they had to complain of, and circumstances pointed out the expedience of forming a society. The benefits of such a society would be felt not only by those who resided in Calcutta, but all over the country, by forming communications with the different districts and this society. Representations were always necessary to be made to Government, in these proceedings; if any one adopted an erroneous course, the society afforded a ready means of correction, and through it grievances could be easily brought to the notice of the proper authorities. It was a common saying among the people 'that straw could be easily broken by the finger when in separate blades: but if several blades be united together and formed into a rope, it was capable of confining even a wild elephant and reducing it into subjection.' Union among the people was, therefore, highly necessary, and the establishment of such a society was much called for, in order to keep a watch over the measures of Government and its functionaries, and for the purpose of making representations to it.

Rajah Kaly Kishen Bahadoor expressed his full concurrence in the opinions of the chairman, and moved that a society be formed to be called the Landholders' Society. This resolution was seconded by Rajah Raj-Narain Roy, who also expressed his full concurrence in the views of the chairman. Carried unanimously.

Mr. Dickens stated, that he had been requested by the chairman to read the prospectus of the Society in English, for the information of those who understood that language, and that a Bengally version of it would afterwards be read and explained by some one who better understood that language than he did. He then read the prospectus which will be found in the Hurkaru of the 17th instant.

The chairman then stated, that previous to this, a meeting of several respectable zemindars and others had been held at the Hindoo College, which had appointed Baboo Prononhocomar Tagore, Ram Comul Sen, Bhobanichurn Mitter and himself, a provisional committee, for the purpose of preparing the rules of the projected society, which he would now read for the benefit of those who had not understood the English version of it, which had just been read by Mr. Dickens.

He then read the prospectus in Bengally, calling the attention of the meeting to those parts of the rules which required their immediate attention.

Moved by Rajah Rajnarain Roy, seconded by Rajah Kaly Kishen Bahadoor:

"That the rules now read be adopted as the rules of the society.

After the 2d resolution was moved, Mr. Dickens came forward and spoke:

Gentlemen: I congratulate you upon the occasion of our meeting, and upon the carrying of the resolutions already moved, which give existence and consistency to our society. As already an incipient jealousy of it has been displayed, I think it necessary to speak of my own reasons for coming forward, which otherwise, I should not have touched upon; I do not appear here in the character of a political agitator; still less in that of an advocate of any opinions, except my own, and those which I trust we have all in common. I am a proprietor of indigo factories of considerable value; I am besides by the grant of Government, a proprietor of lands in the zillah of Goruckpore, which, I trust, I shall be enabled by care and the assistance which I have secured to render productive, and bequeath as a valuable inheritance to my children. Thus should I chance to leave this country, my connexion with it will remain, and I am sure you will rejoice with me, when you reflect that from the change of policy which enables Englishmen to acquire property here, this is not likely to be a solitary example; but the connexion between both countries must needs become daily closing in all things, to the increase of knowledge, of kindness of feeling, and, I trust, to the improvement of both classes.

I join you, therefore, as one having an earnest and friendly feeling and a common interest, and disposed with all my power, with heart and head and hand to aid in the one common object, which we have all in view.

I congratulate you, gentlemen, on the formation of the first society for political objects which has ever been organized by the natives of India with large and liberal views, without exclusiveness, and with ends and aims of extensive utility. I see in it the gem of great things, and I am satisfied that the care and prudence which will be required to conduct these beginnings to fitting ends, will not be wanting.

I have said, gentlemen, that a jealousy respecting our objects has been already displayed, I but guard myself carefully from attributing such a sentiment to the governing power: I am satisfied that there no such feeling exists. But though the last charter has been called a "Charter of Freedom" for India, I cannot, I own, perceive that much extension of political liberty has been granted by it to any class, or that any thing like what we ought to call a guarantee for civil rights has been conceded to the natives of India, or to any class of its inhabitants. I do not profess to be an admirer of that charter,—I am no admirer of it, nor of the men who framed it; but though I may not deem them possessed of deep sagacity, nor of that fore-knowledge which could embrace all the consequences of their own acts, yet I am bound in candour to suppose that they must have foreseen some of those consequences, and must be pleased at seeing their anticipations verified by the event. If they did not (and they certainly did not) provide any guarantees for the rights of the governed, they at least promulgated the principle of equality. They have pronounced, gentlemen, that all men should be equal before the law, and equal in the eye of the state; and they gave utterance to an abstract principle, which first, for any practical purposes or extensive application, had its birth in the National Convention of France, and they were doubtless sincere in what they were about, if they did not fully foresee the consequences of their own acts. This meeting, gentlemen, is one of those consequences which they might have foreseen, for one good tendency of their legislation, at all events, was to amalgamate all classes of the governed in the pursuit of their common interests, and we accept the professions of the charter in the full confidence that the practice will be agreeable to the professions if we are watchful enough to take care of ourselves.

We meet, gentlemen, because you conceive that you may have petitions to prefer to the Government which ought to be listened to, and grievances that may be redressed, and nothing can be more reasonable than to unite for such purposes when the end and aims are common to all. It is not my intention here to enter into a detailed examination of the various questions connected with the regulations for the resumption of rent-free tenures. I shall content myself with asking a few questions and making a few observations concerning them of a very general nature, but by the necessary answer to these questions it will be apparent we do not meet without a sufficient reason. I shall assume, in addressing you, that the special deputy collectors, the Collectors and the Special Commissioners of Government, are such a body of judges as this world never saw before: that they possess an absolute abnegation of all self-interest, a perfect independence of all considerations of advancement, a stern judicial impartiality unequalled in any country or age; but, no,—all this might, perhaps, be supposed to savour of sarcasm, as being exaggerated praise; I will suppose then, merely that, they are equal to any judges in any country, that they are equal to English judges in the best times of our history, that they are equal to French judges in modern France, to the judges in the United States of America. Let us then suppose that in England, or France, or America, a general warrant was issued by the executive power calling upon men to shew the titles of their estates or their title to exemptions from any impost, and then let us suppose that such questions were judged, as between the governors and the governed, by a body of men removable at pleasure, promoted at pleasure, many of them appointed for the specific purpose and for a short and uncertain period, and none of them having the smallest responsibility to the governed: what, I ask, would the Englishman, the Frenchman, or the American of the United States say to this? Why, among many other things we may conceive that they would say, and to cut matters short, they would say in plain words, gentlemen; that this was not fair trial. And so say we, gentlemen; and therefore, as well as for other reasons, we are met together this day; for if Englishmen would not be satisfied with such a trial neither ought you, for by the last charter you will not forget that we are all equal before the law, and the law itself ought to be, and we presume as we hope, it will be, equal to the best. You will bear in mind, gentlemen, as we go along, that I do not impute blame or evil motives to any class and still less to Government. I assume always that the intentions of all are right, and most especially the intentions of the governing class; but still, it is reasonable we may be permitted to think that a better safeguard should be provided, and, therefore, feeling that in the union of many, for a common and reasonable object there is strength, we meet together. I had almost forgotten to notice one peculiarity of the revenue proceedings now in progress very worthy of note. I need not enlarge upon what such a people as the English or any civilized people would think of a general inquisition into the titles to all men's estates on which government had claims; but let us suppose that it had issued and then let us suppose that when the government as plaintiff and the individual as defendant were once in court, the defendant should find this situation suddenly reversed and he called upon to prove his title to exemption from all claim, and that the government had no right to call him there on peril of forfeiture or assessment. Let us further suppose that a prescriptive right of sixty or seventy years was held to be no title to exemption, and that the government in ordinary cases paid no costs, and the defendant must pay his own and stamp taxes besides on the litigation thus forced upon him, what would an Englishman fresh from Europe say to all this? would he not say that all ordinary judicial maxims were here reversed, and that if these were rules of right, or of legal philosophy, he must unlearn all that he had been taught to hold as reasonable or regard as just?

I cannot too frequently repeat in this place, that in what I have said and am about to say respecting the causes of our fears, we do not impute blame to Government in either its legislative or executive capacity. We must divide and distinguish between Government in such capacities, and Government in its capacity of owner of the soil and landlord claiming its yearly rent; from Government in this its quality of landlord you have doubtless grievances to endure, but, after all, though heavy enough, such grievances are light compared with those that you might apprehend, if you could suppose a portion of the press which treats of such subjects and any authority for the principles to which it gives currency, or that they received countenance from authority. A portion of the press of this presidency and of the Mofussil from time to time, the question of the best means of raising a land revenue in India has been argued, as if it were still in Bengal an abstract and open question, and on grounds destructive of all public faith,—of all confidence between man and man, and of all the ties which bind men together in civilized communities. We are perpetually referred to the necessity which has no law, to the injustice which is done to any portion of a state, more heavily taxed than another, to the inconvenience of the exemptions of Bengal, Bahar and Orissa. If ever there was a solemn public compact entered into between the governor, and the governed, the latter ignorant, the former civilized and incomparably the best informed of the conditions, and acting with a forethought and deliberation commonly but little used even in such though the weightiest public affairs, it was the permanent settlement of the land revenue of Bengal, Bahar and Orissa by Lord Cornwallis: if ever there was an act which did honor to an individual governor, or made a conquering government worthy of esteem to all posterity, it was the permanent settlement, but now it is openly and covertly assailed by maxims which I think it better not to characterize by any epithets. According to the logic of the writers to which I allude, it was unjust in Lord Cornwallis, in 1793, to make a compact to limit the land rents of Bengal, because the north-west provinces which were acquired in 1803, or 1805, some eight or ten years after, do, in 1838, require a large expenditure, or because Madras or Bombay may exhibit an increasing deficit, why, after all, gentlemen, Bengal pays for all, and surely pays enough if it pays yearly much more than it costs. According to the reasoning of this portion of the press you are bound in justice to pay for each new conquest in the precise into of its inutility and costliness. Such calculations lead further than the writers think. Satisfied as I am that there was good reason for your meeting, I rejoice, gentlemen, that you have met. The framers of the charter, I have said, must, if gifted with the forethought and wisdom for which I am content here to give them credit, have been prepared for such results, and prepared too to rejoice at them. You have learned, gentlemen, from the charter that the native subjects of the Crown in India are and ought to be the equals of Englishmen, and you have this day been taught the secret that union is power. That is a lesson not to be unlearned, and the power you will thus acquire I doubt not you will keep and wisely use. You meet openly, which is a pledge of your good intention. The Union for purposes that are avowed is safe, that which is secret is dangerous, and this, too, Government will not fail to perceive; you have made a step in advance in the career of political improvement, and I doubt not you will persevere in the good work you have begun. I offer you my humble but yet zealous aid, both here and elsewhere, if I should chance to leave India. In England, I believe, I shall have the means to offer you assistance more able and powerful than my own.

The resolution proposed by Rajah Rajnarain Roy was then put and carried unanimously.

Baboo Ramcomul Sen observed, that those who had understood the last speaker, had, no doubt, been much informed and benefited; but, as it was intended to publish the whole of the proceedings of this meeting in Bengal, it was needless for him now to enter into the subject. He then moved, seconded by Roy Kalynauth Chowdhry, that the following gentlemen be elected as a committee for the present year, viz. Messrs. T. Dickens and G. Prinsep, Baboos Prosonnocomar Tagore, Dwarkanauth Tagore, Rajah Rajnarain Roy, Rajah Kaly Kishun Bahadoor, Baboos Ashotos Deb, Ramroton Roy, Ramcomul Sen, Moonshiee Ameer, Cowai Suttichurn Ghosal, and Rajah Radhakanth Deb, carried unanimously.

Baboo Suttichurn Ghosal stated, that all here present being sensible of the benefits of the projected association, were unanimously desirous that it should be established; but as such an association could not be carried on without pecuniary aid, he would propose that a book be opened in which all persons wishing to become members subscribe their names.

This was seconded by Roy Calynauth Chowdhry, who observed that many had subscribed for the construction of roads for the convenience of travellers, others for the support of schools to educate people, and, again, others for charitable purposes in order to relieve the poor: but none had subscribed his name in support of an institution whose object was to protect our political rights and privileges? The effects of such an institution would be felt not only by ourselves but our posterity. Let charity begin at home. He concluded by seconding the resolution, which had been proposed. Carried unanimously.

The chairman here observed, that the present meeting ought on no account to be considered as in any way opposed to the Government; on the contrary, if the object of Government be the good of the people, and this society subserved that end, it was evident that Government could not but consider it as beneficial both to itself and to the country at large.

Rajah Kaly Kishun Bahadoor then came forward and read a document which contained his speech, and of which the following is the substance:

Although he was unaccustomed to address public meetings; yet, considering this as a great assembly, convened for the purpose of carrying on a great object, it afforded him so much satisfaction that he was induced to offer a few remarks. The produce of the soil being the chief support of man, and his most permanent source of wealth, its ruin was the destruction, not only of our temporal comforts, but also of the means wherewith future bliss can be secured. It was to secure such property that this society was about to be established. It was, therefore, an object which every one could pursue with a satisfaction of consequence. Form the first place if the root be cherished, the enjoyment of the fruit must necessarily follow, or in other words, when any difficulty will arise to the interest of the landholders; they will be able to petition the Supreme Council for a remedy against the pending evil: Secondly, the Right Hon'ble Lord Clive, on the occasion of his proceeding to the Upper Provinces, among other nobles of India, conferred considerable rank, honor, and fortune, on Maha Rajah Dulkob Roy, Sitab Roy, Rajah

Maha Rajah Raj Bullub Raen Roy, Jugutseth Khoshal Chund, and Maha Rajah Nobokiehen Bahadoor. These favors were conferred on them, on account of their conscientious support of the great political cause in which his Lordship was engaged. Nay, on the occasion of the war they were prepared to sacrifice their body and soul. All these facts are noted in the Government records. The people of this country, who are naturally loyal subjects, and patiently suffer the oppressions of Government, should receive some consideration from that Government, as the saying is, 'the strong is the support of the weak.' Thirdly, owing to the differences of opinion among our countrymen, it was difficult to unite them in a common cause: but in the present instance, union without reference to the distinctions of caste, evidently indicated future welfare to the country, and would prove as powerful as a rope formed of weak blades of grass, which when united could confine even a wild elephant, and keep him in order. For this great union thanks were due to Baboo Prosonno Comar Tagore and Baboo Ramcomul Sen. It was, therefore, the ardent desire of the Rajah, that this society exist permanently; and continue, without partiality to confer its benefits on the country.

After this several slips of paper were sent round for the names of those who intended to become members, and the following individuals were enrolled on the list:

Rajah Bhoirubundra Narain Roy, of Pooteah; Sreemutty Moharanny Kistomoney, by Kassinath Sendal. Rajshahee; Rajah Burrodakant Roy, of Jessore; Sreemutty Raney Katauny, by Dewan Dabeeprasand Roy; Rajahs Radhakant Deb Bahadoor; Sikkishno Bahadoor; Kallykissen Bahadoor, and Rajnarain Roy; Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore; Prosonno Comar Tagore; Hurro Comar Tagore; Shamall Tagore; Hurrolall Tagore; Konoyall Tagore; Gopaulall Tagore; Wopen dermohun Tagore; Onachurn Banerjee; Bhugobuttychurn Gangopadaya; Aushootosh Day; Ramrutun Roy; Roy Calynauth Chowdhry; Roy Rambullub; Taraprasand Roy Chowdhry; Sreekishu Roy Chowdhry; Rajkishu Roy Chowdhry; Suttochurn Ghosal; Nilcomul Paul Chowdhry; Joychunder Paul Chowdhry; Unnodaprasand Roy; Uboychurn Bundapalayay; Sarroop, Chunder Sircar Chowdhry; Kallyprosonno Mookerjee; Rangutty Nag Chowdhry; Praunauth Chowdhry; Odoynarain Mundul; Ramcomul Sen; Ramanauth Tagore; Unnodaprasand Bonerjee; Omeschunder Roy; Mothoramohun Biswas; Annundomony Biswas; Bisamber Chowdhry; Mothoranauth Mullick; Bauman Doss Mookerjee; Sambhoonauth Mookerjee; Joygopal Roy Chowdhry; Jugutdallub Sing; Essur Chunder Mustopee; Harrypran Mustopee; Gunganarain Paul Chowdhry, Bisnonuth Muteelall; Eesenchunder Roy; Muddo-uden Sandel; Sumbhoochunder Mitter; Setaanuth Mitter; Bi-summer Sen; Muddoosuden Nundy; Kassinath Bose by Ramanauth Banerjee; Kallachund Bose; Rogooram Gossain; Bhingobaun Chunder Ghose; Roopnarain Ghosaul; Gubindkrishu Moojoomdar; Gocoolkrishu Ghose; Luckenarain Mookerjee; Gobind Chunder Bundapadaya; Kassenauth Bose; Kassiprasand Ghose; Joynarain Bonerjee; Wodoychand Bysauck; Radhanauth Chatterjee; Ramcomul Mookerjee; Bongseebuddun Saha; Ramdhon Ghose; Doorgaprasand Mookerjee; Fakoordoes Mookerjee; Khetromohun Mookerjee; Ramcomar Chuckerbutty; Srinauth Mullick; Sitanauth Mullick; Ramdhon Mitter, and Bussuntolall Baboo; A.C. Dickens, Esq.; Alexander Binny, Esq.; Moonshiee Habelul Hossieu; R. J. Bigshaw, Esq. and Aumapudleen, Vukeel of the Sadler Dewanny Adawlut.

When the subscriptions were ended, the usual vote of thanks was given to the chairman, and the meeting dissolved.—Hark. March 21.

EXAMINATION OF THE PUPILS OF THE HOOGHLY COLLEGE.

Sir Edward Ryan, Mr. R. D. Mangles, Mr. Walters, Mr. Millet, Dr. Grant, Col. Young, Captain Birch, Baboo Prosonno Comar Tagore, and Baboo Ram Comul Sen, composing the committee of public instructions, and their secretary, Mr. J. C. Sutherland, accompanied by Mr. David Hare, and some other gentlemen, embarked early on Saturday morning at Chandpaul-ghat, on a steamer, and proceeded to Hooghly; where they arrived at about 11 A. M., and were received by Dr. Wise, Mr. Jas. Sutherland of the College, Mr. Samuels, the magistrate, Mr. Belli the collector, and several military gentlemen of the station.

The Junior classes occupying the first floor of the school were first visited and examined in reading, with explanations of the passages they read, and in Geography. The visitors then proceeded to visit the senior classes on the upper floor, of which the first underwent a strict examination, conducted chiefly by Sir E. Ryan, Mr. Mangles, Mr. J. C. C. Sutherland, and Dr. Grant. The branches in which they were examined were, History of England, Geography, and Arithmetic. Considering the short period the institution has been established, the progress of the pupils afforded] great satisfaction. There were also several maps of India, drawn by the boys, exhibited, which appeared very creditably executed. The prizes, consisting entirely of money, were delivered to the most meritorious students of the Oriental department, the Mahomedan youths. After which prizes consisting of appropriate books were distributed to the successful candidates in the English department.

The members of the committee then retired to an adjoining room and passed several resolutions for the management of the institution. Here they received an application from the pupils of the first class, soliciting permission to be allowed to open the College library in the evenings, three times a week, and offering to bear the expense of light for themselves. Considering the laudable zeal displayed by the youthful students, in this request the committee were pleased, not only to grant their prayer, but also to direct that the expense consequent on the measure be borne by the funds of the institution.

Very few of the inhabitants of Hooghly were present on the occasion, and the visitors from Calcutta returned in the afternoon, much pleased with the day's occupation. —Hurk. March 21.

EXAMINATION—HINDOO FREE SCHOOL.

TOWN HALL, MONDAY, MARCH 12, 1838.

The annual examination of the pupils of this institution took place at 11 A. M., on Monday, 12th March. Among the visitors we recognized Capt. D. L. Richardson, Mr. D. Hare, and a few more gentlemen; but were surprised to observe the absence of the popular native gentlemen of wealth. We heard that Prosonno Comar Tagore promised to be present, and believe some unforeseen accident must have prevented his being among those who were much gratified with the exhibition of the progress of Hindoos in the English language and the sciences.

This institution was founded in June 1831, by Baboo Bhuban Mohun Mittra and Radanath Paul, ex-students of the Hindoo College, and residents of Simlah in Calcutta. In its infancy, it had the exclusive support of several students of the College, but its usefulness becoming apparent, it was deemed advantageous for the purposes of education to make it dependent on the public for popular support, and since 1835 it has been open to subscriptions and donations from those interested in the advancement of the natives of India. It began with about 80 pupils, but now educates so large a number as 200 boys and upwards.

The boys are taught the rudiments of the English and the vernacular languages, and are instructed in the various branches of useful education. The first class seem to have a familiar insight in English History, and appeared to have been carefully taught the Latin. They read and parsed through some sentences of Dryden's Virgil with facility and the whole of the classes evinced proficiency and talent.

The examination was conducted by Captain Richardson, Messrs. Hare, James Middleton and R. Dias, and Rajah Kale Krishen made himself very useful in the Bengally examinations. The Rajah was supported by Baboo Moteeloll Seal, and one or two other native gentlemen.

The tutors attached to the institution are Isserchunder Shahai, Joychunder Bhose, Nundcoomar Bhose, Koilaschunder Bhose and others.

The 9th class read out of the English Spelling Book and explained the meaning of the words in Bengally.

The 8th class read out of an abridged edition of the English Reader, published by the School Book Society of Calcutta.

The 7th class read out of the same book, but in a more advanced page. These two classes could also explain the sentences in Bengally.

The 6th class read out of No. 2, of the English Reader and explained themselves very aptly in Bengally.

The 5th class read lessons from No. 3, of the above book, and explained themselves very satisfactorily.

The 4th class read and explained themselves from No. 4 of the Reader, in English.

The 3d class read from No. 1, of the Poetical English Reader and explained themselves also in English. They parsed very well too.

The 2d class evinced great efficiency in the Political Reader No. 2, they explained themselves well. This class answered questions in Geography and Roman History much to the satisfaction of those present.

The 1st class read several sentences from the first four Books of Virgil's Æneas, and answered questions in English History, geography, mathematics and grammar, with considerable aptitude.

About fifty books were distributed as prizes among those boys who had given general satisfaction to their tutors, and in the attainments of their studies, after which the visitors retired, much pleased with all they had witnessed.

At the close of the examination Rajah Kalee Krishen addressed the youths in the Bengally language. Mr. Middleton of the Hindu College then rose, and stated that he had watched the progress of the institution for the last five years, and had observed a regular advance in the proficiency of the students. He regretted to observe so few respectable natives present on this occasion, and he was compelled to confess that he regarded it as a characteristic indication of their apathetic indifference to the intellectual advancement of their countrymen. There were some noble exceptions, he said, to the applicability of this reproach, but they were very few. He concluded by congratulating the institution on its success. Captain Richardson next rose, and said that he was happy to express his concurrence in all that Mr. Middleton had said in favor of the institution. He (Captain R.) had privately examined the first classes, and had been highly gratified with the manner in which they had acquitted themselves. It was always, he observed, a most pleasing spectacle, to see so many Hindoo youths exhibiting a knowledge of the language and sciences of England, but the present occasion was one of peculiar interest from the circumstance of the teachers being themselves Hindoo youths, who had received instruction at our public institutions, and who devoted their time and labour gratuitously to the benefit of their countrymen. These teachers had other fixed duties to attend to, but they generously gave up all their leisure time, which they would have devoted to idle amusements, to the instruction of their pupils. It would be impossible for him (Capt. R.) to say how much he admired the conduct of these generous young men, and he hoped that when it became more generally known, that so noble an example would be followed by others of their countrymen. Mr. David Hare next addressed the meeting, and after explaining how he had watched the institution from its very commencement, expressed the deep interest which he felt in its success, and observed how much he had been gratified by the examination which had just taken place.—*Hark. STEAM TUG ASSOCIATION.

MARCH 26, 1838.

Fourth half yearly meeting of the proprietors of the Steam Tug Association, rendered special as per following advertisement :

PRESENT.

J. Cullen, Esq.,	A. McGregor, Esq.,
Charles Dearie, Esq.,	A. H. Sim, Esq.,
Alby (for Dr. Burt.)	Charles Dumaine, Esq.,
Captain Somerville.	John Carr, Esq.,
Captain Thompson,	K. R. Mackenzie, Esq.,
J. W. Cragg, Esq.,	W. Prinsap, Esq.,
George Hill, Esq.,	J. D. Dow, Esq.,
James Hill, Esq.,	Radanath Dutt.

Mn. Sim, being called to the chair.

The half yearly report of the committee and secretaries having been read, it was resolved unanimously,

That the report be received and recorded, and the accounts attached thereto be passed.

Proposed by Mr. Cragg, and seconded by Mr. Dearie, and carried,

That all shareholders of the original stock subscribed in sicca ruppees, be entitled to receive, whether in cash or as a set-off against whatever new stock they may take in the enlarged subscription, the difference of value of each share between the old and new coin, viz. Co.'s Rs- 66-10-8 per share.

Upon consideration of that part of the report which refers to reduction of the establishment.

Captain Thompson stated his reasons for calling a special meeting of proprietors for determination upon this question, which were forcibly urged by him to the effect that the vessels had worked well upon the present footing and were paying well, and that he conceived the proposed reductions would save a mere trifle to the Association, while the keeping up of the same establishments as heretofore would secure the more active and zealous conduct of those employed.

Read a letter from Captain Cunningham, of the Forbes, much to the same effect.

Proposed by Mr. Cullen and seconded by Mr. Mackenzie, and carried,

That it is not expedient to reduce the establishments of the present tugs, below the statement of their late equipment (laid upon the table), as regards present incumbents, but that the committee be requested on vacancies taking place, to use their best exertions to promote economy consistent with the full efficiency of the vessels.

Proposed by Mr. James Hill and seconded by Mr. Cragg, and carried,

That the committee be requested to enquire into with a view of ascertaining whether a better method of supplying the fuel for the steamers cannot be found, and whether the appointment of an efficient superintendent at the coal depôts might not be desirable.

Proposed by Mr. Cragg and seconded by Mr. G. A. Prinsep, and carried,

That a dividend of 50 Company's rupees per share be advertised for immediate payment.

Proposed by Mr. G. A. Prinsep and seconded by Mr. A. McGregor, and carried,

That the measures taken by the committee and referred to in the report for the construction of the two new vessels, and for the procuring their engines from England, are confirmed, and the thanks of the proprietors be conveyed to Captain Henderson for his active and zealous aid on behalf of the association.

Read a draft of the additional articles prepared by the legal advisers of the association for embracing the 200 additional shares.

Proposed by Mr. W. Prinsep and seconded by Mr. Cullen, and carried,

That the additional articles referred to, be engrossed as an appendix to the deed of co-partnership, and the signatures of all new subscribers be procured thereto.

With reference to the 18th clause of the deed of co-partnership, requiring the annual election of the committees of management.

It is Resolved unanimously.

That the gentlemen who were upon the late committee be re-elected, and that James Cullen, Esq., be elected to the room of John Stewart, Esq., deceased.

That the thanks be given to the chairman.

(Signed) A. H. SIM, Chairman.

DISTURBANCE AT DUM-DUM.

We learn that a disturbance, or rather a difference, but of a somewhat serious nature, has, within the past week, taken place among the troop-establishments of the Horse Artillery at Dum-Dum. The facts and generally understood causes are thus represented to us: "The troop in question arrived from Kurnaul in the month of January last; and, not aware of any claim which the syces and grass-cutters had, or conceived themselves to have, to a higher rate of pay, in consequence of their location at regimental head-quarters, than they before received while cantoned in the upper provinces or on the march down, the commanding officer drew for them in his abstracts for that and the succeeding month at the old and general rate of four rupees a sycce and 3-8 for each grass-cutter, and these rates were duly passed and paid to him in the proper departments. On pay-day, however, the men refused to receive these sums, alleging that they (the syces) were entitled to five rupees, the grass-cutters to four rupees each, and that the establishments of the relieved troop and its predecessors had, ever since 1848, received such higher rates which were specially authorized for the presidency station. The circumstance was reported through the Commandant to Major General Sir Willoughby Cotton, commanding the division. Whether in consequence of instructions to such effect from that quarter, or acting upon his own judgment, we know not precisely, but Brigadier Faithful had the men assembled and ordered them to take their pay, that is the lower rate, which they did. Subsequently, however, when the ordinary stable duties came to be demanded of them by the troop officer, the great majority were not forthcoming, and after several ineffectual bugle calls only some fifty or sixty could be mustered for the service of the horses. In more than one instance the complaints of the treatment which they had received, and their refusal to resume their duties were "improper in form and insubordinate in expression." And thus the matter stands for the present.

We are advised that this belief on the part of these men originates thus: The scale of pay claimed by them was sanctioned for similar establishments of the horse artillery depot of instruction (which existed at Dum-Dum, from the end of 1825 until the beginning of 1830) and is the same as received by the syces and grass-cutters of the Governor-General's body guard at the presidency. Two years previously to the abolition of such depot, by Lord Wm. Bentinck, a troop of horse artillery was for the first time stationed at Dum-Dum, and (we suppose because it would have been an absurd anomaly that the same classes of servants in the same arm of the service should receive different rates of pay at the same station), to the establishments thereof, so long as they should continue at Dum-Dum, were sanctioned the allowances before authorized for those of the depot. As, although a relief of the horse artillery at the station has since taken place more than once, it has never extended to the troop horses, the syces and grass-cutters have remained stationary until the present year, when the relieving troop brought down all its material equipment, horse, draft and native establishments, while those of the relieved troop accompanied in like manner its recent march to Upper India, having received until the last the high rates of pay allowed to them nine years before. Aware of what their predecessors had received at Dum-Dum, expecting that this was the local rate, and not a special grant, under temporary circumstances to the establishments of a particular troop, the syces and grass-cutters of Captain Wood's troop of horse artillery have claimed the same. Thus it will be seen that they have some ground for their belief, some show of reason for their expectation. But it will, of course, remain with the Government, to whom the matter has already been referred, to decide on the merits of the men's claim, as to whether the rate hitherto sanctioned is to continue in force at Dum-Dum with this, and all future troops, or to terminate with the departure of the men in whose favour the increase was specially made.

So much for the history of this little affair, on which, as in many more or less similar cases, since the unfortunate total abolition of corporal punishment in the native army, our readers will, as ourselves, be compelled with regret to observe the extreme helplessness of commanding officers, whenever their legitimate authority is, as here, disputed by their native soldiery and regimental establishments. Orders are disobeyed, duties unperformed, wholesome control impracticable, because the European officer knows, that if he brings an offender to a court-martial, that court will and must pronounce the very sentence to obtain which the offence was committed. There are not, there cannot be, intermediate and second ary punishments of any efficacy in the native army. It was, therefore, a most enormous liberality—the evil effects of which are becoming year by year more and more apparent.—to remove the one old barrier of restraint, to prohibit any the slightest and most necessary flogging, the dread possibility, the distant terrors of which had most salutary effects upon the discipline and respectfulness of the sepoy. Rarely resorted to, and then as a preliminary to permanent and ignominious discharge, it was not abused, it was not as elsewhere and of old a horror to humanity, but a needful and proper, because efficient and moderate, punishment for the two offences to which it was latterly restricted.—Hurkurn, March 28.

THIRD MEETING FOR THE FORMATION OF THE LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of the Meeting of the Committee of the Landholders' Society, held on the 27th March 1837, at the Town Hall.

*Present:—*P. Dickens, Esq.; G. Prinsep, Esq.; Rajah Buroodacant Roy; Rajah Kalkisena Bahadoor, Rajah Rajnarain Roy; Cowar Satterchurn Ghosaul; Baboo Ramruttun Roy; Baboo Ramcomul Sen; Baboo Prossunocomar Tagore, and several visitors.

P. C. Fagore, the Provisional Secretary of the committee, submitted the names of the following gentlemen who have applied since the last public meeting to be elected as members of the society, and they were accordingly elected unanimously:

Mr. Martin, of Messrs Cockerell and Co.; Mr. Deussen, of Messrs J. A. Walker and Co.; P. J. Paul, Esq.; R. Salano, Esq.; James Farlong, Esq.; John Carr, Esq.; W. N. Hodge, Esq.; W. Storm, Esq.; John Bell, Esq.; John H. Bognun, Esq.; H. Harris, Esq.; D. Andrew, Esq.; A. C. Dunlop, Esq.; J. Humtrays, Esq.; George Palmer, Esq., at Pooreah; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; Baboo Ramdhone Banerjee; Baboo Unoolaprasac Banerjee; James Fergusson, Esq.; Capt. G. Vint; John Hollingshead Haimes; Rustomjee Cowasjee, Esq.; Rancee Soorja Money Debey, zemindar of pugnunnah Lushkeerpore Rajshaye, by her Dewan Casseyauth.

Mr. Dickens proposed the following resolution, which was seconded by Rajah Kalkisena Bahadoor, and carried nem con.

Resolved, that the names of parties wishing to become members shall be proposed at any ordinary meeting, and such members shall be ballotted for, and elected at, the ensuing one.

Proposed by the P. Secretary, that the Union Bank be requested to act as treasurer of the Society, and it was accordingly resolved that a letter be written to the secretary of the Bank on the subject.

Proposed by the P. Secretary, that the following establishment is necessary to commence the business of the Society, and it was accordingly passed by the meeting.

Proposed Establishment for the Landholders' Society.

An European Secretary.....	0
An Assistant.....	50
A Pundit.....	20
A Moonshee.....	10
A Peon.....	5
A Duffry.....	5
Contingent charges.....	10

Co.'s Rs. 100

The committee authorized Mr. Dickens to secure the services of a European secretary for the Society, upon the understanding that the gentleman selected shall take charge of the office at present gratuitously, until the fund of the institution shall enable the committee to allot a reasonable allowance to him.

Proposed by the P. Secretary, that as a division of labour is unquestionably found to be of great advantage to a great undertaking, and also in anticipation of other benefits, it be resolved that for each three districts of Bengal there be two gentlemen of the committee appointed special corresponding members, with a view of attracting new members to the Society from those districts, and endeavouring to establish Branch Societies there as recommended by rule xxxiv. of the Society, as well as to promote the general objects of the Society, and it was carried unanimously.

Proposed by Rajah Kalle Kissen Bahadoor, and seconded by Rajah Rajnarain Roy, and carried, that notifications in English and Bengally be inserted in the newspapers, that any party desirous to become a member of the Society may send his name to the secretary, and the amount subscription to the Union Bank.

Proposed by the P. Secretary and carried nem con, that the rules of the Society and the proceedings of the first day's meeting be printed in English and Bengally, and in English and Oordoo, 1,000 copies each, and 200 copies also in English, and on thin priest paper, the former for distribution in the Mofussal, and the latter for despatch to England.

Proposed also by the P. Secretary, and carried, that notices of motions on all subjects be given by the member who proposes to move at one ordinary meeting, to be discussed and decided in the following one.

Proposed by the P. Secretary and carried, that a respectful letter be addressed to the Government informing it of the establishment of the Society, and soliciting that it will command the service of the Society whenever required on all judicial, revenue and police matters, or any thing connected with the general welfare of the country, in the same manner as the Government now does with the Chamber of Commerce, in all points of a commercial nature.

The P. Secretary submitted an application from certain individuals requesting the Society to memorialize the Government to introduce the vernacular language in the proceedings of the Sudder Dewany Adawlut instead of Oordoo, as contemplated by the Judges of that Court, in substitution of Persian. It is ordered that, with reference to the preceding resolution on the consideration of this subject, it be postponed till next meeting.

It is resolved, that at present, every Monday at 4 p.m. a meeting of the committee be held until otherwise directed.

SUPREME COURT.

FRIDAY, MARCH 3.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan, and Sir J. P. Grant).

Their Lordships gave judgment this day in the following cases which stood over.

CORKRELL AND OTHERS ASSIGNEES OF PALMER AND CO. versus THEODORE DICKENS AND OTHERS.

Sir E. Ryan said, that this was a demurrer to a bill in equity, and was argued before his Lordship sitting alone in the 4th term of last year. The court now allowed the demurrer.

The learned Chief Justice here went over the facts stated in the bill at great length; they are shortly as follow:—An Armenian merchant, deceased, resident in Batavia, was a creditor of a large amount of the firm of Palmer and Co. His interests are represented by the present defendants, the Registrar of the Supreme Court being the administrator in this country with the will annexed, and the other defendants being parties beneficially entitled under the will. Upon the insolvency of Palmer's firm the registrar of the Supreme Court as administrator cum testamento annexo, proved the debt due to the deceased creditor from the firm, and obtained payment of the rateable dividends. About the same period, however, a certain public body in Batavia, called the Orphan Chamber, who had been appointed by the will to act as executors and trustees for the deceased creditor in that country, instituted a suit in the courts of Batavia against certain property (a plantation) in which the firm of Palmer and Co. was interested. This suit being decreed in their favour, the property in question was ordered to be sold, and the proceeds directed to be paid over to the Chamber as executors and trustees for the deceased creditor. The whole amount thus received by the estate of this creditor of Palmer and Co., greatly exceeded the dividend received by the other creditors. Accordingly the present suit was instituted by the assignees of Palmer and Co., to compel the defendants (as being the only representatives of the party, who were subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Calcutta) to refund the dividends which were paid over to them in ignorance of the proceedings instituted in Batavia, so as to make the amount received altogether by the estate of this particular creditor not more than equal to the dividend paid to the other creditors.

The learned Chief Justice stated, that no authority precisely in point had been cited by the counsel who argued the case at the bar, although the question had been argued with great acuteness and ability. Hunter v. Potts, 4th term Reports, and Phillips v. Hunter, 2d Henry Blackstone, had been cited but there was no analogy between those cases and the present. The principle there laid down was that personal property passes under the assignment, wheresoever situated, and it had been contended that this property therefore in Batavia passed to the assignees, and that the creditor or his representatives must either bring it into hatchpotch, or relinquish their claim against the general dividends. But the property in the case before the court was not personal property; for a foreign court of competent jurisdiction had decided the contrary. The assignees had there set up their title, which the court abroad refused to acknowledge. Now, it had been laid down by Lord Loughborough that the law of bankruptcy will not interfere with the law of other countries with respect to property situate there. This subject had been well considered in Chief Justice Story's Commentaries on the conflict of Laws, p. 345. It was true that the Bankrupt Law, professed to be founded on justice and equality, and it was equally undeniable that this principle would be so far violated in the present case, that one creditor would be allowed to receive more than the rest. But this unequal distribution depended on the decision of a court of competent jurisdiction abroad, judging in conformity with the laws which prevailed there, and it was impossible for the Supreme Court of Calcutta to remedy the inequality. The case must be admitted to be one of doubt and difficulty, but the court had come to the conclusion that the complainants had shown no ground for relief. The demurrer therefore must be allowed and the bill dismissed.

Bill dismissed accordingly.

The Chief Justice intimated, however, that each party must pay their own costs, because the case was undoubtedly one of sufficient difficulty to justify the complainants in taking the opinion of the court.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith for the complainants.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Grant for the demurrer.

IN THE MATTER OF DAVID FAIRLIE CLARKE AND OTHERS,

OU-ELY AND MACNAGHTEN ASSIGNEES OF FERGUSON AND CO. versus GRIGSON AND OTHERS, ASSIGNEES.

The report of the argument in this case may be found in the Hurkaru of the 29th January last.

Sir Edward Ryan. This is a petition of appeal from a decision in the Insolvent Court, of our lamented colleague, Sir Benjamin H. Malkin. I should have gone fully into my reasons, if I had seen any ground to differ from the judgment appealed from, but on the fullest consideration of the circumstances, I am clearly of opinion that the learned Judge decided correctly. The circumstance that the house was insolvent at the period when the retiring partner quitted it, is not sufficient, the transaction, if otherwise bonâ fide. The whole question turns on the existence or non-existence of fraud; ex-parte Menke in the 1st vol. of Maddock's Reports, governs the present case; it was there held that knowledge of the insolvency alone, without other circumstances to evidence fraud, was not sufficient. The decision which I formerly gave in the case arising from the insolvency of Palmer and Co. and the decision of Mr. Justice Grant in the case of Mackintosh and Co. in the Insolvent Court, are both distinguishable from the present. There the transactions were effected by fraud. In the present instance, looking at the whole of the evidence, I am of opinion that the arrangement was fairly and honestly made. The order must be discharged, and with costs.

Sir J. P. Grant.—The present appeal has made it necessary for me to re-consider the decision which I pronounced when sitting alone in the Insolvent Court, in the case relating to Mackintosh and Co. I have not changed the opinion I then formed, and if the circumstances of the present case had been the same, I should have given a similar decision. But all these cases must depend on their own peculiar circumstances; and fraud, which existed in that case and which was expressed to be the ground of that decision, is absent here. There is no reason to doubt that the statement of their accounts as set forth by the partners at the time of the retirement, was not made in good faith. Although there was a deficiency of assets, they might reasonably suppose that this would be subsequently made up. I think the case cited in 1st Maddock is precisely in point; and Anderson v. Maltby cited for the defendant differs from the present case, because there the circumstances shewed that the partner retired solely from the conviction that the house was insolvent at the time. The appellants have shewn no ground for disturbing the decision.

Discharged with costs.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith for the Appellants. Mr. Clarke and Mr. Grant for the Respondents.

RAJA BURRODOCAUNT ROY versus JUGOUTCHUNDER MOOKERJEE AND OTHERS.

The argument of this case is briefly reported in the Hurkaru of the 31st of January.

Sir Edward Ryan.—This is a very singular case, and I do not recollect one similar to it in this court. The original decretal order, which was merely ad computandum was obtained in 1837, but the final decree was not until November 1837. Now the present supplemental bill was filed in the interval, and prays for an account of the estate, and that an injunction may issue to prevent waste. It is established by Smith v. Eyles, 2 Atkyn's Reports, that an interlocutory decree does not take effect, until the final decree has been pronounced. Since, therefore, we cannot look at the final decree, which was of posterior date, it follows that there is no equity to support the complainant's case.

Sir J. P. Grant concurred.

Bill dismissed.

Mr. Clark and Mr. Lieth for the complainant.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Cochrane for the defendants.

A rule for a nonsuit will be moved for on Monday in the case of Walker v. Bruce, on the liberty reserved.

The Insolvent Court sits this day, (Saturday.) — Hurkaru, March 3.

MONDAY, MARCH 5.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF JAHN BEHRE versus ABDULLAH BARBER.

The Advocate-General mentioned this case to the Court in which liberty had been reserved to move to set aside the verdict, upon certain points of Mahomedan law. The learned counsel was not prepared upon the argument, but he mentioned the case, because this was the last of the four initial days of term allowed for the moving of new trials.

The court gave leave to move for a rule on a future day.

SHREEKISEN SING v. GOVINDCHUNDER BUNDOPADHYA.

The Advocate-General moved for a rule to shew cause why damages to the amount of Rs. 1,365-3 should not be substituted for the verdict of one rupee, nominal damages, entered for the plaintiff. This was a special action brought for the breach of an agreement for the purchase of several maunds of indigo, and it was tried as an undefended cause last term, when nominal damages were given for the plaintiff. The court then said that in estimating damages, the period when the breach occurred, must furnish the standard of computation. Now the agreement was, that the defendant would weigh the indigo within ten days, and pay the full amount, and remove the property; or, if failure took place within that period, that he would pay interest at 9 per cent. It is contended that the breach took place, not at the expiration of the ten days, but at the time of action brought, and it was proved that a re-sale could not have been then effected without great loss. The learned counsel further stated that if account for goods bargained and sold had been added to the special count, the plaintiff would have been not only entitled to a verdict, but entitled to recover the full purchase-money, and for this position he cited Dunnors v. Taylor, Peake 56. Now it was entirely through the operation of the new rules of pleading that the plaintiff had been debarred from inserting such a count in the present instance; it was hoped, therefore, that if the court should be hostile on the first point, leave would be given to the plaintiff to discontinue this action on payment of costs.

Sir Edward Ryan.—Take your rule upon both points.

Rule granted accordingly.

J. A. WALKER AND OTHERS v. W. BRUCE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Leith moved for a rule to shew cause why the verdict for the plaintiff in this case should not be set aside, and a nonsuit entered instead. The learned counsel said that the liberty reserved was for a nonsuit, but he should submit that he was entitled to move for a verdict for the defendant.

Sir Edward Ryan.—State the points very shortly which you mean to take on argument, because you will be entitled, of course, to a rule nisi.

Mr. Leith.—The first point relates to matter of form; negligence is the foundation of this action, and yet there is no duty alleged from the breach of which negligence may be inferred. Max v. Roberts, 12 East's Reports. Secondly, we shall contend, on the merits of the case, that the action cannot be maintained unless there be fraud on the part of the defendant, and in support of this we shall rely on Pasley v. Freeman, 3 Term Reports, Haverns v. Crassu, 2 East. Ashlin v. White, Holt's misprison cases. Tapp v. Lea, 3 Bosanquet and Puller. Scott v. Lara, Peake. Ames v. Milward, 8 Taunton. The third objection which we intend to advance is, that the injury is too remote. Vicars v. Wilcox, 3 East. Ward v. Weeks, 7 Bingham. And, lastly, we shall rely on the laches and negligence of the plaintiff himself, by which he would be barred from recovering even if this action were maintainable on principle. Butterfield v. Forrester, 11 East. Vernon v. Keyis, 4 Taunton.

Sir Edward Ryan.—Your rule must be for a nonsuit, and not that a verdict may be entered for the defendant.

Rule granted.

SREEMUTTY NISBUNMONEY DABRY versus SHAMYLLOL TAGORE AND HURRELOLL TAGORE.

Mr. Leith made an application to the court on behalf of the defendant Hurrellohl, to strike out certain words in a decretal order drawn up in this case. A motion had been formerly made by Mr. Prinsep, to let in two creditors to prove against the testator's estate before the Master (see the report in the Hurkaru of February 15th) and this was granted conditionally by the court, the terms being subsequently accepted by the counsel for the creditors. Mr. Leith stated, that he had then, as counsel for Hurrellohl, consented to the motion upon a common consent paper put into his hands that morning in court, but affidavits were now put in, to the effect that the terms of the order varied from the original motion, and that this alteration was made without any communication with the party, his counsel, or attorney; it was, therefore, complained that the consent of the party had been entered upon an order to which he never intended to consent at all.

Sir E. Ryan.—If a consent paper is put into counsel's hands, and the motion afterwards takes a different turn, the counsel ought either to exercise his own discretion, or consult with his client, before he consents.

Mr. Leith then offered to pay all the costs, upon being allowed to withdraw the consent, which would put the parties in statu quo.

Sir E. Ryan.—It seems that the attorneys here, (Messrs. Hedger and Smalley) are in partnership. There is only an affidavit of Mr. Smalley that he was ignorant of the change in the terms of the motion. Why is there not an affidavit by Mr. Hedger?

Mr. Leith stated that that gentleman had been absent at Rudwan, and was present only upon one of the days when the application was before the court.

Sir Edward Ryan.—There must be an affidavit by Mr. Hedger of all the facts, and the matter must stand over in the meantime. Notice to one of the firm would be equivalent to notice to all. But if the consent was really given improperly, it is clear that the court has not the power of imposing terms concluding this party behind his back: he ought to have an opportunity of shewing cause against the order itself.

Ordered to stand over.

BISSUN SOONDUNNEY DABBY versus RAJAH BURRODICAUNT ROY.

The Advocate-General moved for an injunction to stay the proceedings in this suit. An application had been made to the late Mr. Justice Malkin, to alter certain sums incorrectly set forth in the final report of the Master, which was refused as an irregular proceeding. The present motion was made on a bill of review brought to rectify the error in the final decree made in the cause.

Mr. Clarke took a preliminary objection to the application. This is the state of the case. We have got a decree for thirty-eight lacs of rupees; the opposite party wish to alter this sum by the subtraction of three lacs, and in the meanwhile to stay our execution. Ev then own shewing, therefore, we are entitled to five and thirty lacs, and yet no money is brought into court.

The court said, that this objection could not be got over.

Mr. Clarke stated, that he was willing to make an offer. If the other side paid in the thirty-five lacs his clients would be very happy on their part to remit the disputed three lacs without further opposition!

Motion refused.

JOYGOPAL BYSACK v. SRIEMUTTY NUNBUNGO DOWSE.

This was a demurrer to a bill in equity. The question raised was, whether a certain legacy given by the testator to his two daughters was a contingent bequest, or vested and absolute.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Grant for the heir.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith in support of the demurrer for the legatees.

Mr. Clark.—There are four distinct legacies in the will, the first is the bequest of all of the testator's property to his son—the second, which is admitted to be contingent, is the bequest of Rs. 30,000 to his widow, receivable in the event of the son dying under age. The third is the disputed legacy of Rs. 20,000 to each of his daughters, with an additional sum of Rs. 10,000 to be shared between them for the purchase of a house; and lastly, the residuary clause in favour of his brother, the executor. Of these the first is simple and distinct, and the second is compatible with it, because the latter is contingent on the failure of the former; we contend, that unless the third is construed to be contingent also, the whole will is utterly inconsistent and unintelligible. It is true that there are no words in the second member of the clause of bequest to the widow and daughters repeating the contingent event, but from all the circumstances it is clear that the contingency expressed in the first member is intended to govern the bequest contained in the second. It is observable that here was a mistake in the original translation of the will in respect of the Bengally word "au." This word commences the second member of the sentence, and is explained to mean, "and," "other," "further," or "moreover." Now whichever of these expressions be used in the interpretation, the inference is obvious that the two members of the sentence are intended to be connected together, and to be governed by the self-same contingency. But, farther, if the construction contended for by the other side were to prevail, it must also extend by parity of reasoning to the fourth bequest, so that the whole property would be devised away absolutely to the executor, and the son (to whom the will sets out by giving all) would be entitled, upon coming of age, to nothing more than the lapsed legacy to the widow. This would be absurd. The object of the testator is evident:—he wished to give all to the son, if he survived his minority, as the head of the joint and undivided Hindoo family. If the son lived, he was expected to take care of his mother and sisters, and if he died, the will was to provide for them. In the construction of wills there are four general rules applicable to the present case, and which the court ought to consider in pronouncing their decision. 1st. That where there is both a particular intent and a general one, the former must be sacrificed to the latter. Robinson v. Robinson, 1 Burrow. Doe v. Harney, 6 B. and C. 2dly. The construction of the will is to be made on the entire instrument, and each part is to be considered with reference to the others. 3dly. Where expressions inconsistent are used in a will, it is not necessarily to be inferred that the first is to be overthrown. Jesson v. Wright, 2 Bligh. Lastly, that an express disposition cannot be avoided by mere inference and argument drawn from other parts of the will. Laurence v. Laurence, 1 Vesey Junior.

Mr. Grant followed on the same side, and dwelt chiefly on the grammatical necessity for construing this legacy a contingent bequest, as an authority for which he cited "Horne Tooke on conjunctions!"

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith contra. The view taken by the learned counsel is more acute than just. The new reading which is so much relied on, appears more favourable to our construction. All the general principles laid down with respect to the interpretation of wills are freely granted in the abstract, but then applicability is denied. One, indeed, is a strong argument in our favour, viz that an express disposition cannot be varied by reference to other parts of the will. Now, here is an express and absolute disposition on the face of it, in favour of the daughters, and it is sought to qualify this by reference to the former clause Wright v. Compton, 9 East. There is nothing in the argument that our construction, if allowed at all, must be extended to the bequest to the executor. That bequest is residuary, that is, a bequest, intended to take effect, according to the essence of residuary clauses in general, after the payment of all legacies previously specified whether vested or contingent. The intention of the testator clearly was to give this legacy to his daughters absolutely: for he speaks of their being given in marriage, and these sums were intended for a marriage portion.

Mr. Clarke replied.

Sir Edward Ryan.—I have no doubt in my mind upon this case. The court is of opinion that the testator's intention is clear to give these specific sums to his daughters contingently, only upon the decease of the son under age. Upon any other construction the will is unintelligible.

Demurrer overruled—but without costs.

BARCLAY versus MORTIMER.

The Advocate-General moved for a rule to shew cause why the judgment by default against the defendant in this action should not be set aside. Affidavits were put in, certifying that there was a good defence on the merits, and stating that a negotiation between the parties had been pending for some time previously to the signing of the judgment, the whole matter being intended to be referred to arbitration, and finally settled out of court.

Sir E. Ryan on looking over the affidavits, said, that they were insufficient, because they only stated the expectation of the defendant, and did not shew any positive duty on the part of the plaintiff to delay entering up judgment after the usual time.

BIHOWANNY PERSAUD EXECUTOR OF KHOONDOROOLOLL
v. GOPAULLOLL AND OTHERS.

This equity suit came on for hearing on evidence. The bill prayed for a decree establishing the will of the testator. Khoondoroololl, and declaring the rights of the parties also for an account of all the estate of the said testator, which had come into the hands of the defendants, or any of them, and for an injunction against wasting the same, and for the appointment of a receiver.

The bill and the answer of Gopaullohl having been opened by Messrs. Sandes and Grant, the Advocate-General rose and stated to the court, that the parties were willing to effect an amicable arrangement, which would render the further hearing unnecessary. It was hoped, therefore, that the prayer of the bill would be granted, and the rights of the parties decreed.

The court said, that an account might be decreed, but that it was impossible to decree the rights of the parties until some evidence was given concerning those rights.

All the necessary parts of the evidence were then put in and read, and the court accordingly directed a decree for an account, and declared the rights and shares to which the parties were severally entitled under the will of the testator Khoondoroololl.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Sandes were for the complainant.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Grant alone for one of the defendants, Gopaullohl.

Mr. Leith alone for one of the defendants, the widow, of the testator.

Mr. Cochrane alone for the other defendants.—Hurk. March 7.

Stands for hearing on the equity board for to-morrow, Thursday. This day there are no causes yet set down on the plea side.—Hurk. Mar. 8.

THURSDAY, MARCH 8.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF JAUN BEEBEE AND OTHERS v.
ABDOLLAH BARBER.

The Advocate-General moved for a rule to shew cause why the verdict for the defendant should not be set aside, and a verdict entered either for the whole, or pro tanto, for the lessors of the plaintiff. This ejectment case was tried last sittings, and a verdict being found for the defendant, leave was reserved to the plaintiff to move upon certain points of Mahomedan law. The learned counsel shortly stated the points which he intended to take on argument. First, that the instrument under which the defendant claimed was nothing more than a writing declaring the proprietorship of the party executing it, and that it was therefore inoperative altogether. Secondly, that a legacy cannot be left to one heir without the consent of the co-heir. (McNaghten's Mahomedan law, pp. 53, 121.) And lastly, that the instrument in question, if it was operative at all, operated as a will, because all charitable gifts are taken to be legacies, and follow the same rules of construction, (D'Huison's Tableaux de l'Empire Ottoman), and that therefore according to the rules of Mussulman law the testator could not by will legally alienate more than one-third of his whole estate. (Sir William Jones, on the law of inheritance, p. 517.)

Rule granted.

SIREMUTTY NIBBUNMONEY DARFY v. SHAMYLOLL AND HURRYLOLL TAGORE.

Mr. Leith renewed the application to the court, which stood over from Monday, in order to allow time for an affidavit to be put in by Mr. Hedger, the other partner in the firm of Messrs. Hedger and Smalley, attorneys for the defendant Hurrylohl. The matter, it may be recollected, had reference to a consent alleged to have been obtained through mistake to an order of the court.

Mr. Charles submitted that there ought also to be an affidavit by the defendant Hurrylohl himself. Mr. Hedger had sworn positively that he himself was not in court at the time when the order was made, but he could only swear to his belief that the defendant Hurrylohl was not present on the occasion.

The court said, that the affidavit of Hurrylohl was indispensable.

Motion stood over.

IN THE MATTER OF W. P. BIRD, DECEASED.

Mr. Leith moved that citations do issue, upon an exemplification under seal out of the Ecclesiastical Court at Madras. There were affidavits verifying and authenticating the seal of the court.

The Chief Justice said, that the affidavits were not necessary. Although a doubt was expressed some days since whether the seal of a court in Ireland did not require authentication here, this is not necessary in respect of the Madras court, the seal of which proves itself.

Motion granted.

MONDAY, MARCH 12.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan, and Sir J. P. Grant.)

WALKER P. BRUCE.

The court was occupied from eleven o'clock until half past four, in hearing the argument in this case, the facts of which are well known.

The Advocate General, Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke for the plaintiffs, shewed cause against the rule nisi obtained by Mr. Lieth for entering a nonsuit.

The learned counsel first directed attention to the question of evidence, and contended that there was sufficient proof that the defendants were aware of the fact that the goods were not on board at the time of granting the policies, and that they had no right, therefore, to grant the policies under those circumstances, or at least to certify that the goods were actually laden. The case was like giving a receipt or acknowledgment for money when no money was received. It was not intended to advance any argument inconsistent with the finding of the court as a jury, but although they had negatived moral fraud, it was still open to shew that there had been fraud in law. Crassa negligentia aequiparatur dolo. The learned counsel were proceeding to shew that the act of Jones, the agent, must be taken in every respect to be the act of the defendants, his principals. But the court said, it was quite unnecessary to cite cases upon this point, because nothing could be more clear than that a principal was civilly responsible for all the acts of his agent done within the scope of his business and employment.

The learned counsel then considered the cases which had been cited when this rule nisi was obtained, and they expressed their surprise that Pasly v. Freeman, Haycraft v. Creasey, Tapp v. Lee, and others of a similar tendency should have been adduced in support of the defence, when the principle on which they proceeded was in favour of the plaintiff. The case of Foster v. Charles, 6 Bingham's Reports, and Cubbett v. Brown, 7 Bingham, sufficiently established the distinction between moral fraud or fraud in fact and constructive fraud or fraud in law. These cases lay down the position that the motive is immaterial altogether, that it is not necessary for the party to have collected with any other, or to have derived personal benefit from the false representation, and that it is simply sufficient to support the action, wherever a false representation has been actually made, provided that it was known at the time to be untrue by the party making such representation. Nay, further, that it was not absolutely necessary the party should know it to be false, it was enough if he did not know it to be true, and injury subsequently accrued therefrom. But the case upon which they principally relied was Polhill v. Walter, 3 Burnswell, and Adolphus's Reports, (K. B.) 114. There the defendant had accepted a bill of exchange per procuration, and an indorsee, on the faith of such implied guaranty having sued the supposing acceptor, and having been non-suited for want of proof of authority to accept, brought the action against the defendant for falsely and deceitfully representing that he was authorized to accept by procuration; and the action was held sustainable notwithstanding that the jury had negatived all fraud in fact.

Mr. Lieth and Mr. Grant, contra, in support of the rule, contended that none of the cases cited in the least degree touched the main objections urged against the present action. It had been asked why the cases on the question of fraud had been adduced in support of the defence, the reason was that that entire series of cases established that fraud was the essence of the action.

The court here intimated an opinion that they considered (the case of Polhill v. Walter) as bearing the most strongly against the defendants.

The learned counsel submitted that the case was clearly distinguishable. Bills of exchange and promissory notes stand upon their own peculiar footing, and are liable to rules of construction not applicable to other transactions. The defendant, by accepting the bill by procuration made himself a party to it, and this alone removed the main objection which exists, in the case before the court. Every subsequent indorsee, acquired a right of action against the defendant, because all subsequent parties to a bill are by a retrospective operation referred back to the date of the creation of the instrument, so that there was a privity between them and the defendant, just as much as if he had contracted with each specifically and by name. No case had yet been cited in which either of these two objections had been got over, first, that the communication was not made directly to the plaintiff, and secondly, that there was no sort of intention at the time of performing the act in question, and no probability that the defendants could perceive, of causing injury to the plaintiff in particular, or indeed to any party at all. It was an act in which no one but the defendants and the party insured were in the least degree concerned, and it was the plaintiff's own gratuitous act to step in and act upon the faith of matters which had no reference to him whatever. The doctrine would be most mischievous in its consequences. In effect it would compel an Insurance Office to take upon themselves not only the duty of insuring the safe arrival of goods, which was their appropriate business, but also the burthen of guaranteeing the due shipping of those goods for the protection of consignees of whom they know nothing.

Other arguments were urged by the learned counsel for the defendants, but not dwelt upon at so much length. It was contended that here the plaintiffs' own negligence had barred them from recovering. Even between party and party (where the objection of want of privity did not exist), a plaintiff could not recover, unless he took sufficient precaution to protect his own interests, and surely the present plaintiffs exercised very little caution, indeed in relying so implicitly upon the faith of an act done by third persons, with whom they had no connexion, and who were not in the least degree called upon to protect their interests. Again, the injury is too remote and consequential. Authorities abundantly shew that the injury complained of must result as a direct and natural consequence from the alleged wrongful act, and surely it was not a very direct or probable consequence from the granting of a policy of insurance, expressing that the goods were shipped on board, that strangers would be forthwith induced to advance money on what turned out to be fictitious consignment. The learned counsel also said, that they by no means conceded the point that the defendants knew at the time of granting the policies that no goods were shipped. The defendants were in fact themselves the dupes, equally with the plaintiffs; the real tort-feasor had escaped, and now one of his dupes sought to make good his losses by claiming compensation from the other.

The court, after a short consultation, said that they should deliver judgment in a day or two.—Hurkaru, March 13.

TUESDAY, MARCH 13.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

CHARLES MORELL v. HENRY T. SHELTON.

Mr. Marnell opened the pleadings. This was an action of assumpsit on two bills of exchange. The first was for £68 10s, drawn in 1834, by one John Lewis, at Swan River upon the Lords of Her Majesty's treasury at 30 days' sight. The other was a similar bill for £285. The present plaintiff was the last indorsee and holder, and the defendant was one of seven prior indorsers. To these counts were added the common money counts. Defendant pleaded want of due notice, the dishonoured bills not having been presented for payment to the indorser until December 1837.

The Advocate General stated the case for the plaintiff. He presumed that the plea dispensed with all necessity for proving the making the indorsements, the dishonour and protest; he should, therefore, confine himself to a statement of the facts relating to the alleged want of notice and shew that the notice, though apparently late, was given within a reasonable time. The plaintiff was a merchant then resident at Calcutta; and, having consigned certain goods to the Mauritius, received the present bills, amongst others in payment, and shortly afterwards transmitted them to England for realization. The bills were duly accepted by the Treasury; but, on being presented for payment, were refused, and, in due course, protested. The reason why the Treasury refused to pay these bills was, that the prior indorser had made the instruments payable to the order of Henry Sheldon, while the defendant (who was the party intended by that indorsement) indorsed them over, under the signature of Henry T. Sheldon. The non-payment, therefore, arose from an irregularity, and that caused by the defendant's act. It was an exceedingly hard case for the plaintiff, and Mr Sheldon might, at any time, if he chose, cause the bill to be altered and the mistake to be rectified, without prejudice. The delay in giving due notice of dishonour was thus explained:—Mr Morell had left India for Europe before the dishonoured bills were returned to this country, nor was he aware of the fact until Messrs Coutts and Co., the London Agents, apprized him of it by letter while he was sojourning to Paris, whereupon he immediately took active steps and wrote on the subject to India. In the meantime the protested bills had been received in Calcutta by Messrs. Cantor and Co., who were not acting as agents, but as personal friends, of Mr. Morell, and these gentlemen not knowing anything about the defendant, (who was a wanderer upon the face of the earth!) waited until they received directions from Mr. Morell himself. Mr. Morell's letter reached them in June 1837, and they immediately wrote to the Mauritius concerning the whereabouts of the defendant, but were unable to meet with him until December 1837. The defendant then, on being applied to for payment, positively refused. The learned counsel contended, that under these circumstances, although certainly a long period had intervened, the notice of dishonour was, in fact, given to the defendant within a reasonable time, and as soon as the state of things would admit, and he cited Bayley on Bills to shew that the reasonableness of the time must always be judged of by the particular circumstances of the case.

It appeared in evidence from the cross-examination of Mr. Cantor himself, that Morell had appointed the firm to act during his absence from India by a general power of attorney, but the power had never been acted upon at all, and had since been returned at the request of Morell. The defendant was proved to have been in Calcutta about December 1836, but he received no notice until a year afterwards. In December 1837, when applied to for payment, he objected to the want of notice of dishonour, and refused; but he called several times at Messrs. Cantor's office, and was apparently anxious to compromise the matter, offering to get the bills negotiated for the plaintiffs and proposing to alter his signature in the indorsement. The dishonoured bills were received in Calcutta in June 1836. Mr. Cantor said that the reason why he had not sent the dishonoured bills to the Mauritius or Australia in search of the defendant or some of the prior parties was, that the sets were incomplete.

The plaintiffs case having closed.

Mr. Prinsep was proceeding to address the court, but was stopped by their Lordships.

So Edward Ryan.—We do not think it necessary to call upon the defendant's counsel, because the want of sufficient notice bars this action. These bills were returned, dishonoured and protested, to Messrs. Cantor and Co. in June 1836, now they held a general power of attorney, sufficient to authorize them to take the necessary steps and to act as the plaintiff's agents. But what do they do! they make no enquiries and take no steps whatever until the June of the following year. If they had made enquiries they would, in all probability, have found the defendant, who is proved to have been in Calcutta at an intervening date, namely in December 1836. When the address of a party is not known, it is sufficient to use a due degree of diligence in inquiring for it, and to give the notice when he is discovered; but we are of opinion in this instance due diligence was not used.

Verdict for the defendant.

The Advocate General and Mr. Marnell for the plaintiff.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Cochrane for the defendant.—Hark, March 14.

THURSDAY, MARCH 15.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

The Advocate-General moved to make a rule nisi absolute.

Mr. Clarke said that it was usual for common motions to be taken before those likely to occupy a considerable time.

Sir E. Ryan said that this was generally a matter of discretion, and that counsel were not bound to postpone their motion, and he enquired what the rule in question was for.

The Advocate-General replied that it was for a new trial.

Sir E. Ryan then said that all motions, of course, must be taken before motions for a new trial.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF JAUN BENBEE, versus ANDDOOLAH BARBER.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith shewed cause in this case against the rule which had been obtained on the points of Mahomedan law. They admitted all the law and authorities cited and relied on by the opposite side, but contended that they were not applicable. This is not a bequest in extremis, for the instrument was executed two years before the death of the party, and the terms are very different from a will or last testament. This instrument is a wuqf, or donation for charitable purposes, and such endowments, according to the 2d vol. of the Hindaya (Haughton's Translation, p. 334) follow different rules of construction, and the restriction requiring the consent of coheirs to the alienation of a larger proportion than one-third does not apply. The donor had appointed herself matwallie or trustee during her lifetime, and had named others to act after her death. Such an appropriation of the property destroyed its heritable qualities, and as long as the trusts were performed, the trustees could not be removed. The learned counsel referred to a French work, quoted by the Advocate-General when moving for the rule, D'Husson's l'abbau de l'Empire, Ottoman, which they said was a sealed book to them, and the authority of which they considered dubious.

The Advocate-General, in support of the rule, contended, that this instrument was to all intents and purposes a donation in contemplation of death, and it was utterly immaterial how long before the decease of the party it was executed. It was contended that this was an endowment for charitable or pious purposes, but endowments were appropriation to the service of God, where all temporal uses were renounced by the donor. Such was not the case here. But, even admitting that it was an endowment, how had it been shewn that a different rule of construction ought to prevail as to the period of talking effect. The general principle had been admitted, that according to Mahomedan law, a gift in prospect was not to be valid—the owner must divest himself of the property at the time. Nowhere the property was not immediately aliened—the proprietorship was retained, for the owner might have disposed of it at any subsequent period. The treatise of M. D'Husson had been successively referred to on the other side, because the dictum was in point against them. It must be admitted, indeed, to be nothing more than the opinion of a learned and able man, reasoning from what he had seen or heard. But what more was Mr. Hamilton's opinion, or Sir F. Macnaghten's? they were opinions certainly entitled to considerable weight. Nay, what was the Hadiya itself? Undoubtedly a book of authority, when the meaning could be discovered, but the writers of that work appeared to resemble the ancient scholiasts, who used to insist that they could maintain any question equally well on either side.

The Court at the conclusion of the argument said, that they should consider the case, and deliver judgment on a future day. In the course of the argument Sir E. Ryan intimated that in motions for new trials, or to set aside verdicts, notice ought always to be given to the clerk of the papers, by the party intending to make the motion, in order that the exhibits produced in evidence at the trial, might be brought into court.

NIBBUNMONEY DABBY V. SHAMYLOL TAGORE AND HURRYLOLL TAGORE.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant renewed the application previously made to the court, that the order, in which the consent of the defendant Hurryloll, had been inserted through mistake, might be altered. The necessary affidavits both of the attorney and of Hurryloll were now put in, deposing that neither the party nor his attorney were in court at the time that the alteration was made in the terms of the order.

Mr. Prinsep, on behalf of the creditors, strenuously contended that the consent ought not to be withdrawn. It was either a lapse of counsel, or a dereliction of duty in the attorney, and the client was bound. If a consent paper is put in, it is the duty of the counsel or the attorney to exercise their discretion, whether under an altered state of circumstances the consent ought to be withheld or not. It is too late to object afterwards, and the retraction involves an innocent party in great hardship and expense, at all events the party in making the present application ought to pay not only the full costs of the application itself, but all the costs of the reference which had been going on in the interim in the master's office.

The Advocate-General also opposed the application, appearing on behalf of Shamylohl the co-defendant, but he did not speak of costs, as his client could not be liable.

Mr. Clarke, as counsel for the complaint in the suit, said that it was matter of indifference to him whether the disputed consent was given or withdrawn; but he had found it necessary to watch the proceedings in order that the disputes of the other parties might not have the effect of delaying his client in obtaining the benefit of his decree. It was for this reason that he had considered it to be his duty to urge upon the court that the reference ought not to be suspended in the Master's office during the continuance of these proceedings.

Mr. Leith replied generally.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the court were satisfied that neither Hurryloll nor his attorneys were in fact consenting parties to this order. A common consent paper was put into counsel's hands, and it seems the practice is for the opposite attorney to give the instructions upon an understanding between the attorneys themselves, although nominally the counsel are instructed by the attorney of their own client. Now the court was of opinion that it is the duty of counsel when handing in a consent paper to be so far acquainted with the circumstances of the case as to be able to exercise his discretion in the event of matters taking an unforeseen turn, and any alteration being suggested in the terms of the order. Yet under the circumstances, especially as their Lordships were satisfied that the attorney for the creditors must have been aware that no consent would ever have been given voluntarily to the altered terms, they could not hold this party bound by an order to which he never in fact consented. As to the costs of the present application, they must be paid by the respective attorneys of the defendant Hurryloll and of the two creditors. The costs of the proceedings in the Master's office to remain as before, and unaffected by this application.

Motion granted for the withdrawal of the consent.

The cases of Rodriguez v. Syed Buksh, and Behar Toorun v. Shaik Khyroolla stand on the Common Law Board for to-morrow, Friday (this day.) Hurk., March 16.

FRIDAY, MARCH 16.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

MARCELLINO RODRIGUEZ V. SYED BUKSH.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Taudes appeared for the plaintiff, no counsel were instructed on behalf of the defendant, who had let judgment go by default.

This was a writ of inquiry to assess damages, the action being in assumpsit for rupees 656, with interest at 12 per cent., lent by the plaintiff to the defendant. A written instrument was put in, and the signature duly proved. The case did not fall within 21 of the new rules of pleading which directs that in certain actions brought for re-payment of money only, the prothonotary shall compute principal and interest.

The Court assessed the damages at the full amount claimed.

BEEBEH HOORUN V. SHAIK KHYROOLLAH.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith were for the plaintiff—no counsel appeared for the defendant, who had allowed judgment to pass by default, and against whom the damages were now assessed.

The action was assumpsit, on a special agreement, instituted by a wife against her husband. This agreement was a formal post-nuptial settlement, by which the husband undertook to pay a marriage-portion of Rs. 4,000, one moiety immediately, and the other during wedlock; and, further, to find food and raiment for his wife, and not to marry a second wife without her consent and approbation. The breaches were, 1st, the non-payment of the stipulated marriage portion; 2dly, default in providing for and maintaining the wife; 3dly, marrying a second wife without the consent of the plaintiff; and lastly, marrying a third wife.

The Court at first questioned whether an agreement not to marry a plurality of wives (that privilege being recognized by Mahomedan law) was not illegal, as being against public policy, and in restraint of marriage in general; but its legality was afterwards admitted.

The deed of marriage settlement was put in and proved by the attesting witness and by the Mullah, who explained contents.

The half-brother of the plaintiff was called to prove the circumstances. By his evidence it appeared, that the wife (the present plaintiff) had been sent on a visit to her father, and the defendant, in the meantime availed himself of the opportunity to take unto himself another bride. His first wife returned once to the house; but, having quarrelled with her husband for his conjugal infidelity, was promptly turned out, and never took up her abode with him again. She had been living ever since with her mother, and her personal expenditure might amount to about eight rupees per month, besides four rupees for a servant, and the expenses of a child which she had bought!

Sir Edward Ryan.—The court is of opinion, that the plaintiff is entitled to Rs. 2,000, being that half of the dower payable immediately; but the other moiety cannot be said to have yet fallen due, because no particular time having been specified, the husband must be allowed the whole period of wellcock for the payment. We also think that the wife is entitled to Rs. 10 per month for maintenance. As to the third and fourth breaches, we cannot consider the non-fulfilment of an engagement against marrying a plurality of wives, a subject matter for damages, unless you can give positive proof what damages have been sustained.

Mr. Prinsep suggested, that as it was a valid breach, nominal damages, at all events, ought to be entered, pro forma.

The Court acquiesced.

Verdict for the plaintiff accordingly.

[Harkara, March 17.

MONDAY, MARCH 19.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan, and Sir John P. Grant.)

AMELIA DENT versus DE SOUZA AND OTHERS.

The Advocate-General moved that it be referred to the Master to inquire and report what sum may be requisite to be set apart out of the estate for the purchase of a commission in the army and outfit expenses of an infant ward. The learned counsel said, that he moved upon notice, and as there was no doubt that the infant was entitled to the property, he apprehended that there would be no opposition made.

Motion Granted.

SHRIKRISHN SING versus GOVINDCHUNDER BENDOPADHYA.

The Advocate-General on a former day had obtained a rule nisi to set aside the nominal verdict given at the trial of this case, and to enter a verdict for Rs. 33,653, instead. The action was for not accepting, and paying for 155 maunds of indigo agreed to be purchased at Rs. 248 per maund. The agreement was entered into on the 16th July, 1837, and the defendants undertook to weigh the indigo within ten days, to remove it from the premises of the plaintiffs, and to pay the full amount of the purchase-money, or on default to payment interest on the whole at the rate of 9 per cent. This the defendant failed to do, and, in September, they endeavoured to compromise the matter, and to obtain a remission of the price, as the value of indigo was likely to be considerably deteriorated. From the evidence adduced at the trial, it appeared, that indigo began to fall in the month of September, and that the greatest depreciation occurred in the following month, and that no sales in fact took place between July and December.

Mr. Clarke shewed cause. The plaintiffs are only entitled to a nominal verdict, because in this form of action they are bound to shew what precise amount of damages they sustained by the breach of contract. Now as the value of indigo did not fall in the market until September, and the contract was broken in July, the plaintiffs might have sold immediately and obtained the full price agreed for. They have sustained no loss, therefore, which the court can recognize, because they might themselves have prevented it. It may be argued on the other side, that the time for the performance of the contract was not terminated at the expiration of the period of ten days, and that, therefore, the plaintiffs would not then have been at liberty to re-sell the indigo. But it is clear, from the terms of the agreement, that ten days were limited absolutely, and that, at the close of that time, the plaintiffs might have either re-sold the property, or brought an action immediately for the stipulated price.

The Advocate-General in support of the rules. They first contended that, admitting there was no loss from the deterioration of the value of indigo in the market up to September, they were entitled to some addition to the verdict for nominal damages, on the ground that interest on the money was due from the time of weighing.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that there was considerable doubt whether the interest ran from the time of weighing, or from the expiration of ten days.

The Advocate-General said that, if that was the case, there would be no possible object in weighing the goods, and no advantage gained by either party.

Sir E. Ryan.—Yes, there would. As soon as the goods were weighed an action might have been brought for their value immediately, as the property would be changed by the act, and the goods would thenceforth remain at the risk of the purchaser.

The Advocate-General then urged his main ground of argument, viz., that this was a continuing contract, and that the time of performance was not limited to the ten days, because the payment of interest was the penalty to which the defendants were to submit for the privilege of enlarging the time. The defendants treated it as an open contract by the negotiation which they kept on foot, and then application in September to have the price remitted. Again, it appears from the evidence that there were no sales of indigo between the months of July and December: this is a sufficient explanation of the alleged circumstance that the value was not depreciated for a long period. The price could not be said to have either risen or fallen, because, in fact, no sale could have been effected at all.

Mr. Prinsep followed on the same side.

Sir Edward Ryan.—There is no doubt whatever of the justice of this case; nevertheless, we are of opinion, that the form of action ought in strictness to have been for goods, bargained and sold. The plaintiff would then have been entitled to recover the full contract price, and they might have maintained that action in July, as soon as the limited period of ten days had expired. In the present form they are tied down to proving the precise amount of damages which they sustained by the defendants' nonfulfilment, and it is clear, that if the market-price was not lower than the contract price at the time when the contract ought to have been performed, the plaintiffs actually suffered no loss, and are entitled only to nominal damages. However, we think the verdict ought to be increased on a different ground. According to the evidence, although the price was sustained for a long time, no sales were effected at all until after the fall had taken place. For this reason we shall allow the plaintiff damages at the rate of Rs. 20 per maund, but we cannot give them the costs of the present application.

The counsel for the plaintiffs urged another application to the court, in the event of the first being refused, viz., that the plaintiff might be allowed to discontinue and commence de novo. This point, however, becoming unnecessary, was of course abandoned, and the court intimated that there was no authority in the books of practice for allowing a discontinuance of the action, after a general verdict.

Rule absolute for increasing the damages at the rate of Sa. Rs. 20 per mensem.

SUMBOOCHUNDUR MOOKERJEE AND OTHERS versus NUBBOO-CHUNDER CHATTERJEE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Birwell, for the plaintiff) shewed cause against a rule obtained by Mr. Prinsep, for setting aside proceedings for irregularity. The plaintiff had obtained a judgment in the original action, and several of the parties, plaintiff and defendants, having since died off, writs of scire facias, and alias scire facias were successively issued at different periods to revive the judgment. The revived proceedings were against the representatives of all the defendants, and the rule nisi was obtained on the ground that the judgment ought to have been revived against the representative of the survivor only. Now there is no authority to be found in the books precisely in point, but it is contended that, as the rule of English law allows execution under a scire facias against the personal and real representatives of the survivor, and against the real representatives of the deceased, in this country where there is no distinction between real and personal representatives, the judgment ought to be revived indiscriminately against the general representatives both of the survivor and the deceased.

The Court inquired whether counsel recollected the decision given upon this point, or an analogous point, in the Tugnot's case in March 1835.

Mr. Prinsep as counsel for the defendants, and Mr. Grant as Amicus Curie, mentioned that, in the case in question, the court held, after long deliberation, that the scire facias ought to be against the representatives of the survivor only.

Mr. Clarke said, that if that were really the case, he should not take up the time of the court by pressing the argument further, but he apprehended the decision would be found to be not quite in point.

The Court, after some further discussion, ordered the matter to stand over, for the purpose of ascertaining the former decision.

Stood over.

PARKER versus HILTS.

The Advocate-General moved, upon the usual twenty-four hours' notice, for eight days further time to plead. The defendant was up the country, and a consultation was necessary between the attorney and his client before a plea could be filed.

Rule nisi granted.

RAMNARAIN MOOKERJEE versus ANNA MARIA GONSALVES.

The Advocate-General for a rule to shew cause why the judgment should not be set aside on the ground of gross fraud. From the facts sworn to in the affidavit, it appeared that Mrs. Gonsalves had been induced to sign certain papers, in the belief that they were securities to herself for certain sums of money which she had lent at different times; but the papers so signed turned out to be a deed of mortgage of a house and premises, and a bond for Rs. 40,000, with a warrant of attorney to enter up judgment thereon. The judgment had been entered up on this same warrant of attorney.

The learned counsel also applied to the court for a special order that service of the rule nisi on the attorney of the plaintiffs might be deemed good service; but he shewed no grounds.

Sir Edward Ryan. You may take your rule nisi, but we cannot make a special order relating to the service, unless the parties have absconded, or some other special reason be shewn.

Rule nisi granted.—HURK., March 20.

THURSDAY, MARCH 22.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, and Sir J. P. Grant.)

WALKER v. BRUCE.

The court this morning delivered judgment in this case.

Sir Edward Ryan.—This was an action on the case for an injury alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiffs, by means of a false and fraudulent representation on the part of the defendants. It will be necessary for me to state the facts at some length, as several questions were raised during the argument, concerning the facts which really were or were not proved at the trial.

The plaintiffs are merchants in Calcutta, and the defendants carry on business as insurers at the same place, under the style and firm of the Union Insurance Company. One Dear Christian applied to Jones, the agent of the defendants, to grant a policy on certain goods intended to be consigned from Dinapore to Calcutta. The policies were accordingly made out by this agent, who sent peons on board, with directions to take charge of the goods laden on board the boats. It was proved that according to the custom of trade, the peons were always the servants of the Insurance Company, and distinguished by particular numbers, but the boats were supplied by the party insured. It was further proved, that in general, the policies are not made out and given to the party, until it is ascertained that the goods have been actually shipped; and that, therefore, the agent ought not to have previously parted with the policies. Now, Jones was aware, at the time, that he granted the policies, that the goods were not on board; but, he himself swears, that he would not have parted with them, had it not been for his confidence in Christian's integrity and good faith. In these policies the goods are expressed to be laden on board. There was also an indorsement, (never seen, however, by Jones), in the hand-writing of Christian, empowering the present plaintiffs to adjust in the event of loss. Christian, on obtaining the policies, transmitted them to the plaintiffs, advising them at the same time that he had consigned to them the goods mentioned therein, and that he had drawn bills against the proceeds. These bills were accepted by the plaintiffs, and paid when due, but the goods, prevented to be consigned, never arrived, having never been shipped on board at all. Christian, after successfully practising this fraud, absconds, and the consignors bring their action for the consequential injury they allege themselves to have sustained, through the representation made on the part of the Insurance Company. At the trial, we were of opinion, that the plaintiffs would not have accepted the bills, but for the representation made by the defendants, at the same time, however, we negatived all fraudulent intention in general and, therefore, by implication, any intent to defraud the plaintiffs individually. Under these circumstances we found a verdict for the plaintiffs, reserving liberty to move for a nonsuit. This rule having been obtained, and argued before us in the course of the present term, we are now of opinion that it must be made absolute.

The earlier cases clearly do not affect the present question, as they all proceeded upon the ground of positive fraud. These are Paly v. Freeman, Papp v. Lee, Haycroft v. Creasy, Ashlin v. White, and Scott v. Lara. But two decisions of a more recent date approach nearer and afford some ground of argument for the defendant. These are Foster v. Charles, 7 Bingham's reports, and Corbett v. Brown, 8 Bing. By these cases a distinction is taken between moral fraud, and fraud in law, and it is held that a statement, false within his own knowledge, made by the defendant to the plaintiff, and occasioning an injury to the latter, will furnish a ground of action, without proof of any interested or malicious motive. The distinction, however, consists in this, that in all the cases relied on for the plaintiffs, the false representation was made directly to the plaintiffs, and with an intention to induce them to act upon the faith of it. The strongest case of all is Polhill v. Walter, 3 Barnwell, and Adolphus's Reports, p. 114, yet it is no exception to the previously established rule. In that case, the defendant had, in good faith, accepted a bill of exchange by procuration for the drawee, but without any authority from the latter, and an endorsee, having been nonsuited in his action against the drawee, brought an action for the consequential injury thus sustained through the wrongful representation of the defendant, that he was duly authorized to accept by procuration. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, because the defendant had in effect made the representation to each party to the bill individually, and the giving credit to such representation, was, according to the ordinary course of business and dealing, and was a natural and necessary result. If in the case before the Court, the insurers had expressly represented to the plaintiffs in particular that the goods were on board, and if the giving credit to the statement had been a matter within the ordinary course of dealing in the commercial world, the case would not have been distinguishable from Polhill v. Walter, and our judgment must have been for the plaintiff. But we do not in the least degree interfere with the principle established by the cases adverted to. Our decision proceeds upon the principle that a man can only be liable for the natural and necessary results, and not for the remote and indirect consequences of his acts.

Sir John Grant fully concurred with the Chief Justice: His Lordship went over the facts, and stated at considerable length, the reasons upon which he grounded his judgment.

The Advocate-General Mr. Prinsep, and Mr. Clarke, for the plaintiffs.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant, for the defendants.

Rule absolute for a nonsuit, with costs.

JEGGUCHUNDUR MOOKERJEE v. RAJAH BURRODICAUNT ROY.

In this case a demurrer had been filed by the defendant, to a bill of review. The complainant now moved that the bill may be dismissed, on payment of costs.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep for the complainant.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the defendant.

Bill dismissed.

DOE v. PRESTON.

The Advocate-General for the lessor of the plaintiff had obtained a rule nisi upon affidavits, for dispaupering the parties who had entered into the rule to be made defendants in the place of the casual ejector, and who had been admitted to defend in forma pauperis.

Mr. Marnell shewed cause upon affidavits that the property of the defendants was altogether worth a sum below the limited amount.

Rule discharged.

CURBIN v. CURRIE.

Mr. Leith moved to make a rule absolute for an attachment on non-performance of an award, which had been made a rule of court.

No cause was shewn.

Rule Absolute.

RAMCHUNDER CHOWDREY v. SHAMYLOLL TAGORE.

Mr. Clarke mentioned to the court this case, which stood for hearing ex-parte, on the equity board for to-day.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that it would be more regular to postpone it until to-morrow, as Thursday was a motion-day.

RAMCHUNDER CHOWDREY v. SHAMYLOLL TAGORE is the first of four cases, which are entered on the plea side for Friday (This day).—Harkaru, March 23.

FRIDAY, MARCH 23.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

DOPON DEMISE OF JAUN BEEVE versus ABDULLAH, BANNER.

Sir Edward Ryan intimated to the counsel in this ejection case that the court found some difficulty in deciding the points which had arisen on Mahomedan law, and that they purposed, therefore, before giving judgment, to refer five questions for the opinion of the Moulavie, who would be directed to cite authorities for each position.

1st Question.—Whether, according to Mahomedan law, an endowment to charitable uses is valid, when qualified by a reservation of the rents and profits to the donor himself during his life?

2d Question.—Whether delivery of the property is essential, to render an endowment valid, according to the rule which governs other gifts?

3d Question.—Whether the endower can lawfully constitute himself Mutawallee or trustee?

4th Question.—Whether a female can lawfully be Mutawallee?

5th Question.—Whether the instrument in question is a will, or a deed of endowment?

BRODEAN BEEVE versus RUSSUM TUNDELL.

Mr. Cochrane opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated the case for the plaintiff. This was an action of trover to recover twenty-nine gold mohurs. The plaintiff was a widow, and being about to proceed to Chittagong, entrusted to the charge of the defendant, a box under long lock and key containing forty gold mohurs, and several gold and silver ornaments. On her return after an absence of two years, the ornaments were duly returned, but the box in question was found to contain only eleven gold mohurs. The learned counsel apprehended that it would be for the defendant to explain how the deficiency occurred, when it had been proved for the plaintiff that the specified coins had been committed to the defendant's custody, and that the defendant had accepted the trust.

Two sepoys having been examined in support of the plaintiff's case, it appeared from their testimony that the box had been broken open by the defendant, and the money abstracted. The court then interrupted the examination, and enquired how the case could be proceeded with when it appeared from the plaintiff's own witnesses that (if true at all) the alleged cause of action amounted to a felony.

The plaintiff's counsel admitted that they could not get over the objection, Plaintiff nonsuited.

The Advocate General for the defence.

RAMDHVAL BUCKET V. RAMHET BUCKET AND OTHERS.

The particulars of this case are reported in the Hurkaru of February 7th. The action was brought to recover the sum of 1,000 rupees for money lent. Judgment had been obtained by default against some of the defendants, and the case was heard ex-parte against the others, last term. A verdict was then obtained for the amount claimed and judgment entered up, but no notice of assessment of damages having been given to those of the defendants who had allowed judgment to pass by default, the court intimated the next day that the plaintiff could take nothing by his judgment.

The case was again heard ex-parte today, and the damages were now assessed upon due notice.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Cochrane for the plaintiff.

ROBERT WALKER V. THOMAS REEVES.

Mr. Prinsep opened the pleadings. This was an action in trespass, for pulling down and destroying plaintiff's wall, and throwing the bricks upon his premises, and committing other violence. The defendant had pleaded the general issue to all the trespasses except the demolition of the wall, which he justified upon the ground that his windows were ancient windows, and the plaintiff by building the wall had obstructed the light. The replication traversed the averment that the wall obstructed the light, and also that the windows were ancient.

The Advocate-General stated the case. These parties lived in adjacent dwelling-houses. From the windows in question, which overlooked plaintiff's premises, defendant's servants had been in the habit of throwing rubbish, against which nuisance plaintiff had remonstrated in vain. He accordingly built this wall for his own protection and defendant, with the aid of his servant, had taken upon himself forcibly to destroy it, and to throw the bricks about on the plaintiff's premises, by which the servants of the latter had been materially injured. It would be for the other side to prove that the windows were ancient, and if they succeeded, the question would still remain whether the wall was built high enough to obstruct the light. The learned counsel submitted that it would be necessary for the defendant to shew also some ownership in the house, in order to give him a right to abate the alleged nuisance.

From the cross examination of the witnesses called for the plaintiff himself, it appeared that the windows were ancient windows, i. e. existing more than twenty years, and that the wall was of such a height, and placed in such a position, as to cause an obstruction to the light. This was of course sufficient to establish the defendant's justification; but the pleas having unnecessarily taken issue on certain allegations on which the plaintiff would be entitled to a nominal verdict. The court suggested that it appeared a fit case to be referred to the arbitration of some gentleman at the bar. After some discussion this was agreed to. The hesitation on the part of the defendant arose from the circumstance that there were other parties not on the record, who were interested as partners of the defendant. These parties had commenced actions of the case against the present plaintiff for obstructing the ancient lights, and the decision of the court could only bind those whose names appear as parties on the record.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep, for the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the defendant.

Verdict for the plaintiff for nominal damages, subject to reference of all matters of dispute between the parties. Costs of the action, and of the award to be within the discretion of the arbitrators.

WILLIAM BARRETT V. WILLIAM TULLOCH FRASER.

Mr. Grant opened the pleading. This was an action for an assault, and the defendant had pleaded the general issue.

Mr. Clarke stated the case. The plaintiff is the head clerk in the Calcutta Lottery office, and the defendant is a partner in the firm of Messrs. Moore and Hickey, auctioneers. Some time since, the plaintiff purchased a lot of shawls by auction, and gave them in custody to the sircar at the auction room, to be put aside until removed. On inquiring for them subsequently, he discovered that one of the most valuable was missing, and an inferior shawl substituted. This matter he represented to the defendant, requesting that the shawl might be restored, or the purchase cancelled altogether. Defendant declined both alternatives, saying that no exchange of shawls had taken place, and that he would sooner trust the word of his sircar than of the plaintiff. Upon this, the plaintiff being irritated replied, that the auctioneers seemed to keep shawls for the express purpose of cheating their customers! Defendant thereupon struck plaintiff a violent blow over the eye, inasmuch that he was unable to attend to his business for some time, and was obliged to call in medical aid! The learned counsel said that the case was one of importance to the public. Tradesmen were not to be permitted with impunity to insult their customers, by insinuations against the truth of the assertions, and then follow up in violence by committing an outrageous assault.

Mr. Darling, of Messrs. Moore and Hickey's establishment; called as a witness. Defendant was standing at his desk at the time. There was a rail between him and plaintiff. The latter used abusive expressions, and found fault with the smallness of the establishment and of the bad management. The shawl in question had been knocked down for forty rupees; the difference between the two shawls was that one was a native shawl, the other a company's; can swear that he saw no blow struck, and that the defendant's fist was not clenched. The defendant motioned the plaintiff away with his hand, and, in doing so, he might have patted him on the face.

Mr. H. S. Mercer attended the plaintiff. His eye was slightly red, and he complained of a head-ache.

Two natives in the employment of Messrs. Moore, and Hickey were called, and deposed that the defendant did strike the plaintiff, but it was with his hand open, while waving him back, and saying to the dewan, "turn this man out."

Mr. Clarke then said, that it would be useless for him to call any more witnesses, as they were all evidently hostile.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Leith, for the defence), submitted that no assault had been proved. It is true that the slightest blow or touch is an assault in law, but it must be done with an intention to assault.

Sir Edward Ryan said that the court was of opinion that an assault had been proved, but that the case was a very trumpy one, and the smallest coin would be a sufficient recompense.

Damages, ONE ANNA.—Hurk. March 24.

MONDAY, MARCH 26.

Sir J. P. Grant sat alone in Court this morning, and intimated to the bar that all motions, except motions of course, should stand over. The absence of the Chief Justice is occasioned by a recent domestic affliction.

Two ex-parte cases, and one defended cause, still remain on the common law board. There are no causes remaining on the equity side.—Hurk. March 27.

TUESDAY, MARCH 27.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant.)

IN THE MATTER OF

Mr. Prinsep had moved the court yesterday for a commission de lunatico inquiring into the case of a certain party, a Hindoo, alleged to be of unsound mind. This person appeared to be connected with some wealthy native families, but the only affidavits on which the application was made, were those of a khansamah and a native doctor.

Sir J. P. Grant, this morning, said that stronger grounds must be shewn before a commission could be directed. The court would exercise a species of discretion and control, like that vested in a Grand Jury. This party was connected with wealthy families, yet the only affidavits were those of a khansamah, and a native doctor. The learned judge did not intend to imply that these deponents had not sworn to the real truth, but the former was in an inferior station of life, and of the latter the court had no means of judging concerning the education, experience or competency. There ought to be adduced the evidence of some relative or near connection, or else of a European medical practitioner, visiting the party for the purpose of examining his state of mind. His Lordship said, that he should adopt the course which he used formerly to pursue at Bombay, and take examinations in such matters at chambers, that the private affairs of the party might not become matter of public notoriety.

DWARAKANATH TATTORE versus ARCHIBALD BRYCE.

This was an action of debt on a promissory note, and was struck out of the board by the plaintiff's attorney.

Two ex-parte cases were heard. These actions were brought to recover the amount of attorney's fees.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith for the plaintiff.

There are no causes remaining on either the common law, or equity board.—Hulk, March 23.

FRIDAY, MARCH 30.

SITINGS AFTER 2D TERM—PLFA SIDE.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

SHAIK MAHOMED MASOON and AL-OTHER versus HAJJEL RUIJOB ALLY.

Mr. Clarke opened the pleadings. This was an action on the common counts, to recover two sums, amounting together to Rs. 2,334 with interest.

The Advocate-General stated the case. The plaintiffs are merchants and general dealers, and have been in the habit of lending different sums, and sending good at different times, to the defendant. In 1836 the defendant signed written acknowledgments of the sums in question being due, these acknowledgments were appended to certain entries and statements of account between the parties.

A Moonshee was called to prove the writing and signing of the acknowledgments of the debt.

The sircar of the plaintiffs deposed, that he had kept their accounts for several years, that they had had several dealings with the defendant, and that he had acknowledged these debts due. Of the plaintiffs, who are partners, one resides at Calcutta and the other at Madras. The defendant, a short time since, obtained a decree against one of the present plaintiffs, and property was seized in execution under it. [This witness was cross-examined at considerable length, in reference to other suits and actions between the parties, and also a reference to arbitration.]

The court inquired what was the object proposed by all this cross examination.

The defendant's counsel replied, that it was to impeach the testimony of the witnesses, and to shew that these entries were false and fraudulent altogether.

Mr. Prinsep (with whom was Mr. Leith, for the defence) addressed the court. This case depends entirely on the credibility of the witnesses, and it is on that account that matters apparently irrelevant have been gone into. One witness said that he knew nothing of the action formerly brought by the present defendant, while another proved that he was waiting in court with the former on subpoenas to give evidence in that very action. The present claims were utterly fictitious. The defence was not in the nature of a plea of payment or set-off, which would be inadmissible on the present pleadings, but it is founded on the suspicion and fraud presented by the transaction. Former actions and arbitrations have been instituted between the parties, and it is for the court to consider whether the setting up of pre-existing cross-claims long after the prior disputes had been settled is not a circumstance of strong suspicion. It is pretended that these entries were signed by the defendant, but it will be proved that he is scarcely able to read or write at all.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the grounds of defence appeared inconsistent. At one time it was alleged that the present claims had been adduced before arbitrators, and, consequently, already settled, which, however, admitted their genuineness, and at another time it was attempted to impeach them altogether.

Mr. Prinsep said, that these claims had been advanced before, but were then rejected, and that they were now urged again with the fresh aids of pretended signatures, and fictitious witnesses. He submitted that the whole case was one of fraud and imposture.

A Mogul horse-dealer, who had been one of the arbitrators, was called as a witness, and the question was put whether the entries in question had been seen by him before, and whether they were now in the same state.

The Advocate-General objected to this question, on the ground that the award, if relied upon, ought to have been specially pleaded.

Sir E. Ryan.—An award certainly cannot be relied on in bar of the action, as a settlement of all disputes between the parties, unless pleaded specially. But this question is put with a totally different object, and it is quite competent to use the evidence as a presumption of fraud, and to prove that the debt never existed.

The above question was then put to this witness, and another Mogul witness, and they both swore that certain alterations had been made in the entries since the time when they had first seen them. These witnesses were subjected to a rigorous cross-examination with the view of impeaching their evidence, and shewing discrepancies in the testimony of one and the other.

The Advocate-General was then called upon, and replied in a speech of considerable length, and great acuteness, in which he endeavoured to reconcile the evidence adduced for the plaintiffs and to shew the improbability of the tale which the defendant had set up.

The court, after a short consultation, said, that the learned advocate in his address, had urged every thing for his client's case that could possibly be said in its support, but their opinion remained unchanged, and there must be a verdict for the defendant. This opinion was founded chiefly on the discrepancies in the evidence of the plaintiffs' own witnesses. Besides, the matter of the arbitration could not be got over, unless the plaintiffs meant to say that the whole was an ideal and fictitious scene, invented from beginning to end for the purposes of the present defence. The plaintiffs now supported their case by more than one witness, and yet they had not pretended to shew that one of their witnesses had been called when the same claims were before the arbitrators.

Verdict for the defendant.

This case occupied the court the whole day. There was a vast amount of contradictory and cross swearing, and perjury on one side, if not on both.

HURRYLOLL TAGORE versus SHAMYLOLL TAGORE.

The Advocate General moved the Court, that in this cause (standing next on the board) a verdict should be entered by consent for the plaintiff, subject to a reference to arbitration.

Mr. Clarke for the defendant was instructed to consent.

Verdict for the plaintiff, subject to reference.

The court, on rising, intimated that to-morrow, Saturday (this day) common motions only would be taken; and that their Lordships would not sit until twelve o'clock. The Insolvent Court sits to-morrow (this-day). —Hark. March 31.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT.

In the Insolvent Court this-day Mr. James Ambrose was brought upon his petition. There was no notice of opposition, but the Chief Justice observing fourteen creditors on the schedule who had not been served with notice of this application, adjourned the hearing to the next court day, parties to be served in the meantime.—In the matter of Peter Foster, application was made to amend the schedule and to insert therein the names of several creditors. But the Chief Justice remarked that this was by no means a matter of course, this being the day of hearing, the application should have been made previously, and the more so, the insolvent not being in jail. The assignee stated it was very difficult to obtain information from the insolvent regarding his state. The Chief Justice refused to make the order, and the matter stands over.—In the matter of James Black a third dividend of ten per cent. was declared; in the matter of Captain Battley a fourth and final dividend was declared of sixteen per cent.—Major Ousely was discharged from the responsibilities of assignee to the estate of Fergusson and Co.—Hark, March 5.

SUDDER REVENUE BOARD.

CIRCULAR ORDERS.

NO. 18, A HEADING FOR THE STATISTIC REGISTER.

The Sudder Board have informed the commissioners for the divisions of Chittagong, Bhaugulpore, Dacca and Assam, that the Deputy Surveyor General has instructed the surveying officers employed in their divisions to communicate with the commissioners on the subject of a proper heading for the statistic registers, as it is probable that local circumstances may require some modification of the form in use in the Western Provinces. The commissioners have been directed in communication with the Deputy Surveyor General, to determine what native documents should be supplied by the surveyor to the settling officers. The board wished to know whether a khusrak and kheshtonee Asameervar may not be sufficient. The khusrak might (says the board) be prepared in the form described below, the measurement columns being filled up by the native surveyors, and the remainder supplied by the deputy collector, or other officer of the revenue department who accompanies the party.

CIRCULAR ORDERS, 1838.

NO. 19 RETURNS OF SUMMARY SUITS.

By an extract from a letter from the secretary to the Government of Bengal in the revenue and judicial departments, that it is not to be gathered from the statements now supplied, how long is the average time taken by summary suits from institution to final decision. It is desirable, his honor the Deputy Governor thinks, to know this, and it was requested that the information should be supplied in future.

The letter of Mr. Secretary Thomason, dated the 4th September 1831 (says Mr. Halliday), prescribed a statement of appeal to commissioners on summary suits; this statement not having been prescribed to commissioners by the resolutions (approved by Government) of the statement committee, the orders of 1832, regarding it must be virtually abrogated. It will not, therefore, be necessary to furnish such a statement, and the Deputy Governor has requested that the orders regarding it issued by the Board to the commissioners, may be recalled.

The Board have circulated the above orders among the commissioners of revenue, directing them to furnish the acquired information, and to observe from the latter paragraph, that the return of appeals of summary suits, preferred against the decision of the collectors, and their subordinates, need no longer be submitted.

The suits (says the Board) referred to the Civil Court, should be entered in the figured columns with the decided cases "as disposed of," and the number thus referred should also shew the date of the oldest suits pending at the end of the quarter.

The Board have also desired the commissioners to direct the several collectors to transmit their respective returns, immediately the quarter has expired, so that they may reach the Board's office at the latest by the 20th of the succeeding month; any deviation from these orders (says the Board) will be seriously noticed.

NO 20.—REGARDING DEPUTY COLLECTORS UNDER REGULATION IX. OF 1833.

The Board have desired the commissioners to report to the civil auditor whenever any interruption to the duties of a Deputy Collector, under regulation IX, of 1833, may occur, whether by death or leave of absence.

No. 21.—From an extract of a letter from Mr. officiating secretary F. J. Holliday, dated the 30th January 1838. It appears that his honor the Deputy Governor has reason to believe that the rule laid down in Mr. Secretary Mangle's letter of the 19th July 1836, for referring to the statement committee all additions and alterations to periodical statements in the revenue department, has not been very regularly observed, and in an extract from a letter addressed to the committee for the revision and consolidation of periodical returns, it is remarked, that a rule founded on these principles must be circulated for the guidance of all the authorities subordinate to the Sudder Board, and that they would be requested not to direct the submission of any periodical return, nor to alter any statement after it shall have been revised and approved by the committee, without the previous sanction of government.

The Board have promulgated the above orders to all the revenue commissioners.

IMPORTANT TO GRANTEES.

Our readers must have observed the report of the case of Moonshee Mahommed Ameer versus Mr. McDougall, published in our paper of the 5th instant, regarding an alleged claim to a portion of Saundeibun land in the possession of the defendant. The Principal Sudder Ameen entertained the case against all the arguments urged on the defence. The consequence is, that the defendant's pleader, Mr. R. Dias, called on the present commissioner, Mr. William Dampier, and submitted the hardship to which both Messrs. Macpherson and McDougall, as government grantees, were subjected by the support given to the zemindars by the civil courts. That experienced and intelligent officer immediately concurred that the civil courts had no jurisdiction in either of the cases, but that they should have been instituted before the special commissioners. Mr. Dampier immediately ordered a roobocarry to be forwarded to the vakeel of government, to appear at the principal Sudder Ameen's Court, and bar his jurisdiction in the two cases. The vakeel appeared at the court on the 6th instant, and desired to be furnished with a copy of the plaint for the above purpose.—Hurk, March 14.

SUDDER DEWANNY AND NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

CIRCULAR ORDERS, 1838.

NO. 482. ABOLITION OF PERSIAN.

* The Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut, on the 9th instant, transmitted to the Judges subordinate to them, copies of the resolution of Government passed on the 23d January last, on the abolition of the Persian language, published by us in the Insular: the Judges have been authorized to promulgate those orders to the native courts and officers subordinate to them; and, with a view of enabling the superior court to lay before Government the information required to be submitted by the 1st July next, the Judges have been desired to report, on the 1st June, what progress has been made in carrying into effect the present instructions.—Ibid.

ZILLAH TWENTY-FOUR PURGUNNAHS.

FRIDAY, MARCH 23.

Mr. W. Cracroft resumed charge of his duties as Civil and Sessions Judge of this district to day. Mr. Forrester, we believe, will proceed to his own appointment.—Hurk, March 26.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28.

Although this was the last day of the second term, the business of the morning was finished in less than half an hour.

A rule obtained by Mr. Clarke, on the plea side, against which the Advocate-General was to have shewn cause, was enlarged by consent, until a future day, when it is to be heard as of the last day of term.

Ten causes are set down on the Common Law Board for the Sittings, which commence to-morrow, Thursday (this day.)

(Before W. Cracroft, Esq.)

This day the Judge heard several petitions, from amongst which we select these as being worthy of notice.

First. In this case the petitioner wished to appeal from the decision of the Magistrate of Barasut. He said that he had proved in his suit before the Magistrate at Barasut, that the parties against whom he had complained had come forcibly armed with clubs, and accompanied by others into his fields and had beaten him and the persons employed by him in cultivating his fields, and cut and carried away his corn; and yet the Magistrate had refused to award him any sum from the parties against whom he had complained as a compensation for the loss of his grain. The Judge observed, that he believed the petitioner, if he had proved the injury he had sustained by the defendant's acts, must sue the parties in a civil court for damages, and not in a criminal suit. He, however, ordered the original proceedings to be produced before him that he may be able to judge better of this matter.

In this case the petitioner complained that a party against whom he had an action in the Magistrate's Court at Barasut, had given in the names of several persons as his witnesses in that case, amongst the rest the name of the petitioner's father, who is not residing in the house where the petitioner resides, but has gone some years ago on a pilgrimage to Benares, where he believes he has subsequently died. Three of the witnesses named by the party have already been examined, but he still persisting that this petitioner's father is concealed in his house, and he therefore cannot serve the subpoena on him. The Magistrate has therefore deputed the Nazir of his court to go to the village where this petitioner resides and enquire into this matter and the Nazir, in compliance with this order has proceeded to the village and placed persons at this petitioner's door, to prevent any person from either entering or quitting his house. Their domestic arrangements are completely disorganized. The shikharadai brought to the notice of the Judge that the Moonsiff at Howrah had likewise complained in this case, and stated to the Judge that the Magistrate had ordered his amlas to appear before him in this case, and that they have now been for some days at his court, and the Magistrate had confined some of them, consequently his business is at a stand and the cases are accumulating in his office.

The Judge observed that it was very irregular in the Magistrate to confine any of his amlas without first notifying the circumstance to him; he therefore ordered that a precept be sent from his court to the Magistrate at Barasut calling on him to explain his proceedings and report to him on this case fully.

In the mofussil courts it appears, that money which may have been deposited in realization of any suit is paid to any creditor in the suit, unless one of the vakeels or officials attached to the court certifies that the money is the identical plaintiff in the suit, his having been generally known by all the amlas in court for years as the person who has managed the suit, and that he is the person he represents himself to be, is of no avail without this identification, added to which he must have witnesses to attest the payment of the money to him, his own receipt not being considered sufficient without this attestation.—Harkara, March 29.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

MR. J. C. C. SUTHERLAND.—Mr. J. C. C. Sutherland has been appointed to succeed Mr. Millett as secretary of the Law Commission.

MANUFACTURE OF SILVER TWO-ANNA PIECES.—It is said that the Mint is now employed in the manufacture of silver two-anna pieces, and that in order to ensure the free circulation, it is contemplated to pass an enactment, limiting eight annas of pice as a component part and legal tender in the exchange for a rupee, and that the balance is to consist of four and two-anna pieces.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The Governor-General's camp expected to be at Kurnaul on the 2d instant to leave the station on the 6th, and to reach Seharunpore on the 9th instant. From Seharunpore it is probable the Governor-General, with a few attendants, will proceed via Nahr and Mussoorie, while the rest of the camp go by Bar to Simla.

SIGNORA SCHIERONI.—Signora Schieroni has left Calcutta for the Cape, to the regret of all the lovers of harmony.

FIRES.—Fires have occurred every day during the week in different parts of the town, and much property has fallen sacrifice to the flames.

THE CHITPORE ROAD AQUEDUCT.—Two wealthy native gentlemen, Baboo Muty Lall Seal and Madhub Dutta, have taken upon themselves the expense of continuing the Chitpore road aqueduct along new Colootolla road, as far as the central road, the former with a view of supplying the small, and not over cleanly tank, belonging to the public, on the east side of his house, with good and wholesome water, and the latter for the improvement of his Bazar, situated at the junction of the new Colootolla and central roads by an increased supply of the necessary element.

RAJAH PERTAUB CHAUD.—The soi disant maha rajah Pertaub Chaud, embarked on board a Budgerow at Burra Bazar on the 17th instant, to proceed, as report says, to Burdwan. He moved from a house at Foujdary Balakhana, where he had taken up his residence for some months, attended by a numerous retinue of peons armed with sticks. He was followed to the ghaut by an immense crowd of natives. It is worthy of remark, that the belief of this individual being the real Pertaub Chaud, still continues unshaken in the minds of the credulous portion of the native community.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—Gentlemen in the habits of taking solitary nocturnal rambles, would do well to provide themselves with good sticks, as the "stand and deliver" gentry are on the alert to take purses in this goodly city of palaces. Two cases have occurred during the week; but the robbers have fortunately been captured.

COMMUNICATION BETWEEN ALLIPORE AND CALCUTTA.—By order of His Honor the Deputy Governor of Fort William, the direct communication between Allipore and Calcutta, across the race course, will be immediately re-opened; it is to remain open until training commences.

STATE OF HEALTH.—Typhoid and cholera are raging in and about Calcutta with a great degree of virulence, and especially the latter, most of the cases of which prove fatal, and affect the European community in some measure. Scarcely a native is to be met with that is not labouring under a cold; and they, almost without exception attribute the unhealthiness of the weather to the water of the new Canal being allowed lately by opening the locks to run into the river, whose water they use as their sole drink.

DISTURBANCES IN ASSAM.—Disturbances have lately taken place in Assam. It appears that Lieut. Millar, second in command of the Assam Light Infantry, had been sent out, with a party of his corps and some irregular soldiers from the Berga Gaom, a native chief, for the purpose of driving one Peshee Gaom from the Company's territories, in consequence of repeated disturbances which he had occasioned. On the 4th February, Lieut. Millar arrived within a few miles of Peshee Gaom's village with his detachment, but was suddenly attacked, a fire having been opened from a breast-work thrown across a gorge on the top of a hill. Only a few shots were fired, but these had the effect of completely routing the Berga Gaom's men and the rest of the Singphos. The sepoy of the Assam Light Infantry however remained firm, and Lieut. Millar intended to attack the stockade, but could find no road. These men being very much dispirited from having no power of seeing their enemy, he returned to the camp to acquire every information possible. He afterwards ascended the place, but found it deserted, and from an excellent spy he learnt that Peshee Gaom had fled to Bomgong. The Bessa and Luttra chiefs had proved false in their professions of friendship to the British Government. It appears that the Duffa chief had also told the King of Ava that our Government intended at attack on Hoolum, and Tharrawaddi in consequence had sent a party about three hundred soldiers to that place. The Duffa Gaom had also collected a small force. Lieut. Millar had stockaded himself in the hills, which are of the most rocky description, the jungle dense and no roads of any kind. The difficulty of fighting in such a place and in an unknown country, may be easily conceived. Lieut. Millar had been assured by those whom every one considered to be the best informed, that there was no chance of an attack, but he nevertheless took every precaution, posting sentries, &c. The stockade being extremely small, and much crowded, a party of Singphos were allowed to sleep in a hut just outside the stockade at their earnest entreaty. Early on the morning of the 10th February a horrible yell was heard from the direction of this hut, and it was found twenty-one of these poor wretches, men and women, had been butchered in their beds!! It had been raining hard all night, and the morning was consequently extremely dark, but a fire was instantly opened in the direction which the villains took, and from marks of blood having been tracked for some distance through the jungle, it is believed that some were wounded. From a prisoner subsequently taken it was learnt, that these murderers had been hired by the Peshee, that the party consisted of one hundred and were only armed with dhauns. The only object appears to have been blood, for nothing was missed, except one or two muskets. It is possible that the Peshee, maddened with revenge, may not so easily leave the Company's territories; and it is understood, stockades and barricades have been erected. Lieut. Millar's stockade was surrounded by spies; in clear nights they could distinctly see the Peshee Gann's movement, who doubtless, when a favourable moment occurred, intended to commence the attack. In these thickets our troops fight under the greatest disadvantage, the enemy firing from ambuscade and then flying off in different directions in small parties. Major White was not far off, and had proceeded to join Lieut. Millar, with a party of 90 men, and had also ordered another officer to follow him, with a company of the Assam Light Infantry.

MEETING OF PODARS.—PIER.—It is said that there has been a general meeting of the podars in Calcutta, whereat it was determined to drain the mint office, with a view to storing up the pice, and, in the consequent scarcity, disposing of them at a manifest disadvantage to the public. The annoyance entailed by the practices of these people, which are now reduced to a system, calls for the interposition of authority.

WANT OF WATER.—Great distress is experienced in the country from the scarcity of water, occasioned by the extreme drought this season.

DISTRIBUTION OF ALMS.—On the 23d instant, Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore distributed alms to beggars, between fifty and sixty thousand in number—eight annas each to the privileged order, namely the Bramins, and four annas to others, without distinction of caste, creed or age; on the occasion of his mother's shrand, which took place the day before. There were women seen amongst the crowd with children scarcely more than a very few days old, but no accident occurred. The beggars were first of all put in native houses, leaving the largest squares, from one end of the town to the other, which being done, about four in the morning, the distribution commenced, and was over before ten.

ASSAM.—PROSPECTS OF WAR.—Letters have been received from Akyab to the 16th instant. All then was quiet on the frontier; but the writer of the epistle double, in most poetic phrase, whether "it be not the calm which precedes the storm," "the quiet which pervades the grass-covered volcano, while the fiery elements with in are raging to burst forth," or

"The torrent's smoothness, ere it dash below."

Tharrawadie has ordered a general "counting" of arms to be made throughout his dominions, and returning to be made of the numbers capable of bearing them. It appears to be the Burmese custom never to embody an army, until it is actually required for service; so it is impossible to say, when the tempest will burst.

ACCOMMODATION IN FRENCH STEAMERS.—The following is an extract from a letter dated Malia, the 12th of January last, and completely sets at rest the rumours float in regard to the bad accommodation and worse "are to be found on board the French steamers."

"I came from Alexandria by the French line of steamers. Splendid ships and fitted up in the most beautiful manner, with pannels of the rarest woods, inlaid in a style that might suit a royal yacht better than a steam packet. The accommodations of the private cabins are capital, and the table kept after a very respectable fashion; in short the richest man in Europe, could not a few years ago traverse the Mediterranean, with the luxury of expedition and comfort, that a private person can now command for a few sovereigns."

THE HINDU HOLIDAY DAROONIE CHOITRA.—This is a celebrated bathing festival, at which thousands of Hindus repair to Tremas ghaut, a few miles above Hoochly, for the purpose of purification. This year the holiday occurred on the 23d ultimo. For two days previous, the roads leading to the ghaut were crowded with people, and at one time there were not less than probably 30,000 assembled at, and near the ghauts. The rush to the river was so impetuous that great numbers were with difficulty rescued from drowning by the activity of the police. The greater number of those who went to Tribance on Saturday last, came from distant parts, there being very few Bengalis among them. In going to and returning from Tribance, these people slept by the road side, so that the roads for miles were lined with them. Exposed to the vicissitudes of the present remarkable season, thousands of them have been seized with cholera and many have already fallen victims so that fatal disease.

THE BORE.—The bore during last springs was very severe and caused several accidents to the craft on the river. Two vessels, the names of which we have not been able to ascertain, were torn from their moorings, and one of them had the side of her poop and her jib-boom smashed;—the other also, we are told, received some slight injury. Many boats were swamped on both sides of the river, and others severely damaged by being dashed against one another. A gentleman who was going over to Seebpore in a bauleah, was caught by the bore, when about three parts of the way across the river, and although the boat's head was promptly turned to the foaming surge, she was capsized, and every body on board obliged to swim for their lives. All, however, luckily escaped, with merely a good drenching. Another gentleman was overtaken by the flood, near Gollahdunga ghaut, and had his jolly-boat dashed to pieces and two of his men much hurt; he, however, escaped uninjured himself. We have been informed that three dinghee-wallahs perished through the bore gelih pata being caught near the Sumatra sand and buried in the waves. Parties crossing the water during the full and new moon, should be extremely vigilant, or they will stand a chance of losing their lives. The best way to escape the force of the bore, is by pulling into the middle of the stream, when they see or hear it coming, and rowing down the river, with the boat's head opposed to the advancing tide; and then, immediately after the first surf has passed, they should pull in as far as possible to within fifty or eighty yards of the shore, where their boat will easily bound over the two back surfs, and they may afterwards land, with ease, in perfect safety.

The bore on the nights of the 26th, 27th and 28th ultimo, was very violent and did much mischief to the banks and boats on the Howrah side of the water. We learn that on the night of the 28th, the chains of the Bethel were snapped asunder, and that several vessels dragged their anchors. A patiah sloop was stranded and several boats swamped.

ORIENTAL LIFE INSURANCE OFFICE.—At the meeting of the share-holders of the Oriental Life Insurance Office, held on the first instant, agreeable to advertisement, the several propositions submitted by the directors were unanimously adopted. The shares of this institution are at a considerable premium on the amount subscribed. The principal features in the alterations in the practice of the society proposed by the directors,—at least the one most interesting to the public, is,—that by an altered scale of premiums now adopted, military and naval lives are insurable on the same charge as civil lives,—which has been the case hitherto in the long established laudable societies only.

EXPORTATION OF COOLIES—It appears that the exportation of coolies from Bengal to Mauritius is to be put a stop to until further notice. Nothing is said about those who have been shipped off for the Mauritius since the commencement of 1838; but, perhaps, when they arrive at the Mauritius they will be allowed to land. This is interesting intelligence to the shippers here.

ROADS.—The new line of communication called the Burdwan and Benares road, commencing from Sulkea, even in its present unfinished state, is the best that has ever been travelled on in India, and when finished will indeed constitute a splendid testimony of the liberality of British rule. It was commenced upon in October 1832, is to be 310 miles long,—to cross over two ferries, the Ganges and the Soane, and seven fords,—the Bolarice Modhum (two branches) Leela-gam, Mohanna, and the Barakha twice—to have altogether 40 bridges and 600 drains. The road is 30 feet wide at the top,—the average height is three feet, but on the Ramghur Hills it is only one foot high,—and between them and the Ganges two feet. The cost may be estimated at Rs. 3,50,000. The line of road which it has been determined to construct between Cachar and Munnipoor is fast progressing, and is likely to be soon completed, to the great convenience of the troops that may be required to advance for any military operations. The co-operation of the political authorities and the Munnipoor Government are contributing greatly to facilitate the completion of that undertaking.

ZEMINDARY ASSOCIATION.—At four o'clock on the 25th ultimo, a second meeting of the zemindars resident at and about Calcutta, was held at the Hindoo College, at which Rajahs Kalikissen, Radhakant and Rajurain, and Baboos Kamannauth Tagore, Prosonno Coomai Tagore, Rahnauth Roy and many other respectable native gentlemen, were present. The proceedings were conducted in Bengally, and Rajah Radhakant presided in the chair. A resolution was passed for the purpose of calling a public meeting at the Town hall which, our informant states, will take place in the course of the current month. Much enthusiasm was displayed by all present, and the formation of a society under the above name is now beyond a doubt.

A NEW STRAID ROAD.—Before long the inhabitants of this City of Palaces are likely to have a new straid road, as it is stated that Government has in contemplation the making of one. The alluvials on the banks of the river from Hautcolah down to their southern extremity, have already been surveyed, and it has been ascertained what would be the probable amount to be realized by selling them off. This our informant adds has been found to be sufficient to cover the expenses to be incurred by the measure.

A NEW SOCIETY.—A society is about to be established in Calcutta under the name of "The Society for the acquisition of General Knowledge." The projectors of it are certain native gentlemen famous for their extensive knowledge of English, and of an exceptionable character in every other respect.

MR. CHESTER.—It is said that Mr. Chester, has been appointed secretary of the Theatre, in loco Mr. Farmer, who retires.

CULTIVATION OF TEA AT ASSAM.—It is stated that the superintendent employed in the cultivation of tea at Assam, has recently furnished some samples to the committee, which on trial have been pronounced by that body, and the Government, to be sufficiently good to constitute a merchantable commodity. The only great difficulty which the Committee have to overcome is, to upon the most advisable means of package, securing it from the effects and changes of climate and landing it as fresh in England as it has been received by them. The lead which the Chinese use in the packing of their cases, is of a peculiar description, and some time must elapse before the native work men, however skilful they may be, are able to manufacture it.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO UNCOVENANTED ASSISTANTS.—The following rules have been drawn up by the Sudder Board of Revenue, for granting leave of absence to uncovenanted servants:

"1. If an uncovenanted assistant shall obtain leave of absence from his office for any period not exceeding one month, on a medical certificate granted by a medical officer of Government, and declaring that he is disqualified by sickness from attending office and performing his duties, he shall not be liable to any deduction from his salary.

"2. If his term of absence on medical certificate shall exceed one, but shall not exceed 3 months he shall be liable to a deduction of one sixth of his salary for the whole of the term of absence.

"3. If his term of absence on medical certificate shall exceed three months, he shall be liable to a deduction of one third of his salary for the whole of the term of absence.

"4. If he continue absent after the expiration of the six months, his salary shall altogether cease.

"5. If the head of an office shall see fit to grant to an uncovenanted assistant leave of absence on urgent private affairs, for any term not exceeding fifteen days, the assistant shall not be liable to any deduction from his salary.

"6. If the leave of absence granted to an assistant shall exceed fifteen days, but shall not exceed two months, he shall be liable to a deduction to the amount of one-third of his salary, for the whole term.

"7. If leave of absence shall be granted to an uncovenanted assistant for a period exceeding two months, but not exceeding three months, he shall be liable to a deduction of one-half of his salary for the whole time.

"8. If an uncovenanted assistant shall be absent on private affairs for a period exceeding three months, he shall not receive any salary for the whole term of his absence.

"9. In all cases of leave of absence granted to uncovenanted assistants, for a period exceeding fifteen days, it shall be competent to the head of the office to provide for the discharge of the duties of the absentee, by the appointment of a substitute, whose salary shall be charged in a contingent bill. But it shall not be competent to a collector to grant leave on private affairs for a period exceeding fifteen days, nor to a commissioner, or civil or session judge to grant similar leave for a period exceeding one month, without the sanction of the Sudder Board of Revenue or the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut of Vizamut Adawlut respectively, as the case may be.

"10. Fifteen days during the year shall be the limit to which leave of absence in private affairs shall be granted to any uncovenanted assistant free of deduction of salary.

STABBING.—About 10 o'clock on the night of the 4th instant, a European seaman wounded two Mussulmans in the Chitpore road, a little above the Laul Bazar thannah, one of them named Bucka-oollah in the belly, and the other in the breast. Both were taken to the Chandney Native Hospital, for medical assistance; but Bucka-oollah, died the next day, his intestines having protruded from the wound. The other man is out of danger. The circumstances were, that the aggressor and a companion of his had purchased some segars a little before, and a Bengally happening to throw the same down accidentally from the hands of the former, he ran after him with a knife in his hand, but could not overtake him, being much under the influence of liquor. The Bengally managed to get into a house and shut himself in it. The police then coming up to take the sailor into custody, he got more exasperated, and attempting to stab them, they were obliged to retreat. At this time the individuals in question were passing along the street quietly and were attacked by the inebriest. The case has been tried before the Coroner, and, in consequence of the witnesses not being able to identify the homicide, a verdict of wilful murder was returned against some person or persons unknown.

DACOITY.—A native arrived from Barasat, states that a dacoity had taken place in that zillah during the last week. About midnight the house of one Juggut Caunder, sircar, a resident in the village of Kankhara, purgunnah Haulshahur, was stormed by a gang of dacoits who besides carrying off 600 rupees cash, and gold and silver ornaments, &c. to the amount of about two hundred rupees, inflicted severe wounds upon one of the inmates.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.—The veteran sportsman, Brigadier Showers, has given up racing, and his worthy jockey, Hall, is expected shortly at Calcutta, with twelve of the Brigadier's best horses for sale.

THE CHITPORE ROAD WATERING FUND.—We understand that the Government have directed a meeting of the subscribers to the Chitpore Road Watering Fund to be called without delay, for the purpose of determining upon the best mode of using the amount subscribed.

GOOMSUR.—Extract from a letter of Captain Campbell, dated Goomsur, 25th February, 1838:

"I have been most fortunate in my late expedition among the wild Konds of Goomsur, and have rescued no less than one hundred and three children of various ages, who were intended for sacrifice by these barbarians, and that without the application of force:—these children are now at head-quarters, and form a most interesting group, happy such as were aware of their situation, in having escaped the fate which awaited them."

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.—At the monthly meeting of the proprietors of, and subscribers to, the Public Library, on the 3d instant, a report was made of the number of new books purchased or presented during February, and of the number circulated in the course of the month. The latter amount to seven hundred and fifty-three. Seven new subscribers have been added to the list, and two have withdrawn on account of their leaving Calcutta; Mr. Cameron has presented Rs 100 to the vested fund, thus raising that fund to Rs 3443; and the whole return of the pecuniary affairs of the institution indicates a gradual and steady advance towards prosperity and permanence.

CAPTURE OF DACOITS.—Between nine and ten o'clock on the night of the 27th of February last, a gang of dacoits were captured at the ghaut of Gopeegunge, within the thannah of Culmeejole. They were sixteen in number, and were noticed by the chokeedars of the place, on their crossing the Damooda. The chokeedars discovered that they were provided with arms of almost every kind. The chokeedars attempted to stop them, but the number of the latter being greater than that of the former, they had very nearly succeeded in making their escape, when the chokeedars giving the alarm by beat of drum, many of the inhabitants of the village assembled, and by their assistance twelve of the ruffians were secured, together with their weapons. On investigation being made by the darogah of the division subsequently, it has transpired that the prisoners were all inhabitants of Calcutta, and it was supposed that they, perhaps being aware of Rs 2,000 being sent from thence to Mr. Watson's factory at Ghautal, were proceeding thither for the purpose of robbing that factory.

OVERLAND MAILS.—At a meeting of the Committee of the Chamber of Commerce on the 8th instant, it was determined to address the Government respecting the delay in the arrival of the Bombay dak; and to urge the expediency of entertaining extra runners to convey the overland mail; the appearance of which at Bombay can now be calculated with precision.

It was proposed also, to request the Government to take measures, so that the communication with England via the Red Sea shall be continued without any interruption, even under the contingency of steamers being despatched to the Persian Gulf.

GOVERNMENT CHANGE SHOPS.—In order to do away effectually with the complaint so generally made of the difficulty experienced in obtaining change at the Government shops, and to prevent the extortion of the Bazar podars, both in giving and receiving change, the Government, at the recommendation of the mint-master, have come to the resolution of granting licences to individuals who will be furnished with pice from the mint, at the rate of 66 for the rupee, and required to retail the same in the market, at the rate of 64, thus getting two pice on every rupee as remuneration for trouble,—and yet give the public what is now only obtainable at the Government change shops. On the other hand parties desirous of obtaining rupees in change for pice at the licenced shops, will get one of the former by paying 65 for the latter.

MURDER.—A boy about seven years of age was murdered on the night of 27th ultimo, within the third division, by the paramour of his mother. A verdict of wilful murder has been returned against the assassin.

NEPAL WAR.—A correspondent of the Hurkaru hints, that there is a likelihood of a brush with our friends the Nepaulese, who are now busily engaged in fortifying themselves.

ASSISTANT ROAD-MAKERS.—Government has been pleased to sanction a monthly salary of 200 rupees each, to Lieutenants Sale and Allardyce, of Engineers, and to any other officer who may be employed under Captain Guthrie, as an assistant in the construction of roads upon the eastern frontier. It is in contemplation to appoint, besides the individuals named above, other European agents: the extent of the road, the nature and probable donation of the work being such as to require this additional superintendence.

MR. FARMER'S BENEFIT PLAY.—The play for Mr. Farmer's benefit was a complete failure. The elements were most unpropitiously disposed towards the ex-secretary. The only part of the play that was effective, was the deluge, which was by accident, we suppose, mentioned in the programme. The wind blew, the rain poured, and the water covered the interior of the theatre, and made the boxites fly for shelter under the seat of the gods.

ACCIDENT AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE BY LIGHTNING.—The Government House was struck by lightning during the storm which occurred on the morning of the 30th ultimo. The lightning seems to have been attracted by the figure of Britannia on the top of the dome or rather by the spear in her hand—which it shivered to pieces and threw down. The marks left by the lightning are visible on its broken point. After demolishing the spear it seems to have passed down the upper part of the dome and penetrated in some invisible manner into the Ball Room of the House in three separate places. It broke one pier glass and slightly injured two others, besides committing some other little damage, and then poured lower down, into the marble hall, from which locality it escaped in the same unaccountable manner in which it entered.

NEW UNIFORMS.—Printed circulars have been issued by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief containing his new arrangements for the uniforms of the staff and regimental officers. Respecting the staff, there are great and not very gratifying alterations. Some departments now distinguished by the decorations of the blue cuffs and collar, are to wear regimental uniforms only. The members of the Medical Board are no longer to appear in plain dresses, but in the military habiliments of their rank, which according to the present arrangement, is particularly plain. Superintending Surgeons are merely distinguished from Staff Surgeons by the epaulettes, and all other departments are equally simple and plain.

DEATH OF DR. TYTLER.—Intelligence was received on the 27th ultimo, of the death of the celebrated Dr. Robert Tytler. The worthy doctor was, on his way to Gwalior, to confirm by personal observation an interesting scientific discovery which he believed he had made, when he was taken ill.

CHOLERA.—In consequence of the prevalence of cholera in some parts of Calcutta, a communication was made on the 28th instant, by the chief magistrate to the professors of the Medical College, allowing thirty rupees monthly allowance to such of the students as might be deemed qualified to treat cholera cases. The senior class, seventeen in number, immediately volunteered for the duty, on condition that their services were to be altogether gratuitous.

MOFUSSIL.

RAIN.—The indications of rain have entirely disappeared without a drop having fallen. The most gloomy apprehensions for the fate of the spring crop prevail in consequence; and sickness has again broken out severely in this city.

INFLUENZA has recently made its appearance in the station, but has attacked only a few of the residents.

STARVATION to a fearful extent prevails in the city and suburbs. Scattered over the latter are found the bodies of persons who have dropped down and expired from absolute exhaustion through want of food.

There is a report that the post office department of the north western provinces, will be separated from that of Bengal, the Governor-General having discovered that the Calcutta branch know nothing of the department as in operation in these provinces.

Prince Sooleeman Shukoh expired on the morning of the 24th of February at the advanced age of eighty-two, and was interred on Monday at the Royal cemetery of Secundia. He was second brother of the late King of Dehlee, from whose court he retired some years since and lately fixed his residence principally at Agra. His only support was a pension of Rs. 6,000 monthly from the Lucknow court, chargeable on the interest of the loan lent to Government during the Burmese war.

Several thousand persons are daily employed at and about the station, on works of public utility. One part is employed in directing the main stream of the river under the town—a large tank is about to be formed in cantonments in the large hollow near Messias. Monro and Co's round which trees are to be planted. Trees have also been planted along the public roads though their repair seems in differently attended to. Another reservoir is about to be formed near the Session Judge's kutchery by throwing a dam across a large ravine in that quarter the bottom of which is below the level of the river. It is proposed to open a communication by means of pipes between it and the river by which the tank may be supplied or emptied at pleasure. This will add materially to the comfort of the town's people.

A number of persons supposed to have been concerned in the daring dacoity that took place at the Lohamundee, in October last, have been seized in the Juepoor district, near a village called Kutavlee, and been brought into Agra; they were tied to the spot, and a strong body of police were sent in pursuit—one of whom and a horse were killed in effecting the arrest of the gang.

DEHLEE.—So great is the scarcity of money in the Dehlee Treasury, that the King's allowance has been allowed to run in arrears for three months. The widow of the executed murderer Shams-ooddeen, has been awarded two lacs and a half of rupees out of her husband's property, being the amount of her marriage settlement.

ALLYGURH.—A few slight showers fell in this district. Wheat is selling at seventeen seers per rupee, and gram at sixteen, a degree of dearth unprecedented in the memory of the oldest inhabitants.

DINAPORE.—A letter from Dinapore, dated 23d ultimo, announces the arrival of the steamer, with Dwarkanath Tagore and Capt. and Mrs. Cockrell on board. Dwarkanath landed and visited the Deogh farm, and expressed himself much pleased with all he saw, but especially with the climate which he finds quite bracing.

LOODHIANA.—A camel load of old Sikh coins, in a very superior state of corrosion and illegibility, have just arrived here from Captain Burnes or Mr. Masson. They were collected in Peshawar, and are destined for the Asiatic Society.

NUSSEERABAD.—At Nusseerabad, much sickness prevails. Both smallpox and influenza are raging. Several gentlemen have been attacked by the former, while scarcely an officer in the cantonment had escaped the latter.

The Rajpootana division of artillery, under the Command of Major Pew, were inspected by brigadier Burgh, on the 31st ultimo. In the morning, they went through several manoeuvres with the light field guns, and afterwards fired, with great effect, grape, round shot, and shrapnell shells at a curtain, on the plain. In the evening, they exhibited their heavy battery practice, at which the live shrapnell, from guns and howitzers, were fired with very great precision, and the shells from the mortars were beautiful indeed, the fourth shell fired pruned the mine, though at a distance of twelve hundred yards, in grand style.

Brigadier Burgh quitted Nusseerabad on the morning of the 10th instant, on his annual tour of inspection or Beawar.

About the beginning of the present month, Lieut. Butler, of the 22d regt., one of the keenest sportsmen at Nusseerabad, on foot, shot a large tiger a little beyond Rajghur, to the westward of that station, being the thirteenth tiger killed by this officer, on foot, since his arrival in that part of the country.

A REFRACTORY CHIEFTAIN.—The 39th and 49th regiments of native infantry, and the 4th local horse are ordered to march immediately from Neemuch against a refractory Chieftain of the Oudypore state, who resides at a stronghold, called Joora, 15 coss to the west of the city of Oudypore, in the heart of the Rheet hills and jungles.

The chief is said to have declared himself independent, and refused the payment of the usual tribute; and to be loud in protestations that he will not yield as long as his head remains on his shoulders.

Native exaggeration magnifies his followers to 20,000 men; and that the affair is of some consequence, may be gathered from the fact that the Deesa Force is expected to co-operate, from the west, with Marwar troops, from the east.

The theatre of operations is a terra incognita on our maps! but from the descriptions we have received of the proposed site of junction of our troops, it must be somewhere in the vicinity of Mount Abboo, which, if the contest be a all prolonged, as is not improbable from the nature of the country, and the character of the enemy, will thus be rendered a rather insecure sanatorium for the invalid officers and their ladies who have proposed passing the hot season on its summit.

RAJPOOTANA.—Accounts from Rajpootana mention, that the small-pox was carrying off numbers of the population of Marwar, and the cantonments of Beawr in particular. Pallee was still suffering from the pestilence, and the town is now nearly deserted.

At Ajmere, Nusseerabad and Neemuch there had been a considerable quantity of sickness from colics, coughs, fevers, agues, small-pox and similar unwelcome, because unseasonable, maladies, which the vox populi, with one consent, lays to the charge of the air.

Whatever crops are raised in Rajpootana this spring will be entirely owing to irrigation; and the poor villages affirm that to afford any return, each field must be watered eight or ten times. By constant labour at the wells a limited but oasis of cultivation now surrounds most of the villages in those parts, beyond which the boundless plains present an aspect of the most hopelessness and aridity! Travellers report, notwithstanding all this, that the agricultural state of Rajpootana, is considerably superior to that of the Doab.

CANNPOOR.—A Field Officer has been put in arrest at this station.

ASSAM.—A report has been received by Government of a fire having broke out on the 6th instant in Goalparah, (Assam,) by which the whole of the cutcherry, treasury, and jail, and nearly the entire town have been consumed.

KURNAL.—A letter from Kurnal, of the 9th March, says that rain had at last fallen, and was turning the barren land into a fruitful plain.

NATIVE STATES.

GALIOR.—The young heir to this guddae has expired, after a short passage through life of seven months. Grain is still at a famine price.

SULEEPOOR.—The Minas have been urged by the general authority into the commission of numerous depredations within this state, which the Rajah has ineffectually attempted to suppress.

MADRAS.

PRINCE HENRY OF ORANGE.—Prince Henry of Orange, reached Madras on the Bellona, on the 1st instant, and was to have landed on the next day.

On the 13th ult. His Royal Highness Prince Henry of Orange, took his departure from our shores homeward bound, after having experienced and appreciated the hospitality and attention his high rank and mild and attractive manners so eminently entitled him to. He expressed himself much pleased and gratified with his visit to this presidency, which has, since his arrival, been a continual scene of gaiety.

BURMESE WAR.—It was lately stated that H. M. 631 regiment had been ordered over to Moulmein forthwith by the Supreme Government. Report has since stated further orders to have been received by our local authorities, for their holding four native corps available for prompt transmission of Rangoon in case of a necessity arising. This betokens a desire, however tardily aroused, to place our relations with the Court of Ava upon a less questionable footing than they have held since the usurpation of Tharrawaddie. The only matter for apprehension is, that the moment of decision may have arrived too late to effect the quantum of good desired at the least possible cost, - that the time shall have passed by when the idea of attack upon us might have been overawed, and we be, perhaps, left now to resist and overcome hostilities already commenced to our disadvantage.

COLONEL NAPIER VERSUS E. F. ELLIOT, ESQ.—The cause of Colonel Napier versus E. F. Elliot, Esq. for crim con, was heard in the Supreme Court on the 19th ultimo; the damages were laid at Rs 50,000, and a sentence in favor of the plaintiff awarded 25,000.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—A melancholy accident occurred between 10 and 11 o'clock of the 9th instant, in the Government gardens. It appears that one of the intelopes made its way into the place where they were busy preparing the fireworks for the grand display. In attempting to div. him out, the animal overturned a lantern amongst the gunpowder, which immediately exploded, setting fire at the same time to all the fireworks prepared. Two unfortunate men, we deeply lament to say, were killed on the spot, two more were frightfully burnt and expired shortly afterwards, and two more received severe injury from the effects of this deplorable accident.

THE HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.—The Horticultural exhibition on the 24th of February, was not quite so fully attended as the one last year; but the show was excellent; and that part of it which was produced by market gardeners very far exceeded any thing before witnessed.

NEWSPAPERS.—The Conservative has been discontinued, and the conduct of the Male Asylum Herald has fallen into Conservative hands.

THE MASTER ATTENDANT.—This officer proceeded on board the Bellona, on the 1st instant, and on returning to the shore was met by a note from the Deputy Master Attendant recommending him not to land, as the surf was very high. The signal "there is too much surf to land" was also flying. He accordingly went on board one of the ships in the roads, where he remained until the warning signal was taken down, the surf having moderated. On the boat reaching the outer surf, it was overtaken by an overwhelming wave which caused it to broach too, and believing that the boat would upset, Captain Dalrymple jumped overboard and was followed by the boatmen, by one of whom, or by a catamaran-man who was alongside, he was laid hold of and put into another boat which was at hand. The boat did not upset, and a peon who remained in it came safely on shore. Capt. Dalrymple when brought on shore appeared much exhausted, and has, we understand, since suffered a good deal from the effects of the accident.

BOMBAY.

THE WHEELS.—It is said that the Bheels have mustered in some force to the northward, and that, in consequence, several companies of the troops stationed at Baroda, which have been out on detachment, have been ordered back to head quarters, that an attack might be concerted against the marauders. The Bheels are said to be pretty formidable in point of number.

THE HYDERABAD RESIDENCY.—The Hyderabad residency is, it seems, in want of an incumbent, although the appointment seems to be but little coveted by those to whom it has been offered, Colonel Alves has positively refused it, and the services of Major Sutherland have been most earnestly desiderated, but as yet without any prospect of success.

KANDISH INDIGO.—The indigo of Kandish is said to be in all respects, when properly manufactured, equal to the best that can be produced in Bengal. Several samples were sent to Bombay, and were considered to contain all the properties of the finest indigo. Some samples have been sent to London for a report as to their market value, and a most favourable one is confidently anticipated.

NEW SCHOONERS.—Two schooners are building in the port under instructions from the Court of Directors, which when completed promise to be perfect models of that mode of construction. The rivalry of the master builders of England is brought into play, the model on which one of them is to be built having been furnished by Sir Robert Seppings, and of the other by Captain Symonds. As these vessels are described, they will eclipse almost any thing of the kind which has yet appeared in our Docks, and are intended for running up and down the coast.

ABOLITION OF TAXES.—Among the other measures recently adopted by Government to improve the condition of the poor cultivators of the Conkan, a tax denominated "Ghur Puttee" or house tax has been abolished. This duty was peculiar to the districts of Rutnagiree and Vigiadoorge, and amounted to about three thousand rupees annually, being one rupee upon each cultivator's house.

INSTALLATION OF THE BISHOP.—The Lord Bishop was installed on the 25th of February, according to the usual forms, during the performance of the forenoon service in St. Thomas' Church. His lordship was introduced in his stall, by the acting Archdeacon, the Reverend H. Jeffreys, and the acting Senior chaplain, the Reverend W. Ward, attended by Mr. Patch, Registrar of the Consistory Court; after which, the acting Archdeacon, addressing his Lordship, stated that he had the honor by order of the Governor in Council, to announce his Lordship as the Bishop of the Diocese of Bombay. Agreeable to the form of worship observed in cathedrals, the jubilate Deo was chanted instead of being rehearsed. After the communion service, the Bishop ascended the pulpit, and delivered his charge to the clergy.

REAR ADMIRAL SIR CHARLES MALCOLM.—It is rumoured in high quarters, that an order has been received by the Berenice for the supersession of Rear Admiral Sir Charles Malcolm in the superintendence of the Indian Navy. The appointment has been given to Captain Oliver, R. N.

RELEASE OF THE DEWAN CHITNEES AND OTHER OFFICERS OF THE RAJA OF SATTARA.—It stated upon high authority, that an order has been received from the Government of India, ordering the immediate release from their confinement of the dewan, chitnees, and other officers of the raja of Sattara, who have been so long detained in prison on the most absurd charges, trumped up against them and their master, the raja, by people of the most despicable character, and listened to without adequate inquiry by the Government of Bombay.

BURMAH.

The last accounts from Burmah represent the state of affairs to remain precisely in the same state as they were when we last adverted to them. The Rattle-snake and Diana steamers, had arrived.

CHINA.

By the Ariel, files of the Canton Register, and the Canton Press to the 27th of January have been received. The Chinese new year having commenced, business of all kinds was at a stand still. Although the deliveries of opium at Lintin were rather more brisk, there is no improvement in price, indeed the tendency is rather downwards. Old Patna is unsaleable. New has been sold as low as 540 dollars. New Benarus, 490 dollars, and Malwa 410 dollars.

RELIEF TO SUFFERERS OF THE UPPER PROVINCES.

Government appears, at length, to have taken into their most serious consideration the distressed state of the upper provinces, and are now administering very extensive relief in all quarters. At Agra, upwards of 25,000 people are employed; at Futtehghur and Cawapore a nearly equal number, and at other stations proportionate bodies. To so great an extent does this aid operate, that, in one district (Futtehghur), we learn distress has almost entirely disappeared, and it is perceptibly diminishing in others. This extensive relief as far as we learn, is intended to be continued as long as it may be required, or until the means of Government are exhausted. To supply the latter, there is, we understand, a crore of rupees available, all of which Government are prepared to disburse, if necessary.* In addition to these exertions there have been advances made to the resolute agricultural classes, and a discriminative remission of revenue. Had, however, even a part of this extensive liberality been exhibited in the proper time, at the time we urged it, the aspect of the country would have been far different from what it is, and an earlier termination to the distress in all probability been provided for, than we can now look forward to. Had Government afforded assistance to the agricultural classes in November and December, to enable them to sow their lands and irrigate, much and lasting misery would have been prevented. By the late application of relief we have not only more misery to aid, but our assistance does not in any way tend to put an end to it, which an earlier afforded would have done. Had we assisted the cultivators of the affected districts at the commencement of the season, the increase of produce, consequently, on the rubea crop would have materially ameliorated the condition of the country. But as we have managed, the very liberal aid we afford produces no effect beyond the day that passes over us; it operates in no way towards abridging the duration of famine, which now entirely depends on the late or early setting in of the rains. To that alone must we now look for effectual relief, and if it be late, the dead weight of feeding a whole people must prove unequal even to Government. Let all, then, look with confidence to their early appearance, and in that spirit subscribe liberally towards preserving the population through the intermediate period.

We have, as we said above, allowed the proper period to pass, when relief would have produced the greatest quantity of benefit—now an irretrievable error; but the question ought to impress Government with a sense of the imperative duty of considering how the country may, in future, be preserved from such afflicting visitations. In the present rude state of Indian agriculture, an untoward season must give rise to suffering more or less, and, until it is improved, we cannot effectually counteract those periodical famines that visit the country. But as wealth accumulates and the right of property becomes more fixed and definite, agriculture will improve, and the country be, to a great extent, preserved against the calamitous consequences of such seasons as the present. This improvement is not indeed advancing with very arduous strides; but, while it is slowly, if imperceptibly approaching, much may be done by Government towards the same end,—we mean towards alleviating the distress caused by these failures. One important means for effecting this is even now being resorted to—we mean a reduction of the revenue, but whether to a sufficient extent, or not, is very doubtful. Adam Smith and the Economists lay it down as a rule, that on the proportion between the produce required to replace capital and revenue depends the general character of the inhabitants of a country as to industry or idleness. When the former is considerable and bears a large proportion to the latter, the funds for the employment or maintenance of productive labour are abundant, such as we see in England and all rich countries. Here, on the contrary, the produce required for revenue, bears an enormous proportion to that required to replace capital, and the consequence is, that there are not sufficient means for the employment of productive labour—the immediate cause of the present general destitution. There is no want of food but a want of money to purchase it, and this from the scarcity of employment, is beyond the command of the poor. To reduce the large proportion revenue bear to the produce required to replace capital, is one of those direct measures that can alone prevent, extensively, the disastrous effects of such seasons as those seasons which we know recur frequently. The produce required to replace capital is beyond all proportion small, and must be so as long as the demands of Government absorb nearly the whole of it. Such a system carries with it heavy and unceasing depression—it found the country poor at first and keeps it so; and, unless Government are prepared to make a present sacrifice of revenue, the distress around us will recur, in the same intensity with the recurrence of similar seasons, till time shall be no more. The charity of Government will be called for again, and again be granted, and the country having “got over” the famine, will be in the same state it was before or perhaps worse. Better than such charity were Government to reduce their revenue even by the amount of such charity, for small as it would be, it would, at least, generate slowly a better order of things; while the eleemosynary aid granted under the present system, is just sufficient to the day thereof. The new settlement now in progress, will, no doubt, materially improve the condition of the country;

* Report has it that there are three crores in the General Treasury, two of which are to be reserved for contingencies—such as a war with Burmah, or other places.

† Not only does the amount of revenue operate against the non-employment of labour, but the universal belief that Government, even in untoward seasons, will exact the full amount of it, prevents the small capitalists from expending even a little of their funds in extra irrigation: liberality alone will dissipate this feeling.

but Government ought to view the present national calamity, in connexion with the revenue remissions they are now making, if possible to increase them. Nothing but a diminution of it to some extent will save the country from the retrogression it must constantly undergo from untoward seasons. A second indirect cause of the quantity of unemployed labour in the country—the direct one of the distress—is a want of specie. A heavy drainage of coin has for some time taken place in the general mint for re-coining, which Government have not been sufficiently active in replacing, by sending the new issue by their steamers, and opening the up-country treasuries, by granting drafts on them to parties drawing against their Calcutta consignments. This combined with an actual scarcity of food—not however amounting to a dearth—will account for much of the immediate distress. The attention, then, of Government should, in future, be more closely directed to preserving a due equilibrium between specie and the traffic of the country, for disturbed as it now appears to be, it aggravates the natural calamities of the seasons. To these and other artificial causes are clearly traceable, much of the misery now visible, for there is no actual scarcity of food. A want of labour is the immediate cause, produced by the combined operation of a too heavy revenue, want of proper confidence in Government, and scarcity of specie, as well, of course, by the almost total failure of the rain crops. The former must be removed by Government, and by their removal the country will be able to sustain, with comparatively slight injury, the latter.

Our Calcutta friends, we see, persist in imputing "ignorance" as they call it, to the Mofussil papers, for holding that Government ought to have interfered to cause a lower price of grain. We have our volumes of Smith, Ricardo, Malthus, and others, and yet we maintain that Government should have done so. The principles of these philosophers would not exactly have suited the state of society in Utopia or Ell Dorado; and though this country does not differ so widely from the rest of the world, as these creations of the mind do, yet we contend it does so sufficiently to affect the application of many of the rules of political economy to it. Will the following anecdote, selected from a thousand, not shew this? We know a rich grain merchant who is now selling wheat ten years old at thirty seers per rupee, and even at that price reluctantly parts with it. Now this wheat could not be sold at a remunerating price for, say, one rupee per seer, if we take into calculation the prime cost, interest, damage, &c. &c. Yet this is the usual practice of the trade, and it is to such the Calcutta papers talk of political economy. An English trader, for whom the science was framed, would manage these things somewhat differently. Again, had Government themselves imported grain in the commencement of the season they would have reduced the price of it, increased the quantity available for food, enabled consequently the zamindars to support more of their cultivators, and, above all, have proved to the country that they had its relief at heart—a feeling that would have inspired the villagers into making greater exertions, and sowing and irrigating more ground than they have. The Calcutta cockneys would, however, adhere to a science never intended for a people of whom they know nothing; and what has been the result? famine, death, disease, and crime to an appalling extent. But, vive la Science, come what may.—Hakaru, April 3.

FURTHER PROCEEDINGS OF THE RELIEF FUND COMMITTEE.

The committee of the fund for the relief of the distress in the N. W. Provinces request that the following memorandum may be published for general information.

The amount of subscriptions up to the 31st March, 1838, was . . . Co.'s Rs. 87,570 1 8

Of which had been paid into the Union Bank 73,002 4 11

It has been already notified that sums amounting in the aggregate to Co.'s Rs. 24,000 have been sent to the several distressed districts.

In addition to the above Rs. 200 have been forwarded to Culpes and 1,000 rupees to Kurnaul.

The following sums amounting to 40,000 rupees will be sent by to-morrow's post to the several stations named below:

Agra	10,000	Etawah	3,500
Cawnpore	5,000	Allyghur	4,000
Mynpoore	5,000	Futteghur	4,000
Culpes and Meerpoore	3,000	Muttra	3,500
		Delhi	2,000

The following circular from Agra and extracts from a communication from Cawnpore, while they forcibly demonstrate the necessity for continued exertion on the part of the community, shew, at the same time how opportune is the aid which this fund has been able to afford.

Calcutta, April 2, 1838.

PROCEEDINGS OF

An emergent meeting of the committee of the Agra

Relief Society, held at the house of G. J. Gordon, Esq., 5th March, 1838.

Present:—F. O. Wells, Esq., President in the chair, and Messrs. Gordon, Mansel, and Duncan, Rev. Dr. Chambers and Mr. Woolistoun.

A statement of the accounts of the past month having been read, it was resolved:

1. That as the daily average of starving paupers for the last month (February) was 3,800, involving a monthly expenditure of Co.'s Rs. 2,433-12, and as this average during the present month is likely to be nearly doubled, with a prospect of future increase; and as the monthly subscription amounts only to Rs. 770, with about Rs. 3,000 at present in hand, an immediate and urgent appeal be made to the residents of Agra to increase their subscriptions, and that a statement of the funds of the society, and of this resolution, be printed and circulated to every station in this presidency not affected by the famine, as also to Madras and Bombay, requesting their assistance in furtherance of the objects of the society, and urging speedy remittances; the subscriptions to be appropriated to the poor collected in the city of Agra, which contains one-seventh of the population of the entire district.

The Agra Relief Committee in making this appeal to the residents of other stations, are aware that there are other parts of these provinces suffering almost to an equal extent with this district; but they deem it advisable to leave the residents of such stations to adopt their own measures, and make their own appeal to the charitable public; at the same time they beg to state, that they will be happy to be the medium of conveying any portion of subscriptions raised at other stations, to Extract of a letter from the Relief Society, Cawnpore.—“Though the Government has afforded a most important aid which has probably arrested in some considerable degree the downward course into which the entire population seemed at first to be rapidly falling, the private native benevolence has contributed, as I suppose, when their means and future prospects are considered, with much liberality to aid their distressed countrymen ; yet it must be obvious to even a cursory observer, that ample scope remains for the intervention of those, who, at a distance, can only in faint imagination picture to themselves an outline of the sad reality.

I would wish to guard you from the mistake, supposing that the accompanying statement regarding the named purgnannas has any connexion with the immediate scene of operation, in which our committee are engaged, as all which we have within regarding Cawnpore is separate and distinct from it. As we have thankfully acknowledged your intended donation of Rs. 3,000 of which 500 has been transmitted to Mr. M. at Mendieghat, we shall probably need to retain the remainder of that sum to supply our wants here ; but we can, with the aid of Mr. R., distribute any sum you may entrust to us with a view to alleviate the pressure which weighs so heavily in these purgnannas, ere the forlorn class which, on account of their extreme misery, is excluded, because unable to work, from Government employment.

It would, doubtless, be a great encouragement to these kind zemindars, when they find their most distant countrymen thus coming forward to their aid ; and so far from their own endeavours being allowed to flag on this account, they would, doubtless ; the more strenuously exert themselves as they would then have good grounds to hope that the final issue of their efforts would be successful.

Extract from a memorandum enclosed in the Society's letter.—“The distress in the western part of the district amounts to actual famine. No rain, with the exception of a slight shower in June, has fallen in Bethoor and Rupsoolabad since March last. The country has since that time been a barren waste. During July, August and September, the usual period of vegetation, not a blade of grass even was produced. The cattle, scanty fed on the leaves of the trees, have died in hundreds. Villages become depopulated by famine and emigration, and at the present time immense tracts of arable land remain fallow, there being neither men nor cattle to cultivate the ground. Negatively relief was afforded by withholding the Government claims for revenue, positively charitable aid, by employment on the Grand Trunk Road, and in the district of Furruckabad, to which many resorted, by employment on its roads.

In some villages there were substantial managers between the cultivators and Government ; the malgootars have, to this day, actually fed the cultivators : in those where the land is minutely subdivided, all being equally impoverished, have emigrated to the Saugor provinces, or sought for labour in the neighbouring districts. The Government authorized the issue of grain for land ploughed and ready for sowing : the soil will not produce without previous as well as subsequent irrigation, and neither cattle nor cultivation were left to effect any extensive sowing on such conditions.”—Hurkaru, April 4.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the committee at the office of the society to Monday 2d instant, the following gentlemen were present :
Rajah Kallikissen Bahadoor, Kumar Sutt Ghur Ghoal, Baboos Aushootesh Day, Prasannotomar Tagore, Mothoonanauth Mullick, and Ramcomul Sen ;

Messrs. T. Dickens, G. Prinsep, and W. C. Hutry.
Visitors.—Moonshree Hosen Ali, Vakeel of Khaja Ali Mulla, zemindar of Dacca ; Baboos Gangarain Roy, Mooktiar of Ramtutton Roy Choudhry, and Lal Mohun Shane.
It was proposed by Baboo Prasannotomar Tagore, that the following gentlemen be nominated additional members of the committee, in conformity with the 15th rule of the Society, subject to the confirmation of the next general meeting.

Rajah Burrodacant Roy, Radhamadhob Banerjee, Baboo Pranno Chowdhoree, Callynauth Roy Chowdhoree, Mothooranauth Mullick, Sambhoochandra Mitter, seconded by Rajah Kallikissen Bahadoor and unanimously agreed to.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members of the Society, and elected nem. con.

Proposed by Kumar Suttchurn Ghoshal and seconded by Baboo Ashootosh Dey.

Rajah Bijoy Govind Sing, of Purneah,

Resolved—That the secretary be requested to communicate the nominations of the several sub-committees respectively.

Read a letter from Rajah Radhacant Deb, enclosing an application from Mr. Thomson, soliciting the appointment of attorney to the Society.

Resolved—That it does not appear to the meeting the probability of requiring the assistance of a solicitor at present, and that the committee can make no engagement; but when necessary, due consideration will be given to Mr. Thomson's application.

Proposed by Prossonocomar Tagore, that the sub-committee for transaction of correspondence be appointed.

Proposition was seconded by Mr. Prinsep.

Resolved—That Rajah Kallikissen Bahadoor, Coomarr Suttchurn Ghoshal and Ramcomul Sen, be appointed.

Proposed by Mr. Dickens,

That an honorary native secretary be appointed.

Proposition seconded by Rajah Kallikissen Bahadoor, Baboo Prossonocomar Tagore was appointed.

Moved by Suttchurn Ghoshal, that the subject of a petition from the natives of Bengal, referred to the Society by the secretary of the Dharmo Subba, be taken into consideration.

Resolved—That the petition with the remarks made by Baboo Prossonocomar Tagore be submitted at the next general meeting.

Moved by Prossonocomar Tagore.

That the petition regarding the use of the vernacular language submitted at the last meeting, be discussed.

Proposed by Mr. Dickens, that an extra meeting of the Society be held at an early day for consideration of the question regarding the vernacular language and the resumption petition of the Dhurma Shubha.

PROSSONOCOMAR TAGORE,

Honorary Secretary,

CORONER'S INQUEST.

An inquest was held yesterday at the residence of the Coroner, touching the death of Dookoo, a young native woman, resident of Chore Bagun. The deposition of Dr. Bain, the police Surgeon, declared, that on his dissecting the corpse, a quantity of yellow arsenic was found lodged therein, and he was borne out in the identity of the poison by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, who analyzed it in his presence. Dr. B. was of opinion that she died from the effects of the deadly drug in question. The examinations of the brother and sister of the deceased (the former being the person who first made mention of the untimely death of his sister to the thanadar of the division), shewed no evidence that the same was administered by any person, nor was proof deducible that she had taken it voluntarily. They also deposed, that the deceased and her husband lived very happily. They suspected no one of having administered the drug to their deceased sister.

The landlord and also a neighbour of the deceased, both corroborated the statements of the previous witnesses; the Coroner clearly recapitulated the evidence, and the Jury instantly returned a verdict to the following effect: "Died from the effects of poison, no evidence of her having taken it voluntarily, nor of its having been administered to her."

The Coroner took the deposition of the constable entrusted with the delivery of a summons to Mr. Charles Marriott. The constable stated, that he delivered the summons to Mr. M. between the hours of 2 and 3 o'clock, at the Military Board Office, when and where he was informed by Mr. M., that having received a previous summons from the Sheriff to serve at the next sessions as a petit juror, he has relieved him from the obligation of performing the duty now required of him on Her Majesty's behalf by the Coroner! On the conclusion of the constable's statement, the Coroner very pleasantly remarked, that he did not quite understand the validity of Mr. Marriott's objection, as the next Sessions of Oyer and Terminer and Gaol Delivery opened on the 17th instant, and even if Mr. M.'s attendance was required on the Sheriff's summons for the next day, his obedience to the summons of Her Majesty's Coroner was imperative, and that he having written to Mr. Marriott to that effect, received his rejoinder, wherein Mr. M. presented his compliments to Her Majesty's Coroner, and desired to be excused complying with the present requisition as a previous and positive engagement, would prevent him from so doing, but he declared his willingness to attend on a future occasion.

The Coroner, after perusing Mr. M.'s reply, shewed the inconveniences this line of conduct engendered; but he did not intimate, what, if any, steps he intended taking to prevent a recurrence of similar proceedings.—Hark.

MEETING OF THE AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION OF BENGAL.

At a meeting of the members of the Australian Association of Bengal.

Dr. J. Sawers in the chair.

1st.—Moved by Mr. Patrick and seconded by Mr. Pigou.

Resolved—That the report of the committee just read be adopted.

2d.—Moved by Mr. Pigou and seconded by Mr. Brae.

Resolved—That Messrs. Patrick and Cracroft be requested to put themselves in communication with Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. to sift the complaints of the passengers of the Emerald Isle.

3d.—Moved by Mr. Cracroft and seconded by Mr. Pigou.

Resolved—That the blame laid on the unpaid secretary in the passengers' protest, addressed to Capt. Driver, dated at Madras, 16th March, 1838, is utterly unjust, groundless and undeserved. The supply of provisions having been left entirely to Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. the owners, and to Capt. Driver acting under their directions, the secretary having had nothing to do with it further than laying the samples sent by Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. before the passengers at a tiffin, where they were fully approved of.

J. Sawers, Chairman.

The meeting of the Australian Association at the Town-Hall, last Saturday, was not very well attended: after the chair was taken by Dr. Sawers, the secretary read the following report of the committee:

The second report of the committee of the Australian Association of Bengal.

Before entering upon the general affairs of the association, your committee feel themselves called upon to explain the reason of their not having convened the regular quarterly meeting on the 31st December last. The disappointment of the first engagement for the Juliana, and the difficulty in finding a substitute delayed the departure of the first ship to a late period in December, when there was an immediate necessity to make fresh arrangements for the second voyage: this, with the secretary's other occupations, rendered it impossible for your committee to have met the subscribers as they intended with a statement of past operations, and made it expedient to delay the meeting till they were prepared with the accounts of both expeditions.

Your Committee have had to content with more difficulty in procuring vessels on charter than they anticipated in the state of the market, and these difficulties were not overcome without great exertions and some personal sacrifice.

The first ship engaged by the association was the Juliana of 550 tons. The charter was already drafted and about to be executed, when it was discovered that the mortgages in England had sent out powers to foreclose the mortgage and despatch the ship to England. This discovery put an end to the engagement, and made it necessary to look out for a new one. With the greatest exertions of your committee favoured by the low rate of freight, it was found impossible to procure a suitable vessel till the latter end of November, the costs of setting up cabins and accommodation between decks, which are rarely to be found in vessels occupied in the country trade being a sufficient discouragement to the ship owners of Calcutta, and ships owned in Europe, being for the most part restricted in their voyages.

The Caillardon of 400 tons, Captain Rapson, was at length, on the 20th November, engaged for the first voyage at the rate of 4,000 rupees a month; but being a country ship without cabins between decks, and those of the poop requiring to be altered, she could not be got ready for despatch earlier than the 16th December, although the most unremitting exertions were made by all concerned in the vessel, and so meritorious in particular were those of Mr. Gardyne, the chief officer, that your committee thought themselves bound to mark their sense of his labours by a gratuity of Rs- 300 which he richly merited.

The Gaillardon sailed on the 16th December, quite full of passengers and freight, and though your committee were disappointed in her capacity for cargo, it will be seen by the accompanying accounts that there is every probability of a surplus to the association on her charter. She was destined for Sydney, touching at the Swan, Adelaide, and Hobart Town, and, on her return voyage, at such ports as our agent at Sydney may require. Your committee have the satisfaction to state that letters have been received from the vessel dated 31st December, all well, and crossing the line with a fine breeze.

The Baboo was engaged for the second voyage of January, but not making her appearance in time to fulfil her engagement, your committee were again compelled to find a substitute, and, after much delay, were enabled by the kind and liberal assistance of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., to secure the new ship Emerald Isle, of 600 tons, Captain Thomas Driver, at a freight of Rs- 5,000 per month. But again there was the same necessity of erecting cabins between decks, besides which she had to be new rigged and fitted in almost every particular and still greater delay was thus unfortunately inevitable.

The Emerald Isle sailed with a full cargo and passengers on the 25th February, for her first destination, Alra, for the passengers and convicts there, and her arrival at that place on the 16th instant is announced.

The accounts of this adventure are less encouraging than those of the Gaillardon; but the measures by your committee to secure a return freight, will, it is hoped, cover the outlay; the cause of this less favourable prospect is the addition of 1,000 rupees per month on the charter-party freight, and the lower rate procured on her dead weight, in consequence of unlooked for competition.

Your committee regret that the necessity of new fittings for both the vessels already despatched (which the failure of their previous contracts had made indispensable), was productive of much inconvenience to shippers and passengers, which was felt and complained of by several of the party on board; they have further been blamed for despatching the vessel in a crowded state, and such was undoubtedly the case; but they have little to accuse themselves of on this score, the fault having been, for the most part, with the passengers themselves, and the unusual quantity of their personal baggage, of which due notice was not given, and for which provision had accordingly not been made. The only alternative was to refuse admission to the baggage which would have given still greater dissatisfaction. They have, however, devised measures for preventing the like inconvenience in future, though they despair of entirely removing it. It is one that emigrant ships are necessarily exposed to more than others.

On the whole, notwithstanding the untoward circumstances above detailed, your committee congratulate the subscribers on the favourable commencement already made, and the prospect of increased communication with Australia which the example already set, appears now to hold out. The number of vessels advertised to sail to that part of the world is greater now than at any former period, and the inquirers for freight and passage, and for purposes of emigration, are increasing rapidly. Your committee are happy to say, that the vessels already despatched are fitted in all respects for future voyages; and there is every hope will be continued by the owners in this line of navigation.

Your committee beg to present the following accounts, viz.

The general account of the association with the secretary marked A.

Balance at credit this day . . . Co.'s Rs. 12,029 2 3

And dependencies of 29,774 12 8

And ditto, at debit 32,500 0 0

An account of the adventure of the Gaillardon with abstracts of freights, passage-money, &c. marked B.

An account of the voyage of the Emerald Isle, marked C.

A list of unrealized subscriptions, marked D.

A list of contributions to the donative fund, marked E.

The secretary also read a letter from the passengers of the Emerald Isle, and Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co.'s explanations. Copies have been furnished to us for publication.

On board the Emerald Isle, off Madras, 16th March, 1838.

TO CAPTAIN DRIVER.

DEAR SIR,—We, the undersigned passengers per Emerald Isle, having understood from the words of the published prospectus of the Bengal Australian Emigrant Association, "that we should be furnished with an abundance of the usual sea supplies of the best description, beg to draw your particular attention to what cannot have escaped your own observation, viz. the very inferior quality of the greater part of the caddy stores, and the utter unfitness of some of them for use, in hope that you will not leave Madras without taking such steps as may be requisite for remedying the serious evils we have to complain of. Imprimis we beg to complain of the rice, which from its inferior quality or newness has constantly caused sickness to those who have partaken of it, particularly the children. We have also to complain of the want of a proper oven and good flour, whereby the baker is entirely prevented from furnishing even the smallest supply of bread, an evil the more serious as the ship's biscuits are declared by all to be extremely bad, one kind being hard and sour and the other, nevilly. The badness of the tea we are less inclined to dwell upon, as it may in part arise from the want of efficient means for preparing it; although not disposed to swell our list of grievances by enumerating all the deficiencies of material and attendant, which last may arise from our confined cuddy not allowing of a sufficient number of servants, yet we must again draw your attention to the extreme inferiority of the wines and liquors, the best proof of the badness of the claret is, that a first taste has been sufficient for every person, the same remark in a great degree applies to the sherry, which is fiery and of the worst kind; the brandy also has been found undeniably bad; this is the more surprising, as an abundance for our small expenditure of good quality might have been procured in Calcutta at very moderate cost. The port wine appears to be some Calcutta manufacture; the beer indeed is flat, and as it appears to be the least unwholesome beverage, it was, from the extreme badness of the wine, almost exclusively used, but only until a supply of portable beer was procured from an individual on board, when it became still more exclusively the sole beverage. We trust, therefore, that at Madras you will lay in a sufficient supply of drinkable beer, port and sherry or Madeira wine, with a few cases of French brandy, and such wholesome provisions as we may use without endangering our health, and that of our children, from the gross intemperance that has existed in supplying the ship. Most of the passengers, as you must be aware, have hitherto depended on their private stores for wine and spirits and biscuits, and some other small articles which we had every right to expect from the cuddy. We have observed that from the number of persons, horses, cattle, stock, plants, &c. &c. on board, the consumption of water amounts to nearly a butt per diem, but as we have already experienced the inconvenience of being on our allowance, we trust that some arrangement for an additional supply of this indispensable necessary will be made. We feel that there are several other points of which we might justly complain, but as we are satisfied that you have done all in your power to render our situation as comfortable as circumstances would admit of, we abstain from alluding to them. We must, however, advert to the water-closets with which the ship is fitted up; the vessel, we believe, is a new and strong one, and all these conveniences are recently up, but owing to haste or bad workmanship, or both, nearly all in the ship are so completely unserviceable, that we trust that you will get them set to rights before we proceed further on our voyage, as the cabins are already more closely packed than is convenient, and, as we think, steerage passengers should have room for their clothes, and that there should be room for the servants and passengers to pass along. We protest against the taking on board of any further parcels or packages, more particularly as the boats, rigging and decks are still so much lumbered with numerous packages of various kinds, and bales of hay, &c. &c.

We are, &c.

Remarks upon the protest of the passengers of the EMERALD ISLE.

Captain Driver was requested by us to give in an estimate of the full quantity of every kind of cuddy stores which might be required for such a voyage, and for thirty sitters at the cuddy table, being particularly chosen a commander, because it was supposed that he understood this kind of thing better than others, who had no habitually carried passengers, and being instructed to do the thing in the best manner. He had no interest in this voyage in the passage-money, and having gone to Messrs. Payne and Co. to provide almost the whole of his stores, we are at a loss to understand why the articles should not be plentiful and of the best description, or how we could have taken greater precautions to secure the entire satisfaction of the passengers.

The Beer and Wine.—With regard to the beer and wine we selected them ourselves, partly from our own godown, partly from Messrs. Eglington, McClure and Co., and musters of each were laid before the committee and fully approved. We may add, the same claret is still drunk at the tables of many in Calcutta. The port was from Wardell and Co. and is highly approved; some good French brandy was also put on board by ourselves, and Capt. Driver carried also a small quantity of British brandy of his own.

The Rice.—We have searched through the bill to find who furnished the table rice according to Capt. D.'s estimate, but we do not find it in any of them, and it is not impossible that it may have been forgotten, and that Capt. D. has given the common ballum rice laid in for the lascar crew: we cannot explain this.

Bread.—There is no excuse for Capt. D. if he did not get the oven properly prepared. The flour provided was from Haworth, Hardman and Co. and not from Ahmuty and Co. as stated by mistake. The ship biscuits were from McCulloch's new bakery, the others from Payne and Co.

Tea.—Was purchased of Rustomjee, was of the first quality, as such as we use in our own families.

Attendance.—The same room and the same attendance cannot be expected in a ship of this class, as will be found in the large passenger ships running to England.

Water.—In a ship of this kind carrying so many persons and animals must be served out with care and upon allowance; a very full provision was laid in on purpose under concurrence with the committee as to quantity.

Water closets.—The Docking Company must be responsible to us for the bad filling of these machines, for we have paid immensely for the work, but some allowance must be for the extreme haste we were called upon to urge by the terms of our charter with the knowledge of the charterer.

CARR, TAGORE AND CO.

Other letters were read, and we have been supplied with extracts for publication. In respect to the crowded state of the ship, Capt. Driver writes from Kedgeeree, "I perfectly agree with you in all and every particular respecting the crowded state of the ship; the passengers have brought such a large quantity of things that cannot go into their cabins and the servants who attend them, such a number of chests, that the evil they complain of is their own act, and not the fault of any one but themselves."

Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. further explain in letters to the secretary:

"We have the pleasure of replying to your letter of his date, returning Messrs. Binny and Co.'s letter by stating, that we are replying to these gentlemen by this day's hawk, having received a similar letter from them, sending a survey report on both the port and claret held his day at our office, pronouncing them both to be sound and excellent, and calling for the descriptive marks of those landed at Madras which we observe in their report is not given," and in another letter from Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. "It will be sufficient perhaps, if we state, that after looking over carefully, we find that Payne and Co. supplied to Capt. Driver, under its own inspection, the greater part of the cuddy stores. The cabin biscuits and superfine flour was supplied by Haworth, Hardman and Co. and we sent herewith musters from the same batch of baking, for their boiler having burst, they have not been working since they state. The sherry was part of a batch received from Liverpool in bottles, excellent wine for immediate use, and the rest, a cask of Wardell's, bottled off by us on purpose: we put on board some good French brandy, and Capt. Driver also furnished some of his own British brandy which he stated to be superior."

The flour and biscuits alluded to in the above extract, was on the table and pronounced good by the meeting. Some observations were made on the unjustifiable step taken by one of the passengers, to deter the passengers at Madras from proceeding on the ship, in writing off from Kedgeeree to Madras without giving the parties attacked any opportunity of defending themselves, or correcting the mischief, and in the uncandid spirit of the protest addressed to Capt. Driver, in which no allusion was made to the public tiffin which, at any rate, would have shewn that the committee were anxious to supply the ship with good provisions and wines and beer.

Extracts were read from the letters of two of the passengers who attended the tiffin, and who also signed the protest, written several days after they had been on boardship. One of them says, "that they had every thing of the best and no stint, and they only wanted a little elbow room to be very comfortable." Another, after alluding to the tediousness of the passage down the river; "but at the same time as to the cuddy concerns we are very comfortable;" this is difficult to reconcile with "the first taste of the claret was sufficient for every person," for no doubt the claret was tasted during the seven days the ship was in the river, and had any complaint been made on this score the matter would have had immediate attention.

Some of the gentlemen at the meeting seemed to think that Capt. Driver was not altogether blameless; it appears he has left Madras without writing to the secretary or the committee, though one would have supposed from the existence of the complaints he would have made assents of reporting on the wines and liquors. Besides it is quite clear that he is responsible for not supplying the ship with bread and good tea, for neither his owners or the association would have seen to this.—Hurkaru, April 10.

THE MOHURRUM IN CALCUTTA.

This festival concluded on Friday, the 6th, perhaps to the great satisfaction of those who have felt the impediments and inconveniences it has occasioned to the free transaction of business. In the city the effects of the festival are insignificant when compared to its character over the ditch. The Mohurum vacation continues for a space of fifteen days, during which the whole of the civil courts continue closed, and hardly a coin exchanges hands. Visit the courts and you find the benches of the judges empty; nothing but the platform and a few chairs appear, where the aumlah and the requisite corruptives practised their tricks. In the subordinate courts the gudees of the honest moulees display marks of the burthens they were obliged to endure. The magistrates' courts are merely nominally open, the nazis look drowsy, and the sherishtadars and peshcars keep snapping their fingers for the want of lucre. To prove this picture, we recommend the curious to visit Allipore during the week.

Having pointed out the Mofussil inconveniences of the Mohurum, we shall now proceed to describe the manner of its celebration in the city. The preliminary Matum we shall pass over, and at once take the reader to the occurrences of the Kuttel-ca-Raut. We stood at the top of the Bontacannah Road, and, at the distance of about a mile, descried a great light moving to the sound of music; as we approached closer, we heard a buz and a few steps made the words Eah Hussein quite audible to our ears. About two hundred shawls in flag-bearers, led the way, then followed the bearers of some colours on which the sufferings of the Pagumbars were inscribed in letters of gold and silver in the Arabic character. Next came the Soonies dressed in green muslin, and leading the second van we recognized Mirza Mhendy Miskhey, supported by Hajee Karboh Mahomed and Mirza Mhendy Isphahanvy. Two high caste Arabs caparisoned in velvet and valuable coins, pranced proudly on with the funeral of their late illustrious riders. The horses were led by Aga Kazim and another Mogul gentleman, with whose name we are not familiar. The seas were attired in mourning. The procession was evidently imposing by the beating of breasts. Every thump came down in regular time, and the naked breasts of the penitents appeared not to have been dealt with in the most tender way.

The sound of drums next attracted our attention. The drummers preceded a moleseum four stories high, of the Mosaic order. It was constructed of bamboos and ornamented with cotton of various colours. The taj of Hussein was suspended on the top. This belonged to the dhonoes, or the cotton refiners of Burrah Bazar. Immediately after it followed another made of the same materials, but ornamented with tinsel and illuminated with blue light. It had five stories, one above the other, and was carried like a castle through the mass of people on the road. A little below Moulally Durgah two bodies of men, comprising about 500 on each side, marched facing each other with tajes constructed of several shields. On inquiry we learnt that one party consisted of ayces belonging to Cook and Co.'s stables, and the others to Hunter and Co., Hooker, and some other livery stable keepers. In a moment the scene was confusion, the men lost all possession of themselves, and, seizing every thing they found in their way, laid it thick and three fold on their neighbours. The police interfered, but to little purpose; for if the police had been a thousand strong, they would have had to contend with ten thousand mad men, as the dispute originated for room, and terminated with the sects Seas and Soonies. One of the combatants was killed and another seriously wounded, and the upshot was that Cook and Co.'s ayces were obliged to give leg bail.—Hurkaru, April 12.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general meeting of this society was held in the Society's apartment, Town-hall, on Wednesday morning, the 11th of April, 1838.

The Hon. Sir E. Ryan President, in the chair.

Present:—Dr. Wallich; Dr. Strong; Messrs. A. Colvin, G. A. Prinsep, Cracroft, J. P. Marcus, C. K. Robison, N. Alexander, A. Harris, and T. S. Kelsall; Lieut. Sibley, Messrs. T. Bracken, R. S. Strickland, F. T. Fergusson, R. Smith, E. Preston, D. Hare, C. Dearie, R. S. Thompson, J. W. Masters, W. K. Ewart, W. F. Gibbon, H. H. Spry, A. H. Sim, and John Bell.

Visitors:—Messrs. O. C. Richardson and T. Hugon,

The proceedings of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last meeting, were elected members of the Society:

Geo. Palmer, Esq.; Major-General Oglander; F. L. Beaufort, Esq. C. S.; Thos. Brae, H. Fitzgerald, Geo. Osborne, N. Hudson, Esqrs.; and W. Dent, Esq. C. S.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members:

Dr. Jas. Morton, (senior assistant to the Com. of Arracan,) proposed by Capt. Bogle, and seconded by the secretary.

Wm. Bennett, Esq. (late of Demerara), proposed by Dr. W. G. Maxwell, and seconded by the secretary.

Wm. Agnew, Esq. proposed by Dr. W. G. Maxwell, and seconded by the secretary.

Muneeam Bur Bahadoor, proposed by Capt. F. Jenkins, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

K. M. Scott, Esq. (assistant surgeon Gowhatti), proposed by Capt. F. Jenkins, and seconded by the secretary.

Robert Campbell Esq., proposed by D. W. H. Speed, Esq., and seconded by the secretary.

Andrew Sym, Esq., proposed by A. Colvin, Esq., and seconded by the secretary.

Lieut. J. G. Gerrard (European regiment), proposed by C. K. Robison, Esq. and seconded by W. K. Ewart, Esq.

John Guilding, Esq. (late of St. Vincent's), proposed by the secretary and seconded by R. Watson, Esq.

G. C. Richardson, Esq. (late of Jamaica), proposed by the secretary and seconded by C. Dearie, Esq.

REPORTS.

Read committee's report on samples of cotton sent by Lieut. Burneh, of Mhairwarrah, on the part of Capt. Dixon. A sample from R. Davidson, Esq., the produce of the same place.

Referred to the committee of papers for publication.

Read report of the proceedings of the cattle committee, on the motion of the president made at last meeting.

The secretary had printed all the information already collected, and had sent copies to parties named in the report and to many others.

Resolved, that the replies when received be handed over to the committee for consideration and publication, if necessary, for the information of the Royal Asiatic Society.

Motions of which notice was given at last general meeting disposed of, vis.

Nos. 1 and 2 carried.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

No. 1.—Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Dr. Spry, “That, with a view to the advancement of agricultural knowledge and the development of the resources of British India, it appears desirable to extend the list of rewards and prizes already held out by the Society, by adding a number of others of a more specific nature, and that a pecuniary reward, not exceeding 2,000 rupees, nor less than 1,000 rupees, and the Society's gold medal, be awarded to the best practical agricultural treatise, founded on local experience, on any of the undermentioned subjects, vis. cereal grains, sugar, cotton, indigo, silk, tobacco, coffee, and dyes generally; to these may, perhaps, be added vegetable fibre gums and extracts and resinous substances, oils, caoutchouc, cochineal, with some modifications.

“The conditions of the above rewards will, of course, have to be considered hereafter in detail, it may not, however, be out of place to submit the following outline of them.”

1st.—As to the time in which the treatises are to be sent in.

2d.—The successful treatise to be the property of Society, unless the author engages to publish in this country within — months, or in England within —; with an agreement to provide the Society, at cost price, with any number that may be required, of which timely notice to be given to the author.

3d.—The Society reserves to itself the right of rejection, without assigning any reason, restoring, of course, any treatise so rejected to the author.

4th.—The Society likewise to have the privilege of dividing the pecuniary reward allotted to any one subject between two or more competitors, who may be deemed to have equal claims to it, in which case the reward is to be computed at the maximum rate (of 2,000 rupees) and the gold medal presented to each of the candidates.

Motion, No. 2.—Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Mr. Bell, that a reward of ten rupees be given to Mr. N. Alexander's gardener for producing such fine artichokes.

Motion, No. 3.—Proposed by the secretary, seconded by Dr. Wallich, that a reward of five rupees be given to Mr. E. Preston's gardener for producing such fine parsnips.

Memo.—Both the artichokes and parsnips were highly approved of at the meeting.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 13th March, forwarding a small sample of indigo, sent down by Capt. Jenkins, manufactured in Assam by Mr. Gruse, from a plant closely allied to the Ruellia plant.

From W. F. Fergusson, Esq., extract from a letter to the secretary, dated 7th April, presenting a small bag of indigo seed, gathered by Dr. Campbell on the banks of the Nile. Dr. Campbell describes the leaves of the plant as larger and looking richer than those of this country.

From Capt. Bogle, dated Akyab, March 8th, advising despatch of a sample of salt, together with several specimens of caoutchouc collected in the neighbourhood.

Promising to forward specimens of the several varieties of timber common in the district. Asks for supplies of cotton, paddy, &c. seed.

From Baboo Rajnarain Day, dated March 17th, presenting to the Society an “Essay on the Agriculture of Bengal,” of which he is the author.

From Colonel Caulfield, dated Berhampore, March 9th, forwarding samples of Upland Georgia cotton, and Sandoway tobacco, produced in the experimental garden at that station.

From H. Cope, Esq., secretary Agricultural Society of Meerut, dated March 11th, advising despatch of samples of Upland Georgia, Egyptian, &c. cotton reared in their garden at that station from seed supplied by this Society. Asking for copies of the Society's transactions.

From the same, dated March 31st, intimating the despatch of cotton which was delayed, owing to the secretary being ill.

From Monsieur Perotet to Dr. Wallich, dated Kautce, Neigherries, March 16.

Monsieur Perotet, who has published a treatise on the wild cochineal, assures Dr. Wallich, that the insect sent by Monsieur Richard to this society, is really, the finis cochineal, called “Mesteque” or grana fina, and that the plant on which the insect arrived, is the true “Nopal of the Castilians.”

Monsieur P. saw both at Bourbon, on his way to India, and begged of Mr. Richard to forward a small supply to him at Pondicherry, but they arrived when he was in the Neigherries, and the native gardeners to whom they were entrusted allowed both the insect and plant to die.

Monsieur Perotet refers Dr. Wallich to Monsr. Delissert, a naturalist, for a corroboration of his perfect conviction, which he says, admits of no doubt, as to the insect being the true grana fina.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 23d March, forwarded for presentation to the society, on behalf of Captain Jenkins, a specimen of a sort of hemp called "Rheea," and a specimen of Indian corn grown by the Merts.

From the same, dated April 4th, presenting, in the name of Captain Jenkins, a copy of the fifth report of the Hon'ble Society of Cornwall, and a copy of the proceedings of the annual meeting of 1837, of the Royal Institution of Cornwall.

From the same, dated March 15th, enclosing a letter from Lieutenant Brown, forwarding a further supply of 900 Otaheite canes, from Major Sleeman's plantation at Jubbulpore. Annexing Mr. Master's report on the canes, shewing that they were all in excellent condition.

From Major Archer to Dr. Wallich, dated Bourbon, forwarding four cases containing sugar-cane tops.

From Mr. C. N. Valler, dated Cape Town, January 16th, in reply to secretary's letter of the 16th October last, on the subject of the society's annual indent for seeds, promises to forward the quantity ordered, so as to reach Calcutta by the middle of August.

From B. Hodgson Esq., dated Nepal, March 13th, offering to forward a supply of red and white clonon seed, and asking for some fresh European vegetable seeds.

From Major Moore, dated Hyderabad, March 12th, advising despatch of four potatoes produced in his garden.

From R. Smith, Esq., dated March 22d, offering a few remarks on the domestication of the wild honey bee.

From H. Pittington, Esq., dated March 26th, forwarding for distribution a small quantity of dolichos, asparagus, beans.

From W. Brockman, Esq., dated Calcutta, March 28th, acknowledging receipt of seeds and the transactions of the society, and promising to be the medium of opening a correspondence between the Western Australian Agricultural Society and this institution.

From J. Vaughan, Esq., librarian of the American Philo-sophical Society, dated Philadelphia, October 13th, 1837, transmitting a copy of Part 2d, vol. 4th transactions of that society.

From Mr. Masters, forwarding ten seeds of Egyptian cotton seed, and a quantity of Sorghum vulgares, and Persian tomato seeds, grown in the Society's nursery.

From the same, dated April 7th, enclosing a paper containing some remarks on the propagation of plants.

From J. C. Marshman, Esq., dated Serampore, March 23d, stating his inability from untoward circumstances, to continue the publication of the Society's transactions.

From the Rev. J. Thomas, superintendent of the Baptist Mission Press, to the secretary, dated March 27th, expressing his willingness to undertake the printing of the Society's transactions at a certain rate.

Capt. Hullock, of the Donna Pascoa, presented twelve casks and nine half casks of sugar-cane tops, which he brought from the Mauritius, but which excepting a few in the half casks, were all dead.

From lieut. Vetch, a chest containing caoutchouc, which comprised the condition of awarding the gold medal to that gentleman.

From Capt. H. J. Wood, samples of wool of the Jeypoor sheep.

From Dr. Campbell, a box containing a variety of agricultural productions of the valley of Nepal, adverted to in his letter of the 28th January.

From J. P. Marcus, Esq., a sample of wild cochineal collected by him in 1837, and a supply of roosa grass oil seed, with some living plants of the same.

From Mr. Waghorn, a case of Egyptian cotton seed, referred to in his letter to the Society of the 22d October, 1837.

N. B.—The produce of former supplies from Mr. Waghorn, having been favorably reported upon, and mistaken in one or two instances for Sea Island cotton, by good judges, those disposed to cultivate this cotton, are recommended to make early application.

From W. A. Harris, a small quantity of cotton grown in the Soonderbuns, said to be from Sea Island seed.

The American plough, so much spoken of at Bombay, and of which a model had been received, together with three spare shares and iron work complete, excepting the wood work.

The secretary had, with the concurrence of the agricultural Committee, disposed of two of these shares to Messrs. Lyall, Matheson and Co. for prime cost and charges, and had but the complete plough, as a pattern for the wood part, one share remains at disposal.

As Mr. Harris expressed a wish to make a trial of the complete plough, it was proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by the secretary and resolved, that the plough should be placed at Mr. Harris' disposal, on that gentleman engaging to give the Society the result of the trial.

Mr. N. Alexander submitted some very fine specimens of artichokes, produced in his garden.

Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Mr. Cracroft, that Mr. Alexander be solicited to favour the society, with a memorandum as to the mode used by him in cultivating his artichokes.

Mr. E. Preston presented a basket of very large parsnips, produced in his garden from Cape seed.

Dr. Spry presented a specimen of caoutchouc on behalf of Lieut. Wemyss, of the Assam local battalion.

Mr. Owen J. Elias presented a bottle of arrow-root, made up to the usual process.

Read a note from Mr. Kildale, superintendent of the Bishop's College Press, enclosing an estimate of the expense of printing the society's transactions.

Resolved, that the secretary on reference to Mr. Thomas' terms of printing, be requested to treat further on the subject; and that the secretary shall make such arrangements with either Press, as he may deem judicious.

The secretary brought to the notice of the meeting, the suggestion which had been made by him to the committee of papers, in December last (vide appendix vol. 5, page 106), and which had not yet been sanctioned, viz. to have the monthly proceedings as published in the papers, circulated in the shape of a pamphlet, to correspond and all similar institutions to members generally, and all others who take an interest in the objects of this Society. The secretary had already printed the proceedings of January, February and March, and now with reference to Mr. Marshman's estimate of the charge, wished the society to sanction the expense, as it would be the means of maintaining a constant and regular source of information.

The president observed, that this ought to be a regular motion, but, as the utility of the measure would be apparent to all, and the expense so trifling, he thought, if no objection was taken to it, the present meeting might dispose of the question to enable the secretary to print off the proceeding without delay.

Resolved nem. con.

The thanks of the society were ordered to be offered for all the foregoing communications and presentations.

JOHN BELL, Secretary.

THE STORM ON THE EIGHTH APRIL.

We have been very credibly informed, that the loss of life and property by this storm was very great. The loss stated at Kootghutta is above 250 lives, and all the way up the injuries have been of a dreadful nature. At Bycantopore and on to Ramnaghur in the 24-Pergunnahs the villages have been laid desolate, as more than 2,000 huts and several brick built houses have been levelled to the ground, burying under them from 3 to 4 lives each, on an average, a few of whom only lived to relate the fate of the other sufferers. Trees of 30, or 40 years' standing are now lying on the soil that once supported them. From the canal several large boats were raised to a height of about 30 feet and left on high land. The boatmen became victims from the fall of the timbo depôts on them, and the labourers who felt their habitations insecure, fell dead under the shower of hail. Those who escaped into houses met with a similar fate. Among the greatest pecuniary native sufferers are Buxoo, mistry, Ramchand Oully and Seebnath, buttachargee, to the amount of upwards of 30,000 rupees. The petty mahujuns are left penniless. Mr. G. Prinsep is, we also hear, a considerable loser.

In the Sunderbuns the loss has not been less great, from one quarter we heard of the destruction of a grain gulah 80 feet long.

FEARFUL LOSS OF LIFE.

We are just informed that 2 more villages of great extent at Gurreeah and Putterghutta, in the 24-Pergunnahs, have suffered more than the rest, men, women, and children have died without number and so has cattle of every description. Puckah houses and trees have been torn up by their roots; as for huts, it would be impossible to count their number. The worthy magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs have issued every instruction in his power for the relief of such as are left to tell the sufferings of their neighbours. Mr. Flood, the Supervisor, and his son, the Clerk attached to the magistracy, with a native doctor, have been sent to the spot to render every possible relief, and send on as many as possible to the Allipore Hospital. The removal of the dead, we are informed, will be attended with difficulty, as the number is great. Mr. Patton is now exerting all the aid within his jurisdiction to make the relief as prompt as possible. We trust his exertions will be useful, as we suppose they will be. We know the local subordinate authorities will see that there is no excuse and will answer with him in this case; he ought to direct, all the European officers to the different divisions and desire them to represent every instance of procrastination as well as neglect. The joint magistrate of Barraset and the chief magistrate of Calcutta ought also to send out as much assistance as they have available, no time is to be lost in a cause so near us, and so much within our means to alleviate to the best of our power.—Hulk, April 13.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

Proceedings of the Second Quarterly General Meeting for 1838, of Subscribers to the "Bengal Medical Retiring Fund."

At a quarterly general meeting of subscribers to the "Bengal Medical Retiring Fund," held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, at 4 o'clock p. m., on Monday the 9th April 1838, agreeably to section xix. of the Fund Deed,

Present,

Jas. Gregory Vos, Esq., M. D., in the Chair.

The secretary read the proceedings of the last quarterly general meeting, and the following report of the proceedings of the committee of management during the last quarter.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT.

Medical Retiring Fund Office, 9th April 1838.

The retirement from the service from the 1st March 1838, of Surgeon Thomas Munro, M. D., having been announced in Government general orders, dated 26th February 1838, he has been admitted to the 5th annuity for 1838 from the date of retirement. His annuity is payable by the fund agents in London.

Since the last quarterly general meeting the prescribed affidavit of age from Mr. Superintending Surgeon Geo. Gunning Campbell having been furnished, and his retirement from the service announced in Government general orders dated 12th March, ultimo, he has been admitted to the 6th annuity for 1833 from date of the general order. This gentleman's annuity is also payable by the fund agents in London.

Mr. Surgeon John Turner (whose application for admission as a subscriber was circulated for the votes of the subscribers with the secretary's letter of the 23d December last) having been admitted by a majority of votes of 127 (8 being against his admission) declared his intention to accept the only remaining annuity referred to in the committee's last quarterly report (para. 8th), and his retirement from the service from the 1st March 1838, having been announced in Government general order dated 12th March, ultimo, he was admitted on the 1st annuity of 1834. This gentleman's annuity is payable from the treasury of the East India House.

The committee of management beg to notice that the following investment of realizations since May 1837, has been made by the sub-treasurer of Government in 6 per cent. Treasury notes under the orders of Government dated 20th February 1837, and the arrangement communicated in the committee's quarterly report dated 10th April 1837.

The state of the poll for the election of two managers in the room of Messrs. A. R. Jackson and C. C. Egerton, gone out this year by rotation, is as follows:

For T. Smith ..	38	For H. H. Goodeve...	13
" S. Nicolson ..	10	" J. G. Vos.....	8
" J. Grant ..	68	" W. B. O'Shaughnessy.	11

" J. Colvin ..	7	" B. Wilson	1
" G. Craigie ..	24	" G. Angus.....	15
" D. Stewart ..	18	" C. C. Egerton.....	55
" W. A. Green ..	3

The majority of votes appearing in favour of Messrs. John Grant and C. C. Egerton, the first was declared elected, and the second re-elected as managers to fill existing vacancies.

A majority of subscribers having declared for a reference to a professional actuary for opinion as to the basis of the fund calculations, Dr. A. R. Jackson (who has proceeded to England), has been empowered to consult one on his arrival in England, and furnished with a bill of exchange for £50 as the actuary's fees. The instructions furnished to Dr. Jackson are contained in the following resolution passed at the monthly meeting of the committee of management, held on the 29th January last.

Resolved—That Dr. Jackson be furnished with a bill of exchange on London for £50, to defray expenses of the reference; that a printed copy of the original rules of the fund as drawn up by the central committee of Agra, and a copy of the same as revised by the committee of management of Calcutta, as also a copy of the fund-deed, together with a pamphlet containing "Plans and documents connected with the proposed Medical Fund published at Agra in 1832, by order of the central committee," and a copy of the proceedings of the quarterly general meetings held on the 30th October last, and 8th January, instant, be put up under cover and delivered to Dr. Jackson. From these documents the Actuary will receive precise information as to the views and objects of establishing the Medical Retiring Fund, and he can determine whether or not the current subscriptions of each year, without a separate permanent fund, are sufficient to continue from year to year the grant of 6 new annuities, besides maintaining the liabilities for annuities already on the fund. Should it appear, on investigation, that the current subscriptions even at the maximum rate are insufficient to support this double liability, the actuary is required to suggest such modification as will, consistently with the principles and objects of the fund, make it equal to its engagement, and at the least possible cost to the subscribers, having in view that no gains are required beyond covering liabilities, and meeting the expense of management. The present object of the fund, it will be seen, is, to give 6 annuities, and to grant to all annuities during life £300 per annum, on their contributing, by subscription, or purchase the half value of such annuity, calculated at 6 per cent. per annum according to the probabilities of the duration of human life at Northampton, according to Dr. Price's table. The current contributions, therefore, unaided by any accumulated capital, are not only to provide for six annuities, but to keep up, under provision of section xxxvii. of the fund-deed, an annual credit to "APPROPRIATED FUND," equal to the value of annuities at the ages of the existing annuitants, according to the rates specified in table annexed to section xxiii. of the fund-deed.

All information as to the probability of human life in India can be readily obtained by reference to Mr. Christie, actuary of the London branch of the Universal Life Assurance Company, as that gentleman has recently prepared for that office tables of rates of premiums payable in India, from data obtained from Captain H. B. Henderson's tables of mortality printed in the Asiatic Researches, volume XX., published by the Asiatic Society of Bengal. Rates of subscriptions to the fund not being regulated by age but from official rank, and standing in the gradation list of the medical service, the income of the fund can be determined by ascertaining at the India-house what is the regulated complement of the medical service in each grade when complete. It is understood that an augmentation of the medical establishment is contemplated, and every information connected with such augmentation may be obtained by reference to the India-house, Leadenhall-street, London.

The committee received a requisition from seven subscribers at Calcutta, dated the 20th January last, suggesting that the rates of subscription be raised to the maximum amount, and subscribers in arrears called upon to liquidate. The requisitionists were informed in reply, that, as the collections of the fund at the present rate of subscriptions with arrears under recovery, will be sufficiently ample, it is expected to offer more than the regulated number of annuities this year, and probably more than there will be applications for, as anticipation of the boon being granted induces some to defer acceptance of the annuity until result of the memorial praying for the boon is definitively known, the committee did not deem it expedient immediately to raise the subscriptions. The present, however, would be a favorable opportunity to have an accumulated fund from maximum subscriptions, which would go a great way to absorb the annuities now in arrear: but as the committee conceive that the measure of raising the subscription will not be generally acceptable, they feel reluctant to adopt it, until the collection of arrears and subscriptions fall short of the amount required to give six annuities. Every exertion is making to collect the arrears due from subscribers, and the committee are happy to communicate that the call is readily reciprocated to by those in arrear.

The following resolution fixing a graduated scale of penalty for all future admissions is now in circulation for the vote of subscribers.

Resolved—That, as the admission from the medical list as it now stands, of new members to the Bengal

Medical Retiring Fund so many years after its formation, gives advantages to such new members over the earlier supporters of the fund, in having avoided the trouble risk incurred by the latter, all persons applying for admission as subscribers to the said fund, or who are not actually subscribers this Wednesday, 28th February, 1838, shall, previously to their application for admission [in the conditions of section iii. of the fund-deed] being circulated for the votes of the subscribers resident in this country, pay as a penalty for the exclusive benefit of the fund [but to be re-paid to the applicant should he be rejected by a majority of votes] a sum of money equal to one moiety of his arrears of subscription, to be calculated in the first instance from the 1st January 1833 to the date of his application, and on the second, from the date of his application to the date of his actual admission as a member, to be decided by the committee of management of the fund, after due examination of the votes of the members residing in India, such amount of penalty to be according to the rank of the applicant, as provided in section iv. of the fund-deed, or the annual sum according to the following table; and that such applicant or applicants shall also pay the expense of printing and circulating the reference for his or their admission previous to the result of votes being declared.

Annual penalty to be paid on admission reckoning from 1st January 1833 to date of admission.

The committee have received intimation in officiating secretary Lieutenant Colonel Stuart's letter, dated the 12th ultimo, that the Hon. the Court of Directors, in their military letter, dated the 2nd December last, decline to depart from the rules limiting the number to three annuities of each year, payable through their home treasury, in favor of the committee of management's request, preferred through the local Government on the 30th November, 1836, that payment of all six annuities granted annually from this fund be paid from the Company's treasury in London, to obviate the necessity of employing private agency. The committee have made arrangements with the house of Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart. and Co. of London (who have been appointed agents of the fund as communicated in quarterly report of the 10th October 1836) to pay the remaining three annuities, so that no dis-appointment or irregularity in receipt of annuities shall occur to the annuitants, who will not receive their annuity at the India-house. Of the six annuities granted by this fund annually, those certificates numbered 1 to 3 each year will be paid at the India-house, and those numbered 4 to 6 by the agents of the fund to London.

The sum of sicca rupees 87,048 0-0, or Co.'s Rs. 92,851-3-2 has been transferred since last quarterly meeting from credit of the fund to that of APPROPRIATED FUND under provision of section xxvii. of the fund-deed, being the value of the annuities granted to Superintending Surgeon Geo. Gunning Campbell and Surgeons John Turner, and Thomas M. Munro, M. D.

By order of the committee of management.

Geo. Hill, Secretary, M. R. F.

Resolved—That the report of the proceedings of the committee of management for the past quarter just read, be confirmed and adopted.

Resolved—That in consequence of loss having accrued to the fund from difficulty of recovering arrears of subscriptions from the estate of lapsed members, the committee of management be requested to represent the matter to the Hon. the President of the Council of India in Council in the hope of the authority of Government being issued, authorizing pay-masters and other disbursing officers to deduct monthly the amount of subscriptions from the pay abstract of all subscribers to the fund in every case the same as is done in respect to the Orphan fund subscription.

Resolved—That as it appears that some few members of the Medical Service who, although they have intimated their desire to become members of the Medical Retiring Fund, have not formally signed the fund-deed either in person or by attorney, and have not continued the payment of the subscription, the secretary to the fund be directed to inform such gentlemen that the provisions of rule viii. will be strictly acted up in their case unless they immediately sign the fund-deed, in due form, and continue their contribution to the fund.

Dr. Grant submitted to the meeting a memorial that he had altered from one drawn up at Agra, reiterating the prayer of the medical service to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company that the boon granted to all the departments of the army for pension according to length of service instead of rank, be extended to the medical service.

Resolved—That the secretary in the Medical Retiring Fund do circulate to the several superintending surgeons the amended draft of the memorial just submitted by Dr. Grant, with the request that they take the sense thereon of the medical officers in their respective divisions of superintendency, and communicate the result for the information of the committee of management to enable them to draw up the necessary memorial for signature of the medical service for transmission home through the Supreme Government by the earliest opportunity.

Resolved,—That the thanks of this meeting be voted to Dr. Vos, for his conduct as chairman.

(Signed) JAS. GREGORY Vos, M. D. Chairman.

UNION BANK.

A special general meeting of proprietors was held this day at the Bank, pursuant to an advertisement by the directors under date the 24th ultimo on the requisition of 32 proprietors, for the purpose of considering certain propositions for increasing the capital stock of the Bank from forty to eighty lacs of rupees.

On the motion of Mr. Holroyd, chairman of the directors, and seconded by Baboo Neelmony Mooteeloll,

Mr. A. F. Smith was called to the chair.

The following resolutions were then moved by Mr. Dickens and unanimously agreed to :

1st.—Moved as above, and seconded by Mr. Parker, That the present capital of the Bank be doubled by raising 40 lacs of Company's rupees, by the addition of 4,000 shares of Company's rupees 1,000 each, so as to make the capital of the Bank 80 lacs in all.

2d.—Moved as above, and seconded by Mr. Holroyd, That the share be distributable among the proprietors rateably, and in proportion to their present interests.

3d.—Moved as above, and seconded by Mr. Vint, That the sum of at least 10 lacs, or 1,000 shares, be payable in cash, every six months, the first payment to be completed at latest on the 1st January 1839, the second by the 1st July 1839, and so on.

4th.—Moved as above, and seconded by Mr. W. Ferguson, That each proprietor be bound to take up and pay cash for one-fourth of his additional interest in complete shares, on or before the 31st December, and 30th June of each year, during the period of two years from the 1st July next, provided that no fractional parts of shares be allowed to be taken up, and that such shares, as cannot be taken pursuant to the terms of this and the 3d resolution, be sold by auction on or about the 15th February, and August, after each half yearly period, for the benefit of proprietors not taking up or obtaining new shares.

5th.—Moved by Mr. Clarke, and seconded by Mr. Mackilligan, That, notwithstanding the above resolutions, each proprietor have the option of taking up all or any portion of his new shares, immediately, or at any period on paying for the same in cash.

6th.—Moved by Mr. Dickens and seconded by Mr. Cragg, That parties on paying for the new stock shall receive dividends pro rata from the quarter day next ensuing the payment.

7th.—Moved by Mr. Dickens and seconded by Mr. H. M. Parker, That, notwithstanding the above resolutions, such extension of time as the directors may deem necessary, be allowed to absentee proprietors, or in any special cases.

8th.—Moved by Mr. Clarke, and seconded by Mr. Richard Walker, That the issue of bank notes shall be limited to one-fourth of the paid-up capital.

Moved by Col. D. McLeod, C. B., and seconded by Capt. Ousely. That the thanks of the meeting be given to the chairman.

In pursuance of art. 63, of the bank-deed, a general meeting of proprietors is called on Saturday, the 19th May, at noon, for the special purpose of confirming, or otherwise, the above resolutions passed at this meeting.

By order of the directors,

JOHN STORM,

Actg. Secy. to the Union Bank.

ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

A general meeting of the subscribers and parents of the students of the above institution was held at the Town-hall, on Saturday last, in the afternoon, for the inspection of accounts and suggestion of some such plans as might make the institution permanent.

Sir J. P. Grant, was in the chair.

The operations of the meeting commenced later than the hour specified in the advertisement, owing to its having escaped from the mind of Sir J. P. Grant, who kindly promised to take the chair.

Baboo Nobinnadiah Dey, the secretary, addressed the meeting, delivering a short sketch of the institution itself, from its very commencement to the present date, and making remarks upon those that have not yet paid their subscriptions. Baboo Gobin Chunder Mujoondar did the same, and thanked the subscribers for their patronizing the institution.

The secretary, after having read and submitted the account to the meeting, through the request of the chair, intimated that the sum collected from the establishment of the school to the 31st of March, 1838, up to which the accounts to Company's rupees 1,262-10 annas, and that the expenditure of the institution having been 1,226-1, there remains only a small balance of 36-9 in favor of the institution.

The following are the resolutions made:

1st.—Proposed by the secretary and seconded by Baboo Muddoooudon Chuckerbutty, that some measures should be adopted to put the institution upon a permanent basis. Carried.

2d.—Proposed by Baboo Ramchunder Mitter and seconded by Sir J. P. Grant, that the parents of the boys should pay a small stipend for the education of their children. Carried.

3d.—Proposed by Sir J. P. Grant and seconded by Raja Rajnarain Roy Bahadoor, that a stipend of 8 annas only should be paid by each parent for the education of his child. Carried.

4th.—Proposed by Sir J. P. Grant and seconded by Raja Rajnarain, that a subscription book shall be circulated amongst both the European and native community. Carried.

5th.—Proposed by Sir J. P. Grant and seconded by Baboo Jaudobchunder Dhurra, that in order to shorten the expenditure of the institution, a reduction of the salaries to masters shall be made. Carried.

6th.—Proposed by Raja Rajnarain and seconded by Baboo Jaudobchunder Dhurra, that for the annual examination of the school a day in December shall be fixed. Carried.

7th.—Proposed by Sir J. P. Grant and seconded by Baboo Ramchunder Mitter, that letters shall be circulated amongst the parents of the students for payment of the small stipend above alluded to. Carried.

8th.—Proposed by Baboo Gobinchunder Mujoondar and seconded by Baboo Ramchunder Mitter, that a vote of thanks shall be given to Sir J. P. Grant for his very able conduct in the chair. Carried.

9th.—Proposed by the secretary and seconded by Baboo Gobinchunder Mujoondar, that a vote of thanks shall be given to the subscribers for their kindly supporting the institution. Carried.

After this the meeting dissolved. [Hurk. April 23.]

At a Meeting of Proprietors of the Bank of Bengal, held this day, pursuant to the advertisement in the Government Gazette of the 7th instant, of which copy is in the margin,

Mr. H. T. Prinsep was called to the Chair.

Read the requisition for this meeting.

Moved by Mr. E. Macnaghten, seconded by Mr. A. Colvin, and resolved,

That it is expedient to increase the capital stock of the Bank of Bengal.

Moved by Mr. G. Collier, seconded by Mr. Allan and resolved,

That it is expedient that the increase should be of such amount as to allow upon each share a proportion of new stock that may be expressed in even thousand, viz. upon the share of Rs. 4,000 an increase of one-fourth or one-half or three-fourths.

Moved by Mr. J. W. Cragg, seconded by Mr. A. Colvin and resolved,

That in the opinion of the meeting it is desirable (whether or not the Government relinquish its share of the new stock) that the capital should be increased one-half, so that in case the Government should determine to take its share of new stock, that the capital be increased by the sum of Rs. 3,750,000 and in the event of Government declining (as on the late augmentation) to take its share the capital be increased by the sum of Rs. 3,200,000.

An amendment moved by Mr. C. R. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. McFarlane and resolved,

That, in order to prevent the capital exceeding one crore of rupees, the increase be one-quarter of each existing share and not one-half.

Moved by Mr. Cragg, seconded by Mr. Bagshaw and resolved,

That the holders of fractions of the present share of Rs. 4,000 be received in their share of the proposed increase by an auction sale for their benefit.

Moved by Mr. Mangles, seconded by Mr. Cragg, and resolved, that the proprietors whether absent or present shall, as in the last increase have eighteen months from the date of the sanction of such increase of stock by the Governor-General-in-Council, to pay the value of the shares they may respectively become entitled to; but in as much as it is expedient that the Bank should have immediate use and benefit of such portion of such increased capital as can be supplied without detriment to the interests of absent proprietors resolved, that all proprietors shall have the option of paying into the Bank the amount of the value of the new stock they may respectively become entitled to, immediately such sanction of Government has been obtained, and that they shall be entitled to receive their half yearly dividend on such new stock, to be calculated from the 1st day of July, or the 1st day of January (as the case may be) next after they may have made such payment.

Moved by Mr. Mangles, seconded by Mr. Leach, and resolved, that our directors be requested to take into consideration the possibility of making arrangements for the payment of dividends to proprietors in England and to report the result of their deliberating to the next general meeting.

The chairman then stated, that, with reference to the proposition agreed to at the last meeting of proprietors, for increasing the sum at disposal for establishment, the majority of directors had come to a resolution to apply to Government to obtain a deputy secretary to be appointed from amongst its servants, but had received a reply from the President in Council, refusing to appoint a civil servant to the office. To this resolution four directors were dissentient, and three minutes are recorded. The chairman added that no further steps had yet been taken by the directors to appropriate the surplus funds voted.

After a few observation from Mr. Cragg, in favour of appointing a deputy from persons unconnected with the Government, it was resolved nem. con., that the directors should take such measures as they might deem necessary and proper to provide for the increasing business of the Bank, and report the same to the next meeting. Thanks were then voted to the chairman and the meeting broke up.

(Signed) H. T. Prinsep, Chairman.

BANK OF BENGAL.

There was a meeting of proprietors of the Bank of Bengal yesterday, to consider the propriety of petitioning the Governor General to authorize the increase of the capital stock. H. T. Prinsep, Esq. in the chair; the following gentlemen present:—Messrs. Bracken, Leach, W. F. Fergusson, A. Colvin, McKilligen, Mangles, E. Macnaghten, Collier, Martin, Newcomen, Fitzgerald, W. Storm, McFarlane, Hurry, W. Prinsep, Rabbeth, P. Tagore, Cragg, Lyall, C. Prinsep, H. M. Parker, Allan, Colquhoun, Bagshaw, Waddington, &c.

After a few words from Mr. Bagshaw, regarding the absence of a statement showing the necessity for a proposed increase of capital, Mr. E. Macnaghten moved the first resolution in substance, as follows :

“Resolved, that it is expedient to increase the capital of the Bank of Bengal.”

Mr. A. Colvin seconded the resolution. Mr. Cragg opposed it. He did not see that such increase was necessary, and, with reference to anticipated profits, the result of increased discount transactions, he thought it very probable that the rate may be in four months reduced from ten to six per cent. Mr. Mangles said, the argument of Mr. Cragg was precisely the same as that made use of by the shareholders when the last increase of the capital was proposed, and which, it was now entirely unnecessary to remind the shareholders, had been proved erroneous. His opinion was that the maximum amount of capital now required for the purposes of the Bank, would, in a few years, be the minimum amount required, and that too without much diminution in the rate of discount. But should he be wrong in his opinion, he for one, and there were others for whom he could answer, would prefer having a small interest to a large capital than a large interest for a small capital invested in the Bank of Bengal. He took occasion to say, that the proposed increase was not brought forward at the present moment in consequence of demonstrations in other quarters, the proposal had been long contemplated by Mr. E. Macnaghten, and by himself. Mr. Cragg thought it might be as well before the business was further entered into, to inquire if any arrangements had been made with reference to the establishment of branch banks. The chairman replied, there had not, in consequence of there being employment for the Bank's capital in Calcutta. Mr. C. Prinsep thought it would be a kind of suicide to admit the public to participate in the profits of the Bank by increasing the capital. As to the argument that the course proposed would stay the establishment of other banks; he said, so long as the Bank of Bengal had exclusive privileges in the circulation of their notes, the more numerous other banks the better for the proprietors; other banks could only operate as fevers, taking off their notes, which were the main source of profit. Mr. Mangles reminded the meeting that they had committed suicide two years ago by increasing their capital, and he had not any doubt but that the contemplated measure would produce similar advantages. Mr. Leach thought the note circulation had reached its maximum, and if they were taken off by the lenders it would be to return them to the Bank. Mr. H. T. Prinsep, as a Government director treated the proposed increase as a matter of indifference, and so he thought the Government would look at it; but as a private shareholder he much doubted the expediency of the measure. The contemplated increase of profit must arise out of an increased discount business; the proposed additional capital would not add to the note circulation, or to the number of deposits. Now, parties who were content to employ their capitals in discounts might do so in their own offices. Mr. Mangles said he could not turn his office into a discount shop, and he much doubted if the chairman would be so efficient as public servant were he to convert his office into a rendezvous for brokers. Mr. H. T. Prinsep wished to be understood as not opposing the proposal now before the meeting, but he thought the consequence would be that, in a few months, the greater part of the increased capital would be invested in Company's paper. Nevertheless, the motion, if carried, would not be entirely useless; there was a prestige in a crore of rupees, both here and at home, which would keep mad projects out of the market. Mr. Bracken thought the words “mad projects” required explanation. Mr. H. T. Prinsep assured Mr. Bracken that they did not apply to the Bank of India; and Mr. Mangles added, that they could be so applied in the Pickwickian sense only. Mr. Bracken declared that his only reason for opposing the resolution was that it affected the interests of absent proprietors.

After some further discussion, the resolution was put from the chair, when there appeared for the motion 177, against it.

Mr. Collier proposed the second resolution as follows :

“That it is expedient the increase should be of such amount as to allow upon each share a proportion of new stock that may be expressed in even thousands, viz. upon shares of Rs. 4,000 an increase of one-fourth,—or one-half,—or three-fourths.”

Mr. J. Allan seconded the resolution, which was carried, no one opposing.

Mr. Cragg moved the third resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Colvin, and carried,

“That in the opinion of this meeting it is desirable (whether or not Government relinquish its share of the new stock) that the capital should be increased one-half, so that in case the Government should determine to take its share, that the capital be increased by the sum of Rs. 375,000; and in the event of Government declining to take its share, the capital be increased by the sum of Rs. 3,200,000.”

After a few words from Mr. W. F. Fergusson, who expressed himself unfavourable to the proposed increase, Mr. C. Prinsep proposed an amendment, in substance to limit the amount to one quarter the sum proposed. The amendment was lost by a majority of 22 to 12.

Mr. Mangles moved the following resolution, which was seconded and carried,

“That the proprietors, whether absent or present, shall have eighteen months from the date of the sanction of such increase of stock by the Governor General in Council, to pay the value of the shares they may respectively become entitled to, but inasmuch as it is expedient that the Bank should have the immediate use and benefit of such portion of such increased capital as can be supplied without detriment to the interests of absent proprietors, Resolved, that all proprietors shall have the option of paying into the Bank the amount of the value of the raw stock they may respectively become entitled to, immediately such sanction of Government has been obtained, to receive their half yearly dividends in such new stock to be calculated from the first day of July, or first day of January (as the case may be) next, after they may have made such payment.

This closed the principal part of the business for the considerations of which the meeting was convened, but there was another motion by Mr. Mangles, carried by a majority of 18 to 9, in substance, enjoining the directors to inquire and report as to the possibility of paying dividends to shareholders in England.

The appointment of a deputy secretary next came under consideration, but the matter was left in the hands of the directors, the meeting expressing a strong feeling in favour of Mr. Henderson.—Hurkaru, April, 26.

LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceeding of a meeting of the Committee held at the Society's office, No. 3, Clive-street Ghaut, on Monday, the 23d instant.

Present.—G. Prinsep, Esq.; Cowar Suttochurn Ghoshal; Baboo Prosonocoomar Tagore; Baboo Ramcomul Sen; W. C. Hurry Esq.; Biboo Pronnauth Chowdry, and Baboo Cosynauth Bose.

Visitors.—Baboo Pooran Sing, of Sahabad; Baboo Parbutechurn Chowdry; Mowloobhey Alawallaw Bux, and Hursey Ally.

Read a proposed petition against the resumption regulation.

The following resolution was proposed by Baboo Ramcomul Sen, and seconded by Cowar Suttochurn Ghoshal.

That this committee concurring in the general view taken of the hardships and grievances of the lakshinjars as set forth in the draft petition now laid before them, agree to forward the petition, when duly signed, to Government, and to support the main object of it with a separate representation on the part of the Society.

Proposed by Baboo Ramcomul Sen, and seconded by G.A. Prinsep, Esq.

Mr. George Preston as a member of the society.

The following gentlemen proposed as members at the last meeting, were unanimously elected :

Baboo Bisunmhar Roy, zemindar of Domooridaha; Rajah Gungadhar Roy, and Baboo Chunderkannu Chowdry, of Saverna.

Proposed by Baboo Prosonocoomar Tagore, and seconded by G.A. Prinsep, Esq., that an application should be made to Mr. F.J. Halliday, the officiating secretary to Government, revenue department, asking a copy of the draft resumption law now printed, with the appendices.

Read the following letters, addressed by the society to Government :

H.T. PRINSEP, Esq.

Secy. to Govt. in the Genl. Dept.

Sir,—We beg leave to bring through your medium to the notice of the Honourable the Deputy Governor of Bengal and Vice President of the Council of India, the formation of a Society of the landholders of Bengal, the object of which is to promote co-operation and mutual assistance in all matters relative to the landed interests of the community.

Having observed the utility of the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce to the commercial interests of the country, they think that similar good may result from their own efforts, if they can be permitted to address the Government, through the medium of their secretary, in the same manner as is done by the Chamber of Commerce, and they also indulge the hope that the Government will condescend to communicate with them through the same channel

The Society will, at all times, be ready to offer their services to Government in communicating any information respecting the working of judicial, revenue, or police establishments in the interior, the condition of the labouring classes and the state of agriculture, which it may be enabled to furnish.

The enclosed prospectus will fully explain the objects of the Society, to which we beg to refer you.

We are, Sir, your most obedt. servants,

Calcutta, April 7, 1838.

The following answer was received from Government :
No. 501.

To WM. COBB HURRY, Esq and

BABOO PROSONOCOOMAR TAGORE.

Gentlemen,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 7th instant, enclosing the prospectus of a Society to be called the Landholders' Society, and requesting permission to address the Government through the medium of the Society's secretary in the same manner as is done by the Chamber of Commerce.

In reply, I am directed to state, that the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor of Bengal, will always be disposed to receive and consider the representations of any class of the inhabitants affecting their own interests or the good of the community. The communications of the Landholders' Society upon matters connected with the land revenue and judicial departments of Government, must be addressed in due course through the secretary of these departments.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedt. servant,

(Signed) H.T. PRINSEP,

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

General Department,

Fort William, 11th April, 1838.

Resolved, that the proceedings of this day's meeting, as well as the above correspondence with the Government, be published.

Ordered that the translations of the proceedings of the general meeting held at the Town-hall be sent to the Bishop's College to be printed.

SUPREME COURT.

MONDAY, APRIL 2, 1838.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

Sittings after 2d term—Plea Side.

Sreemutty Russickchunder Neoghy v. Sreemutty Hurrymony Dossee.

The Advocate General (with whom was Mr. Prinsep) supported a rule which he had obtained on a former day, for the postponement of the trial of this issue until next term, on the ground of the alleged concealment of a material witness in the house of the defendant.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Leith) shewed cause, on affidavits denying the alleged concealment of the witness, but he said that he should not oppose the postponement of the trial, or payment of costs by the other side.

Rule absolute on payment of costs.

Sreemutty Dossee v. Rajnarain Day.

Mr. Cochrane opened the pleadings. This was an action of trover, to recover certain gold mohurs and rupees in specie, and some silver bullion, amounting in value altogether to about Rs 10,000. The plea was the general issue.

Mr. Advocate General. The plaintiff is the widow and executrix of one Ramhury Ghose, who, in his life time, adopted a son, called Haneywadub Ghose. Disputes had taken place at different times concerning the property left by the testator, the adopted son wishing to obtain it in the life-time of the widow, though he was not entitled until her death, when he would inherit as next heir. On one occasion, the son, in conjunction with the present defendant and other parties, broke open the house of the plaintiff, and assaulted her, for which she preferred an indictment, and the parties were convicted. The property in question was carried by the son, and deposited with the present defendant, in whose custody it still remains.

Witnesses were called to prove the above facts. The gold mohurs were in a red purse, and the rupees in an iron chest, which appeared to have been broken open. The adopted son had absconded.

Mr. Clarke, for the defence called no witnesses, but objected, that either there was no conversion proved on the part of the present defendant, or else that the plaintiff's own witnesses had shewn that the civil claim was merged in a felony. As to the latter point, he said that the chest was proved to have been forcibly carried away and broken open, and an action of trover was tried last term, in which the plaintiff was nonsuited on similar evidence. But he relied chiefly on the first objection, viz. the want of proof of conversion, and he admitted that these two grounds of defence were not quite consistent with each other. The plaintiff ought to have proved a demand and refusal to support this action, for the property had been carried away by another party, and deposited with this defendant. He contended that, as far as the proof affected the present defendant, there was nothing to shew either a wrongful taking, or an illegal detention.

The Court, however, were of opinion, that neither objection would hold. In estimating damages, a difficulty arose about the value of the bullion, proof being given of nine lumps of silver being among the property, weighing 320 sicca, but there was no evidence of its value. The court computed this at so many rupees, but they said that the defendant would be relieved by giving up the property.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

Sreemutty Sibboospondery Dossee v. Sreemutty Comul-money Dossee.

This is a feigned issue out of Chancery to try the question, whether a certain clause of bequest appearing in a certain will or testamentary document, was contained in the original instrument. Several witnesses are to be examined on both sides, and the cause is likely to occupy a considerable time in the trial.

On the application of Mr. Clarke, the cause was postponed until to-morrow, as a commission for the examination of one of the witnesses, a Hindoo female, is not yet returned.

Mr. Clarke, Mr. Grant and Mr. Nott, for the plaintiff, The Advocate General, Mr. Leith, and Mr. Morton, for the defendant.—Hurd, April 3.

TUESDAY, APRIL 3, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir John P. Grant.)

Sittings after 2d Term. Plea Side.

Doe on the demise of Juun Behee v. Abdoolah, Barber.

The Court delivered judgment in this ejectment, in which a rule had been obtained and argued to enter at last term, verdict for the plaintiff for the whole or pro tanto. Certain questions of Mahomedan law had been referred to the moulavie for his opinion.

Sir E. Ryan. It is not necessary to state the facts of this case, because the issue is narrowed to the simple question of the construction of the instrument under which the defendant claims.

The first point relates to the nature of the instrument. The Court entertains no doubt that the opinion of the moulavie is the common-law view, and according to that opinion the instrument is a waqf, or endowment for religious or charitable uses. The moulavie adds that it would have been a will, if it have been made in the time of mortal sickness, or if by its terms the instrument was not to take effect until after the death of the party executing it. On the second point, which raises the question whether a female can be a mutawallee or trustee, the Court is equally clear. By Mahomedan law, a female may be mutawallee, and the duties may be performed by proxy.

The remaining two questions present greater difficulties and opposite opinions have been pronounced by high authorities. These questions are whether actual delivery of the property is essential to the validity of a waqf, or deed of endowment, as in the case of ordinary gifts, and whether it is affected by a qualified reservation by the donor, in his own favour, during his lifetime. [His Lordship here referred to the Hidayah, and several treatises of high authority in Mahomedan law, in which the opinions on the subject clash with each other.] Upon a full consideration of all the authorities, the opinion of the Court coincides with that given by the moulavie, which is more conformable to the modern decisions. We hold that delivery is not essential to render the waqf valid in law, and that it is not affected by the qualified reservation of the donor. The appropriation, therefore, is good, and there is no ground for disturbing the original verdict which was found for the defendant.

The Advocate General and Mr. Grant for the lessor of the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the defendant.

Rule discharged.

Sremutty Sibboosondery Dossee v. Sreemutty Comul-money Dossee.

This issue to try the question whether the will of a wealthy Hindoo, Kistnoohunder Seat, did or did not contain clause of bequest, came on for trial. The pleadings having been opened, and the case for the plaintiff who had to support the affirmative of the issue, having been stated, the evidence of this chief witness taken, under a commission, was tendered by the plaintiff's counsel.

The Court inquired, how it had happened that the evidence of the most material witness was taken on paper, instead of being given visu voce in open Court. The very object of the issue was to satisfy the mind of the Court on a point on which the depositions taken in the equity suit were not sufficient to enable them to arrive at a definite conclusion. If the evidence was to be offered in this shape, how was the trial of the issue a whit more satisfactory and conclusive, than the hearing of the original suit on the Equity side?

Mr. Clarke, the leading counsel, for the plaintiff, replied, that it was certainly unfortunate, and all parties regretted the necessity; but the witness in question was dangerously ill, and, at the time of moving for the commission, Dr. Raleigh was in Court ready to swear to his affidavit concerning the witness's precarious state of health, but by consent of the other side, the swearing of the affidavit had been dispensed with. It was fully admitted that this witness was the most material of all of the plaintiff's witnesses, being the party who had drawn up the will, and read it over to the testator.

Sir John P. Grant. You say the other side consented; what right had they to enter into any such compromise?

The Advocate General (counsel for the defendant), submitted that they had a full and unquestionable right and were perfectly justified. There had been no consent, or compromise, further than the circumstance that no opposition was offered to the motion, and surely such an arrangement was liable to no objection! The order was made under the sanction of the Court, and this commission was issued under their express authority, and the Court could not find fault with their own order.

Sir E. Ryan observed, that the attention of the Court was not called to the circumstance that this party was the most material witness.

The Advocate General admitted this, and said that he was not himself aware of the circumstance at the time.

Sir E. Ryan then suggested that the cause should stand over until Thursday morning, and that, in the meantime, an affidavit by a medical gentleman should be procured of the present state of health of this witness. Should the decision ultimately turn upon a nice weighing of testimony and probabilities, it might be impossible for the Court to give any verdict without seeing the witness, and examining him visu voce, and in that event, the parties would be put to the great expense of another issue. The evidence taken under the commission might be considered as taken de bene esse, if it should hereafter be found necessary to use it, from the utter inability of the witness to attend within a reasonable time, if ever. Should it on appear on Thursday that there was a probability of the witness being able to attend in a week or ten days, the cause might be further postponed, otherwise the issue might be taken on that day.

After some discussion the suggestion was agreed to by the counsel on both sides.

Stands over until Thursday next.

The case of Doe on the demise of Kishnoohunder Biswas v. Anundmoy Biswas stands for to-morrow, Wednesday (this-day).—Hurk. April 4.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4, 1836.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

Sittings after 2d Term.

The Queen v. Parbutty, Junghee, and Takoor Doss.

These three prisoners, convicted of murder, in the Supreme Court sessions of August 1836, were this morning placed at the bar, and Her Majesty's free pardon under the great seal, was read to them aloud by the clerk of the Crown, and interpreted into the Bengallee language by the sworn interpreter of the Court.

This pardon was granted upon the merciful recommendation of the prisoners, by the Judges of the Supreme Court. The signature of Queen Victoria appeared upon the document, written in a fine bold hand, and it was countersigned by Lord John Russell, the Secretary of State.

The prisoners were then discharged.

(In the matter of Kistnoohunder Mookerjee)

This party is the material witness, whose evidence, taken under a commission, was offered yesterday at the trial of the issue in Sreemutty Sibboosondery Dossee v. Sreemutty Comulmoney Dossee. It may be recollected that their Lordships objected to the evidence of so important a witness being taken on paper, and postponed the trial in order to obtain a medical certificate concerning the present state of health of the party.

Dr. Raleigh, of the medical service, was sworn and examined. Saw Kistnomohun Mookerjee yesterday evening. Has regularly attended him for some time past, by the direction of Rajkissen Mookerjee, (who is the agent and manager of the plaintiff in the issue, and the alleged finder of the will set up by her). Kistnomohun is in a state of great debility. His present complaint is fever and inflammation. He is altogether in a precarious and dangerous state, and could not attend the Court for the purpose of visu voce examination without risk. Perhaps there would be no actual risk of life. His age may be about 46. There is no great probability of his being speedily in a condition to give his testimony in court.

The Court, under these circumstances, were of opinion, that it would serve no purpose to postpone further the trial of the issue, as the personal attendance of this witness appeared to be so problematical. The issue therefore will come on to-morrow Thursday, (this-day) and it is expected to occupy two days at least.

Doe on the demise of Kishnoohunder Biswas and others v. Anundmoy Biswas.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

The Advocate General stated the case. This was an action of ejectment to recover a piece of ground, about four cottahs and three chittacks, and certain godown, situated in Sootanooty in the town of Calcutta.

Several witnesses were examined, and the trial occupied a considerable time.

Sir E. Ryan interrupted the proceedings, and inquired of the defendant's counsel whether he had any more witnesses, because it seemed to the Court to be a mere waste of time to proceed. It appeared that the very party under whom the defendant claimed, was a witness to two instruments, long previously executed, shewing the extent of the premises conveyed to the Biswas's; and, among natives, the being witness implied something more than among Europeans.

Mr. Prinscp, (with whom was Mr. Clarke for the defence) said, that he would not protract the case, after this intimation had fallen from the court.

Verdict for the Lessors of the Plaintiff, for the Land, on all the Counts. [Hurk., April 6.

THURSDAY, APRIL 5, 1838.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

Sittings after 21 Term, Plea Side.

Doe D. Biswas v. Biswas.

The Advocate General moved in this ejectment case, tried yesterday, in which the lessors of the plaintiff obtained a verdict, that judgment might be entered up, and execution issued immediately.

Sir E. Ryan said that this was not a case of the kind, in which, according to the practice which prevailed in England, the Courts granted immediate execution.

Refused.

Pratt v. Colville.

Mr. Leith moved, upon affidavits, under rules 5th and 22d of the new equity rules, for an attachment against the said William Colvin the defendant, for want of appearance. The affidavits stated, that this party had sailed for England in the ship Chromandel, that he had not resided in Great Britain or Ireland for a period of two years, and that the cause of action was less than Rs 30,000. By the 13th section of the charter of 1774, the Supreme Court shall have no jurisdiction to try or determine any suit or action "against any person then resident in Great Britain or Ireland, unless such suit or action against such person so then resident in Great Britain or Ireland, shall be commenced within two years after the cause of action arose, and the sum to be recovered be not of greater value than thirty thousand rupees."

Sir Edward Ryan observed, that a complainant in equity would be entitled to an attachment for non-appearance, upon a motion, of course, without any special application.

Mr. Lieth said, that he had deemed it advisable under the circumstances to call the attention of the Court specially to the facts.

The Court said, that the case fell within the 5th rule, and that the 22d had no application, nor was it affected by any new regulation introduced by those rules, but the same practice existed before they were passed.

Attachment granted.

(Sreemutty Sibboosondery Dossie v. Sreemutty Commulmoney Dossie.)

Mr. Grant opened the pleadings. This is a feigned issue out of Chancery, to try the question whether a certain clause of bequest, in favour of the defendant, was contained in the will of one Kistnoochunder Seat. The affirmative of the issue is on the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke stated the case for the plaintiff. Anzudchunder Seat died in the year 1813, leaving a widow, one son and a daughter. That son, Kistnoochunder Seat, is the testator, whose will gives rise to the present proceedings. Kistnoochunder died in August, 1827, leaving a son, Hurrakissen, and a widow, Commulmoney, the defendant in this issue. On the evening before his death, Kistnoochunder made his will, by which he gave away several legacies, chiefly of inconsiderable amount, and allowed the bulk of his property to go to his son Hurrakissen, the heir-at-law. In September 1831, Hurrakissen died intestate, leaving a widow, Sibboosondery, the plaintiff in this issue: and immediately after his death, disputes began to arise in the family, and a bill was filed against his widow by the present defendant, in conjunction with the legatees and other parties interested under Kistnoochunder's will.

The dispute, however, which is the subject-matter of the present issue, is entirely between the widow of Kistnoochunder (the defendant) and her daughter-in-law, the widow of Hurrakissen (the plaintiff). According to the will set up by the plaintiff there is a specific bequest of sicca rupees 60 per month to the defendant, for maintenance in the event of her quitting the family house. It may at first seem strange that the defendant should disclaim a legacy made in her own favour, and thus endeavour to impeach the will which bequeaths it; but the explanation is very simple. The amount of property altogether is ten or twelve lacs, and the defendant, claiming as the widow of Kistnoochunder, would be entitled to a much larger proportion than the monthly sum assigned for maintenance, whereas, if this specific bequest can be proved to be contained in the will, it will implicitly merge her general claim to her share as widow of the testator. The defendant accordingly sets up a different version of the will, and pretends that it originally contained no specific bequest to herself, but that the clause in question is a forgery, and an interpolation. Several persons were present at the making of the will, but there is a dispute as to their number and identity, and very different accounts are given on either side, of what took place on the occasion. The Court will see, therefore, that the decision will turn almost entirely upon the credibility of the witnesses on each side, the balance of testimony and the degree in which each story is supported by the probabilities of the case. One circumstance affords strong ground for presuming that the clause in question must be genuine, and could not have been interpolated. There is a subsequent clause giving a legacy to another party, and this legacy has been paid, nor is it pretended that the latter clauses did not originally exist:—if, therefore, the disputed clause is of posterior fabrication, there must have been a hiatus in the original will, wholly unaccounted for.

The learned counsel here put in the deposition of the plaintiff's chief witness, Kistnoochunder Mookerjee, who was examined by counsel under a commission before C. R. Princep, Esq., granted upon motion, on affidavits that the witness himself was in a precarious state of health, and unable to appear personally, before the Court. According to his own evidence, deponent wrote out the will at the dictation of the testator, and then read it aloud. Four other persons were in the room. The testator approved of it, and caused some additions to be made in the progress of reading; but the clause of bequest, which is the subject-matter of this issue, formed part of the body of the will. This was in the evening after gun-fire, and the writing was finished about midnight. The testator was carried on the following evening to the banks of the Ganges, and died in an hour afterwards. Deponent saw the will again, about six weeks after the death of his son, Hurrakissen, when it was found in a box, and read aloud—several persons were present.

There witnesses for the plaintiff were then put into the box, and successively examined and cross-examined at great length. The two first, Ramchunder Bhoose, and Radagovind Roy, had been in the service of the testator, and were now employed by Sibboosondery the plaintiff. The defendant's counsel cross-examined them with reference to a conversation with one Ram-mohun Bysack, in which it was endeavoured to fix them with having told a totally different version of the story. The third witness, Ramrutton Mookerjee, was a mooktyar, not in the service of the testator or plaintiff. All three swore to being present on the occasion of the writing of the will and two of them were present when it was subsequently discovered. They supported the plaintiff's version of the will.

The examination of these witnesses, alone occupied the Court to a late hour, when the further hearing was postponed until to-morrow, Friday, (this-day). The plaintiff's case is not yet closed.—Hurk. April 6.

FRIDAY, APRIL 6.

Sreemutty Sibboosondery Dosse v. Sreemutty Comul-monee Dossee.

The Court was occupied the whole day in the further hearing of this issue. The plaintiff's case was closed, and the Advocate General addressed the Court for the defence, but the defendant's case had not been far proceeded with, when the Court adjourned the further hearing until to-morrow, Saturday (this-day).

The report will be given, in continuation of yesterday's, when the trial is terminated.—Hurkaru, April 7.

MONDAY APRIL, 9.

Seebosondery Dossee v. Comulmonee Dossee.

This was an issue out of equity to try whether a clause allowing a maintenance of 60 rupees per month, under certain prescribed circumstances to the defendant, formed part of the original will of her deceased husband. The plaintiff was directed by the Court to support the affirmative; the defendant alleging that the clause of maintenance to herself was an interpolation, introduced into a fresh copy of the will drawn up subsequently to the testator's death.

The trial has occupied the Court for several days. The evidence for the defence having been concluded this morning, Mr. Clarke, on behalf of the plaintiff, made an eloquent speech of three hours length in reply.

The Chief Justice.—This case has occupied four whole days, and the witnesses have been examined at great length. During the whole period of my having sat on this bench I hardly know any case, in which more fraud and more perjury have been exhibited on both sides. The onus of proving the particular clause of the will set forth in the issue rests with the plaintiff. The evidence proves the greatest affection between the mother and the son. It is improbable that the testator under such circumstances would have made such a provision for her. The Court can only disinherit on clear and satisfactory evidence. The case being tainted with perjury on both sides, we cannot find for the plaintiff; we, therefore, find a verdict for the defendant.

Counsel for the plaintiff, Messrs. Clarke, Nott and Grant.

Counsel for the defendant, Messrs. Pearson, Leith, and Morion.

The plaintiff is said to have given immediate notice of a motion for a new trial.—Englishman, April 10.

In the matter of Soodasun Sein, a lunatic.

In pursuance of a writ de lunatico inquirendo, Soodasun Sein was on Thursday, the 5th of April, brought up before the Commissioners, T. Dickens and C. A. Nott, Esqrs.

The commission sat at the Insolvent Court, and a jury of fourteen, including two native gentlemen, having been sworn,

Mr. Dickens, briefly opened the commission.

Mr. Cichrane, on behalf of the lunacy, stated that the supposed lunatic was possessed of considerable property, and that he laboured under peculiar delusions, one of the prevalent ideas of his mind being that persons are coming to pay him large sums of money.

Dr. Raleigh sworn.—The lunatic is in charge of Mr. Beardsmore, at whose request I occasionally visited him; my first visit was about three or four months ago. Mr. Beardsmore thought it would be desirable, in addition to Dr. Mercer's certificate, that I also should see him. When I first saw him he was free of fever, but he appeared sullen and reserved. I saw him merely for the purpose of satisfying Mr. Beardsmore that the man was not sent to his house unnecessarily. I was told that his madness was caused by a domestic affliction, the inconsistency of his wife.

Dr. Mercer sworn.—First attended the lunatic at his home in Hautcollah, on the 21st July, 1837. He was low, sullen, and not disposed to answer questions. Had conversation with him. The first time I saw him Lokenauth Mullick went with me. I believe the conversation was in English; the lunatic speaks English. I thought him from the first very unsound in his mind. Saw him on the 2d of December last; he was improved, more conversable, more ready to answer questions, but certainly not capable of managing his own affairs. When I saw him last he probably might have been having lucid intervals. I visited him four times, ten minutes may have been the duration of each interview. The last time I saw him he appeared improved, and now his appearance is much improved. The three first visits were all in July, I believe Lokenauth Mullick is a connexion of the lunatic's. I prescribed medicine for him, but he never would take any. Though lucid and conversable at the time, I believed him to be insane on Mr. Beardsmore's statement to me.

Soodasun Sein is asked if he had any question to ask this witness.—He answers, I was taken to Dr. Beardsmore's by force, I was taken by force of four or five peons. The Dr. went to see me,—he came to make faces; and to make fun, and went away. What have I to say to the Doctor? You may ask him if you want to know.

Dr. Raleigh—again called by a juror.—I should say his mind had improved. He was at first sullen and reserved, and latterly conversable. There is something in his countenance indicating insanity. (Reads date of certificate). Now I should say he is improved in appearance.

Mr. Isaac Beardsmore.—Soodasun Sein came on the 2d of December; that was not the first time I saw him. I do not know how he came. He was brought by his connexion. I believe Gore Tagore and Nilmoney were two persons who brought him to my house. When I examined him at his house, I saw him about fifteen minutes. I believed him to be in a state of imbecility. The date of the first visit was about ten or a dozen days before the 2d December. I saw him in the evening. I conversed with him. I asked him to take medicine. He said he would not take any. I had no more conversation with him. I have seen him fifty or sixty times since he has been in the asylum. I think he could not conduct his own affairs. I believe he was aware why he was confined, but I never told him: there is some sort of delusion on his mind. He wishes to sell his house and get Rs. 10,000; he says he could live well with it. I do not know who his attorneys are. He is never violent. He refuses to take medicine. I do not think that at any time during his continuance in the asylum he has been capable of taking care of his own affairs. His reply as to the application of the money was that he would eat and drink well, take steamer, and go to England. I am not aware whether Gore Tagore is in Mr. Homfray's service. Doctors Raleigh and Mercer saw him on different occasions. Dr. Raleigh saw him on the following day after Dr. Mercer. The attendants say he is satisfied with his confinement, and thinks himself better off than if he was out.

Soodasun Sein asked if he has any questions to put to Mr. Beardsmore, says 'Mr. Beardsmore is talking about my wanting to sell a house: that is true.'

Mr. Beardsmore's examination continued. He expressed his annoyance, that he has been placed under a Doctor when he is well. He was taken charge of when he arrived, by Fyzoo, my native doctor. Having been informed that he had arrived, I asked him no further questions. I had an understanding with Gore Tagore and Nilmoney, I had been informed, that Dr. Mercer was his ordinary family medical attendant. I made out the bill in the wife's name for Rs. 500, which I have been paid. I do not know her name.

Nilmoney Addy examined. Soodasun Sein married my brother's daughter. In Pous 1243, he became ill, when living near Buria Bazaar. Illness first commenced with a palpitation of the heart, and afterwards insanity. In the course of a month I saw him ten or twelve times. It was when he returned from Benares that he became insane; he used to throw himself about, and one day he threw himself into the water; he would eat nothing and flog the servants. His wife sent for native doctors. He required force to take him to bathe. His wife sent for Dr. Mercer, who prescribed, but he would not take the medicine. Dr. Mercer recommended Mr. Beardsmore's, and Gore Tagore took him therein a palanquin on the 7th Augon. Two days afterwards he went home again; five or six days after he was again taken to the asylum. There was no quarrel in the family. He was married about thirteen years before he went to Benares; at the latter time his wife was five months with child. Soodasun Sein managed his father's affairs during his life; his property is considerable: there is a house in Gositollah, one in Muzapore, one at Molungba, one at Bysack Street, all worth about Rs. 50,000. When we were returning from Benares he jumped into the water, the manjees picked him up, and I put a guard upon him. He was a man very sensible and capable of doing business when he conducted his father's affairs. His wife now pays his expenses at Beardsmore's. Gore Tagore is on friendly terms with Soodasun and with me also. Soodasun had a child, but it is dead. His wife sends me to see him every three or four days. When we took him to Beardsmore's we put him in a palanquin, shut it up, and placed two men to guard it on each side. The hukaras forced him out of his house. I did not think it necessary to go to the police first. His wife ordered it. She did not take any pains to apprise his relations Joyramain and Marcon that it was necessary to send him to Beardsmore, nor did she direct me to do so. He remained in his palanquin two days after we took him to Beardsmore, without food; he always said 'take me back to my house.' I heard that Mr. Beardsmore took him out of his palanquin by force. His tenant will not pay their rents: only one tenant has paid since last Pous twelve month. The rent of the house in Chitpore Road has been collected by me.

Mr. Beardsmore re-examined.—The evidence as to his being in a palkee for two days without food is true; I did not say anything about this during my examination, because I was not asked. Drs. Mercer and Raleigh saw him in the palkee on the 2d of December. He was taken out of the palkee by force at my request. Some sweetmeats were brought to him; I sent them to Dr. Raleigh who analyzed them, and sent them to Drs. O'Shaughnessy and Goodale for examination. Soodasun and one of my servants ate of the sweetmeats; my servant became sick, so did Soodasun. Arsenic was detected on a dilyzing the sweetmeats. Soodasun feeling himself sick, gave some to Bachoo, the servant, I put over him, and to Bachoo's wife. They were sick in consequence. All my inquiry was, who brought the sweetmeats, and Bachoo gave me to understand he supposed them to have been sent by Soodasun's wife. It may be that I did not take any precautions to ascertain who were his servants, or to learn to recognize them by their countenance. I have not taken any precautions to ascertain what persons are about him, [Much surprise was expressed by the jury that the facts now stated by the witness had not been given in evidence during his previous examination. One Samchund Seal, standing near the jury, was pointed out as the person who had given a clue by which the information was elicited from the witness. Mr. Nott ordered him to remain in Court for the purpose of being examined.]

Shaik Bachon.—I am a khitmutghar at Beardsmore's, and attended Soodasun for the last five months. His wife sent him some sweetmeats; the Baboo's servants brought them. Soodasun told me to eat some, I said 'I am a Mosulman. Have you eat any?' He said he had eaten one of the balls, and it had made him sick and confused. I went and took them to Mr. Beardsmore, who asked me if Soodasun had eaten them with rice, I said no. He said, he dare say it was on account of his having eaten them on an empty stomach. I took some of them home. My wife told me she had eaten some of the sweetmeats, and had a burning in the throat all night in consequence. I eat some, and we were both sick. When I was looking at the balls, I found they looked quite saffron. I managed to go to the asylum next morning with difficulty, I did not go to the Baboo, but saw Dinoo, his servant there. I had taken one of the balls with me. At the time that I spoke to him, I was in a confused state of mind. I asked Dinoo where he got the sweetmeats; he said of the confectioners, but when I threatened him, he said a maid servant to the Baboo's family called Luckey, bought them. She was servant of that witness Nilmoney. When I made a noise Nilmoney came running and said to me, 'what is the matter? You are mad.' I said, it is this sweetmeat. I went away with the sweetmeat to show it to Mr. Beardsmore. He was not at home, I showed them to Mrs. Beardsmore, and detailed the circumstances. One servant only, Dinoo was dismissed; there were five altogether; who as well as Nilmoney remained at Beardsmore's. There was no enquiry made among the servants. Nilmoney resided upstairs. This took place about five months ago. About ten or twelve days after Soodasun became ill from purging and vomiting and took medicine. He was not attended by Dr. Raleigh at all from the time he was taken ill by taking sweetmeats to the time he was taken ill by vomiting. He is considerably better from the time he was taken ill.

Samchund Seal examined.—Soodasun told me that on his way to Benares in the boat he became sick, and had trembling in the limbs. After he came back he had 'six annas' worth of brain,' and was not capable of managing his affairs. Formerly, he was a very intelligent man. Soodasun never eat any thing touched by his wife. He told me his wife's ways are not as they ought to be. I had a power of attorney to act for him; now his wife has a seal for which she gives a receipt for the rents. Nilmoney is managing this business. Soodasun had desired me to burn and sell five lacs of bricks, which I burnt, but Nilmoney sold them.

Soodasun questioned by the jury.—Nilmoney, Fyzoo, and a native doctor put a mus and poultice across my bowels. I do not know what I am here for. I see what you are all about. I have understood what is now being done: as I cannot go about my own business, I require a person from the court here to conduct my affairs. There are houses left me by my father, I can form no opinion of the value of the property. About Rs. 30,000 or 40,000 may be the value of it. I did not receive rents on my return, because persons used to sit round and confuse me. They brought me rotten things to eat. I deputed Samchund before I went to the upper provinces to collect rent while I was away.

Mr. Dickens charged the jury, and particularly commented on the fact that Dr. Raleigh had not mentioned anything in his examination regarding the poisoned sweetmeats, nor had Mr. Beardsmore until re-examined.

The jury retired, and after half an hour returned with a verdict concurred in by thirteen of their body, that Soodasun is of unsound mind, and incapable of managing his own affairs, and that he has been so for the last sixteen months.

The Court met again on Saturday last for the purpose of formally taking the signature of the jury to the engrossed inquest.—Hurkaru, April 10.

APRIL 6TH, AND TWO FOLLOWING DAYS.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

Sittings after 2d term.—plea side.

Sreemutty Siboocondery Dosse v. Sreemutty Comulmoney Dossee.

The trial of this issue, which was commenced on Thursday, lasted during the whole of that and the three succeeding days.

Other witnesses were called for the plaintiff, and among the rest, Rajkissen Bysack, the alleged finder of the will. This witness deposed, that about a month or six weeks after the death of Hurkissen, the son of the testator, five or six persons being present in the family house began to search the boxes, in which deeds and papers were usually kept, and at last discovered the present document; that this was the identical will formerly made, nearly the same persons being present at the making and at finding.

Mr. Clarke proposed to put in as evidence, the bill and answer and the decree in the original suit, for the purpose of shewing that the present defendant and all the other parties interested under the will, acquiesced in its genuineness at that time. He also wished to lay the foundation for reading the deposition taken before the examiner, of one of his own witnesses, since deceased, and of the former depositions of defendant's witnesses for the purpose of contradicting their present testimony.

The Court said, that it would be quite idle to treat the pleadings in the former suit as evidence, independently of the circumstance that it was not between the same parties. Nothing could possibly be implied, which could have the effect of concluding the defendant in the present issue, since the very point had been referred from the suit itself, and it must be considered open. But it was regular to put in the pleadings, or the decretal order removing them, for the purpose of making the depositions evidence.

The pleadings and depositions were then put in, and this closed the plaintiff's case.

The Advocate General addressed the Court for the defence and first pointed out certain contradictions and discrepancies in the evidence. The defendant did not deny that a will or a hookunnamah had been in fact made, and made to a certain extent under the very circumstances set forth on the other side; but the defence was that the will now in Court was not the same instrument. It would not be attempted to be established that the disputed clauses and bequests had been interpolated, but that a different paper had since been drawn up, and as the writing was not the testator's, as there was no signature either of the testator, or of a single subscribing witness, what could be easier than for the same person who wrote the first paper, to forge another? This view of the case entirely destroyed one of the chief arguments relied on by the other side. Then as to the story about the subsequent discovery of the instrument: no doubt such a scene might have been gone through, and the precious document now produced might have been found in the box as described; for it would be easy for the person who had placed the thing in its hiding-place to find it again. It was rather remarkable that the very same individuals, were alleged to be present at the making of the will, as at the finding. The whole of this scene was a mere got-up farce, invested with a mock solemnity, and embellished by dramatic incident, in order to give plausibility to a falsehood and éclat to a forgery. There was certainly a considerable amount of testimony on both sides; but the plaintiff's witnesses were chiefly servants, who are generally ready to swear anything, or to do any thing at the hookum of their masters. Even if the testimony had been nicely balanced, the scale would be turned in favour of the defendant by the probabilities of the case. For the defence, relations of the family would be called who were present, and if subordinate servants were allowed to remain, it was extraordinary indeed that no relations should be permitted to be present on so solemn and important an occasion. The testimony of two of the chief witnesses was directly contradicted by persons, utterly disinterested, who had heard them make a totally different statement on a former occasion. It would be proved by unanswerable evidence that the genuine will was written on a smaller and narrower paper, and only on one side; that it contained no bequest to the widow, and that this circumstance was remarked upon, and explained by the testator, who said that his son was living and no special provision was required; and it would be further proved that when only one son is left, it is not usual to provide specially for a widow; but otherwise when there are two sons or more. Lastly, certain letters, written by the attorney in the cause, would be put in, which would shew clearly that the party giving the instructions, must have been then ignorant of the existence of such a will as the present; from which it might be inferred that the forgery took place, or the intention to forge was first suggested, at some subsequent period.

Witnesses were then sworn, who deposed to the above facts, and were cross-examined with great minuteness. The plaintiff's counsel put in the depositions taken in the Examiner's office, for the purpose of shewing a variance between their former and present testimony. The Advocate-General endeavoured to give evidence of a conversation between the father of the plaintiff (since deceased), and other parties, from which it would appear that the father either forged the will himself, or caused it to be forged. Mr. Clarke objected that this evidence was not admissible.

The Court said that they were satisfied that the father was sufficiently proved to be the authorized agent of the plaintiff, and yet they were of opinion that this evidence could not be received, because it clearly was not within the scope of his authority to bind her by a forgery. They reserved leave, however, to the defendant's counsel, to move the point, if a verdict should be found for the plaintiff.

Certain documentary evidence was then put in, consisting of the letters of the attorney in the cause, and the deposition of Gourmonee, a puddah female, daughter of the testator. By this lady's evidence, it appeared that four females of the family were present, and that she herself remarked, "My father has done something for every body, but what has he done for my mother?" which was repeated to the testator, who answered "Hurkissen, my son, is living, and he will make provision for his mother."

The Advocate General was heard upon the evidence adduced by the plaintiff in contradiction.

Mr. Clarke then addressed the Court in reply, in a very ingenious and able speech of nearly three hours' duration, (to which we regret that our limits will not allow us to attempt doing justice.) He said that these clauses were treated as interpolations in the genuine will, when the original suit was instituted, and the present story that a second and different document had been forged, was a story trumped up at the eleventh hour for the purposes of this trial. If this instrument was really forged, it was singular that the alterations should have been made in so absurd and clumsy a manner; nothing but absolute fatuity could explain it. Two of the defendant's chief witnesses, Radicamohun and Gourmonee, members of the family, were collaterally interested in impeaching this will. The amount of their interest did not indeed affect their competency, but it very materially affected their credibility. Nothing could be deduced from the letters written by the attorney in the cause. They were written with a pacific intention, and before hostile proceedings were instituted. The probabilities were on the side of the plaintiff, and the evidence of the defendant's witnesses exhibited far more of contradiction and repugnancy than could be pointed out in the evidence which supported the plaintiff's case.

Sir E. Ryan. This trial has now occupied the Court four entire days, and it certainly is altogether a most extraordinary case. Since I have sat on the bench, I have never witnessed such a vast amount of perjury and directly conflicting evidence. The onus, however, of establishing this will, is on the plaintiff, and we cannot say that she has succeeded in making out her case. It seems to us that the probabilities prima facie are against the insertion of such a clause as the present in the will of this wealthy Hindoo. The mother (defendant) and her son are admitted to have ever been on affectionate terms, and it is not likely, therefore, that the father would have gratuitously anticipated a quarrel between them, or provided for so improbable an event. It can only be on strong, clear, and satisfactory grounds that the Court can disinherit the testator's widow. We are of opinion, therefore, that the will has not been established, and that our verdict must be for the defendant.

Verdict for the defendant.

Mr. Clarke, Mr. Nott and Mr. Grant for the plaintiff.

The Advocate General, Mr. Lieth, and Mr. Morton for the defendant.

TUESDAY, APRIL 10, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

Sittings after 2d term, — equity side.

Sreemutty Suttobhoma Dossee v. Banjpaye Rajah, Sree Bejouchunder Deb.

This was a bill for an account, and was heard ex-parte

The Advocate General and Mr. Prinsep for the complainant.

Maha Rajah Sibkis'no Behadoor v. Kistnochunder Ghose, and others.

The original bill was filed by one of the executors, and prayed an account of the real and personal estate of Maha Rajah Rajkristo Behadoor, deceased, against the real and personal representatives of the said Rajah. A cross-bill was filed by the representatives, and the original and cross-cause now come on for hearing.

The Court decreed that the causes should be consolidated, that a partition should be made of the real estate, and an account taken of the personal estate, and that the general costs should await the final decree.

The Advocate General applied to the court to direct the costs of the commission of partition to be paid out of the estate immediately. If this was not done, the parties would be compelled to borrow money on personal security at exorbitant rates. Even in England, money was often directed to be advanced.

The Court said, that there was no instance, except under very special circumstances, of the costs being directed to be advanced out of the estate, until the final decree.

Ramanauth Mookerjee v. Sreenauth Mookerjee and another.

In this suit an application was made to the Court by the counsel for the complainant, that the cause might be referred to the Master to inquire and report, upon a suggestion that the complainant had become a lunatic since the filing of the bill.

The Court said, that this mode of application was not regular, and that the cause might stand over in the meantime.—Hurkaru, April 11.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, and Sir J. P. Grant.)

Sittings after 2d term.—In Equity.

Rajkristno Bonnerjee v. Tauranenchun Bonnerjee.

This cause being called upon Mr. Clarke rose and said that he had been instructed yesterday that the parties had come to a settlement, and that he had accordingly applied to the Court to call the case pro forma. He had just understood that the cause was not settled, and he was not prepared, therefore, to argue it now.

The Advocate General, admitted that his learned friend had certainly made a statement to the Court yesterday, from which he inferred that the cause was settled. But for his own part he had received an intimation in the course of the evening that this was not the case.

The Court recollected that Mr. Clarke had mentioned the matter yesterday, and they that now directed under these circumstances the cause should stand over.

Stood over.

Sreemutty Nibbunmoney Dabee v. Shamloll Tagore.

This was heard on argument on exceptions taken to the Master's report, and was the last cause on the Equity Board.

The sittings terminated this day. The sessions begin on Tuesday the 17th instant.

APRIL 17.

LIST OF THE GRAND JURYMEN.

C. Deane,

After the Grand Jury had been duly sworn, the learned Chief Justice thus addressed them. He commenced by remarking to them that he was happy to inform them that their duties during the present sessions would neither be very protracted nor arduous. There were only three cases to which he would direct his observations on their nature minutely to them. Two of these he was sorry to inform them were of murders, and the other of highway robbery,—a crime which has hitherto, ever since he had the honour of sitting on this bench, been one of very rare occurrence; but he regretted to find that there were no less than four cases of that nature sent up for trial during the present sessions.

The first case to which he begged to draw their particular attention, was that of Huree Mug, for the murder of his infant child, John Pereira. The particulars of it from the depositions before him, appear to be these: Lydia Francisca, the mother of the child, appears to have been the mistress of the prisoner, who resided at Sibtiollah Lane, and was at the time the crime is alleged to have been committed by the prisoner, an ayah in the employ of a lady, named Ogilvie, who resided at Chow ringhee, where the prisoner was likewise entertained a short time previous to this murder as a cook. For some reasons unknown, he became dissatisfied with his service, and wished Lydia Francisca to quit the employ and return to live with him. This she refused to do until she had earned a sufficient sum to enable her to liquidate some debts which she then owed. This refusal enraged the prisoner, who, on the 27th of March, returned home, and on leaving the premises was heard to declare "very well, there are two lyes, one here and the other with me." He was then followed to his house by the police peons, where the infant was shortly afterwards discovered murdered. It is for the grand jurymen under these circumstances to consider who had murdered the deceased.

The other case of murder, was one of more difficulty: it was that of Prosper Millner, a Frenchman, who was accused of the murder of a syce named Buckaollah. The statement, as gleaned by Judge from the depositions of the witnesses in this case, which he remarked are very confused, are these. Two French sailors were on the night of the 4th of March last, met on the Chitpoor road by the deceased, and another syce between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock p.m. and without any cause or provocation, as deposed to by the witnesses for the prosecution, one of these sailors wounded Buckaollah, the deceased, with a knife, which he then held in his grasp, from the effects of which wound he lingered till the 5th of March at the Native Hospital in the Dhurumtoollah road and then died. It will be for the gentlemen of the jury to decide primarily whether the prisoner was the person who had wounded the deceased, and secondly, whether at the time the prisoner, if they are satisfied he is the man who had wounded the deceased, there was not any affray, and whether the prisoner had not been struck by any person before he wounded the deceased; and if so, whether the deceased was a party concerned in this affray or not. It has been proved, that the prisoner had bought these knives for his professional purpose. Now it has been provided by the law, that if any person has at the time any deadly weapons in his hand which he happened to have by him without any avowed purpose of wounding or injuring any person, and he happens to be struck by any person in an affray and retaliates with this weapon, and thus causes the death of the person who had struck him, the crime which he in that case is guilty of, is only manslaughter; for to constitute the crime of murder, it is requisite that a degree of malice and premeditation on the part of the criminal must be proved. But though this is a fundamental principal to constitute the crime of murder, yet it is not absolutely requisite in every case; for example, when a man has been proved to be what the law terms the general enemy of mankind, in a case where a person shoots with a gun indiscriminately into a crowd and wounds and kills some person or persons in it, he is guilty of the crime of murder. There are besides the evidence already alluded to, the dying depositions of the deceased, taken by Mr. C. K. Robison, one of the Magistrates of the Police office, in the prisoner's presence, and explained to him by Mr. P. Delmar, the interpreter. This the grand jurymen can have read before them, because the law provides that whenever any deponent in a criminal case dies before the trial of the case at the sessions, that depositions taken on oath, may be read as evidence during the trial. Besides this, there are the dying declarations of the deceased, as declared to third parties. These were, it is true, not on oath, but if the deceased was in a condition which made him sufficiently conscious that he had but a short time to live, and made a declaration as to the manner of his death, that declaration is held voted in the eye of the law. It is for the jurymen to satisfy themselves whether the deceased, at the time he made these declaration, was in that state. In conclusion, the judge said, that the deceased's depositions as they were on oath could be read as evidence before the jurymen.

The third case was that in which a person was charged with highway robbery, for taking from the person of E. W. Bowbear, a gold watch. It appears that whilst Mr. Bowbear was watching in the streets for a friend at night, the prisoner came up to him and snatched out of his watch-fob a gold watch, and in doing so also tore the prosecutor's fob. The question it will be for the jury to determine is, whether that force which the law requires to constitute a high-way robbery which should be attended with violence and fear, was exemplified on this occasion. In the case of the King versus Morne, it was decided by twelve judges, that when a person has a guard chain round his neck and violence is used to that degree as by two or three jerks to break this guard-chain, it constitutes a highway robbery; but where no such chain is worn or violence is used, the crime is one simply of taking from the person, and this, like picking pockets, is not a capital offence. Therefore it will be very material for the jury to determine whether in this case, which is about to be submitted to them, that violence had been used which would legally constitute it a capital offence or not. With regard to the other three cases, the proofs of violence having been used are more clear, particularly in one of them. In conclusion, the judge informed the jurymen that if they required his aid in elucidating any legal points in any of the cases which would be submitted to them, he would be most happy to offer them all the aid in his power. These were, he said all the cases to which he would beg to draw their particular attention at present; perhaps there may be more sent in during this sessions which may require his observations to them, and if so he would do so.

Mahomed Ruffick was tried for stealing, on the 30th of March last, several crockery plates, &c. from the premises of P. Barfoot.

Prisoner pleaded not guilty.

T. Barfoot deposed, that he lived in No. 2, China Bazar-Street, the prisoner, previous to his confinement, was a khandama in deponent's service for one year. Deponent, in consequence of some suspicions, accompanied by police peons and a servant of his named Ameer Khan, searched the prisoner's house near the Hindoo College. Prisoner was at the deponent's house. One of his servants pointed out the prisoner's house to him. Then Mr. McCann produced the articles, and Mr. Barfoot identified them to be his property, because they matched with his set, a portion of which he produced in the Court, and he identified likewise a work box to be his daughter's property.

Honeeskan being dead, the thanadar who accompanied Mr. Barfoot in the search corroborated his evidence regarding this search.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner said, that the property was his for a long time, and that he had purchased them and brought them from China. He further said that Mrs. Barfoot was in the habit of sending out her ayah's with goods to conceal, and charging servants to whom arrears of wages were due, with having taken them, and that he had adopted such a course against 25 persons in order to get rid of them, and their wages, and the ayah had on one instance been detected in thus conveying some poons away for that purpose, which she confessed. He likewise added, that Mr. Barfoot was a person who was capable of swearing to anything, because he quarrelled daily twenty times with Mrs. Barfoot, and then broke his oath and quarrelled with her again.

Deponent called three witnesses who confirmed these allegations of his.

The learned Judge then summed up the case, detailing the evidence, stating the law, and expressing the points as to the identifying these articles, which Mr. Barfoot had admitted were a very common pattern in the bazar. In conclusion he said, that if the prisoner was convicted of stealing even one of the articles, it was enough to find him guilty of the crime for which he was tried, which was simple.

The jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict of guilty.

After the verdict had been recorded, the prisoner was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the house of correction and there to be kept to hard labor.

The grand jury submitted to the judge to-day a petition relative to a commission issued in the case of an inquiry in a case of lunacy. The judge, on perusing it, said that he would direct the clerk of the Crown to lay the papers regarding it before the grand jury, to-morrow, if possible, and if they think fit they can, on its perusal, make a presentment to the court which would order the clerk of the Crown to prefer an indictment on that presentment against the person mentioned in the presentment. The petition was signed by D. Ross the foreman of the special jury, who sat on that inquiry of lunacy for himself and his fellow jurymen.

In the course of the day the grand jury returned true bills against the following individuals :

Abdoollah, for stealing on the 2d March last several articles of to the value of 25 rupees, from the house of Messrs. Cockrell and Co. in Clive Street.

George Lloyd and George Morgan, charged with stealing from the person of W. Tippen, on the night of the 14th March 1838, by force and violence, a musical snuff box valued at 11 rupees.

Pooteeram. For having stolen, on the night of the 22d March, a wooden box containing several brass articles, the property of Kidornauth Bose and his uncle Nundalal Bose, from their house in Puttuhlangah.

James Arnold, charged with having stolen from the person of Henry Perks, on Friday, the 16th March 1838, 12 Bank of Bengal notes to the value Rs. 950 the property of the prosecutors.

Mahomed Ruffies, for stealing on the 30th March, from the house of his master T. Barfoot, in China Bazar, several articles of crockery-ware, glasses and a toilet box.

True bill against Meah Jaun for robbing from the person of Bebec Delhaua two gold chains to the value of 200 rupees, at her house in Cossitollah. The judge remarked, that a true bill for stealing, and not robbing should be returned; the jury altered the finding consequently.

Henry Lemsele, for robbing from the person of Edward William Bowbear a gold McCabe watch at Rs. 250 No. 8157, on the 23d March 1838. — Hurkaru, April 18.

APRIL 17.

(Before Sir F. Pym, and a Petit Jury.)

James Arnold was tried for stealing from the person of Henry Perks 12 bank of Bengal notes, of the value Rs. 950.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Henry Perks deposed, that he resides at Coiroo Mehter's Lane, and is an engineer employed by William Prinsep, Esq. He has known the prisoner for upwards of two years. The prisoner was formerly a Boatswain to some trading vessel. On the 16th of March last deponent met the prisoner, at about 1 o'clock p. m., at the Cape of Good Hope punch house in the Lall Bazar Road, and prisoner informed him that he was in distressed circumstances and very thirsty, and that a person named Long had accommodated him with lodgings gratis at his house in Coiroo Mehter's Lane. Deponent compassionated his case and gave him some money and treated him with a glass of grog. Whilst thus engaged they met Mr. Long, and the prisoner advised deponent, as it was late, to retire and sleep that night at Long's house, the American flag punch house. Deponent having obtained Long's consent to this proposition, left the Cape of Good Hope for the American flag, in company of Long and the prisoner. At about 8 o'clock p. m. or gun-fire, after their arrival at Long's punch-house, deponent gave Long some money, and he brought him a bottle of port wine and another of brandy, which they finished there and then. They all retired to sleep. Deponent laid himself on a cot in Long's house, and felt very unwell and was restless all the night, but he was not intoxicated. Shortly after deponent had laid down on the cot, the prisoner came to him and wished to cover him with a quilt, but deponent objected and said, that he felt himself warm enough without it. Soon after this the prisoner put his hand into deponent's pocket and drew out a sock from it, in which were the 12 notes and a memorandum of their numbers, given to deponent with the notes by Mr. Prinsep's sugar. After he had emptied the sock of these notes and this memorandum, he attempted to replace the empty sock in deponent's pocket, in doing which deponent who had been doing all this time, started up and collared the prisoner and taxed him with the theft. The prisoner then threw the notes down under the cot and attempted to tear the memorandum of their numbers. In this he was prevented by deponent, who snatched the paper out of his hands and called to Mr. Long and desired him to get a constable to take the prisoner into custody. Long then came into deponent's room and helped him to pick up the notes, and they picked up ten of them at that time from under the cot. Long then went out for a constable, after he had stationed four chokedars at the door to prevent any person during his absence from entering or leaving the house. During Long's absence the prisoner struggled hard to escape, and said that these notes were his property. Long returned at about one o'clock p. m., with a constable, to whose custody deponent delivered up the prisoner. The constable took the prisoner to the police office and searched his person, to see if he had the other two missing notes about him, but found no money on his person. He then returned with deponent to Long's house, and, on searching the room again, they succeeded in finding the other two notes lying on the floor near the door of the room in which this transaction had occurred.

On cross-examination deponent stated, that he did not voluntarily give the notes into the prisoner's hands to keep them for him, on account of being too much inebriated at the time, and that they were not turned out of the Cape of Good Hope punch-house, because it was getting late, nor had the doors shut on them, and he never told the prisoner any ill-will, nor did he promise to give Long 50 rupees if he would get the prisoner transported.

Constable T. Waio produced the notes, and the deponent recognized them to be the notes stolen from his person by the prisoner, and compared their Nos. with the memorandum in his possession, and said that they corresponded with the Nos. on the notes themselves.

The witness, George Long, corroborated the testimony of the first witness and said, that he had known the prisoner for about 18 months, a great part of which time he had lived at deponent's house, where monies had often been lying within his reach and if he had chosen to steal any he could have done it often, without fear of detection; but he never did it. This is his first appearance of this nature. Deponent positively swore that he saw the prisoner take the sock out of Perks' pocket, empty it of its contents and then attempt to put the sock back into it. The cross-examination of this witness by the prisoner elicited answers which excited the risibility of the persons present in the Court, and even brought occasionally a smile over the countenance of the worthy judge, and set some of the jurymen laughing. For example, he said to the prisoner; "When I saw you, Jimmy, take out the sock from Perk's pocket, I got up as fast as I could, but you and Perk's were too quick for me. Jimmy, my rooms have walls and even doors and windows. Jimmy, no house is built without them. I did not see you through a hole in the wall but through the door, where I was laying down and enjoying my glass of grog and a cheroot, which I always take before I go to bed. I told you it was too bad of you to rob Perk's in this way after his kindness to you. I am not a crump but a register of seamen. You may call me what you like, it matters not to me. My house is not a dirty little hovel; it was good enough to shelter you in it at any rate: nor are my neighbours a parcel of black-eyes as you call them. They are Portuguese, and I have a friendly understanding with them all, in a neighbourly way, to be sure. They are good sort of folk—much better than you, it would seem, Jimmy. I never agreed to take 50 rupees from Perk's to get you transported, and never heard Perk's say a word about it. It would be an insult to me if he said so. I thought at the time Perk's came with me to my house, that he had stowed the money away at the Bank as I had advised him in the early part of the day to do so; for when I spoke to him about it, he said that he had planted it safe, and did not know that they were by him till you robbed him of them. We did not go reeling drunk from the Cape of Good Hope to my house, nor were we turned out. Perk's does not drink grog; every day, and he was sober when he collared you for the theft." The prisoner remarked that he had a good six hour's sleep to sober him. Dependent said, that Perk's was neither asleep nor awake at the time, but a snoring.

The prisoner, in his defence, said, that when Perk's went with him to Long's he was to pay, and had been turned out of the other punch house. Before retiring to sleep he took out the sock and began to count the notes, but through intoxication he was unable to do this. Prisoner then asked him to let him take charge of the notes for him till he awoke sober, and the deponent handed them to him. He had no witnesses to call.

The learned judge then summed up the case, laying down the law and detailing the evidence, and said that the crime of which the prisoner stood charged was stealing from the person, and not a capital felony. He then informed the jury, that the only point at issue, is whether the prisoner had, as deposed on the part of the prosecution, taken the notes out of Perk's pocket feloniously, which, if true, and two persons have sworn to it as a fact, appears strange, that as they were both awake at the time, and sober when the prisoner took the sock out, they did not instantly seize him but allow him time to empty the sock of its contents, and not to collar him till he went to replace the sock in Perk's pocket: or whether it is likely that Perk's had given the notes to the prisoner to take charge of for him, whilst intoxicated, as stated by the prisoner. It seems that by Long's account that this is his first offence of this kind, although temptations were in his way before and after. This is the chief point for the jury to determine.

The jury, after a long retirement of near two hours, brought in a verdict of acquittal, and the judge ordered the prisoner to be released.

APRIL 18, 1838. •

In the case of the petition presented by the grand jury yesterday, regarding their wish to have the papers and the deposition in the case of a commission of larceny which had lately been held in this Court, and in which the papers were to have been laid before the grand jury to-day. The Chief Justice suggested to the jurymen, whether it would not be better, as perhaps some of the persons implicated in this transaction, and the witnesses which may be required, might be residents beyond the jurisdiction of this Court, which might cause great delay, to hand, as he had himself formerly contemplated, on a perusal of these depositions, the papers to some magistrate of the police of Calcutta, to make an investigation in this matter, and then hand them up with the depositions to this Court for trial during the ensuing season. But, if they preferred to investigate the matter themselves, and make a presentment on the case to the Court it was for them to decide.

The foreman of the grand jury replied, that he and his fellow jurymen preferred adopting the judge's suggestion.

Two sets of petit jurymen were impanelled to-day, to prevent the Court from being at a stand in its business in the event of the jury which took up the first case, being delayed in pronouncing their verdict on it from difference of opinion, and the gentleman selected, were desired to be in attendance at 10 o'clock A.M. for that purpose.

Poolooram was tried for burglariously entering the house of Kaddemath, and stealing from thence several articles, the property of the prosecutor.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The particulars of this case are briefly these:

The prosecutor went, about a month ago, for one day and night to Kidderpore, leaving his house in charge of Hironunder Doss. On his return, he found that his house had been burglariously entered during his absence, and several articles taken from thence. The thanadar of the thana was the person who had arrested the prisoner, with some of the goods in his hand. He, when challenged, gave a false name, but the thanadar recognized him to be an old offender, and took him into custody with the goods which the prosecutor's servant claimed to be his master's property. The prisoner and the articles were then taken in custody to the police office. The goods were recognized by the prosecutor to be his property. Owing to the servant who was left in charge of the house during the prosecutor's absence, being laid up with the small pox, he could not come to Court and prove the burglarious entry into the prosecutor's house, and the present charge therefore veiled into barely stealing from the house.

The prisoner in his defence said, that this was a malicious conspiracy of the thanadar and his myrmidons. It was proved that he was an old offender.

The jury, after the judge had summed up the case to them brought on a verdict of guilty of stealing from the house; and the judge sentenced the prisoner to two years imprisonment in the house of correction.

The grand jury returned true bills in the following cases to day:

Punchunand Doss, for burglariously entering the house of Ramsunder Mullick and stealing property therefrom.

Dabee Sing and Doonkul Sing, with having stolen wearing apparel, the property of Golab Sing, a durwan in the employ of Rustonjee, Cowasjee and Co.

Haree Mug, for the murder of John Pereira, his infant child.

Cheedam Ram Shaw and Ruggonath, for stealing from the house of Sabboo Raur, at Gariehattah, various articles of value against the first, and the other two for receiving the same.

Nawaure, for stealing several articles from the house of Ajeem.

No true bill against Khaudim, duftury, Cauloo, duftury and Gungaram, for stealing from the presidency pay-office paper to the value of 70 rupees.

The grand jury was then adjourned till Saturday next, the 20th instant.—Hurkaru, April 9.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

EXECUTION AT HOOGHLY.—On the morning of the 21st instant, a notorious sardar dacoit, of the name of Nundo Chung, expiated his crimes upon the scaffold in front of the criminal jail at Hooghly, in the presence of an immense concourse of spectators. He died as he had lived, a hardened villain, singing Bengallee songs on his way to the gallows, and shouting hurree bol 'hurree bol' upon the scaffold, until the drop fell and put a period to his existence. He was a nephew of the celebrated Radha, dacoit, who was executed on the same spot in 1832, and suffered for his share in a doconty attended with murder, which occurred in the house of one Mohun Sautra, at the village of Bansberria, in the month of October last. The example which has been made of this man and his gang (the greater part of whom has been sentenced to imprisonment for various periods) will, it is believed, be of the greatest use in putting a stop to dacoity in the Hooghly district.

MORTALITY AMONGST THE HINDOO INHABITANTS OF CALCUTTA.—The following appears to be the number of deaths which have taken place amongst the Hindoo inhabitants of Calcutta, from the 13th to the 18th instant, as appears from the reports of the two burning ghauts.

By Cholera.....	237
„ Small pox.....	75
„ Miscellaneous diseases.....	93
	—405

The reader must recollect that by our last report, the number was 927 from the 1st to the 12th.

CHOLERA. The havoc made by the cholera amongst the Hindoos is very extensive, and the cremation fires, are seen blazing in all directions, day and night. The deaths among the Mahomedans are not less few. So a paddy have they died, indeed, that their undertakers cannot afford time to bury them sufficiently deep, and the carcases are, in consequence, exhumed by the jackals and pariah dogs, and exhibit a most disgusting spectacle. Several Europeans and East Indians, have likewise fallen sacrifices to the malignant pestilence.

A NEW HOSPITAL.—A hospital has, since the beginning of the current month, been established on the premises of the Medical College, for the benefit, principally, of the students of that excellent institution. It consists of two wards, namely the medical and surgical.

Drs. H. H. Goodeve, W. B. O'Shaughnessy and Egerton, take particular interest in it. There are already a great many patients fed and lodged there. The number of beds provided are twenty-four.

STORM AT CONENAGORE. About nine o'clock on the night of the 19th instant, there was a violent storm at Conenagore which threw down upwards of a hundred thatched houses, and laid prostrate between six and eight hundred trees of different species and sizes. Brick ballustrades of pukka houses were also blown down. The blast was extremely powerful towards the river side, and near Huroosunder Dutt's ghaut especially, where a dingy was driven very high ashore, and left there.

AN ENGLISH SCHOOL AT TRIBENNY.—The Probhakur announces the establishment of an English school at Tribenny, zillah Hooghly, by Baboo Jugguth Chunder Sein and Peary Mohun Sein, for the education of such children, whose parents have no means to pay for their tuition.

FIRE AT MOJEELPOOR.—A destructive fire happened at Mojeelpoor in the 24 Pergunahs, on or about the 28th of last month. The number of houses burnt, principally thatched, and some brick built, was about a couple of hundred.

RAIN.—On the night of the 10th instant, a most refreshing shower of rain fell at Chinsurah, Bhauparah, Haulshahur, Kanchaparah, and many other places, over an extent of about fourteen miles, on both sides of the river; so that all the tanks which had been completely dry a short time back, were filled. The shower was preceded by a north-wester which destroyed several dingies a little to the south of the nulla called the Banger-khaul.

DISSOLUTION OF THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.—The Municipal or Town Improvement Committee, has closed its labours, and, we presume, made its final report to Government on the subject of the investigations on which it was deputed.

THE MANILLA PIRATES.—The six Manilla pirates, who were released on the Queen's free pardon on Saturday last, have subsequently been apprehended by the police authorities, whose intention in so doing, is to have them conveyed from this country to the Dutch Government, to be tried by that Government, as the men whom they had murdered were Dutchmen.

A WHITE CROW.—The strange phenomenon of a white crow, was observed at the police office recently. The bird came out of a nest in the police office and has been captured and retained by Mr. Blaquiere, the magistrate.

JOINT MAGISTRATES AND SUPERINTENDENTS OF POLICE.—It is said that an order has passed the Council Chamber, sanctioning the appointment of joint-magistrates, on a monthly salary of five hundred rupees, and superintendents of police from amongst the unrequited branches of the service, on a salary of 800 rupees per mensem.

BANK OF BENGAL.—Mr. Henderson has been appointed Deputy Secretary and Treasurer to the Bank of Bengal, on a monthly salary of Co.'s Rs. 1,000, from the 1st proximo.

Mr. Lee succeeds Mr. Henderson as accountant on a monthly salary of Co.'s Rs. 600, and Mr. Plumb, of the Treasury department, fills up the vacancy, occasioned by Mr. Lee's promotion, on a monthly salary of Co.'s Rs. 400.

This arrangement will give, we are assured, very general satisfaction; and reflects equal credit on those who made it and those who will benefit by it.

RIOTERS AT BARRACKPORE.—It is said that on several nights for some weeks past it has been the amusement of certain of the swelling spirits of the cantonment, flustered, it may be, with the flowing cup and full of mischief, to perambulate the streets, singing here, screeching there, and wherever a decent gate offered, of some particularly quiet family long a-bed, the same has been torn and twisted off its hinges, one half transported east, the other west, and haply left floating in some moderately distant tank, or shattered at the bottom of a convenient ditch. On one occasion, when a guard which had been kept till mid-night on the premises for their protection, had been withdrawn, our heroes assembled by the spot and with continued hooting, howling, hammering, and hurras, alarmed the whole neighbourhood, frightening, in particular, an invalid female into serious convulsions, from which she was not recovered without great difficulty. On another it is understood, we can scarcely yet believe it possible, that their madness gave the means of escape from his den in the park managerie to a tiger, whom we incontinently heard of as slaughtering the cattle around him, and who was not again secured until after the lapse of some hours, and from whose ferocity, that no accident occurred, involving loss of perhaps more than one human life, was extremely providential.

ORDNANCE OFFICERS' BRIGADE COMMANDS.—It is understood in quarters interested in the result, that the reference which is said to have been made to the Supreme Government regarding the claim of ordnance officers to succeed to brigade commands, has been decided in their favour.

THE HULL OF THE STEAMER ENTERPRIZE.—The hull of the Government steam vessel Enterprise, was put up for sale on the 26th instant at Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co.'s auction, but not sold, the highest bid being only 12,000 rupees.

THE LATE MR. ROBERTSON'S.—Three balloons, belonging to the estate of the late aeronaut Mr. D. Robertson, and which coast him according to the catalogue 2,300 rupees were also put up, and brought the enormous sum of five rupees for the whole three!

TREASURY ADVANCES.—The Government, will immediately re-open the treasury for the purchase of Bills secured by shipping documents. The rate of exchange has not been mentioned with certainty; but it has been quoted at 2-2 per Co.'s rupee, at six months' sight.

AN EXTRAORDINARY BOY.—There is at present an extraordinary boy, the son of a venerable Hindoo Priest, named Nobokisto Gosain, and aged apparently about five years of age. He resides at Malparah in zillah Hooghly. He has mustachios and beard the same as a grown up man, the latter being more than an inch long. He is stated to have been born with these appendages, but they were not, at the time of his birth, in that degree of perfection at which they have now arrived, as they were short and somewhat downy. He is taught to mutter prayers constantly, and is looked upon by the Hindoos with great veneration, as many among them believe that the body of the boy contains the soul of some saint.

PRESENTS FOR RUNJEET SINGH.—It is said, that Government have issued instructions for the immediate preparation in the Cossipore Foundry of two brass 9-pounder howitzers, mounted complete for field service, intended as a present from the Governor-General to Maharajah Runjeet Singh. The Howitzers are to be handsomely ornamented with suitable devices and inscriptions, and when ready, will be sent up to Fattyghur by one of the inland steamers to be mounted in the Agency at that place, upon appropriate field carriages, from whence they will be forwarded on to the Political Agent at Ludhiana, for presentation to the Maha Rajah.

BISHOP'S TOUR.—It is reported, that it is the intention of the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, accompanied by the Archdeacon of the diocese (who also we believe, combines in his person the joint offices of Chaplain and secretary to his Lordship) to proceed, in all June or July, upon a tour of visitation to the eastward.

FAMINE.—The most distressing accounts of the effects of the famine, still continue to be received from the north western provinces. Every exertion is made by the wealthier inhabitants to feed the famished population; but despite their care, hundreds are daily perishing through sheer starvation. Rs. 88,943-14-8 have been subscribed by the residents of Calcutta, for the relief of the famishing unfortunates.

STEAM AND GAS.—Two prospectuses are now in circulation, one of an inland steam communication and the other for lighting Calcutta with gas, both projected by Mr. Suwerkrop, a Civil Engineer. We think both schemes well worthy of patronage.

CHOLERA.—The cholera still rages most fiercely and about two scores of persons are carried off per diem by it, within the town and suburbs of Calcutta.

DHARJELING.—A gentleman residing at Dharjeling, writes in raptures of the scenery and climate. The former, he says, is most magnificent, and the latter most invigorating. Thermometer at 8 A. M. 50, in the shade, and at 1 P. M. 58 on the 24th ultimo, during the night of which, snow fell in the neighbouring hills. Seven days were occupied by him in reaching the station from Titabya—two to the foot of the hills and five among them in the ascent. The road was very bad the latter part of the journey; but work-people were collecting for the purpose of repairing it, when Mr. ——— thinks the distance may be accomplished in three days from the plain. The Government have ordered a bazar to be formed as there is nothing of the kind at present. The neighbourhood contains all the materials for erecting substantial houses—excellent timber, good stone and lime, and man alone is wanting to bring these good things together for the accommodation of visitors. In a few years, a visit to Dharjeling will be as practicable as one to Simla, and at much less cost of time and money.

NATIVE PREJUDICES.—The Hindoo community in Bengal, and the greater part of the Mahomedans in it, have declined eating the refined Dhoba sugar, in future, because it is refined with bones, consequently they deem it to be impure to use for their domestic purposes. This has lowered the price of the refined sugar considerably in the markets here.

A NEW DEBATING CLUB.—The Probhakur announces the establishment of a new debating club for the benefit of native students of English, by the managers of the Hindoo Benevolent Institution. The first meeting of the members of the club took place on the 31st ultimo.

ICE AND APPLES.—A cargo of ice and apples, has been brought round in the William Gray. The apples are of a very superior quality.

The Gasper, with 322 tons of ice, 46 keys of grapes, and 180 half kegs of apples, arrived during the week.

NATIVE CRUELTY.—A rumour is afloat in the native community, that Mr. —, one of the secretaries to Government, is endeavouring to have a resolution passed, that henceforward no Hindoos or Musulmans shall hold any appointment, of any description whatever, so long as he does not embrace christianity; but that it is not to affect in any way the present incumbents.

THE PSEUDO RAJAH, PURTARISING, OF BARDWAN.—This individual tried at Barrackpore to land it over the zemindar of that place, but the latter soon collected a band of men with clubs, and made his rajahship decamp.

PILOT'S STATION.—Whether False Point or Point Palmyras is the best station for the pilot schooners in the S.W. Monsoon, has been long a resata questio in the marine department and with commanders visiting this port. Much has been said, and well said, on both sides, and names of great weight and experience in the pilot service respectively quoted in support of the views entertained by each. A notification has now been issued from the Marine Board, that a pilot schooner, the June, has been de-patched to bring the matter to a practical issue. She will be relieved by another schooner at the end of four or five weeks, so that the opinions of the most intelligent of the pilot-service may be received, before any final determination for changing the station be adopted.

STORM—HAIL AND LOSS OF LIFE AND PROPERTY.—There was a thunder and hail storm on the afternoon of the 8th instant, which caused great damage and loss of life. Several places were struck by the electric fluid, and upwards of a dozen people killed by it, in Calcutta and the suburbs. The hail-stones, which descended most plentifully, were of extraordinary largeness. The largest crystal, picked up at Dum-Dum, was nine inches in length and three in diameter, and several of about sixteen inches in circumference and five in diameter, were picked up at the same place. Hundreds of men and cattle have been killed through or by the hail, and the greater part of the fruit, has been destroyed. The laborers at Kootghurrah, on being severely struck by the hail, fled for shelter to the granaries there, which were thrown down by the violence of the storm, and, we regret to say, about three hundred laborers were buried under the ruins, and died. At Gortiah almost every hut was knocked down, and several individuals perished. The villages of Bycantpore and Rannaghur, have been utterly destroyed. About two thousand huts and brick built tenements have been destroyed in them, and from two to three lives lost in each dwelling, and about half the number of oxen and goats. On the banks of the canal, the trees have been laid prostrate, and several boats were raised from the water and laid high on land and their crews either drowned or killed by the hail and lightning. At several other places the injuries sustained have been as great as those recorded; but no authentic report has been as yet received of them. The loss of life and property has been most awfully severe, indeed, and when the short time the storm continued is taken into consideration, unprecedented.

MORURUM.—The Mohurum festival has, as usual, been attended with riots and bloodshed, in consequence of the blind folly of the zelots of caste. The principal rioters were the syces in the employ of Messrs. Cook and Co. and Messrs. Hunter and Co. and three lives, we hear, have been sacrificed to party feeling.

THE LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.—The members of the Landholders' Society are daily increasing, and we doubt not in a short time the society will comprise the most respectable and influential zemindars, European and native, throughout Bengal.

NAUTICAL ENTERPRISE.—A little vessel of forty tons, formerly the pleasure boat of Mr. J. Jenkins, of the firm of Jenkins, Law and Co., was recently fitted up for a sea voyage, and has proceeded to China under the command of Capt. Galle, carrying a cargo of ghee, tamarinds, chillies, &c. She is called the Ospray, and is reported to be as staunch a little craft of her size as any which has hitherto floated on the salt sea. We hope the intrepidity of the bold commander will meet with all the success anticipated, and the result of future employment be in full accordance with the expectation now entertained.

MR. KITTOE.—The surveyorship of the line of road between Midnapore and Sumbulpore, become vacant by the death of Lieutenant Abbott, has been offered to and accepted by Mr. Kittoe.

A NEW SHUBHA.—The Hindoo community in the metropolis is in a great fermentation, not about any political affair, but about the reparation and preservation of the system of caste. Certain influential families in town, and some in the interior, are said to have been highly incensed at the unjust decisions which have of late been passed by the Dhurma Shubha in favor of certain wealthy culprits, who had sinned against the rules of the Shubha and to the prejudice of those with empty pockets. Indeed, from an article in the Probhakar, it appears that if a rich Hindoo were to be guilty of a gross violation of the rules of caste, little or no notice would be taken of it by the Shubha, but a poor man, for the slightest fault imaginable, is sure to be excommunicated. The heads of the families in question are, therefore, about to set on foot a fresh Shubha, in opposition to the Dhurma Shubha, and in that case the latter is not likely to survive long.

MORTALITY IN CALCUTTA.—The mortality in Calcutta is still very great; upwards of a thousand deaths have occurred in the town and its suburbs during this month, exclusive of those caused by the hurricane, and of this number two-thirds have died of cholera.

FAILURES.—On the 12th instant, the respectable native banking firm of Kissin Dass and Ootumchund, in the Burrah Bazaar, failed.

By a native letter lately received from Mirzapore, it appears, that two shocking houses of respectability at that place have lately failed.

ESCAPE AND RE-CAPTURE OF A TIGER.—At a very early hour on the morning of the 14th instant, intelligence was brought to Government House at Barrackpore, where the Deputy Governor's family were residing, that the large tiger had escaped from the menagerie and was prowling about the park. Orders were immediately given to apprise the inhabitants of the respective bungalows of the occurrence, and at the same time the sepoy were directed to keep their muskets in readiness. It appears that in locking the cell on the preceding night the bolt of the padlock had missed the hasp, and the tiger seeing the door swing open, had deliberately walked out. On his travels through the park, he took occasion to pat the head of a large monkey, chained near the menagerie, which proved its death-blow. In the morning considerable excitement prevailed in the neighbourhood and an immense posse comitatus, composed almost entirely of natives, armed with no other weapons than bamboo rods, assembled together and proceeded in search of the royal fugitive. He was presently discovered behind a thick jungly hedge, stretched at his ease, but evidently in a sulky fit. After a brief deliberation two natives (one of whom was the keeper) fearlessly walked to the opposite side of the hedge, and thrust a bamboo, to which a rope was attached, underneath the body of the tiger. As soon as they had succeeded in securing the rope, each took hold of one end, and having poked the tiger's ribs pretty soundly with their bamboo rods, they led him between them like a docile pony, and escorted by the shouting multitude, snugly deposited him in his former cell. It is extremely providential that no accident occurred. Visitors at Barrackpore are well aware of the ferocity often displayed by this very tiger; when strangers approach too near the bars, he occasionally springs forward with a foice and sudden growl, and at the time of feeding he is generally savage to an extreme degree. Fortunately the monster seems to have been too well fed the night before to be pressed by hunger during his wanderings in the park; for besides the murder of the unfortunate monkey, he felled a large bullock, yet he shewed no inclination whatever to feast upon his slaughtered victims.

GENERAL MARTINE'S ESTATES.—The undermentioned lots, belonging to the estate of the late General Martine, were disposed of at the annexed prices by sale to the highest bidder at the master's office:

Messrs. S. Smith and Co.'s house and premises in Hare Street, for Co.'s Rs. 60,000—(bought by themselves.)

Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co.'s house and premises, for 30,000—(bought by themselves.)

Mrs. Lindsted's house and premises on the Circular Road, for 12,500—(bought by Mr. Wilkinson.)

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.—The Governor-General and suite, arrived at Simla on the 5th instant.

THE SPECT VESTRY.—A meeting of parishioners was held at the cathedral on the 16th instant, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. It having been determined that the old system of re-election should not continue in force any longer, but that the two senior vestrymen should go out as a matter of course, and not be eligible for re-election until they had been out of office a twelve month. Messrs. J. S. Judge and Robert Molloy went out, and were succeeded by Messrs. Thomas Leach and Charles Mackenzie, Messrs. A. Sin and Alexander Colvin were then re-elected to serve during the present year.

NATIVE ASSISTANTS OF THE CUSTOM-HOUSE.—A petition had lately been presented to the collector of the Government customs, by the native assistants attached to the establishment of the custom-house, setting forth their grievance from the invidious distinction which obtains in that office, between them and their christian fellow assistants, that is, in no instance is a native, however well qualified he might be, promoted to any place vacated by a christian; and submitting it as their right to be considered in this respect, as on a footing of equality with the christians, now that all classes of Her Majesty's subjects in this country, without distinction of colour, creed or caste, are eligible for all the offices under government. The Collector gave his orders upon the said petition to the effect, that, in case of a vacancy of the above description occurring in future at his office, the native's claims shall have every consideration; and that should there be any among the petitioners possessing the necessary qualifications for the berth, there would be no obstacle to his getting the appointment.

CANAL TOLLS.—The Deputy-Governor of Bengal has determined to reduce the present rate of tolls upon the canal one-half, that is to say, to fix the toll at 8 annas per 100 maunds, instead of one rupee.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR GHASOODEN.—The Madressa or Persian College of Calcutta has suffered a severe loss in the death of their principal professor Ghasooden, whose place has been given to the individual next in succession.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—It is said the indigo districts have had ample and excellent rains all below Rajmahal; Bangulpore, Tirhoot and the westward, have been less favoured.

FORTUNATE ESCAPE OF THREE ROYAL TIGERS FROM A MILITARY SECRETARY.—The Hon. Capt. Osborne has had a most unprecedented escape from an accident which, according to all calculation, ought to have proved fatal. When out tiger shooting in the Dhooon, three tigers suddenly got up under the very feet of his elephant which so affrighted the animal, that he literally shook his rider off his back. Captain Osborne is said to have actually fallen upon one of the tigers, and strange to say he escaped by the whole three tigers taking fright and running away.

CAPTAIN J. A. CURRIE.—Captain J. A. Currie, late of the Howrah dock has been appointed by the board to the situation of first uncovenanted assistant to the secretary in the room of Mr. W. Peters, who resigns and goes home in the Roberts. The place had been promised by the two last officiating secretaries to the assistant who stood next to Mr. Peters; but Captain Currie's eminent talents and position in society, appear to have given him a preference. It is understood, however, that Captain Currie is to be made river magistrate, as soon as that office is created; and has accepted the present office as a temporary convenience, unless the members of the board double his salary to secure his valuable services.

LIGHTNING.—About ten o'clock on the night of Thursday last, a three storied house at Burra Bazar, occupied by, and belonging to, a Hindoostanee shroff, was struck by lightning. The fluid entered the house through the roof, and piercing through the second and first floor, went out at the street door. An account book was the only property destroyed by the accident.

THE INTERMENT OF THE SUFFERERS IN THE LATE STORM BY THE MAGISTRATE'S ORDER.—The magistrate of zillah 24-pergunahs, we are informed, has despatched Serjeant Floyd with a party of convicts to proceed to the villages which have been devastated by the late storms, and to bury the corpses of the persons who were killed by the violence of that hurricane. The bodies, we learn from persons who went to see these places, lie strewn in all directions, some with their arms carried away, some being minus a leg, &c. Cows and bullocks, had been driven so strongly by the force of the storm as to have their horns driven into the earth, and many lie dead in that posture. Brick-built buildings have been thrown down, and the bricks themselves hurled to a great distance by the tempest, and large cocoanut trees, &c. rooted from their original situation and buried four or five feet deep in other places 30 or 40 yards distance. At one place, called Baidali, no less than 250 dead bodies were counted by the spectators. Females with their jewels on them, lie dead and untouched, the putrid smell being too offensive and considered infectious by the surviving villagers, so as to deter them from approaching these corpses, many of which were in a state of nudity, with the jackals and vultures feeding on them. The convicts who have proceeded to bury them, we understand, dig large holes in the earth, hurl the dead bodies promiscuously into them, and then cover them up. Native superstition ascribes the scourge to the curses of a fakeer, who asked for some chariv of these villagers, and was refused by all except one old woman, whose house has consequently escaped the effects of this tempest.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—A native, a female, who, to all appearances, had expired, when undergoing the process of ablution previous to cremation, shewed signs of life. Her humane and sagacious relatives around, ascribed her resuscitation to the evil spirit or some equally satisfactory cause; nor was it until the poor creature had been exposed on her funeral pyre the whole day and shewed unequivocal symptoms of life and consciousness, that she was borne home. Suttee is but half abolished while the murders that are frequently perpetrated in cases like the above, are suffered to take place.

It is said that one of the Sudder jung tombs furarees has just been secured, after a desperate resistance, in which two of the cantors have been severely wounded. The name of the furaree is Jhoon-la, and his companion Unta, had a narrow escape of being secured also.

KURNAUL.—The Governor-General has been holding a levee for the reception of the native community, a large portion of which has flocked to pay their respects to His Lordship.

SAHARUNPORE.—A conflict between a body of thieves and the police of a village called Bela in this district, recently took place, in which several of both parties were wounded. The magistrate proceeded to the spot on learning the affray, and seized the ringleader and others of the gang.

ALLIHAH.—Manik Rae Rao, of Bidjeegurh, a large village in this district, has been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment, in the jail of Allypore, for being implicated in an affray, in which several lives were lost. The affray was caused by the Rae's attempting to enforce the levy of several dues, which he claimed as his right, from the bunnecas of the village, but to which the latter refused to submit.

Small-pox is very prevalent here among the natives, and has extended to the European residents; Mr. Thornton, C.S. and Ensign Coisar of the 64th regiment, have been attacked by the disease. The misery in which the poorer classes of the natives are kept by the scarcity, combined with the approach of the hot weather, will, no doubt, tend to make the disease more fatal.

MORADABAD.—The distress in this district, although not quite so severe as in many others, is on the increase; and has hitherto been alleviated solely through the exemplary private charity of the judge, Mr. Okeilon. This gentleman's good deeds are not performed for the sake of public exhibition, but are the result of qualities of which the possessor will always disdain the tribute of publicity or flattery. His private disbursements in charity have, for many months, been the only means of rescuing from starvation, upwards of a thousand destitute and famished human beings.

AGRA.—Cholera is on the decline, both amongst the troops and the inhabitants generally; and as the magistrate is putting a stop to a further influx of the destitute poor, in as far as practicable, by arranging so as to employ them at some distance from Agra, apprehensions of a pestilence breaking out are beginning to subside. It has been a mistake to conclude, that the congregation of these unfortunate persons, has been the cause of the cholera; as this disease is pretty well known now to arise from a peculiar condition of the atmosphere, rather than from animal or vegetable miasm; nevertheless, it has been found that larger masses of human beings, invite, as it were, attacks of cholera, and beyond doubt sooner or later in many instances are productive of doubtful malignant fevers; but the magistracy is now happily so well directed to the removal of the accumulation of all contaminating matters, both on the land and the river connected with the presence of these huge working parties and the population of Agra generally, so that little is to be feared in the shape of infection by a tainted atmosphere.

Distributors of cholera medicines have been placed at each of the twenty-eight chowkeys of the city.

Mr. Charles Lyall, of Calcutta, has presented the very handsome sum of 500 rupees, to the Relief Society.

The health of the city and station is slightly improving. The following list of the poor employed by Government shews a slight increase since last week:

April 1833.	Men.	Women.	Children.	Total.
12th	30,617	30,518	16,365	77,500
13th	30,617	30,518	16,365	77,500
14th	30,617	30,518	16,365	77,500

THE AGRA PRESS.—The Agra press, with all debts and property thereto appertaining, including, the Agra Ukhbar was on the 5th of April, disposed of by sale, to Messrs. Moona Lal and Co. of Agra. The editorship of the paper will be conducted as hitherto.

The number of poor employed by Government is daily on the increase: they now amount to 70,000. The following is a list of the number employed this week.

	Men.	Women.	Children.	Total.
1st.	27,418	27,920	14,919	70,257
2d.	28,018	28,520	15,219	71,757
3d.	28,818	28,920	15,519	73,257
4th.	28,818	28,920	15,519	73,257

SHAHJAHANPOOR.—On the 28th day of March, the first steam engine in these provinces was put up in motion at the establishment of Messrs. Saunders, Barron and Co., and is a most interesting spectacle. The engine is of eight horse power, and is intended for sawing wood, raising water, and working a powerful air pump. The air pump is to act in the twofold capacity—first, of creating and maintaining a vacuum under an immense boiler to be used in the making or refining of sugar, after the manner of the celebrated Howard's patent improved by Messrs. Oakes and Co. of London; second, of curing sugar by what is called the pneumatic process, which consists in placing the recently crystallised sugar in a case with a wire gauze bottom, and exhausting the atmosphere from beneath, when the air rushing through the mass, carries all the molasses below, leaving the crystal perfectly pure.

Dacca, 24th March.—A force consisting of three companies from Major Lister's light infantry corps, under the command of Lieut. Bennett, has been ordered to march against some refractory Cossyah chiefs, within a short distance of the Sanatorium at Cherra Poonjee. It is confidently expected the chiefs with their followers will soon be dislodged from the stockade, where they have taken temporary shelter, and will, probably, submit to any terms after the arrival of our force. A Government demand made by the revenue authorities for lands in possession of the above Cossyah chiefs, situated in the Sylhet district, treating our perwanas with unwarrantable insult, and committing outrages on the peons conveying those notices, are reported to be the ostensible causes of the present movement.

Calcutta.—Cholera and fever prevail to a great extent at this town and the surrounding country. At Humeerpore and Banda an extensive mortality is raging, and almost all the villages are more or less depopulated. The latter station is represented to be unusually prevalent and severe. The mortality extends also to the cattle, few or none of which remain.

Benar.—The Collector of this zillah, Mr. Hamilton, has dismissed seven of his Amils, for peculation and embezzlement of the public revenue. The same gentleman has substituted Hindoostanee for Persian in his office.

The Rajah Meetur Jeet Singh has subscribed 1,000 rupees for the relief of the N.W. P. cholera and small pox are both raging throughout the district.

NATIVE STATES.

Owalior.—The raja who lately lost his consort has just selected a fresh one, a daughter of the Mamajee, after sorrowing the usual Musulman period of affliction, forty days. This is the third partner he has taken to himself.

Hydrophobia to a fearful and unprecedented extent is raging in this town from the number of mad dogs in it. Native reports say the mortality caused by it is equal to that produced by cholera. So severe are the sufferings of the poor from famine that they devour the very animals, such as horses, buffaloes, asses, &c., that have died naturally from exhaustion.

Lucknow.—Letters from Lucknow state, that there is apparently something of serious nature going on in that city; and that the authorities are aware of what is going on, and have taken precautionary measures accordingly. The leave of all military men for the present month is stopped. A fanatic now in confinement has predicted the downfall of the present reigning family; and the queen, the minister, and a wealthy and influential mahajun are said to have all died on the same day: the words of the letter are, "said to have all become defunct on the same day," which gives reason to suppose, that there is some conspiracy on foot to verify by the assistance of poison, the prophecy of the gifted individual now in custody.

Lahore.—"An Urzee from Monsieur Uotaylor was received, stating that a Russian vakeel had come to Dost Mahomed Khan, the ruler of Cabul, for the purpose of negotiating with him.

An Ukbar from Cabul was also received, mentioning that while Captain Burnes was sitting with Dost Mahomed Khan at the Durbar, the Russian ambassador came into the presence, and, with a loud voice, said to the ruler of Cabul, that he would not recommend him taking that gentleman's advice, as the English nation would make friends of people and afterwards deceive and dispossess them of their territories. Captain Burnes heard this in silence; when the Durbar was over, he returned to his quarters, from whence he despatched presents consisting of wines, sweetmeats, &c. to the ambassador, but they were refused and therefore carried back to Captain Burnes.

An Ukbar written by the Cazeer of Cabul was also received, which mentions that the Russian ambassador and Captain Burnes met at the Durbar of Dost Mahomed Khan where they had a long conversation, which ended in very angry words, consequent on some expressions from the ambassador disrespectfully made use of towards the English nation. The ruler of Cabul seemed to take notice, but continued the business of the Durbar, secretly enjoying the scene. They then said that they would go to Lahore, and examine its strength, and report the same to their respective Governments. Deenanath said to the Maharajah, that it would be a desirable object if they came into His Highness's presence and there made proffers of friendship.

The Ukbar also mentions that Dost Mahomed Khan wrote to his son Ukbar Khan, advising him to be cautious that the reports of Herat should not be allowed to spread.

The Maharajah inquired of Deenanath and Fakcer Azeezooddeen, if they could inform him how much money Herat yield. They at first replied that the pergunnah of Herat is large and yields one crore of rupees. They afterwards said its revenue was about thirty lacs; but the ruler receives only ten lacs.

At the Durbar of the Maharajah, an urzee was presented from Sawun Mul, Nazim of Multan, stating that a few days ago the Vuzereer Mussulmans had assembled in large body and plundered the cattle of Multan; but when the news of their depredations reached his ears, he assembled his forces, matched out and attacked them, when after a sharp conflict he succeeded in securing the cattle, completely routing the lawless banditti with a loss on their side of twenty-five killed and fifteen wounded.

Burrtroon.—The sickness so general, is very severe in this town. The Rajah has made arrangements for the distribution of medicine in the hope of lessening the calamity which is depopulating the city.

NOTA.—The Raja of this state has taken it into his head to dispense with the services of his Dewan, an arrangement to which the latter appears not disposed to conform, and as he is supported by a portion of the Raja's troops a small fracas is expected. The Rajah has referred the question to Colonel Alves.

MADRAS.

TROOPS FOR MOULMEIN.—It is said that the troops under orders for Moulmein, are not to proceed there until further instructions are received from the General Government, the late pacific accounts by the Larne not seeming to require their immediate despatch.

The remainder of the 8th Regt. N. I. has not yet sailed for Malacca and Singapore, in consequence, it is said, of the want of accommodation in the Baique Fanny, which was taken up for their conveyance.

THE NABOB—EXEMPTION FROM LEGAL PROCESS.—A somewhat extraordinary application was made to the Supreme Court on the 28th of March, by the Advocate-General, on behalf of the Nabob, and by order of Government, but was not finally disposed of until the 30th. The Court was applied to make an order exempting all persons contained in a certain list (comprising the Nabob's household) from its process. The application was refused on the board ground that the Court was incompetent to make any such order, which would be tantamount to making a law, a power reserved only to parliament.

LORD ELPHINSTONE AND SIR ROBERT GRANT.—It is generally understood, that both Lord Elphinstone and Sir Robert Grant are recalled; the latter having offended both the Home and the Supreme Governments; the former to fill a situation at Court. Sir James Carnac is mentioned as his Lordship's successor.

THE SCHOONER FOR MADRAS AND MOULMEIN.—The General Government has purchased a large schooner for Madras, to ply backwards and forwards between Madras and Moulmein, carrying troops. The uncertain tone of the Burmese King renders every precaution necessary, and makes it desirable that a constant communication should be kept up between Madras and Moulmein.

BOMBAY.

THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.—The Commander-in-Chief is going to cruise for the benefit of his health in the Hon. Company's ship Tuptee between Bombay and Surat, the present station of that vessel instead of going to the Mahabulshwar Hills, which it was His Excellency's intention to do, during part of the hot weather.

CHOLERA MORBUS.—A considerable deal of cholera prevails among the pilgrims who are congregated at Nassick, and that the victims to the disease are numerous, caused principally by the crowded state of a place to which so many went for the purpose of atonement and expiation.

OPIMUM AGENT.—It is said, that the situation of opium agent, vacant by the death of Mr. Taylor, is to be abolished as a distinct appointment, and that the duties are henceforth to be performed by the Custom-house department.

MOHURRUM AFFAIRS.—The late mohurru festival has been attended with several excesses, which render it rather questionable whether the same indulgence ought in future to be extended to similar exhibitions. One mounted patrol has been murdered, and two police peons have been dangerously wounded, all in the discharge of their duty in protecting the public peace.

BURMAH.

The accounts from Burmah during the month, do not differ from those previously received. The affairs of the country were in the same condition.

PERSIA.

ISPAHAN.—The following interesting extract of a letter dated Ispahan, 27th January 1838, has been received.

"The winter this year is excessively severe. The street are literally covered with snow, and we are, in consequence, all shut up in our respective houses. We have no further accounts about the movements of Mahommed Shah, and it is difficult to say what will be the result of his expedition. You must have heard of the arrival of Nicholas at Erivan. The visit of his Imperial Majesty to the Convent of Etchmietchin has, I am glad to say, been productive of manifold advantages to the Armenian nation. He has been graciously pleased to testify his acquiescence of becoming patron to that venerable fraternity on whom he has bestowed twenty-four extensive villages in perpetuity, the revenues of which are to be appropriated to the maintenance of schools for the education of Armenian youths, and to the printing of the Armenian classics and other useful books. This is all very good and encouraging indeed! Better and happier days await the devoted country of the Armenians!"

CHINA.

The accounts from Canton to the 27th of February, by the Water Witch, indicate no improvement in opium but on the contrary state, that there was a general expectation of the drug falling on the appearance of this year's supply in the market, none of which had been reported as sold. Last year's Opium was respectively, Patna 500 dollars, Benares 450 dollars, and Malwa 380 dollars, but sales were effected with great and increasing difficulties.

New opium was falling hourly, and sales of Patna are reported at 420 dls. Benares at 375 dls. There are discrepancies in the statements of deliveries and stock for the last year, which we are at a loss to reconcile with the shipments from here and Bombay, after making every allowance for the consumption of the Straits.

Without including Damaun, the export from India was about 41,000 chests, of which we have an account to the extent of 26,855 chests delivered and in store at Lintin, leaving nearly 15,000 chests undisposed of. It would be satisfactory to have this explained.

Some smuggling boats had been seized. Fast sailing chippers, for the Chinese rivers, of thirty to forty tons, are now fitting out in the Hooghly, to be manned by Europeans well armed, for the purpose of conveying the drug into place, less exposed than the sea coast to the observation of the authorities.

MR. LINTON'S CONCERT.

We were in hopes, not only from Mr. Linton's choice programme, but the unusual coolness of the evening on Monday, that his concert would have been better attended. Malgré the damper of such poor encouragement; he sang with great spirit throughout, and, with his invariable readiness, substituted a right jovial ballad for the promised 'Calunnia' of 'an amateur,' who was non est inventus. The gems of the evening were, decidedly, the delightful performances of the Ryckmanns. Both the basso and the petit bassoon were exquisite, but the bijou of bijoux was the piano forte fantasia of the junior Ryckmann—the Thalberg of Ind. There was one pianissimo passage in it, which, what with the delicacy of his touch, the modulation of the pedal, and sundry other musical witcheries of which we confess our technical ignorance, he so thoroughly captivated the hearts of his auditors, that we heard around us, many an irrepressible ejaculation of delight and 'special wonder.'

Mrs. Chester was in excellent voice, but, we think, the songs assigned to her were not judiciously chosen, inasmuch as her forte lies in those that require more naïveté in the singing than so sombre a one, for instance, as 'Guidez vous.' Her 'Dashing White Sergeant' and 'Buy a Broom,' afford ample corroboration of this assertion. Mesdames Ventura and Valadares acquitted themselves very creditably, and Delmar led admirably: in short, all went off to the entire satisfaction of the audience.—Englishman, May 2.

LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the committee, held at the Society's office, No. 3, Clive-street ghaut, on Monday, the 7th instant.

PRESENT

Rajah Radhacaunt Bahadoor; Rajah Kallykissen Bahadoor; Cowar Suttchurn Ghosaul; Baboo Pronnocomar Tagore; Baboo Ramcomul Sen; G. Pinsep, Esq.; W. C. Hurry, Esq.; and Moonshree Mahomed Ameer, committee; Captain G. Vint, visitor.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last meeting, were unanimously elected:

Mr. R. Thomas, of Calcutta; Mr. J. C. Miller, of Gooika Rajeshye; Baboo Neelruten Halder, of Calcutta; Allan Gilmore, Esq.; J. McKilligan, Esq.; James Hastie, Esq.; Baboo Issutchunder, Kanbongoe, heir of Baboo Boydenauth, Kanoongoe, of Chittagong; Moulavee Kurrum Hussien, a vakeel of Shaha Woodah; Moulavee Karamut Ally, of Hooghly Emambarah; and Baboo Kally Kinker Paulit, of Calcutta.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members of the Society:

Proposed by Captain Vint, and seconded by Rajah Radhacaunt Bahadoor,
Mr. John Russel, of Pubna.

Proposed by W. Storm, Esq., and seconded by Baboo Pronnocomar Tagore,

Mr. Robert Watson, of Calcutta.

Proposed by Cowar Suttchurn Ghosaul, and seconded by Baboo Ramcomul Sen, Issurchunder Baneerjee, of Calcutta.

Proposed by Rajah Kallykissen Bahadoor, and seconded by Rajah Radhacaunt Bahadoor, that the committee be increased to twenty-four, by adding six European members, and that the following gentlemen be requested to serve:

Captain G. Vint; W. Storm, Esq.; Robert Watson, Esq.; James Hasie, Esq.; J. McKilligan, Esq.; and W. Fergusson, Esq.

Proposed by Captain Vint, and seconded by Baboo Ramcomul Sen, that the question of the vernacular language be discussed on the last Monday of this month, in order to give time to obtain the sentiments of all the members of the Society, and that the meeting be at the Town-hall—agreed unanimously.

IMPROPER USE OF THE AQUEDUCTS.

Calcutta, 4th May, 1838.

TO HER MAJESTY'S JUSTICE OF THE PEACE FOR THE TOWN OF CALCUTTA.

The petition of the undersigned inhabitants.

Your petitioners having observed, with feelings of disgust, the filthy and abominable uses to which the water in the various aqueducts is appropriated, by all denominations of the native inhabitants, who are everywhere to be seen bathing their bodies over the very channels, attended with indecent exposure of their persons, washing dirty rags, hawking and spitting into the water, and applying it for the purpose of cleaning ulcerated portions of the body, beg leave to bring the matter to your special notice, under the confident belief that, as it could never have been intended that the water should be applied to such uses, but for the useful and desirable purpose of supplying the domestic wants of the people, watering of the streets and replenishing the public tanks, that the justice of the peace will adopt such measures, consistent with the authority which they possess, for the application of such wholesome restrictions, as the abuses which your petitioners have noticed so imperatively demand, and the health and comfort of the community merit at your hands.

As an efficient measure for the correction of the abuses complained of, your petitioners would suggest the propriety of the day patrols being authorized to eject parties from the aqueducts who resort to them for unseemly, uncleanly, and filthy purposes, or by any other mode which may appear advisable and expedient for the accomplishment of the desired object.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general meeting of this Society was held in the Town-hall, on Wednesday, the 9th May, 1838, at half-past 9 o'clock, N. WALLICH, M. D., V. P., in the chair.

Present :—Messrs. A. Colvin, W. Storm, M.S. Staunton, W. Ainslie, R.S. Strickland, and J.W. Masters; Drs. Strong, Fry, and Hufnagle; Lieut. Abercrombie; Messrs. John Allan, A. Grant, T. Brue, T. Palmer, G. T. F. Speed, C. Deane, C. Trebeck, F.L. Beaufort, and D.W. H. Speed; Col. McLeod; Dewan Ramcomul Sen; Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore; Messrs. T. Holroyd C.W.H. Speed, Jas. Colile, R. Smith, C.A. Dyce, R. Watson, F.T. Fergusson, C.K. Robinson, G.A. Prinsep, W. Speir, T.S. Kelsalt, D. Hare, E. Preston, T.P. Morell, C. Brownlow, and John Bell.

Visitor :—Lieut. Montrieux.

The proceedings of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last meeting were duly elected members of the Society :

Dr. James Morton; W. Bennet, Esq.; Wm. Agnew, Esq.; Robt. Campbell, Esq.; Andrew Sym, Esq.; K. M. Scott, Esq., Assistant Surgeon; Munceiam Bur, Bemdaree; Lieut. J.G. Gerard; John Guilding, Esq.; G.C. Richardson, Esq.

The following gentlemen were proposed as members, viz.

Capt. H. Macfarquhar, of Tavoy, proposed by Mr. Bell, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Dr. James Hutchinson, proposed by Mr. Bell, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Thomas Savi, Esq., of Kishnaghur, proposed by C. Deveninne, Esq., and seconded by Mr. Bell.

E. Mackintosh, Esq., G.T. Cockburn, Esq., C.S., and Baboo Keenut Sing, Purneah, proposed by J.F. Cathcart, Esq., and seconded by Mr. Bell.

G.G. Mackintosh, Esq., C.S., Purneah, proposed by Mr. Bell, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

Rajah Bursinghunder Roy, and F. Kuehoffer, Esq., proposed by G. Preston, Esq., and seconded by Mr. Bell.

G.M. Hunter and G. Austin, Esqrs., Jessore, proposed by G.M. Adam, Esq., and seconded by Mr. Bell.

Motions of which notice was given at last meeting.

No. 1.—Dr. Wallich's motion, to offer premiums for essays on particular subjects, was brought forward and discussed. As there appears to be considerable difference of opinion on the propriety of offering rewards on essays, while the sum of four thousands rupees was already set aside for the best work on Indian Agriculture in all its branches, and as it became a question whether the funds of the Society were adequate to meet the outlay contemplated by the motion in question, with reference to other objects for which the Society have already pledged itself, Dr. Spry, as the seconder of the original motion, moved as an amendment, seconded by Mr. G. A. Pinsep,

"That the four articles following be assigned as the staple articles deserving of the Society's support, for practical treatises, viz. cereal grains, sugar, silk and cotton; and that the details be referred to the general committee for report. Amendment carried. The secretary here submitted an account-current, dated 30th April, 1838, from F. Macnaghten, Esq., shewing that the Society has 19,900 rupees invested in Government securities, 10,000 of which unlocked up to meet Society's engagements, to meet the offer of premiums already voted away.

Motions Nos. 2 and 3, carried nem con.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

No. 1.—Proposed by John Bell, seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

1st.—That as most of the European vegetables have been brought to perfection in the vicinity of Calcutta, through the stimulating influence of medals and rewards from this Society, it is expedient to withdraw further encouragement from such as may now with safety be left to the profits of industry derivable from local consumption, and limited in favor of artichokes, asparagus, sea-kale, celery, parsnips and a few others that have not been brought to sufficient perfection to tempt uninterrupted cultivation for the market.

2d.—That the medals and rewards thus taken from vegetables be enhanced (with reference to the more expensive cultivation) and applied to fruits, hitherto neglected, there being little doubt that with care and attention, grapes, oranges, apples, strawberries, and other delicious fruits may be brought to perfection in Bengal, and indigenous fruits greatly improved.

3d.—That with a view to secure such a desideratum, parties having approved stocks be invited to contribute grapes (or to sell them to the Society) who will undertake to keep up a nursery for the distribution of young fruit trees.

4th.—That the sum of 500 rupees be annually set apart and laid out in the importation of fruit trees, from the Cape, America, New South Wales and Europe.

5th.—That Government be solicited to authorize the superintendent of the botanical garden at Seharanpore to send down grafts of fruit-trees and shrubs, and that the expense of transmission be borne by the Society.

6th.—That two of the Society's ordinary silver medals, and fifty rupees be placed at the disposal of each of the following branch societies, for the purpose of encouraging the natives to cultivate European vegetables as successfully as they are now established round about Calcutta, viz.

Hooghly, Burdwan, Beerbhoom, Midnapore, Cuttack, Comillah, Moorshedabad, Azimgur, and Assam.

7th.—That a limited show of particular vegetables shall be held in reference to the season of their coming to perfection.

That a shew of fruits shall be held annually in due season, and rewards given.

Motion No. 2. The secretary brought to the notice of the meeting, that the great increase of new members, had exhausted the stock of the Society's transactions, vols. 2 and 3, and that there were not many of the reprint of vol. 1. remaining.

Proposed by C. K. Robison, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq., that the 1st, 2d and 3d volumes, be put into a second edition, and that the expense be ascertained and brought to the notice of the Society at its next general meeting.

The secretary brought to the notice of the meeting several samples of raw silk, and one sample of sugar, sent in by parties agreeable to a resolution of the Society passed in the 12th April, 1837, to compete for the Society's medals.

The secretary was directed to hand over these samples to the respective standing committees, upon whose reports the medals would be adjudged at the next general meeting.

REPORTS.

Read, the agricultural committee's report on the subject of the distribution of sugar-canes at the end of the year, concerning which an advertisement has already appeared in the public prints.

Read, the report of the silk committee on certain specimens of raw silk and cloth produced from the wild silk worm in Assam, Barazulpore, Dinagpore and Boncoorah,—referred to the committee of papers.

Read minutes of the caoutchouc committee recommending that the caoutchouc samples from Lieut. Vetch, should be given to Mr. Robert Smith, for purposes of experiment,—confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Read the following communication.

Read a letter from Mr. Robert Smith to the secretary, dated 11th April, requesting to be supplied with as much caoutchouc, as the Society can spare, and offering to pay for the same at the rate of eighteen rupees per manud.

The secretary had submitted Mr. Smith's letter to the committee, who were unanimous that Mr. Smith should have what was available, gratis. Resolved accordingly.

Read a letter from Mr. Robert Smith to Dr. Wallich, dated 7th May, submitting for the inspection and opinion of the Society some samples of caoutchouc cloth, which he had prepared as a substitute for wax-cloth for packing purposes.

From Lieut.-Col. Dunlop, dated Simlah, March 25th, to the secretary, advising the despatch for presentation to the society, of a parcel containing seeds of all varieties of hill forest trees, and several kinds of cane-canes which may be considered valuable for transmission to Europe and other cold countries, giving information respecting the description of vines grown at Koomawur, and promising to forward cuttings.

From Messrs. J. Willis and Cole, dated 12th April, presenting to the Society, on behalf Mr. J. J. Finch, four specimens of apples grown in that gentleman's garden at Shalepore, Tirhoot, from English grafts.

	Inches.
1 Apple weight 2½ Sa. Wt. measured in circum.	11
1 Ditto " 21½ " "	10½
1 Ditto " 15 " "	9½
1 Ditto " 12½ " "	8½

These beautiful apples were received by the secretary on the day after the last general meeting, and, fearing the apples might not keep, he circulated them as widely as possible. The fruit was equal to any at home, both in appearance and flavor, but Mr. Finch does not state whether these were solitary specimens, or whether the tree or trees bore much fruit.

From C. K. Robison, Esq., dated 14th April, enclosing extract of a letter from Major. Lawrence, dated Dorunda, near Hazareebaugh, 3d March, forwarding a small quantity of vegetable-marrow seed.

From T. Sandys, Esq., (without date), received 15th April, acknowledging receipt of Secretary's letter of the 16th January, together with copy of the Committee's report on his model, No. 2, of a machine for raising water, and offering a few observations in reply.

From Captain Macfarquhar, to the secretary, dated Tavoy, February 21st, forwarding presentation to the Society, specimens of caouchouc, dammer varnish, and cotton.

Stating that the former has been manufactured under his superintendence, and that abundance of the gum can be procured in those provinces. That the sample of dammer varnish is made by bees on the same tree from which the resin is procured, and that the cotton is the produce of his garden from seed raised from Sea Island, and which seems to thrive well in that neighbourhood.

From Mr. Thomas, superintendent of the Baptist Mission Press, intimating that he will print the transactions on the same terms as prepared by the College Press.

From Colonel Stacy, dated 15th April, enclosing a sample of cotton, and requesting an opinion on its quality.

From R. S. Homfray, Esq., dated 18th April, presenting an apricot produced in his garden at Barripore.

The members of the agricultural committee had tasted this apricot. Its fragrance was very fine, but it was sour to the taste.

From Captain P. Torkler, dated April 19th, acknowledging the receipt of transactions, and stating the intention of the committee to agitate the question of establishing a branch society at Dum-Dum.

From Dr. A. Campbell, dated Nepal, 12th April, conveying further information on the subject of his former proposition of acchmatny seeds in Nepal for transmission to the plains.

From C. H. Blake, Esq., dated — received 21st April, forwarding a bag containing two maunds of sugar to compete for the gold medal offered by the Society for the best sample "Muscovade."

From Captain Jenkins, dated 12th April, conveying information on the subject of Ena silk.

From E. MacIntosh, Esq., of Puneah, dated 16th April, in reply to secretary's letter of the 2d idem, on the subject of Indian cattle. Promises to give such information as his experience may admit.

From Mr. L. L. Leman, of St. Helena, dated 12th December, 1837, offering to become the Society's agent in London, for the purchase of cotton seed, &c.

From Dr. A. Campbell, dated 15th April, on the subject of correspondence respecting Nepal paper published in vol. 5, Transactions of the Society.

From Major J. D. Parsons, dated Cawnpore, 16th April, promising, in reply to secretary's letter of the 2d idem, to give some additional information on the subject of Indian cattle.

From R. Montgomery, Esq., dated Allahabad, April 18, asking for a supply of cotton seeds for distribution in the district.

From M. G. Rose, Esq., of Ramunagur Factory, viz Coolbariah, forwarding a box containing samples of raw silk to compete for the medals offered by the Society.

From William Storm, Esq., dated 30th April, forwarding samples of silk, to compete for the medals, prepared by Mr. A. McArthur, at the Bamuñdee concern, in zillah Nuddeah.

From N. Alexander, dated 26th April, enclosing a memo. of the mode adopted by him in rearing artichokes.

From the secretary to the Meerut Society, dated 18th April, advising the despatch of some samples of wool for the opinion of the committee. Acknowledges receipt of the secretary's letter, with copies of the cattle Committee's pamphlet.

From W. Storm, Esq., dated 8th May, forwarding some wool taken from English imported sheep.

From H. C. Hulse, Esq., dated Muttra, March, 20th forwarding four samples of wool, viz. two of white, one of grey and one of black, shorn from Merino sheep reared under his care, and conveying some information on the subject.

From the same, dated Muttra, 6th April, transmitting, for the inspection of the Society, samples of grass and grass atta, procured in that part of the country; stating that these varieties of grasses are the present means of subsistence to a large portion of the natives of that district, and that the fact of their being made use of as food appears to be but little known, even to parties long resident in India.

From the same, dated 10th April, acknowledges receipt of secretary's letter in reply to his communication, on the subject of a horse-breeding establishment, &c.

From Dr. J. T. Pearson, dated Jaunpore, 23d April, acknowledges receipt of secretary's letter of the 16th ultimo, returning his communication on cochineal.

From W. Cobb Hurry, Esq., dated 30th April, presenting an ear of Pennsylvania maize.

From Mr. Hugin, dated 4th April, Kedgeree, acknowledging receipt of parcels of books, &c., intended for the Agricultural Society of Mauritius.

From Mr. A. Millett, no date, received 8th May, forwarding 12 musk melon, of the same description as those presented last year.

From Captain G. C. Dicen, dated Mhairwarrah, 22d April, advising despatch of a quantity of Lucrae seed, for presentation to the Society, and intimating his willingness to forward a further supply at the close of the rains; stating his intention of sowing a large tract of land with cotton-seed and maize, the produce of seed furnished by this Society.

From the Reverend J. Parry, dated Jessore, 17th April, presenting to the Society, about half a maund of Sandoway tobacco, and a quantity of Madras tobacco, growing in that district, from seed supplied by this Society to Mr. Cathcart, also a specimen of the soil. Requests an opinion on these samples, and information on the culture and preparation of the plant; stating that he has collected a large quantity of seed from both varieties in distribution at the district.

From Major Syers, secretary Agricultural Society of Cuttack, dated 4th May, advising despatch of samples of Virginia tobacco and Upland Georgia cotton, produced in the Society's garden at that station from seed furnished by this Society.

From F. Macnaghten, Esq., Government agent, dated 2d May, enclosing account-current up to the 30th April, 1838, showing the sum of 19,900 rupees, to be lodged in Society's fixed assets, in Government securities.

From M. G. Maxwell, Esq., M. D. of the Madras establishment, dated 9th May, asking for the coloured drawings of tobacco plants, presented by that gentleman to the Society sometime ago, if not required, for the purpose of being forwarded to Dr. Wight of Madras.

Dr. Maxwell also gave some useful hints as to the manner of preserving seeds from insects,

Some fine parsnips were submitted by Mr. Kirchöffer, the produce of his garden at Ballygunge.

Dr. Wallich submitted a small squash grown by Mr. R. Smith from English seed.

The thanks of the Society were ordered to be offered for all the above communication and presentations.

IV.—That the thanks of the meeting be offered to the Lord Bishop of Calcutta for kindly presiding on the present occasion.

RevD. T. SANDYS, Secretary.

THIRD REPORT.

As unusually long time has transpired since the publication of the last report of this institution. The society was established in May, 1832, and the first report was published at the end of the next year; the second report also was published at the end of 1834, and since that time no report has been published until the present one. The reasons for this delay have arisen, partly from the circumstance of the operations of the society being of a very simple and unobtrusive character, and partly from the desire not very rapidly to increase the operations of the society, until such labourers might be available to carry on the work as could have confidence placed in them by the committee, both as to their own Christian character, and their capabilities of doing their duties in such a manner as, with the Divine blessing, to bring the truth of the Holy Scriptures to bear upon the hearts and consciences of those who are visited by them.

The readers who have been in the employ of the society since the publication of the last report, are Raja Aghaee, Joseph Russie, Lal Ghose, Jutti Ah Alu, Preme Mussee, Samuel Ombika Churn, Meer Jan Jane Shecky, and Mr. De Mattas. Those just at present employed are Raja Aghaee, Samuel Ombika Churn, and Sheetol; of the rest Joseph is now engaged as a Catechist at Culna. Preme Mussee and Jane Shecky went to situations of usefulness up the country where the latter is still usefully engaged in connexion with a school. Jutti Ah Alu and Meer Jan found other employment more congenial to their feelings, and Mr. De Mattas was attacked by cholera last March, and departed this life in peace and in the steadfast hope of entering upon a joyful immortality through the merits of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, thereby proving that he himself was experimentally acquainted with those truths which he had been going about to impress upon the minds of others.

Raja Aghaee attends at the houses of fifteen subscribers and reads the Scriptures therein on an average to about 150 natives weekly, who, in almost every instance, hear the Gospel with attention, very frequently ask questions upon what has been advanced, and, not unfrequently, hold disputations with the reader concerning those truths which are revealed in Holy Scripture. In only one or two instances can it be said that the people give no attention whatever. Portions of Scripture and of the Liturgy, Hymns, and Christian tracts, principally in Hindustani, have also been distributed to such persons as were able to read, and desirous or willing to receive the same.

Samuel Ombika Churn attends at the houses of twelve subscribers weekly, and therein reads the Scriptures to about one hundred and twenty persons during the week. This reader also attends weekly at a benevolent institution, in which are usually congregated about fifty natives from all parts of the country, to whom he reads the Word of God. From the report of this reader's visit, it appears, that most of the hearers listen attentively; some hear but do not consider, some question with a view to obtaining a solution of their doubts, and others, with a desire to confound and refute, and to make it appear that which is advanced in the Holy Scriptures, however true, it may be in itself, and however proper, it may be for Europeans to receive, yet that it is not suitable for them as they are already in possession of a religion of their own.

Sheetol attends at present at only five houses in which about ninety natives assemble and hear him read the Scriptures, and concerning whom it is reported that they do so with attention, frequently holding disputations concerning the doctrines of revelation, and asking questions for the solution of their doubts.

The late Mr. De Mattos, a native of Portugal, was a convert from Popery; soon after his arrival in this country from Lisbon under the ministry of the late Revd. David Brown at the Old Church; he was engaged as a reader in 1835, with a view to his visiting the numerous families of the Portuguese, with which this city abounds, most of whom continue to live in very great darkness with respect to Scriptural truth; since the time of his appointment, about three years ago, to that of his death, he has been constantly engaged in going about from lane to lane and from house to house reading the Word of God to numerous Portuguese families in their own language. During that time he has read the Scriptures to about seventy different families monthly, or, in other words, he may be said to have held about seventy Bible class meetings every month reading the Scriptures, and encouraging the hearers to hold conversation upon the truths of God's Holy Word, and concluding with prayer. It is sincerely hoped that the seed of Divine truth which has been sown by this labourer will prove a blessing to those families who have enjoyed the benefit of his visits.

All the readers are expected, when not engaged in visiting their stated hearers, to devote their time to endeavouring to draw the attention of their countrymen to the consideration of the truths of Holy Scripture.

The following communications received from some of the members, shew, that what is doing is at present only the breaking up of the fallen ground of the heart, which is pre-occupied by all the error and vices of Mahomedanism and Hinduism: they also shew, that there is reason to hope that some of the seeds of Divine truth sown by the labourers of this society may find in some hearts a soil in which it will germinate, take a deep and crottery root, and eventually spring up and bring forth the fruits of righteousness and peace to the honor and glory of our God and saviour, and the salvation of immortal souls. If the husbandman wait for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain, it surely becomes the spiritual husbandman to be patient, to be instant in sowing the seed of Divine truth, and to persevere in prayer for the enlightening and sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit to cause that seed to be productive of repentance, faith, and holiness, in the hearts of sinners of mankind, and be instrumental in preparing many an immortal being for the service and love of God, here below, and for the enjoyments and employments of the everlasting kingdom of heaven above.

One writes, "In reply to your note, I am sorry I cannot bear testimony to any good result as yet produced upon the minds of my servants, who are in the habit of hearing the scriptures read once a week; but as they shew a willingness to listen, some more than others, there would seem reason to hope for the Spirit's influence, notwithstanding the difficulties which apparently obstruct the immediate conversion of adults?"

Another writes, "The servants still continue to give us a great deal of trouble in summoning to assemble, which, if left to themselves, they would never think of doing; there is, consequently, no spirit of enquiry or any visible change of sentiments, but we hope for better times, and, therefore, desire to labour humbly under that hope."

A third states, "I am happy to say the servants attend to the instruction, with care, and acknowledge the truth of the doctrines preached to them: but, that is all. One man, a Hindoo, who has left Calcutta for his country, I had great hope of, and if it please the Lord, I trust he will come back, he altered his conduct, and improved in every respect; and not only acknowledged but felt the truth of Christianity, and plainly told me his intention of embracing Christianity on his return. One of my servants is learning the English language of his own free choice, I trust it will be blessed to him. Upon the whole, they seem to be more willing to hear now than they were about two years ago, and more attentive: they prefer being spoken to in the Hindustani language. One of my women servants related the explanations she had heard here to some of her acquaintances at the house of a friend of mine, and those servants entreated to be spoken to also; they were so, and they seemed highly gratified."

Another writes, "I am sorry I have nothing particular to mention respecting the Christian Instruction Society: most of my servants are Christians, and they appear glad of every opportunity afforded them of hearing the Scriptures read, and I am thankful to find them attentive and consistent."

Another communication is as follows: "I regret to state, that little or no effect appears to have been made on the minds of my servants as respects the Christian instruction they receive on the Sabbath day. I have endeavoured to encourage them to put any questions they thought proper to the reader, and to enter into discussions relative to the truths of Christianity and the tenets of their own belief. For some time they availed themselves of the privilege; but, latterly, they appear contented to attend, listen, and go away unconcerned; and, it appears to me, that several of them would not attend, but from the fear of incurring my displeasure. Our only comfort under this discouragement is, that we are doing our duty in holding forth the light of truth to a very ignorant portion of our fellow-creatures, leaving the result to the All-Wise disposer of events."

Another member writes, "I have received your note inquiring what effect has been produced on the natives in my house from reading the Scriptures in their hearing by the agents of the C. C. I. Society. I am sorry I cannot give you satisfactory information on this subject, because of my inability to converse with them, unable as I am to speak in any of the native languages. All I can say is, that during the reading of the Scriptures in their hearing they listen respectfully, and often with apparent interest, and I should regret if the practice of reading to them were discontinued."

"I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 25th April, requesting a communication on the subject of the effect that the regular reading and expounding of the Scriptures have had on my servants, and in reply I regret that I have nothing to report, (I wish I had) beyond regular and apparently willing attendance. Some of them acknowledge what they hear to be truth, but, as far as I can judge, their hearts appear untouched!"

"Though I cannot see any fruits, I am glad to have the blessed Word read to my people, and the Gospel simply preached in my family of dependants, and I trust to have the regular attendance of the men you now send, as it may not be always in vain that these privileges are imparted to my poor servants."

"The Society must, I think, commend itself to every Christian heart. The recollection that we are daily receiving attention and service from those who are perishing for lack of knowledge, is most painful. How sad this constant habit showed in any degree, renders us indifferent to such a state of things, yet we all feel that it does, without great watchfulness. This Society reminds us of our responsibilities, and tends to keep alive our sympathy for the stranger that is within our gates, and I have found it useful in this respect even to pray to our soul."

Funds. The total amount received since the publication of the second report is Rs. 2,110 4 annas and 0 pie, and the amount expended during the same time is Rs. 2,367 8 annas and 0 pie: there is, therefore, a balance of Rs. 42 12 annas 0 pie, in hand.

The experiment of reading the Scriptures to the domestic servants of Christian families having now been carried on for the last six years, the committee feels convinced that it is now time to attempt to bring the labours of the Society to bear more extensively upon those individuals for whose benefit it was more especially established. They, therefore, now beg to invite the heads of Christian families to follow the example of those who have attempted to bring their domestic servants, so far as circumstances would admit, within the sound of the blessed Gospel, and for that end to obtain the services of a Christian reader, for the purpose of meeting their domestics at a certain convening hour, once, twice, or oftener per week, as circumstances may suggest, and of reading to them, in a language which they can understand, the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. There is one point to which the committee would especially invite the kind attention of those persons who are desirous of benefitting their native dependants, and that is, the desirableness of one of the members of the family kindly devoting the hour of the readers visit to the object of that visit, and as frequently as possible remaining present during the reading of the Scriptures and the discussion which usually takes place, subsequently, as it has been found, that in those cases where this practice is followed, the servants feel that their employer takes an interest in their welfare, and, consequently, are inclined to listen with more attention than they would otherwise bestow.

The committee cannot but feel that sufficient attention has not yet been paid by Christians to improve the influence they possess for promoting the best interests of their servants, and, it is feared, that many individuals, who do not think seriously of their dependants, that as they are not desirous of seeing the light of truth, they may be left to themselves in quiet possession of their prejudices, and in ignorance of the only true God and Jesus Christ whom he hath set forth to be the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for those of the whole world. The committee feels also that on Scriptural ground, it is the indispensable duty of Christians not only to attend to the spiritual interests of themselves and their own relatives and friends, but also to those of the strangers who are within their gates. If it be the command of God that the privileges of the Sabbath be extended to all such strangers as are brought within the sphere of Christian influence, as, from the fourth Commandment, it evidently is, it undoubtedly is a duty also which every Christian owes to those over whom he obtains any influence, to use that influence, accompanied by his best endeavours, and by his prayers at the throne of grace, for the Divine blessing, to bring them to an acquaintance with that Gospel which reveals the way of salvation through faith in our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.—Hurkaru, May 11.

Dear Sir,—As a further proof of the light manner in which the charges have been brought against the qualities of the stores laid in for the Emerald Isle, we request you will lay before your Committee the enclosed letter from Messrs. Haworth and Hardman regarding the biscuit.

Yours faithfully,

MESSRS. CARR, TAGORE AND CO.

Dear Sirs,—We have the pleasure to hand you (annexed) an extract from a letter received yesterday from a friend at Bombay, who was a passenger on board the Emerald Isle to Madras, to whom we wrote immediately on receiving your note of the 5th ultimo, advising us of a complaint that the bread supplied by us to that vessel was bad and uneatable. We addressed him to ascertain if there was any real ground for complaint, as we ourselves felt confident that our stores were most excellent.

We will feel obliged by your forwarding our extract to the Committee of the Australian Association, with a request, that they will give the same publicity to it that was given to the protest of the passengers received from Madras, as we find that parties now, who are in the habit of supplying ships with such stores, do not hesitate to state that our future supplies will be found (as in the case of the Emerald Isle) of inferior quality.

We are, dear Sirs, yours faithfully,

W. HAWORTH, HARDMAN AND CO.

Extract from a letter, dated Bombay, April 6, 1838.

My dear Hardman,—“ You desire me to inform you, if, amongst the general complaints on board the Emerald Isle, there were any upon your cabin biscuit, marked W. H. and Co., in reply to which, I must tell you, that I heard none; but, on the contrary, on one occasion, your mark, and, of course, your bread was brought to my notice at table by one of the passengers, before I had observed it myself, and, upon informing him that it was the produce of the new mills at Cossipore, he expressed himself how good it was; and, I do not assure you, it was good, and I did not see a weevil in any of the bread all the while I was on board: in short, I did not hear a single complaint about the biscuit in one shape or other, nor would I ever wish to eat better. The complaint seemed to be respecting the wines, of which I partook very little, and confess myself no judge of quality. Beer is my only beverage, and I took more than enough of my own; but that belonging to the ship was good beer also.”

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's apartments, the 15th May, 1838.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read :

From W. Michelson, R. B. Pennington, A. Ross, J. Innis, M. D. Esqrs. Bengal Medical Service; Hamilton, Esq. H. M.'s 17th Regt. and J. Murray, Esq. Bombay Service, requesting to withdraw from the Society.

From Messrs. Leckie and Co. of Bombay, forwarding their account-current with the Society, shewing a balance in favor of the latter of 514 rupees.

From J. H. Stocqueler, Esq., offering to act as agent for the Society here and in England, and stating that the Society is accepting his offer would only be required to contribute as a single subscriber at 10 rupees per annum.

On the motion of Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Mr. Egerton, Mr. Stocqueler's offer was accepted.

Dr. Goodeve then stated, that in the last monthly report the mention of an operation for scrotal elephantiasis similar to his own, performed by Dr. D. Stewart, had been inadvertently omitted to be noticed.

Mr. Richard O'Shaughnessy then communicated to the meeting an account of two operations performed by him. The 1st was an amputation through the tarsus after Chopart's method upon a native, with cancer of the forepart of the foot, extending over the metatarsus, and destroying the 1st and 2d toes.

The patient had recovered perfectly complete, union having taken place rapidly, although a large articular surface had been exposed by the operation, and the man was beginning to walk well with the remaining portion of his foot.

The 2d case was one of amputation of the right half of the lower jaw for hollow exostosis of that bone. The bone was divided a few lines to the right of the centre of the jaw, and turned out of the socket after separating the soft parts. About 16 ozs. of blood was lost during the operation, but no untoward symptoms had since occurred, and the wound was healed within a fortnight after the operation, leaving scarcely any deformity of the face.

The tumour had been the growth of some years, and had acquired considerable magnitude. The case was accompanied by a beautiful preparation of the bone and drawings of the patients before the operation.

The discussion upon these two cases being continued for some time, prevented any further business being commenced during the evening.

J. Humfrays, Esq., member.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last meeting were unanimously elected:

Mr. John Russel, of Pubna; Robert Watson, Esq., of Calcutta; Baboo Issurhunder Banerjee, of Calcutta.

Proposed by the secretary, Mr. Hurry, and seconded by Rajah Radhacaunt Bahadoor, James Colquhoun, Esq., of Calcutta, as a member of the society.

Read a letter from W. Adam, Esq., presenting a copy of his third report on education in Bengal and Behar.

Resolved, that a letter be addressed to Mr. Adam, asking a copy of his 1st and 2d reports on that subject, and thanking him, in the mean time, for the third, which he has been pleased to send.

The following gentlemen were appointed a sub-committee to examine and report on Mr. Adam's papers.

Rajah Radhacaunt Bahadoor; Rajah Kally Kissen Bahadoor; and Baboo Ramcomul Sen.

Read a letter from Mr. Marshman, stating his consent to publish the proceedings of the committee in his paper gratuitously.

Ordered, that a letter of thanks be addressed to that gentleman.

Read a letter from Coor Suttchurn Ghosaul proposing to establish a branch society at Backergunge, and other suggestions.

Resolved, that it be taken into consideration at a future meeting.

A letter from Baboo Mothooranauth Mullick, with a list of subjects requiring consideration, was also read.

Resolved, that it be laid before the society, with a translation at the next meeting.

Proposed by Rajah Kally Kissen Bahadoor, and seconded by Rajah Radhacaunt Bahadoor,

That a seal be engraved, bearing the name of the society in English, Persian, Bengally, and Debnagur characters, in order to seal the letters and other papers relating to the society, and that the copies of all letters that shall be written by the corresponding members addressed to, and received from, be kept in the records of the society for reference.

The revised list of the corresponding committees passed as follows:

SOCIETY FOR THE ACQUISITION OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE.

A meeting of the above Society, established by a respectable body of educated Hindoos, was held in the Sanscrit College Hall, on Wednesday evening last. The rules of the Society requiring some member to deliver a discourse on the subject chosen for discussion at each meeting, the Rev. Baboo Kisna Mohana Banerjee delivered one, on the advantages resulting from the study of history. The discourse was good and well calculated to rouse a desire in young minds for the acquisition of a historical knowledge, as also to teach how to select the kind of histories fit for study. The speech was a lengthy one, and it is impossible to do justice to its merits within a short compass. After the Baboo concluded, certain resolutions were passed for the guidance of the Society. The meeting broke up about half-past nine o'clock.

There were about a hundred Hindoo youths present on the occasion; but, we believe, the attendance would have been much greater, had not the weather worn a threatening appearance that evening. Two European gentlemen honored the meeting with their presence, namely, that zealous and unwearied friend, and originator of native education, Mr. David Hare, and another, whose name we had not an opportunity to learn.—Hurkaru, May 19.

TO THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION OF BENGAL.

GENTLEMEN,—Having, at your request, undertaken the investigation of the complaints of the passengers of the Emerald Isle, we beg to report to you the result of our enquiries, which have been as full as circumstances would admit.

Every article supplied to the ship was by Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. or under their orders. We have had before us, lists of the whole with Messrs. Binny and Co.'s letters, and Captain Driver's letter to Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., and have tasted two bottles of the condemned port and claret, sent up from Madras per Malcolm, and compared them with two bottles of the same wines from the godowns of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. We have also tasted samples of the biscuits and flour. It was not possible to obtain samples of every article, and some we did not deem it necessary to require.

Referring to the passengers' letter to Captain Driver, of the 16th March, 1838, we shall notice separately the various supplies complained of, viz.

RICE.—Of this we find 20½ maunds was laid in: we have no musters, but are disposed to think that it was not properly prepared for the table by the European cooks on board: the sickness of the children may be attributed to another cause instead of the inferiority of the rice.

OVEN.—The want of a proper oven is next complained of. At the time the Emerald Isle sailed, every exertion was used to procure a new and proper apparatus; but none new was to be had, and a second-hand article was purchased from the Motia, which ship brought out troops and a number of passengers. If it suited so large a ship, the inference is, that it was a proper article, and Captain Driver is to blame if he did not cause a proper use to be made of it.

LOUR.—Bread and biscuits. Samples of the flour and biscuits were on the table at the last general meeting and tasted by every body present: they were pronounced good, especially the biscuits, and in this opinion we concur and believe them to have been as good as ever was put on boardship. We have, besides, in justice to Messrs. Haworth, Hardman and Co., published a letter from a passenger of the ship to Madras, stating that, instead of the biscuits being weavily and uneatable, they were much liked, and thought very superior. We have already stated that Captain Driver is to blame, if no fresh bread was baked on board, for he had a sufficiency of good flour.

CLARET.—Was St. Julien, and, in our opinion, a very inferior wine, and that sent up by the Malcolm is absolutely sour, though the same wine, and, we presume, exposure on deck when sent on board caused this deterioration. We do not consider the committee of the Association to blame in respect to this wine; and are even disposed to exonerate Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., for the wine was produced at the public tiffin. Mr. Craigh of them pronounced it inferior; but his opinion was overruled by all the other gentlemen, and among them several who have signed the letter to Capt. Driver; so the unfortunate choice of the wine is in a measure attributable to the passengers themselves—or, at any rate, those who attended the tiffin and approved of it, fifty dozens were put on board, and at Madras a fresh supply of 50 dozens of Chateau Margeaux was taken in.

PORT WINE.—The sample of this wine produced at the tiffin was considered very superior, and the muster received by the Malcolm shews that it is the same wine; and though we think it sound and not disposed to condemn it equally with the claret, we are of opinion that it is a very common description of wine. A fresh supply of 30 dozens was put on board at Madras.

BRANDY.—Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. assure us, that they put on board an ample supply of French brandy from their own godowns. We find by the lists, 12 dozens, and as no part of it was condemned at Madras, we consider it to have been good.

BEER.—Of this we find supplied to the ship 112 dozens of Bass' pale ale, 24 dozens of golden ale, and 17½ dozens of other beer; no part of this was condemned at Madras, though stated by the passengers to be inferior. Capt. Driver states the consumption was "four dozens per day, so it could not have been very bad; on the contrary must have been very good, and in the published letter of the passenger to Madras, the beer was pronounced to be good; an additional quantity of 100 dozens was taken in at Madras.

SHERRY.—No part of the sherry was condemned at Madras, though pronounced by the passengers to be inferior, and no additional quantity was thought necessary to be supplied to the ship. The original stock was 32 dozens of one sort, and 24 dozens of another.

TEA.—The tea was from the godowns of Messrs. Rustumjee Cowasjee and Co.; there were three half chests of green tea and fifteen catty boxes of souchong. It is notorious that the teas from Messrs. Rustumjee and Co. are equal to any procurable, and Capt. Driver is to blame for not having had it properly prepared.

DEFICIENCIES OF MATERIAL AND ATTENDANCE.—We cannot, of course, pronounce an opinion in a charge stated in such general terms; but it must be evident to all persons, that a ship of the size of the Emerald Isle taking passengers upon the moderate rates charged, cannot be expected to have all the advantages of superior accommodations and attendance of large London ships. We are led by the passengers, also in general terms, to infer that there were not wholesome provisions on board; from the lists before us it is clear, that a very large supply, in our opinion, an unnecessarily large supply of caddy stores of every description, pickles, sauces, jams, jellies, preserves, cheese, spices, preserved meats, &c., was laid in for the voyage, and we have a certificate from Messrs. T. Payne and Co. who supplied the greatest portion, and whose respectability is a guarantee of the goodness of their supplies, that every article were good. They challenge proof of any inferiority; besides, no part of these provisions were condemned at Madras.

WATER.—An extraordinary supply was provided, but in a ship containing so many persons and animals, we concur in the propriety of Captain Driver serving it out upon allowance.

It unfortunately appears by all accounts, that the ship was greatly crowded and lumbered, and, we fear, that in every ship proceeding to these colonies, this will prove a source of discontent: to this discontent the discomforts of the commencement of a sea voyage, and the ill-health of some of the passengers, we attribute these complaints, though the crowding of the ship was entirely their own act, in bringing an enormous quantity of baggage in excess of their engagements, without notice, and for which, consequently, there was no space reserved: had this extra baggage been refused, greater dissatisfaction would have been created. In fact, the committee offered to re-land the excess, but no notice was taken of this proposition, and, we understood, that when the ship was unmooring, a passenger brought a quantity of personal baggage in addition to what he had in his cabin, and in the hold of the ship; as there was no room the officer refused to take it on board. A very unpleasant scene ensued, and the consequence was, that the baggage was taken on board to the still greater inconvenience of the passengers. On this point, Captain Driver writes to his owners, "the crowded state of the ship has arisen from the quantity of baggage brought by the passengers, and, in fairness, Mr. Gardiner ought not to have been blamed." A quantity of freight was for the Swan, and, when landed, no doubt the ship would prove comfortable.

CATTLE AND DOGS.—The dogs belonged to a passenger who signed the letter to Captain Driver, and he might have abated the nuisance had he been so disposed. The horses were also the property of the passengers with two exceptions.

FITTINGS OF THE SHIP.—Doubtless some inconvenience was occasioned by the hurry in which things were obliged to be done; and, considering the great exertions of all concerned in despatching the ship, we should have been disposed to overlook all trifling inconveniences.

Upon the whole, therefore, we are of opinion, that the greater part of the complaints of the passengers are either unfounded, exaggerated, or referable to their own acts; and that they were not advanced in a fair and candid spirit, for no allusion is made to the public tidfin at which the only two wines we consider inferior (claret and port) were submitted to them, and it is unfortunate that they made so bad a situation for themselves. Capt. Driver states, "the passengers find fault with every thing, still I am determined to keep my temper." Besides keeping his temper, we think he might have made greater exertions, as the provisions and water were consumed, to remove and stow away such articles as occasioned inconvenience, and, certainly, he ought not to have left Madras without writing to the Association more particularly with a knowledge of these complaints; besides, he is clearly to blame, having good flour and good tea, that the passengers were not supplied with fresh bread and good tea, as they state.

EXCHANGE ROOMS.

MAY 22, 1838.

At a meeting of the subscribers to the proposed Bank of India, Mr. J. Allan in the chair. Mr. Bracken, in behalf of the present committee, made the following report:

I beg to state, on behalf of the provisional committee of the proposed Bank of India, that one of their object in requesting the attendance of the subscribers, is to tender the resignation of their functions in that capacity.

In the infancy of undertakings of this character, it is absolutely necessary that somebody or other should put themselves forward; and, so far they subject themselves to the charge of self-appointment. We are fully sensible of the inconveniences of any such mode of election; and, as the number of shareholders is now sufficiently large, in our opinion, to enable them to undertake the selection of their representatives, we now propose to place our temporary honours at their disposal. I am authorised, however, to state, that we shall not have any objection to continue our services, in co-operation with other gentlemen, to be named by the meeting, if it should be pleased to consider them at all useful.

The progress made in establishing the Bank, in the face of an exceedingly powerful opposition, may be held as favourable. There are already 189 applicants for shares, amounting in the aggregate to 1,476. These are entered in the list on the table; but I understand that, in addition, there are conditional orders in Calcutta for 3 or 400 shares, which, I presume, will now be executed. The prospectus provides for the commencement of business on 4,000 shares being taken; and I am individually disposed to adhere to that provision; but it is proper to mention that some opinions are favourable to the opening of the Bank, so soon as 3,000 shares are registered. Another point to be considered, and it may be advisable to instruct the committee now to be appointed to furnish a report thereon, is the limitation of time, which applicants in Great Britain should be restricted to, in taking up shares at par. Perhaps six months from a given date, say the 1st of August next, would not be an unreasonable period. It is obvious, that such applicants would come into the Bank relatively on better terms than India subscribers, the working of whose capital had brought the value of its stock to a premium, unless some rule of this kind be made.

I may add that our subscription list embraces all classes in this country. Gentlemen in the civil, military, and medical service; merchants, planters, barristers, solicitors, independent capitalists, who have retired from business, and gentlemen employed in the treasury and other public offices in Calcutta.

1.—Proposed by Mr. Boyle, seconded by Mr. Stocqueler, that the late provisional committee be requested to continue their services.

2.—Proposed by Mr. Syers, seconded by Mr. D. Ross, that the following be added to the committee:

Messrs. J. Boyle, W. Gibbon, Robert Paton, Hurryhur Dutt, W. Oxborough, Anthony DeSouza, I. F. Leith, and W. Patrick.

3.—Proposed by Mr. Bracken, seconded by Mr. D. Ross.

That Mr. Boyle be honorary secretary, with instructions to arrange the preparation of a deed on a sufficient number of shares being subscribed; and to call a meeting of the subscribers for the purpose, fixing a day for opening the Bank, electing officers, &c.

LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the committee, held at the Society's office, No. 3, Clive-street ghaut, on Monday, the 21st instant.

PRESENT

Baboo Prosonnocomar Tagore, Ramcomul Sen, and Sumbho Chunder Mittra; Moonshree Mahomed Ameer; W. C. Hurry, Esq; Captain G. Vint, and W. Storm, Esq.; committee.

Baboo Chudder Caunt Chowdhry, of Burshay, member. James Colquhoun, Esq., proposed at the last meeting, to be a member of the Society, was unanimously elected. The following gentlemen were proposed as members of the Society:

Proposed by Baboo Ramcomul Sen, and seconded by Baboo Prosonnocomar Tagore; G. T. F. Speed, Esq.

Proposed by W. C. Hurry, Esq., and seconded by Baboo Ramcomul Sen; W. Carr, Esq.

Proposed by Baboo Prosonnocomar Tagore, and seconded by Baboo Ramcomul Sen; Henry Roe, Esq., of Tipperah.

Proposed by Captain G. Vint, and seconded by Baboo Ramcomul Sen; Henry John Leighton, Esq., and Colvin Campbell, Esq.

Read a letter from the Government of Bengal, replying to the Society's application, dated 26th ultimo, asking a copy of the proposed resumption regulation, which is, that 'the printed draft above alluded, has been forwarded by this Government to the Government of India, and is understood to be now before the Legislative Council. As the letter does not mention whether the Government means to furnish the Society with a copy of the proposed regulation required, it is resolved, therefore, that another application be made to Mr. F. J. Halliday, the secretary, to that effect.

Read a letter from Mr. J. S. Judge, offering his services to take charge of the memorials of the Society to the home authorities.

It is resolved, that thanks be given to Mr. Judge, for his offer of services, and that he be informed at the same time, that the Society has no memorials in preparation at present.

Read a paper of grievances from Baboo Mothoornauth Mullick. Ordered it to be sent to a sub-committee for consideration, of which the following gentlemen were appointed members, and requested to furnish a report as early as possible: Captain G. Vint, W. Storm, Esq., and Baboo Ramcomul Sen.

Messrs. George Prinsep, Moonshree Mahomed Ameer, and Suttichurn Ghosal were appointed a committee, to prepare a draft letter to Government, to accompany the resumption petition.

Co.'s Re- 103,502 5 10

The general meeting of January, having recognised the expediency of using pillars of masonry, and wooden beams, for the first range of godowns, as it was of paramount importance to lose no more time in its construction, we sought competition, by publicly inviting tenders for the supply of equal beams and rafters, and of teak planks; and we succeeded in arranging for the former at Co.'s Re- 48,218, including expense of painting and putting up; and for the latter at Co.'s Re- 61,961: and allowing further Co.'s Re- 21,039 for placing and fixing the floors, the result, more especially as regards the latter, will be a very decided reduction of the amount inserted in the estimate, which was placed before you in January. As to the masonry, you were then informed, that Messrs. Burn and Co. had undertaken to execute the whole of it at the Honorable Company's rate of remuneration, Co.'s Re- 16 per 1,000 cubic feet. With advice which we deem to be the very best within our reach, we have sanctioned the use of iron tie-bars and plates longitudinally, for strengthening the arches of the two rows of pillars, and of transverse iron tie-bars, with-cast iron boxes and plates, for every alternate pier, to maintain the position and solidity of the walls. We could indeed wish that the erection of these godowns were more forward. The oppressive heat of the weather lately, and the prevalence of sickness have been adverse to celebrity of work; but as the rainy season is at hand, it will behove us to urge the contractor to the employment of adequate means to insure as rapid progress as may be consistent with safety; for, not only is that the most favourable season for masonry, but we are given to understand that, with even extraordinary exertion, the range cannot be finished before March; and we are sensible that every month's delay in its completion, may make a difference to you of many thousand rupees.

Of the iron work originally intended for this range, but which it was judged advisable to set apart for the second range, we are now enabled to place before you full, and we trust satisfactory information. Mr. T. Anderson, one of the three gentlemen whom we addressed, transmits, under date 14th February, copy of a correspondence, which you will find exhibits a narrative of the progress of the iron indent; and he communicates its position then, furnishing a copy of the plan and specification, by Mr. George Stephenson, a distinguished engineer in England. For details, we refer you to the correspondence. Let it suffice here to state, that your agents, deferring to the opinion of high authorities, whose science and experience were entitled to every respect, judged it proper to depart from the plans transmitted hence. A different pillar and beam have been adopted, although they confined their deviation from the original plan within the necessity of the case.

Having agreed on advice which pronounced such composition to be indispensable, to use a mixture of Scotch, Welsh, and Shropshire iron, the cost will be enhanced from £2 to £3 per ton, more than of Scotch or Welsh iron alone, run from the ore, had been employed.

Mr. Stephenson proposed that 200 tons were to be delivered in March, and the whole to be delivered in Liverpool by the 30th June. He, or his assistant, was to be at liberty to inspect the work at all times; and every test was to be in the presence of one or other. As Mr. Anderson had, by the middle of February, received only some of the tenders, expecting the remainder in the course of a few days, it is to be assumed that the completion of the work will be later than the date indicated by Mr. Stephenson.

It was computed that the whole iron-work would weigh 900 tons. Mr. Anderson, in letter of 18th January, says, the price would be from £8 to £10; and, in that of 14th February, that the mixture of the three qualities of iron would cost from £2 to £3 extra: so that we may assume the cost, on delivery at Liverpool, will be £11,000. On this account a remittance of £6,000 had been placed in the Liverpool Bank, bearing 3 per cent. interest. We recently wrote to Mr. Anderson, that, an instalment of subscription being required to be paid upon 21st proximo, we would, by the first overland mail after that date, make a further remittance to him of £2,000 or £3,000.

We may dismiss this part of our report by observing, (and we do so advisedly) that we deem your agents (for, although Mr. Anderson writes in his single name, he has been acting in constant communication with his associates, Mr. Arbuthnot and Speir) have throughout proceeded very judiciously, interrogating in the outset various practical and scientific authorities; appealing to experience in different fields; adopting the alterations which such circumpect examination demanded; and, in the sequel, yielding to no private influence, acknowledging no partiality, but securing to you the cheapest terms; by throwing the contract open to public competition:—and we cannot doubt that you will feel every satisfaction that those agents have thought proper, in the execution of their task, to resort to the guidance of a distinguished engineer. “Mr. George Stephenson” remarks, one eminent in science and practice in India, “is a first rate engineer: in his hands you are perfectly safe.”

In the course of our statement, we come now to direct your attention to the progress of warehousing operations, in the temporary and inferior accommodation it has been in our power to provide. The rent (we speak of its monthly product) at the period of the last meeting, had reached about 1,400 rupees; afterwards it quickly increased to about 2,000 rupees: it then fell back to 1,400 rupees; but soon began to rise, reaching now not less than 2,500 rupees, and likely to be 3,000 rupees by the end of the present month, altogether manifesting a progressive increase, the more satisfactory, as it has prevailed over no inconsiderable withdrawal of merchandize for despatch into the interior, and for re-exportation, thereby shewing that the augmentation of your warehousing business, is by no means to be ascribed to any peculiar and temporary predicament of the market. The exigencies of the bonding trade even now compel us immediately to look out for more room. The range of dilapidated godowns on the north portion of these premises, may, it is expected, for a moderate sum, be put into such repair, as will serve, at least part of it, for the temporary reception of merchandize. We lately requested the Marine Board to allow us to occupy those godowns, for whatever rent may be proper in reference to their present condition, until the period arrives for paying to Government to the remaining part of the purchase-money: and the Board has in the most handsome and friendly manner accorded to our request. Additional and good accommodation being instantly required, we are in treaty for a fine and spacious godown in the immediate vicinage. We may shortly observe, that business seems now to be in the course of rapid extension; that, when the channels of periodical communication are opened with the interior, we reckon on an extensive removal of wares; but, on the other hand, we know that, with the arrival of the cold weather, there will be a considerable influx of trade into the warehouse. The issue, we anticipate, will permit a dividend to be paid early in the ensuing year, even before your warehouse is erected, from operations, necessarily circumscribed, in the temporary, insufficient, and inferior godowns now occupied.

It is perhaps superfluous to state to you, that such incipient thriving of the undertaking, with the very limited and discouraging means at our command, although beyond all question it augurs well, yet can be received as no just criterion, whereby to measure the magnitude of the trade that will flow into the warehouse when constructed or to appreciate the probabilities of the ultimate development and prosperity of the whole scheme.

It is not for us, in making our report to indulge in the expression of sanguine anticipations, which might unconsciously be charged with some exaggeration; but this we are free to affirm, that, when the warehouse is completed, if it be so well occupied with trade, and the whole of such experience as we have yet been permitted to have, testifies emphatically that it will be so occupied, then it follows incontrovertibly, that the undertaking will yield you regular and ample returns.

ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

A meeting of subscribers, called by the managers of the above charitable institution, was held at the Town-hall, on Thursday evening last. Baboo Joychunder Bose was called to the chair; he addressed the meeting in a very eloquent speech, stating the object they had assembled for, namely, an inquiry into the conduct of their secretary, against whom the managers had cause to entertain suspicion of improper practices, such as would prove ruinous to the institution. Several charges were laid against him, but, as none of them were backed by sufficient proof to satisfy the meeting of their existence, it is but justice to the accused to withhold them from the public for the present. It was then resolved, that eight gentlemen be elected from amongst the subscribers to make a strict and impartial inquiry into the affair. Nineteen gentlemen were then named, out of whom, it was resolved, that David Hare, Esq., be requested to selected the required number, “eight.” The committee, are at the close of the investigation of the charges, to lay their report, before a general meeting to be called for that purpose.

Several gentlemen spoke on the occasion, to the same effect as the chairman, to whom a vote of thanks was given for his able conduct in the chair.

The meeting broke up at a rather late hour.

We, as impartial reporters, cannot conclude this without remarking, that some young Hindoo gentlemen who spoke, were a little too free in their use of calumnious expressions to the accused, which could not be decorous under any circumstances, much less at a public meeting. Nor can we pass over unnoticed, the want of order which now and then prevailed. Our object is not to discourage these youths, but to give them salutary advice, that they may behave with more propriety in future.—Hurkaru, May 26.

SUPREME COURT.

APRIL 18, 1838.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and a Petit Jury.)

Sheikh Abdollah was tried for stealing from the office of Messrs. Cockerell and Co., some indigo, on the 16th of March, 1838.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

J. M. Dove, Esq., deposed, that the prisoner was a furash, in Messrs. Cockerell and Co.'s office, but had no access to the indigo godowns; but there was at that time some indigo in the compound, in some chests, to which the prisoner had access.

Here Mr. McCann produced the indigo, and Mr. Dove recognized it to be the indigo stolen from Messrs.

C C

Cockerell's house, marked D. D., C. C. for Coliah factory, where this indigo has been manufactured; and D. D. from David Dombal, the proprietor of that factory. All his indigo is invariably consigned to Messrs. Cockerell and Co. for sale; and one of the cakes is a part of the indigo which was submitted to them from a house in Java for sale. The raw silk and wax candles, deponent could not recognize; but added, that the prisoner had charge of wax candles in the office.

Chain Sing, durwan of Messrs. Cockerell and Co., deposed to his having searched the prisoner at 9 o'clock p. m., when he was leaving Messrs. Cockerell and Co.'s office, and found on him some wax candles and three cakes of indigo, and then detained him in the office; and the prisoner, at 6 o'clock next morning, confessed that he had concealed some cakes of indigo in Neeloo Baboo's desk, and Kunniah Sing peon went with the prisoner to this desk and brought the indigo, and then deponent took the prisoner and the indigo to Mr. Dove, who ordered them to be taken to the police office.

Kunniah Sing confirmed this witness's testimony, as to the prisoner pointing out the stolen indigo concealed by him in Neeloo Baboo's desk.

Bhoorousee Ram, naib of the police thana, deposed to his having, by Mr. McCann's order, searched the prisoner's house, and found there some indigo, raw silk, seventeen wax candles, some nails, two pairs of gloves, &c. in a wicker basket in the prisoner's presence.

Prisoner made no defence.

The judge then summed up the case, which he said is larceny, and detailed the evidence and the law in the case.

The jury, without retiring, found the prisoner guilty.

The judge then sentenced the prisoner to two years' imprisonment in the house of correction, with hard labour.

Nowcowrie coolee was tried for stealing a box, containing various articles, the property of Ajim, on the 10th of April, from his house in Mulungah.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Ajim deposed, that the prisoner put up in his house for four days. Two other persons live in his hut. Deponent had a trunk in his hut, which he rented from Ameerun, his landlady, who lived in another hut. This box contained articles, which partly belonged to him and partly to his landlady, who had then kept these ever since her house was burnt. Some of the other articles in the box belonged to the other two men who lived with him. As the prisoner had no work, the other persons who lived in the hut when they went to work, desired him to look after their property. One day on their return from their work, they missed both the prisoner and the box, and after having searched for him some days, deponent found him in Colingah, with one of the stolen dhooties on his body, and asked him what he had done with his trunk, when he denied all knowledge of it. Deponent then asked how came he to have his dhooter on him, and made him over to the Colingah thana peon. He next day he saw the box at the police office, where he found all the stolen property except the money and one dhootee.

Rahimbux, the naib of Colingah thana, produced the box, which he found in the house of a woman named Chundermony, where the prisoner lived after he had absconded with the complainant's box from Mulungah.

The witness Chundermony, confirmed the deponent's depositions, and the prosecutrix Ameerun, the landlady, and the two persons who lived with the prosecutrix, identified the stolen property to be their property, and confirmed the statements already made in this case.

The prisoner merely said, that the box was not found in his house, but in that of Chundermony at Colingah, whereas he lived at the Chandney Choke. He had no witnesses.

The learned judge summed up the case, and the jury, without retiring returned a verdict of guilty.

The learned judge then sentenced the prisoner to two years' imprisonment in the house of correction, with hard labour.

George Lloyd and George Morgan, were tried for having, on the night of the 14th of March, 1838, stolen a musical snuff box, from the person of William Tiffin, in the Seebtollah lane, by force and violence.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

William Tiffin deposed, that he is a pilot, and lives at Seebtollah lane. On Wednesday evening, the 14th March 1838, he went with Mr. Hatton, the gun-maker, to Mr. Williams's, at Gree Baboo's lane, and from thence he accompanied Mr. Hatton to his house at Cossitollah, where he took a glass of grog and left him at 12 o'clock at night. On passing Cook's livery stables, he met a country-born young man, who was accompanied by two Europeans, and who addressed him and said "how do you do Tiffin? Are you coming on board ship?" Deponent replied, "very well—no," and then walked on without taking further notice of them. When deponent arrived at the Chandney Choke, he saw an European standing at a liquor shop, and an African at a sweetmeat shop. The African addressed deponent and said, "well, friend, are you not gone home yet?" Deponent replied "no," and walked on. It was a moonlight night at the time when deponent arrived at the door of the house, these two persons who had followed him all the way from the Chandney Choke, rushed on him and knocked him down by tripping his heels. The European throttled him and held him down, and the other rifled deponent's pocket and took out his musical snuff-box from it. Mrs. Tiffin, hearing the scuffle opened the blinds of the window and called out and said "Tiffin Tiffin, what is the matter?" Deponent, because he was throttled, could give no reply. Mrs. Tippin then came down, and when the prisoners saw her coming with the servants to deponent's assistance, they left him and ran away. Deponent then got up and followed them and called out to the chokeydars to stop the thieves. He pursued them as far as the thana, and there he abused the thana people for having let the thieves follow and rob him, and then escape. They replied, that they did not know that those men were robbers, until deponent had informed them that they were so, consequently, they could not arrest them. Deponent, because his eyes were blinded by the tightness with which his throat was squeezed, could not recognize the persons who had robbed him again if he were to see them.

Rosa DeSilva, who lives with Mr. Tippin, corroborated his testimony as far as it related to her.

Buddeat Pummah, peon of Seebtollah thana, deposed, that he knows both the prisoners, who live within the beat of that thana, and that he had seen them pass his stand at 1 o'clock A.M., dressed as Mr. Tippin had described them to be, and shortly after they had passed him, Mr. Tippin came and complained of his having been robbed of a musical snuff-box by them.

Islamut, peon of Seebtollah thana, confirmed the last witness's statement.

Boran, peon of Seebtollah thana, deposed to his having seen the prisoners following Mr. Tippin down the street, at the time this robbery is stated to have occurred.

Mary Anne Rawlins deposed, that in March last, she lived in Dhobyparrah lane. Deponent knows the prisoner Morgan; he came on the 10th of March last to deponent's house, with a musical snuff-box for sale, and asked 20 rupees for it, and at deponent's request he left it with her to have it valued, and about 10 minutes after this he returned and took the box away. At candlelight he, during deponent's absence, came with an European to her house, and when deponent, on her return, saw them enjoying themselves with a glass of beer, having brought two rupees of it, deponent asked them why they came there. They said to speak to deponent. Soon after this, they began to quarrel about 20 rupees, which the European taxed the African of having stolen from him, and the African called the European a liar. The European then gave the African a slap in the face, and the African then beat him severely with a chair. The European then went and brought a police constable and had the African taken into custody. The African when taken to the police office, left the musical box on her table, and when Mr. McMahon heard of this box, he desired deponent to bring it to the police, and consequently returned to her house, and gave it to the charge of constable Ware. That European is not the prisoner at the Bar. Deponent is a married woman, and keeps a public house. When deponent first saw the musical snuff-box on that night, the prisoner Morgan was making it play and showing it to the European. Deponent cannot say who brought it on that occasion, but it was the same box which the prisoner Morgan had brought to her for sale at 5 o'clock P.M. of that day.

The deponent's durwan and khidmutgar confirmed his testimony.

John Weir, constable of the Colingah division, deposed, that he heard from a chokeydar of the riot in Anne Rawlins's house, and when he arrived there, he saw a buggy with two gentlemen in it, assisting a person named Sheriff, the boatswain of a ship, who said that Morgan had assaulted him and broken his head, and robbed him of seven rupees eight annas. Morgan said that Sheriff had first struck him. Deponent then took Morgan into custody, and as Mrs. Rawlins was accused before the magistrate of assisting in the assault, Mr. McMahon then sent for Mrs. Rawlins, who informed him of Morgan's having left a musical snuff-box there; and as another caffree named Alexander was in custody, for having stolen a musical snuff-box, deponent informed the magistrate of this circumstance, and he desired him to bring the box which he did from Mrs. Rawlins. Deponent did, on arresting the prisoner, say, that he was the greatest blackguard in Calcutta; this, he did, because he has heard repeated complaints against him, and has seen him repeatedly at the police-office in custody.

Here this deponent produced the box, which Mr. Tippin recognized to be his property, and knew it because it has "Boston State House" written on, and is slightly inside, and deponent has the key with him which fits it. He fitted it and treated the Court with a tune.

Lloyd in his defence said, that on the night on which the case is stated to have occurred, he was in bed at 10 o'clock, and never quitted it till next morning, and he left them to judge whether he is a thin dark man six feet high and of a dark complexion, as the prosecutor has stated the man who robbed him was.

Morgan, in his defence, admitted that he had been rambling in the quarter where the robbery was stated to have been occurred, but he never saw the prosecutor that night, and he is a perfect stranger to him. The rest of his defence related to his transaction at Mrs. Rawlins' house, in which he attempted to show, that the conduct of Mrs. Rawlins was malicious against him.

Lloyd called two female witnesses, one of whom was his mistress's mother, who swore that on the night in which the robbery is stated to have occurred, Lloyd came home at gunfire, and went to bed at 10 o'clock P.M., and he did not go out again that night, as one of them, who is his mistress, slept in the same room with him, and bolted the door from inside. It appears that these women, when this prisoner was tried for robbing one Baker, were brought forward and deposed to an alibi in that case likewise.

Here the learned judge summed up the case, and detailed the particulars of it, commenting on and explained the evidence both for and against the prosecution. The jury could not agree and were locked up all night.

APRIL 19, 1838.

In the case Queen versus George Lloyd and George Morgan, for robbing W. Tippin, of a musical snuff box, the verdict was this morning given at the opening of the Court, of guilty against both the prisoners.

Just before the adjournment of the Court, at about five o'clock P.M., the judges ordered Lloyd and Morgan, to be brought up to receive their sentence. The judge, in commenting on their case, said, that this was not the first time they had appeared at this bar, and he blamed Lloyd in particular, for having suborned false witnesses to prove an alibi. He added that he was fully convinced that they had committed this crime. In conclusion, he said, that he could sentence them capitally or even to transportation for life, if he chose to do so, for this offence; but he would deal milder with them. He then sentenced George Lloyd to seven years' transportation to Van Diemen's Land, and George Morgan to seven years' transportation to the S. E. coast of Maitaban.

The prisoner Morgan, whose demeanour had all along been very contemptuous, on quitting the Court thanked his lordship.—Hurkaru, April 20.

APRIL 18, 1838.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and a Petit Jury.)

Henry Lemesle was tried for robbing from the person of Edward William Bowbear, one silver watch and two silver watch keys, on the 22d March, in Jaun Bazar road.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Edward William Bowbear stated, that he is an assistant in the Sudder Board of Revenue. Deponent lived at Warman's shop. On the night of the 22d March, deponent left the shop at half past 10 o'clock, in company with Jones, to go home, and the night was a dark one. When deponent arrived at the Jaun Bazar road he met the prisoner, who was a perfect stranger to him. After Captain and Mr. Jones had passed prisoner, Mr. Jones went to a neighbouring grain dealer's shop to light a segar, and deponent stood at the cross road waiting his return. Whilst thus standing, the prisoner came behind him, seized the ribbon of his watch, and jerked it out of his sob. Deponent then pursued prisoner who ran down the Jaun Bazar road, eastward, calling out stop thief. After deponent had pursued him about a quarter of a mile, a chokaydar came up and arrested the prisoner with the watch in his possession, and took the prisoner to the thana, from whence he was sent off to the police office. During the pursuit deponent never lost sight of the prisoner. Jones came up after this prisoner was in custody. The watch is a silver McCabe's watch, and had two keys attached to it. Prisoner when arrested, said the deponent had put the watch into his hands and had desired him to take him to the Cooly Bazar.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep. The deponent had been drinking; every one who is gentleman drinks a little. Deponent was there about three hours eating and drinking, but they were not flushed, and proceeded home from Warman's directly. Jones knew the prisoner when he was a boy—he is not a boy now. It was about 11 o'clock p. m. when this occurred.

Alfred Robert Jones, deposed, that he is a section writer in the Sudder Board of Revenue. Deponent knows Bowbear, the last witness, and went to dine with him on the 22d March, at Mr. Warman's. The rest of the witness's evidence was a direct confirmation of the testimony of Mr. Bowbear. In the latter part, as to the conversation between the prisoner and the chokaydar, the prisoner declared, that because he would not go with these two witnesses to the Cooly Bazar, they beat him and he ran away, and he said that the watch was his property.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep. Deponent told Bowbear, that the prisoner is living in Dobeyparra Lane, where deponent resides. Deponent has been living in the same neighbourhood for 11 years, but was not on visiting terms with him. Deponent has heard that the prisoner is the son of a steward of a Governor-General. Does not know whether his father died worth property. Deponent quitted his school rather precipitately for good reasons; there were some suspicions against him. Deponent had gone that day to the Botanical Gardens, taking the requisites of nature with him, but there not being sufficient, he went consequently to Warman's, and took an additional supply, and then, after a walk, they returned and took a cool bottle of champagne and another of claret; yet they were neither of them flushed. Deponent previous to being employed at the Sudder Revenue Board, was at Carr and Tagore's and was discharged for absenting himself; he is not aware of any other motive. He was likewise employed by Mr. Frederick, and was discharged for having appropriated some of the articles in the shop, which were entrusted to his charge, to his own use. It is a very natural thing for a person out of employ to take from another.

Buxoo, chokaydar of Toltullah thana, deposed to his having seen the prosecutor pursuing the prisoner, and calling out to stop the prisoner who had stolen his watch, and that he had arrested the prisoner.

Cross-examined. The prosecutor and his companions were not intoxicated, but their mouths smelt of liquor, as gentleman's mouths usually do at nights.

Owing to some neglect on the part of the police authorities, the nab, who had taken the prisoner and the watch to the police office, was not in attendance.

Mr. McCann produced the watch, and deponent identified it to be his by the No. (1837.)

Prisoner said that he was acquainted with Jones, and on the night this robbery is stated to have occurred he met Jones and Bowbear. The former asked him to treat him to a glass of grog, and when he refused, because the shops were shut, he beat him and wanted him to get the shop opened, as Muddo Soodun Ghose and Guffor Khan, who passed them at the time, can testify. The rest of his defence was that he was a person above want and this was a conspiracy, and he impugned the character of Jones.

Muddo Soodun and Guffor both corroborated the prisoner's statement regarding what passed between him and the prisoner, and said that all the parties were partially intoxicated at the time they saw them together, on the night of the 22d March last, in Jaun Bazar road. Doorga Sing, nab of the Toltullah thana, was then called, but his evidence elicited nothing beyond what had already been deposed.

John Brown Ward, a clerk in the commercial accountant's office, deposed, that he had known the prisoner for a long time, and gave him a good character for honesty. So did Mr. John Lucas and J. Minos; and they said that prisoner's family had money and honour, and were in affluent circumstances.

This closed the case for the defence.

The learned judge then summed up the case, detailing the evidence and commenting on it, and explaining the law on the case.

The jury, after a short retirement, brought in a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was ordered to be discharged.

THURSDAY, 19TH APRIL 1838.

Dabee Sing and Dookul Sing, were tried for having, on the night of the 16th April, robbed Golah Sing, a durwan in the employ of Baboo Rustomjee, of a trunk containing several articles of wearing apparel, 200 rupees in cash, and other articles.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

The articles were produced in Court by Mr. McCann, and the prosecutor recognized them to be a portion of the property stolen from his room.

The case for the prosecution is as follows.

The prosecutor and the two prisoners were all durwans in the employ of Baboo Rustomjee, at his garden house, and lived in one room. The prosecutor had been in the habit of absenting himself repeatedly from his duty. On the night on which this theft is stated to have occurred, the prosecutor's trunk was stolen from his room, and the prisoner, on his return early next morning, discovered his loss, and found the trunk in the Baboo's garden, rifled of its contents. He taxed the two prisoners with the theft, and desired them, if they had, as a matter of joke, removed his goods, to restore them to him. They denied that they were guilty of the crime laid to their charge. The prosecutor then informed his master of this theft, who likewise questioned the prisoners, and before him they persisted in their denial of the crime. The Baboo then desired one of his servants to bring a person who could perform the ordeal of making the suspected persons eat parched rice, the next day. When the prisoners heard of this, they came at midnight and confessed to the prosecutor that they had robbed him, and entreated him not to expose them publicly by making them undergo the threatened ordeal, and to forgive them, and they would restore him his property. The prosecutor replied, that if they would restore him all his property he would overlook their offence. They then restored him all with the exception of 40 rupees, which they both denied that they had stolen. This denial enraged the prosecutor, and he, next day, informed Baboo Rustumjee of what had occurred, who sent for a chokyard and forwarded in his custody the two prisoners, the trunk and the stolen property recovered to the police magistrate, who committed the two prisoners, and sent the case up for trial during the present session.

The prisoners, in their defence, said, that the prosecutor had been leagued with a gang of conners, and had repeatedly passed counterfeit coin in the Bazar. They advised him to desist from such a nefarious practice, and, as he would not attend to their remonstrances, they went and complained against him to Mr. McCann, at the police office, and had seven of his colleagues in this mal practice arrested. The prosecutor was then absent from the house of his employer, and could not be pointed out to the police functionaries, who apprehended his abettors. They were the witnesses in that case, and five of the men who were arrested on that occasion were convicted and sentenced to the house of correction; and although Ram Deen, the police naib, who had arrested these seven persons, had subsequently repeatedly seen Golab Sing; he never arrested him for the offence of which they had accused him. The prisoners, on that occasion received a reward from the police office, for having had these five persons convicted, and the prosecutor demanded a share of this booty, which they refused to give him; he consequently vowed vengeance against them, and shortly after had them confined on the present indictment. They admitted that they had concealed the trunk and its contents to punish and expose the prosecutor, and to show that if he could not guard his own property, much less was he fitted to guard the property of his employer: and after they had extorted a promise from him that he would not, in future, neglect his duty, they delivered up his trunk and its contents to him, which they had concealed in Baboo Rustumjee's molly's hut. In conclusion, they observed, that if they were inclined to rob, they, instead of robbing the complainant of his paltry effects, would have robbed their master of a considerable sum and absconded to their native country, where they would have lived all their lives comfortably on their booty. They said that this was a malicious conspiracy against them, hatched by the prosecutor, for having preferred the charge above stated at the police office against him, and not given him a portion of the sum given them for bringing the smuggling transaction to the knowledge of the police office.

They called Mr. McCann and Ramdeen, who corroborated their assertions as to the passing of the counterfeit coin by the prosecutor, and they having brought this to the notice of the police magistrate, and got five men convicted and punished; and that, because they had refused to give the prosecutor any portion of the money given them by the police office, the prosecutor had threatened them a month previous to his instituting this complaint against them. Mr. McCann gave Dabee Sing a very good character for honesty, and said that he had formerly been a naib of a police thana, and given perfect satisfaction to his employers; and Mr. George Aviet gave dookul Sing a like good character for honesty and activity, whilst he was in his service; and a police peon proved that the prosecutor had passed some counterfeit coin on him.

This concluded their defence, and the judge then summed up the case, detailing the evidence and commenting on it. The jury convicted both the prisoners of crime for which they were tried, but, in consideration of their having formerly borne very good characters, and this being their first offence of this kind, they recommended them to the merciful consideration of the Court.

The learned judge took the recommendation into consideration, and, after the verdict had been recorded, he, under all the circumstances of the case, sentenced both the prisoners to six months' confinement in the house of correction, with hard labor.—Hurkaru, April 20.

ADJOURNED INQUIRY OF LUNACY,

APRIL 19, 1838.

(Before Messrs. Marnell and Leith, Barristers.)

IN THE MATTER OF JOYKISSEN, A LUNATIC.

The jury in this case gave in their verdict at about 9 o'clock, p. m., after having demanded and received their fees for their attendance. The verdict was, that the said Joykissen was of unsound mind, and had been so for these 12 years, and was therefore incapable of managing his own affairs, and that his lunacy had been caused by violent anger at the conduct of his brother, Radakissen, who had forcibly prevented him from accompanying his mother on a pilgrimage to Bindabun.—Hurkaru, April 21.

APRIL 20.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, and a Petit Jury.)

The judge on the opening of the Court, directed Mr. King, to have the eight prisoners against whom no true bills had been found, if there was no other charge against them, brought up and discharged. Mr. King replied, that there were no other charges against them, and that they were at the jail. The Chief Justice then ordered him to bring them up to-morrow to have them released.

Hurree, was indicted for inflicting, on the 27th of March, 1838, a severe wound on the throat of John Pereira, from the effects of which wound he died instantly, in Old Bow Bazar lane.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Lydia Francisca deposed, that she was in Mrs. Ogilvy's service as an ayah, in the month of March last. Deponent is acquainted with the prisoner and has been his mistress these last eighteen months. Previous to her entering Mrs. Ogilvy's service, they lived together in a hired hut in Old Bow Bazar lane, the property of Mrs. Rosina. Deponent had a child named John Pereira, aged seven years. His father was a Christian and had been dead some time. The general conduct of the prisoner to the child was kind. Deponent was supported by the prisoner. Deponent went to service because she and the prisoner had contracted heavy debts, and the prisoner was out of service. Deponent during the time she was in Mrs. Ogilvy's employ, left the child under the care of the prisoner and she used to visit him once a week. The prisoner was a cook by profession; and, on the morning of the night in which the child was murdered, she got him employed in Mrs. Ogilvie's service, where he worked the whole of that day. At 3 o'clock p. m., of that day, after Mrs. Ogilvie had taken her tiffin, the prisoner requested her to discharge the deponent from her service, and Mrs. Ogilvie replied that it would be better for both to continue in her service, and by earning something, pay off their debts. At 7 o'clock p. m., after Mrs. Ogilvie had dined, the prisoner came to deponent and desired her to accompany him to their house. Deponent said that if he was anxious for her to quit her employment, she would do so at the end of the month, which would expire in a few days, and then she would provide a substitute and go with him. When Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvie heard of this, they sent the sweeper to search for him; and, not finding him, they desired the gate-keeper to shut the door, and sent for the cook and asked him what he required. The cook said he wished to take away the nurse, and asked them to discharge her, and he would get them another; to which they replied that as their child was sick and had just been weaned, it would inconvenience them greatly, so that they had better stop at least the few remaining days of the month. After this the prisoner finished his work and wanted to remain all that night in Mr. Ogilvie's house, but Mr. Ogilvie would not permit him, and made him quit the premises. This he did not do until Mr. Ogilvie was obliged to send for a chokkydar and threaten to send him in custody to the thana, if he would not go. After the prisoner had quitted the house, he held a conversation with the khansama, and requested him to desire the deponent to give up his traps to him, and when the khansama delivered this message, the cook asked him to give up his umbrella to him. After the prisoner had received the umbrella from the khansama, the prisoner informed the khansama that as the nurse did not come it mattered not; for there were two lives of her's, one safe from his reach, but the other at his hut with him—that of her son John Pereira, which was in his power, and which he would finish. When deponent heard this she called out to the chokkydar and desired him to take care and detain the prisoner in custody until she could send for, and receive her child. The prisoner when he heard this, ran away, and the chokkydar pursued him. Deponent then went and informed her mistress of what had then just occurred. Mrs. Ogilvie then asked deponent whether any of her servants knew her house, and she replied the khansama did. By this time the chokkydar returned from the pursuit and Mrs. Ogilvie desired the chokkydar and the khansama to go after the prisoner and bring deponent's child to her. She did so and they returned at three o'clock a. m., and informed her of the death of her child. The day previous to this occurrence the deponent had seen the child at her house in perfect health. Her mistress would not permit her to go to the corpse that night, but she went next morning and saw it.

Nugeem Addee, peon of the Colingah thana deposed, that on the night of the 27th March last, he heard Mr. Ogilvie's gate-keeper call for a chokkydar, and when he met him he said that his master wished to speak to him; and, on his arrival, Mrs. Ogilvie informed him that the prisoner wanted to take the nurse away with him, and if she was willing to accompany him she would let her go; but if the prisoner used any violence or became riotous, to take him into custody. The cook then said that he would willingly go away peaceably; and when he quitted the premises he required the nurse to give up his articles, and she sent him his umbrella. When the prisoner received it he asked for his trunk, and the khansama who had conveyed his message replied, that the nurse had brought no trunk with her to give up. The prisoner then said, "very well, there are two lives, one here, and one at home in my charge, I will see." When the nurse heard this she desired deponent and his fellow chokkydar to arrest the prisoner; but as the night was dark he escaped. The deponent then went to his stand and his fellow chokkydar accompanied Mr. Ogilvie's khansama to bring the child to Mrs. Ogilvie's house.

Koodrutollah, Mr. Ogilvie's khansama, confirmed the testimony of the two last witnesses, as far as they had occurred under his observation; and, added, that when he arrived at prisoner's house, he asked the landlady for the child, and when she heard the message she lighted a lamp and went into the prisoner's hut, and when she entered it she exclaimed, "Ah! ah! what has been done. what has been done! A murder has been committed!—the child is killed!" And when Hurree, who was sitting in the compound with others heard this exclamation, he ran out and the chokkydar pursued and arrested him, aided by this deponent and a chokkydar of that beat. Prisoner struggled hard with them, but when he was exhausted he sat down and said, "I did this for the sake of revenge, and must die for it; it is useless my attempting to escape." By the time this nabib of Bow Bazar thana arrived and secured the prisoner; afterwards the deponent went into the prisoner's hut and saw the child lying dead on the floor with its throat cut and blood flowing from it. Deponent had never seen the child before.

The prisoner said that this deponent was the nurse's paramour, and it was on his account that she refused to accompany him home. He would swear to anything against him.

Budderddeen chokkydar confirmed the testimony of the prosecutrix. Koodrutollah added, that when they arrived at the prosecutrix's hut they demanded of Beebee Rosina the child, at 9 o'clock p. m. The landlady, after she had learnt the purport of their visit, lighted a cherag and went into the hut where the child slept that night, and on her entering the hut, she exclaimed, "Ah! ah! what has happened? What is this, come and see!—the child is murdered." Hurry was at that time sitting in the compound of the huts, which is bounded on the one side, by other huts, on another by a ch. cena, and the third by the back of the huts, and on the fourth is the entrance to them. He ran off pursued by the chokkydar, who caught him and had a severe battle with him to secure him. The chokkydar then called out to Koodrutollah for assistance, and he and a chokkydar of it beat then seized and secured prisoner. The prisoner then sat down exhausted, and confessed that he had, from motives of revenge towards the prosecutrix, killed the child, and he would suffer for it. Soon after this, the thanadar of Bow Bazar thana came, and the prisoner repeated the expressions before him. The thanadar then secured the prisoner, and saw the deceased's corpse lying on the cot with its throat cut from ear to ear and covered with blood, and found a knife which the prosecutrix subsequently recognized to be her property, lying on a table in the hut covered with blood. The prisoner was then taken into custody to the thana, where he again repeated his confession of having murdered the child. There were neither threats nor promises held out to him to induce him to make these confessions.

The thanadar of the Bow Bazar thana and Beebee Rosina confirmed these statements of these last witnesses, and the latter added, that when she saw the corpse she was so frightened that she lost her wits. She had been out the whole of that day and did not return till past 9 o'clock p. m.

Beebee Nanachee, the daughter of the landlady, deposed, that she last saw the deceased on the night on which he was murdered playing near her at 7 o'clock p. m. At about 8 o'clock p. m., he expressed a wish to retire to sleep. At about half an hour after the child had thus retired, the prisoner came and lighted a cherag and went into the hut where the child had slept, and about half an hour after that, she heard a noise at her door, and when she opened the door of her hut, she saw the prisoner in custody, who confessed the murder in her presence, and she saw the corpse.

Mr. R. H. Bain, police Surgeon, deposed, that he examined, on Wednesday the 28th March last, the corpse of the deceased, which was pointed out to him by Bebee Rosina in a hut in Bow Bazar lane. Its throat was cut from the ear to the jaw-bone, and all the jugular arteries separated. The deceased died from hemorrhage caused from the effects of the wound. An instrument like the knife produced might have inflicted such a wound.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner in his defence said, that during the time the ayah was in Mrs. Ogilvie's service, he obtained a situation as a cook to proceed to the upper provinces with a gentleman, on a salary of twenty-eight rupees a month. The gentleman resided at the Bengal Club-house. Shortly afterwards, he heard, that the ayah had returned to her house indisposed, and because she had no person to attend her during her sickness, he quitted his service, gave a substitute, and came to his residence with an intention of administering to her wants. When he arrived at his hut he ascertained that the ayah had that morning hired a palkee and gone back to her mistress's service. A few days after this, the ayah again came to her home to see her child. The prisoner then blamed her for having returned, whilst sick, precipitately to her service. The ayah made some frivolous excuse, and the matter dropped there. Subsequently, the prisoner visited her occasionally at her mistress's residence, and Mrs. Ogilvie, who had observed that he came repeatedly to see the ayah, asked who he was; and when she learnt he was the ayah's protector, and a cook out of employ, she expressed a wish to engage his services from the 1st of April 1838, in consequence of the cook who was then in her service having applied to her for leave to return to his country, and see his mother, who, he said, was seriously indisposed.

The prisoner, when this proposition was made to him, consented to it, and on the day on which this murder is alleged to have been committed by him, he worked at Mr. Ogilvie's the whole day on trial. During that day the prisoner remarked to the ayah, that if both she and he were to remain in service at Mr. Ogilvie's house, who would look after their child? and proposed to her to give a substitute and resign her service, and return home and attend on the child, adding, that he would remain, and by the savings from his wages liquidate their debts. The ayah replied that she was willing to accede to his proposal, provided her mistress consented to discharge her; and requested the prisoner to re-consider the matter, and as they were both deeply in debt, whether it would not be more judicious for them to remain in their situations until their debts were discharged; adding, that if the prisoner, at the expiration of the month, still persisted in his present request, she would then comply with it. The prisoner then, after Mrs. Ogilvie had finished her tiffin, at 3 o'clock p. m., waited on her and communicated what he has just stated in the Court, to her. Mrs. Ogilvie consequently called for the ayah and asked her if she wished to quit her service; who then retracted the promise she had previously made, and replied, that as she was in debt, she would rather stay in service and clear it. Shortly after this had occurred the prisoner overheard Mrs. Ogilvie's advice, the ayah to discard him, observing to her that as she was a Christian and had now obtained a decent service it would be disgraceful for her to remain the kept mistress of a Mug cook, who was a good-for-nothing, idle vagabond. The prisoner, consequently, after Mr. Ogilvie's return from office, waited on him at 7 o'clock p. m., and repeated his request to discharge the ayah, and he would procure them a substitute in her lieu. Mr. Ogilvie then bit his finger and remained silent for a short time; but when he had ascertained that the ayah had no desire to quit his service, he refused the prisoner's request. The prisoner then asked Mr. Ogilvie to assign a godown to him and the ayah where they could live in his house, and he would then bring his child and moveables, and live there altogether. This request enraged Mr. Ogilvie, who desired the prisoner to quit his house instantly, and never come there again; and added, that if his orders were not instantly complied with, he would send for a chokkydar and consign the prisoner to his custody. A chokkydar was accordingly sent for, and on his arrival Mr. Ogilvie told that functionary to turn the prisoner out, and if the ayah wished to accompany him she was welcome; but if she refused, and the prisoner became riotous, to take him into custody. Prisoner then quitted Mr. Ogilvie's premises, and sent word to the ayah to return to him those articles of his, which she had in her care. The khansama, who took this message to her, returned with an umbrella. This khansama has an intrigue with the ayah, and this was the motive why prisoner desired her to quit the service, and she refused. Prisoner then asked for his things, and the khansama said if he had anything it must be in his hut not here, as neither the ayah nor prisoner had brought any with them. The prisoner then quitted the place, and, in leaving it said to the ayah: "Very well, Lydia; you have obliged your new paramour, deserted me, and will not now accompany me home, as I requested you; but you will some day come to see your son, John Pereira, who lives at my house, and when you do so, I will detain you and not let you go back to Mrs. Ogilvie's house." On his way to his house the prisoner met the chokkydar and the khansama going thither likewise. They informed him that they were going to take the child to his mother. Prisoner replied, "very well, do so," and proceed in a circuitous route on some urgent business. They, it appears, arrived in his hut before him, and when he came there afterwards, they seized him, beat him, and taxed him with having murdered his child, a crime of which he is wholly innocent and unconscious, for he always had loved the child and treated it kindly as if it were his own, and regretted its untimely death. Soon after this, the thanadar came and took him aside into the hut and said to him that if he could tell him well he would hush up all further enquiry and get him released. Prisoner replied, that as he had not done anything wrong he had nothing to dread, therefore he did not know why he should give any money to the police people; if they had any offence to tax him with, let them take him to the police office at once, and have the matter investigated by a magistrate. The thanadar on this refusal desired the chokkydars to bind the prisoner, and beat him severely, which they did, as they were taking him to the thana. In conclusion, he added, that all the witnesses for the prosecution were either his enemies, or had been hired by the ayah and her paramour to swear away his life, and the affair was a malicious conspiracy concocted between the ayah and the khansama to remove him as an object who was an hindrance to their intrigue, and, consequently, obnoxious to them.

The prisoner then called five Mug cooks who resided in the huts adjoining his. These men deposed, that on hearing an uproar they got up and saw the chokkydars binding up the prisoner, and, on enquiry, learnt, that he had murdered his child, whose corpse they subsequently saw; but whether the prisoner or any other person had killed him they did not know. They added, that when the prisoner struggled hard to escape from the grasp of the chokkydars, they gave him a few blows to quiet him.

This closed the case for the defence.

The learned judge then summed up and recapitulated the evidence commenting on it, particularly on the expressions deposed by the witness to have been made use of by the prisoner at the time he quitted Mr. Ogilvie's residence to proceed to his own hut, and observed, that in some cases a strong chain of circumstantial evidence went further to clear up a case than positive testimony, which in this court has often been made up of perjured persons, adding, that the life of the prisoner depended on their verdict.

The jury, after a short retirement, found the prisoner guilty of the crime laid to his charge.

After this verdict had been recorded, the judge thus addressed the prisoner. " Horree, after a patient enquiry and consideration of your case, you have been found guilty of the crime of murder. No rational person who has heard the evidence this day, can have any doubt of your guilt. You have committed a most cruel and barbarous murder on an innocent child, and whom, it appears, you had formerly treated with kindness, and whose life you could not have destroyed from any malicious feeling to the child, but of revenge towards his mother, as your words on leaving Mr. Ogilvie's house, on that night, plainly indicate. You did it to wound the feelings of the mother. You inflicted death on a helpless child of six or seven years of age, whom any other person would have pitied. Such crimes must be punished with the utmost penalty of the law, to check their recurrence, and it only remains for me to pass the sentence of death upon you. The judge then, in the usual manner, sentenced the prisoner to be hanged at 6 o'clock A. M. on Monday (this) morning.

After this the Court adjourned till 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow morning.

All the gentlemen who were summoned on the petition during these sessions, were in attendance from the opening of the Court at 11 o'clock A. M. till it broke up at 5 o'clock P. M.

ROBBERY AT THE HOUSE OF MR. AMOS.

The chief magistrate attended at the Supreme Court as it was about to adjourn on the 20th instant, to request the chief justice to permit him to send up for trial during the present sessions, the sirdar-bearer in the employ of Mr. Amos, one of the Law Commissioners, and the fourth ordinary member of council. The bearer, it appears, had confessed that he had broken open Mr. Amos's box, and taken out of it a considerable sum of money which he had buried in the compound of Mr. Amos's house; and, on his subsequently pointing out the spot where he had concealed it to Mr. Amos, the place was dug and the money discovered in it. The application was granted by the judge.—Hurkaru, April 21.

APRIL 21, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and a Petit Jury.)

Punchanund Ghose was tried for burglariously entering the house of Ramsouder Mullick on the 31st March 1838, and stealing from thence a brass culsee, the property of the prosecutor.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Ram Govind deposed, that he is the prosecutor's son, on the night in which this robbery was committed, he had, after having locked the doors of his place of worship, taken the keys and retired to sleep. He was disturbed late at night by a noise over the roof of the room in which he slept. He awoke the durwan and went upstairs to the place of worship, and perceived the padlock lying there broken, and the doors of the place broken open; and when they entered the room, they perceived a person rush out of it, seize the top of a palm-tree which grew contiguous to the place, and drop down by it, and ran off. Deponent then called out to the chokydars to seize the prisoner, and one of them succeeded in arresting him. Prosecutor, when they saw the prisoner in custody, observed that he was smeared with mud, and had his head bruised, occasioned by his clinging to the palm tree, and passing through a drain behind the prosecutor's house. He said that he lived close by, and had come to grind corn. The next morning they found a brass water jar lying in the drain, together with a long rope at the spot where the prisoner had jumped down, and they perceived a bamboo-ladder fixed from the roof of Petumbel Mookerjee's house, which adjoins his house, to the roof of the second story of his house, on the top of which is his place of worship. As the night on which this robbery occurred was dark, this deponent did not see the features of the man who jumped from his house to the palm-tree.

Bendoo Sing confirmed the testimony of the last witness, and the thana chokydar and the nab of the thana deposed to their having arrested the prisoner, and his having confessed to them the robbery, and begged of them not to maltreat him. The latter produced the jar, and the first deponent recognized it to be his property.

The prisoner said, that whilst he was proceeding home from his master's service, he was seized by the chokydars, axed with this crime, beaten and taken to the thana in custody. Prisoner called Kasi Hozia, who said that the prisoner had been a long time in his service, and had borne a very good character. So did four other witnesses.

The judge summed up the proceedings, detailed the evidence, commented on it, and then left it to the decision of the jury.

The jury without retiring, found, the prisoner guilty.

The learned judge then sentenced the prisoner to seven years' transportation to the S. E. Coast of Martaban.

Gopeeya was tried for having, on the 17th of April last, stolen from the house of Andrew Amos, Esq., his master, Co.'s Rs. 60-8 annas and 150 Madras rupees, and 13 annas and two silk handkerchiefs.

The prisoner pleaded guilty.

Andrew Amos, Esq., then addressed the judge in mitigation of the prisoner's punishment, by saying that he was sorry to say, that there was in this case a large sum of money on the table placed before the prisoner, which might have been a temptation in his way, and which he will never place before any servant again.

Mr. Amos then deposed, that the prisoner was a bearer in his service, and had been employed in pulling the punka in his room. Deponent on the 17th instant, missed about Co.'s Rs. 60 and 150 Madras rupees. Deponent had separated the Madras and Co.'s Rs. separately, and put the Madras rupees in a kechief, tied it and locked it in a box, and put it into another room in the prisoner's presence. About two or three days after the prisoner confessed the crime and pointed out the place where the money was concealed, which was recovered. Deponent has not counted the money recovered, but he believes that all of it has been recovered, at least from its appearing to be the same amount.

The learned judge then addressed the prisoner, and after he had been cautioned and persisted in his plea of 'guilty,' sentenced him to two years' imprisonment in the house of correction.

The chief justice informed the grand jury, that in the case of a commission of lunacy regarding which the grand jury had presented a petition to him signed by the foreman of the special jury summoned on that occasion, he had directed the papers to be handed over to the chief magistrate of the police office, who, after he made the requisite inquiry, had informed the judge that he had not on an investigation of these papers, been able to find grounds to prefer any indictment against any particular person; but if the grand jury were not satisfied with the result of this investigation, they could have the papers submitted to them for perusal, and make any presentment on it that they may consider requisite in this matter.

All the persons who are empanelled during the present sessions were desired to remain in attendance during the whole time the Court sat to-day and yesterday.
—Harkaru, April 23.

APRIL 21, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan.)

Cheedam, Ramshaw and Ruggonath were tried, the former for having robbed Sheeboo Raur, his mistress, of several articles of value, and the two latter with having received the same, knowing them to be stolen property.

Cheedam pleaded guilty. The other two not guilty. Sheeboo Raur deposed, that she resides in Guranhutta. Cheedam was her domestic servant. On the 3d of April instant, she went to see the Ram Nubboomoy Poojah, leaving Cheedam in charge of the house. When she returned she discovered that Cheedam had absconded during her absence, and her trunks and boxes had all been broken open and rifled of their contents. The prosecutrix here detailed the articles which she had lost. On the evening of the 4th instant, she saw her property at the Joorah-bagan thana. Cheedam never returned to her service again.

Bessumber Seth deposed, that he is a writer in the military auditor general's office, and visits the prosecutrix at her house occasionally. On the evening of the 3d instant, he went there as usual, and learnt that her house had been robbed by Cheedam, during her absence, who had absconded; and he then despatched her servant Sadoo to search for him. Sadoo returned the next evening, and communicated to deponent something which induced him to accompany him to a house in Puthurghutta, where he saw Ramshaw and others. Sadoo informed deponent that the stolen property was concealed in that house. When the inmates of the house saw deponent, they fled. Deponent then went to the thana and returned with the jemadar. On his return, he found that Nubboo Kisto Uddee, Banian, had driven Sadoo away from the house, and locked it. At the thanadar's request he opened it, and when they had entered it, Sadoo desired Ramshaw to point out the place where the property was concealed. Hearing this, Ramshaw began to cry. The thanadar said to him, don't weep, point out the property, and you shall be released. Ramshaw then pointed to a trunk in the room, and said that the property was buried under it; but that he had not stolen it, nor was he aware of its being there until Cheedam had informed him of it. The thanadar then caused the trunk to be removed, and after they had dug a considerable depth under it, they discovered a large earthen pot in which were some clothes. Deponent then said, where is the box of jewels, and Ramshaw replied, "beside the earthen pot." It was found there. The thanadar then observed, that it would be advisable to send a person to the prosecutrix, and desire her to come and recognize her property. Deponent consequently ordered Sadoo to convey the message to her; and she came with him and identified her property, and inquired where her silver mounted hookah was. Ramshaw replied, he did not know, but perhaps Ruggonath might. The thanadar then left some chokeydars to guard and search the house, and went in search of Cheedam and Ruggonath, and deponent and the prosecutrix returned to their houses.

Sadoo deposed that he, by the order of the last witness, went in search of Cheedam, and found him at his house, in the village of Khoordah, six coss from Calcutta. He questioned him regarding this robbery, and prevailed on him to confess where he had concealed the property, and to return with him to Calcutta and point it out to him. Cheedam, on his arrival at Calcutta, put up at his cousin's house, sent for Ramshaw and desired him to go with the deponent and point out the stolen property to him. Deponent then accompanied Ramshaw to his house, and requested him to watch there a short time, till he went and informed his master of what had occurred since he had left him; and they then both came to Ramshaw's house, where the property was found. The rest of this witness's evidence was corroborative of Bishumber Seth's testimony.

Foujoddeen, thanadar of Jorabagan thana, confirmed the testimony of the two last witnesses regarding him, and added, that neither Cheedam nor Ruggonath were present when the concealed property was found in Ramshaw's house. He arrested them about two hours after this, and Ruggonath, on being questioned, pointed out the silver mounted hookah, which was concealed in some jute leaves in the adjoining room.

Nubboo Kisto Uddee deposed, that he is the proprietor of the house in which the stolen property was discovered, and has rented it to the prisoner Ruggonath, who has five under tenants. Deponent is a collecting sircar in Rajah Nubkisson's cutcherry at Nimtollah, and lives contiguous to the house in which the search was made; shortly previous to which, in returning from his employer's cutcherry, he passed it as he usually does, and finding the house empty and the doors shut, he locked it. He witnessed the search, Cheedam was present at the time, and so was Ramshaw and Ruggonath.

In this stage of the proceedings, the thanadar produced the articles found, and the prosecutrix recognized them to be her property.

Bishumber Seth recalled, deposed, that neither Cheedam nor Ruggonath were present when the search was made, and to come from the Rajah's cutcherry to Nubboo Kisto's house, there is no occasion to pass the house where the prisoners live.

Ramshaw in his defence said, that Cheedam had intimated to him where the property was concealed, and had desired him to go and point it out to Sadoo. How or whence it came there, he did not know.

Ruggonath said, that he is a potter that plies for hire, and is consequently out all day, some ill-designing person must, during his absence, have brought these articles to his hut, and concealed them there without his knowledge.

Cheedam said, that he had stolen the goods and had hired the two prisoners to take them to his hut and conceal them there, but they did not know that the property was stolen.

The learned judge summed up the proceedings, detailed the evidence and commented on it, and then left the case in the hands of the jury.

The jury, after a short retirement, brought in the prisoners guilty but, recommended them to the mercy of the Court.

After this verdict had been recorded, the judge sentenced Cheedam to seven years' transportation to the S. E. coast of Martaban, and the other two prisoners to be confined in the house of correction for 12 months each.

The grand jury returned the following bills to-day.

True bill against Mazuruddeen, for stealing from a dwelling house.

True bill against Shumshoodeen, for forgery.

No true bill against Rajkissen Mitter, for forgery.

No true bill against Russick Dutt and others, for an assault and false imprisonment.

No true bill against Abdar Syrang and others, for an assault.

The grand jury having finished all bills that were to be presented during the present sessions, informed the judge that they had perused the papers in the lunacy commission case. To them it appeared to be one of great suspicion; but as they could not make out a charge against any particular person from what they had perused, they had no presentment to make to the judge on it.

After this the grand jury was discharged.

Previous to the adjourning of the Court till Monday next, the 23d instant, at 10 o'clock P. M., the judge ordered Agapetur Dela Raize, Mariana Francisco, Augustus de Amone, Rahameo Antuneo, Clementee, and John Lawrence (the six Dutch subjects who had been tried and convicted of the crime of piracy during the third session of the year 1836, and had sentences of death recorded against them, the execution whereof was delayed pending the decision of the Queen in Council, on their case, which was referred to England for that purpose) to be this day brought up and informed them, that Her Majesty had been graciously pleased to confer her free pardon on them all, and they were discharged accordingly. At about 2 o'clock P. M., the judge empanelled a second petit jury, and then discharged the one empanelled at 11 o'clock P. M. as well as the other gentlemen who were summoned to serve on the petit jury during the present session for to-day, and informed those that had served to-day, that they need not come on Monday unless they wished it.—Harkara, April 24.

APRIL, 23, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Chief Justice, and a Petit Jury.)

Mazhurooldeen was tried for stealing, from the house of Shoucut Ally, in Shreeboe Thakoor's lane, a silver watch, shawls, and wearing apparel, to the value of Co.'s Rs- 270.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The prosecutor was called on his recognizances, and not answering they were estreated.

Panchoo kidmutgar, of Shoucut Ally, deposed, that his master is sick and not able to appear, and he knows the prisoner, who is a teacher. Emdad Ullee was in his master's service. His master was robbed on the 3d March. Looks at the goods and recognises the property produced in Court, and identifies them to be his master's.

Calachund, maker of lustrae, deposed, that the prisoner lived near his neighbourhood. He saw the prisoner go to an empty house and put a bundle of clothes in a gumloh. Tarrachand suspecting him, went and took out the goods. Prisoner said they were his. Deponent then sent for a tailor to fit on the clothes, but they were too large for him. Deponent having heard of Shoucut Ally's house, took him there. Shoucut Ally said, the goods are his; but asked where were the shawls and the watch. Prisoner then said that Emdad Ally had left them with him to pledge, and produced the watch and shawls from a drawer.

The thannadar deposed to having arrested the prisoner, and to his pointing out the stolen articles to him, prisoner said that Emdad Ally, who had returned to his country, brought them to him to be pledged for 100 rupees.

The naib and two chokeydars confirmed the last witness's testimony.

This ended the case for the prosecutors.

The prisoner in his defence said, that Meer Emdad Ally brought the shawl and watch to him and said that Meer Shoucut Ally desired him to get these articles portgaged to him and get him 100 rupees on their pledge. Prisoner at first refused, but on his representing that Meer Shoucut Ally urgently required the money, he desired him to leave it and tried to raise the 100 rupees on its pawn; but he could not prevail on any person to give him more than 50 rupees upon it, and when Emdad Ally came again to inquire of him, he informed him of it and told him, unless he could bring more articles, he could not raise the 100 rupees; and, he desired Emdad Ally, if he would not get 50 rupees on the articles now sent he had better take them away. He desired prisoner to keep them and take charge of a bundle of clothes till his return from the neighbourhood, and as he did not come soon, he tied up the articles in a bundle, and he intended to proceed, to Shoucut Ally's house, when he heard the call to evening prayers. He went to pray, and on his return he saw the bundle had been opened and the shawl taken away. He saw Calachand by the bundle, and taxed him with having concealed it, and said to him, "brother, if you have taken the shawl return it." Calachand denied that he had taken it; but when the prisoner said that unless he would produce it, he would complain against him to the thanna, he then said if he would make him a slight present he would restore them. Prisoner said he would, and Calachand despatched a person to the thanna and had prisoner arrested on this charge, which is a conspiracy.

Prisoner then called two witnesses, who deposed to Emdad Ally's having brought the articles in their presence to pledge, and gave him a general good character, and that Emdad Ally had gone to his native country.

The learned judge then summed up, detailed the evidence, and after commenting upon it, left the case in the hands of the jury.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty.

Meah Jaun was tried for stealing, from the person of Beebee Dil Jaun, two gold neck-chains, valued at 200 rupees.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Dil Jaun deposed, that she resides in Emanlaug lane, and lived there in March last. On the night of the 12th of that night, deponent sent her servant Ramzan to purchase some milk for her. Some delay having occurred in his return, prosecutrix stood at her gate waiting Ramzan's return; and, whilst thus standing she perceived four persons coming from the eastward by the light of the moon, and the prisoner who was one of them, when he came up to the prosecutrix, seized the two gold chains on her neck, and giving them a violent jerk, they broke. He then ran off with them to the westward, and prosecutrix, called out to a chokeydar to stop the thief, and one of them came to her assistance, and pursued the thief, so did the prosecutrix and her servant. The chokeydar seized the thief a little beyond the Emanbarrah, near Mangbe lane, and the prisoner threw him down. The chokeydar then called to his fellow chokeydars for help, and one of them came to his assistance and secured the prisoner, and, on searching his person, one of the chains, valued at Rs- 150 was found, but not the other. Prisoner denied all knowledge of them. The prisoner was then taken to the town-guard, and the article which was found, consigned by the order of Captain Birch to the thannadar's care. The prisoner is a perfect stranger to prosecutrix. Cross questioned, Peeroo, the naib of Shibtollah thanna, is not the prosecutrix's paramour, nor did he instigate her, from motives of jealousy to get rid of an obnoxious rival, to trump up this charge against him.

Jaffer and Mobaruk, chokeydars of the Shibtollah thanna, and Ramjaun, her servant, corroborated her statement fully. Mr. McCaun produced the chain and identified the property.

The prisoner put in a petition of defence, the purport of which was, that Peeroo, naib of Shibtollah thanna, had a quarrel with the prisoner, and threatened to be revenged on him; and as he was one night passing by Cosa-tollah street, they took him up, by the aid and counsel of the thanadar, Beebee Dil Jaun, the prosecutrix, who is Peeroo jemadar's mistress, and other myrmidons of the police. When the naib thanadar mentioned that he could not confine the prisoner on a charge of assault, prosecutrix took out a gold chain from her neck and charged prisoner with felony: they then took him to the police office, and there they took 10 rupees bribe from him.

The prisoner called nine witnesses, who deposed, some to one part and some to the other, with several discrepancies, to the following tale:

The prisoner and Peeroo jemadar had a quarrel. Peeroo threatened to be revenged on him. Dil Jaun was Peeroo's mistress. At 9 o'clock Dil Jaun accused him of having pulled her hand to one of her neighbours, and at 11 they saw him in custody. Some said that they saw the prosecutrix at the time, and she charged the prisoner with the theft: others that she was not there, and they on inquiry learnt from the passers by, that the prisoner was charged with an assault. The prisoner was beaten when taken to the thana. All of the witnesses deposed, that they were strangers to the prisoner with the exception of one, and two of them said that they knew nothing about this affair.

The learned judge then summed up the case, detailed the evidence, and commented on it, pointing out its leading features, and thus left the case to the decision of the jury.

The jury retired for about a quarter of an hour, and then brought a verdict of guilty.

After this verdict had been recorded, the prisoner was sentenced to seven years' transportation to the S.E. coast of Martaban. The judge remarked, that he had aggravated his offence by the false defence he had set up. — Hurkarn, April 25.

TUESDAY, APRIL 24, 1838.

Pierre Prospeirree Millineux, was tried for the murder of Bolaky, syce, on the Chitpoor Road, on the 4th of March, by wounding him with a knife, from the effects of which he died on the 5th of the same month.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Mahomed Thumus deposed, that he is the durwan of Agah Mahomed, near the Teretta Bazar. On the night of the 4th March last, whilst deponent was sitting at his employer's gate, two European sailors came there, and one of them attempted to enter the house, but deponent shoved him back, and they desisted, and the man who was shoved put himself in a fighting attitude, and in doing so, some cheeroots dropped from his hat. Shortly after this, in consequence of some intimation being given to the neighbouring thana, the thanadar came, accompanied by some chokeydars; and whilst deponent was putting up the cheeroots for the sailor, asked deponent if he had any complaint to prefer against the sailor. The sailor, who was a short person, seized Jumun, chokeydar's stick, and attempted to wrench it from his grasp. Jumun resisted, and whilst the sailor and Jumun were struggling for the stick, the sailor drew a clasp knife and attempted to wound Jumun with it. Seeing this, Jumun abandoned the stick and ran away. The sailor after he obtained possession of the stick ran up and down the Chitpoor road, striking the passers by, promiscuously, with it. He struck the deponent a blow with it, and attempted to wound the prisoner with the knife; but deponent ran into the house, and shut the door on him. Soon after this, deponent heard that the sailor was taken into custody near the town guard, and, whilst deponent was proceeding from his employer's house to Mr. McCann's to show him the wound of the blow of the stick, he saw the wounded man lying near the town guard. The night was a moonlight night, and deponent saw the faces of both the sailors, and as he spoke to them he could recognize them again. The prisoner was the person who acted so very outrageously in the streets. The other sailor ran off towards the town guard, but returned again soon after, and stood at Mr. Latour's gate, where he was apprehended, as deponent heard, but he was not present when he was taken up. Deponent saw the other sailor standing at Mr. Latour's gate after the prisoner had been arrested. When the prisoner and his companion came to deponent's master's gate, there were no chokeydars beating him. After deponent had closed the gate on the prisoner, he knocked two or three times at the gate and then went off. As the deponent was within the house at that time, he did not witness the subsequent transaction. Both the sailors were apparently intoxicated. Agah Mahomed only witnessed the latter part of this riot.

Agah Mahomed Baukur, deposed, that he is a merchant, and resides on the Chitpoor road. The first witness was his servant. Deponent is a native of Peperoo, and trades with the Persian Gulph. Deponent recollects the 4th March Sunday. Deponent was disturbed by a noise in the street opposite his gate, and, on enquiry, learnt that two sailors were making a riot in the street. He did not go out then. Shortly after this, there was another disturbance, and when deponent went to his gate to enquire into it, he then saw two European sailors, one standing in the street, and the other standing with his back at his gate with some bright instrument in his hand which shone in the moonlight. Deponent, as he had heard that these sailors had attempted to enter his house, desired his servant if they attempted to do so again to go to the thana, bring some chokeydars, and have them removed. When deponent left his office to see the riot, some of his friends came out with him. The one at his gate with the instrument in his hand, was a short man; but deponent would not be able to recognize him again. Deponent was at his gate four or five minutes, and whilst there he saw no beating or chokeydars.

Enamdee, naib of Loll bazar thana, deposed, that on the 4th of March last, a passer-by gave some intimation at the thana which induced him to go from the thana to the spot, opposite the house of Hukeem Punnahally, in the Chitpoor road. When he arrived there, he saw two European sailors standing there. They pointed to some cheeroots which were lying in the street, and said something in a dialect which deponent did not understand. Agah Mahomed's durwan picked them up, and tied them in a kerchief and gave them to one of these Europeans. The European, when he received them, flung them down, and deponent desired Jumun, chokeydar, to put them up and deliver them to him; and whilst Jumun was delivering them to the European, he seized his stick. The prisoner was the European. The prisoner, whilst struggling for the stick with Jumun pulled out a knife from his pocket, and when Jumun saw it, he let go the stick and ran away, and the prisoner went to the gate of Mr. Latour and spoke to some gentlemen who were standing there. There was a great crowd opposite the shop of a vial-seller, and the prisoner ran towards them. Hukeem Punnah Ullee's house, Agah Mahomed, Mr. Latour's, and the vial merchants are near to each other and in the same street. When the prisoner ran towards them they all ran away; but the vial man, who is blind, cried out "he has wounded me, he has wounded me." The prisoner after this, came back again to Mr. Latour's gate, and from thence he ran off towards the Loll Bazar, and he desired some chokeydar to pursue the European, whilst he took charge of the wounded vial-seller with an intention to send him off to the police hospital; and after he had sent off the wounded man to the thana, he, on his way, saw Horkawallah syce, lying wounded opposite the town guard near his thana, and when he inquired of him why he was lying there, he said a European sailor had wounded him. The wound was on his left side and his entrails had protruded through the wound. Deponent took both the wounded men to the town guard, where he met Mr. McCann, who directed some of the sepoya there to take them to the police hospital. The prisoner appeared to be somewhat intoxicated, but not so the other sailor, nor did the other quarrel with any one but walked away quietly.

Jumun, chokeydar, deposed, that he was one of the chokeydars who accompanied Emamdee, naib, from the thana to the Chitpore road. This deponent confirmed the deposition of the last witness from the time he went to the place where the prisoner had wounded the blind man, to the time when he left the naib and pursued with other chokeydars the prisoner, who was running down the lane and flourishing his knife. When he came near the town guard he met the thanadar of the Loll-bazar thana. When the prisoner arrived at the town guard he attempted to wound Euseph Khan, the sentry at his post; but the sentry intimidated him with his bayonet. Deponent then got behind the prisoner and seized him by the leg and threw him down with a jerk. As the prisoner fell, the thanadar struck his hand with a stick and the knife fell from his grasp, and Buldoo Sing, bukundaze, took it up. Soon after this a constable came to the place and took the prisoner into custody. The prisoner was the man so arrested. It was a moonlight night, and deponent saw his features distinctly and can identify him. After the prisoner's apprehension, deponent returned to the thana and saw Buckawallah, syce, lying there wounded, and the blind vial-seller. Deponent was one of the persons who conveyed the two wounded men, by Mr. McCann's direction, to the police hospital, where they had their wounds dressed by an European Doctor.

Neamoddin, chokeydar, deposed, that on the night of the 4th March, at 10 o'clock p. m. a person came to the thana saying that a European was attacking the passers-by on the Chitpore road with a knife. Emamdee, jemadar, went to the spot indicated with some chokeydars, and deponent was one of them. When he arrived there he saw two European sailors and some men assembled there making a noise. This witness then confirmed the testimony of the two last witnesses as to what had occurred at that place, and added, that when the prisoner made towards them they ran off to the door of the vial-man and leaped over a ditch opposite the shop, where the blind man was sleeping, who on hearing the noise came to the acqueduct, where the European sailor came up to him and wounded him with the knife in deponent's presence, who went and staunch-ed his wound. Prisoner then went back to Mr. Latour's gate. Deponent followed him, and when he attempted to seize him, an European gentleman seized the prisoner and snatched his badge from his waist, and asked deponent why he was following the sailor. Deponent replied, that the sailor had wounded a blind man near the acqueduct, and he was following him in consequence, and took the gentleman and showed him the wounded blind man; and whilst so doing Emamdee, naib, joined them. Here the judge desired Mr. Guizenec to be called, and the prisoner said he was the person who had seized his badge. When Mr. Guizenec saw the wounded man he delivered up the badge to the naib, and deponent received it from him and followed the prisoner, exclaiming that a European sailor had wounded an old blind man, and when deponent arrived opposite the town guard, he saw the prisoner in custody and immediately afterwards Hubeebullah, naib, came and informed them that the prisoner had wounded a syce likewise; and Mr. McCann, who had come to the town guard on hearing of this disturbance, ordered the prisoner to be locked up there, which a constable did, and the two wounded men were carried to the native hospital, near the Chanduey Choke, and the deponent then went with some chokeydars and arrested the other sailor at the Fonzdarree Balakhanna without resistance.

Constant Guizenec, deposed, that he is a Frenchman, and has resided five years in Calcutta, and can speak the Bengally language. On Sunday night, the 4th of March, 1835, at the hour of 10 o'clock p. m. precisely deponent was coming out of Mr. Latour's house on the Chitpore road, and saw some natives surrounding a sailor and beating him with sticks. The sailor extricated himself from his assailants and joined deponent at Mr. Latour's gate, and as he spoke French, deponent asked him what was the matter? The man replied that he belonged to a French ship lying in this port, and having obtained leave to come on shore, he had been to the bazar and purchased some cheroots, 'keichiefs and three knives which he had by him, together with some money, when he was attacked by natives, who robbed him of all except his knives. Deponent then showed the men one of the knives and said, that if they assaulted him again he would be obliged to use it. Deponent suggested to him to deliver up the knives to him, and he would procure him a palkee to take him to his ship. Before the sailor could answer, he received a blow from a chokeydar across his arm with a stick which nearly felled him. The sailor then, without waiting to reply to deponent's suggestions, made a rush at the chokeydars with the knife in his hand. They all ran off towards the acqueduct, towards which the sailor followed them; but when he reached the acqueduct he stumbled and fell. Deponent followed the chokeydar who had struck the sailor, and asked him why he did it, and seized his badge. The chokeydar denied that he was the man who had struck the prisoner. Soon after this the naib came up and informed deponent that the prisoner had wounded a blind man near the acqueduct. Deponent then gave up the chokeydar's badge to the naib, accompanied him to see the wounded man, and when he had seen him he returned home. Deponent did not see the sailor again till on his way home he heard that he had been arrested by the police authorities. The prisoner is the sailor alluded to. The prisoner held the knife in his left hand, and was both intoxicated and in a great rage. The beating which the prisoner got was very violent, particularly the blow which he received at deponent's door. Deponent believes that the persons who had beaten the prisoner were chokeydars; but he did not see their badges. The old man must have been wounded after the prisoner, had received the blow at Mr. Latour's door. Deponent believes the irritation of this last blow must have provoked the prisoner, and he must have wounded the wounded man whilst pursuing with the knife his assailant. Deponent had no conversation with any of the chokeydars beyond what he has just stated.

Hubeebollah, naib of the Loll Bazar thana, deposed, that the information of a riot was brought at 10 o'clock p. m. in his presence to the thana, and Emamooddeen, head naib, proceeded towards the spot, and half an hour after this, hearing the uproar increase, he proceeded to the spot with some chokeydars to enquire into the matter. On his way, he saw a sailor coming down the Chitpore road with a knife in his hand, making blows with it to the right and left, and the crowd running away before him. Deponent seeing this turned to the side of the street and avoided him. The sailor made a rush with the knife at deponent, but missed him and ran on. Deponent and his party followed him, and heard that the prisoner had wounded a man. This deponent related the prisoner was captured, and identified him to be the sailor he alluded to in the same manner as Jumun chokeydar did. Deponent then went by the order of the thanadar to bring the wounded man from the thana to the town guard, where Mr. McCann was to show them to him. When he arrived at the thana, he saw Baukoollah lying there likewise wounded, and his bowels protruding, and brought both the wounded men to the town guard to Mr. McCann, and by his orders he took both the wounded men to the native hospital near the Chandney Choke. Baukoollah died on the night of the 5th November. On Monday and on Tuesday at 2 o'clock p. m. deponent, by order of the police authorities, removed his corps, to the police hospital, when he pointed it out to Dr. Bain, the police surgeon, who examined it there.

Golam Hossan, thanadar of the Loll Bazar thana, deposed, that after he had sent off the two naibs to quell some disturbance at the Chitpore road, finding the disturbance and uproar to increase, he likewise went to quell the riot with the remaining chokeydars at the thana who were not on duty; and on his way deponent saw a European running down the Chitpore road with a knife in his hand, rushing at every person in the street with intent so stab them, and they avoiding him and Neam Oudeen, chokeydar following him, and calling out that he had stabbed a blind man. When the European came near deponent, he made a rush at deponent, who stepped aside and avoided him, and when the sailor had passed the thana and arrived opposite the shop of Rut-ton shoe-maker, where there were four or five persons standing, the sailor made a rush at them with the knife in his hand, and then ran off towards the town guard, where he held a conversation with the sentry on duty, and threatened to stab him; and the sepoy replied that if he approached him he would run the bayonet through his body. During this conversation Runjeet Sing, the naib of the town guard, came out and attempted to wrench the knife from the sailor's grasp; but when the sailor made a rush at him, Runjeet Sing ran back to the guard house and shut the door. Here Jumun, chokeydar, went behind the prisoner and seizing him by the leg and threw him down with a jerk. Deponent knocked the knife out of the sailor's hand and secured him. The prisoner is the man. After the prisoner was arrested, Runjeet Sing came out with a knife in his hand and said that he had wrenched it out of the prisoner's hand and had been wounded in the attempt. There was no blood on the knife which Runjeet brought; but the square head knife which deponent struck out of the prisoner's hand had marks of blood on it.

Euseph Khan, deposed, that whilst he was standing at his post at the town guard, he perceived four Europeans passed his thana, and in doing so they said "beware there is a drunken sailor pursuing us with an open knife in his hand." Soon after this deponent perceived the prisoner approach with a knife in his hand. Deponent stopped him, and when the prisoner attempted to stab him, deponent presented his bayonet towards him and desired him to stand still, or else he would bayonet him. Deponent then perceiving the handle of the knife below the prisoner's grasp, wrenched it out of his hand, and gave it unto Runjeet Sing, the town guard naib's hand. Runjeet Sing then attempted to arrest the prisoner; but the prisoner drew a second knife and attempted to stab Runjeet Sing with it. Runjeet Sing wrenched it out of his grasp and was wounded in the hand in doing so; then the prisoner drew a third knife, and Runjeet Sing withdrew to the guard house and shut the door. After this the prisoner stumbled once and hurt himself in the face. Golam Hossain the thanadar and the chokeydars then came to Jumun, chokeydar, seized the prisoner's leg and threw him down; and Golam Hossain struck with a stick the third knife out of his grasp. After this the prisoner was secured. The deponent identified the prisoner to be the sailor alluded to in this affray.

Runjeet Sing Lalla, naib of the town guard, deposed, that seeing an altercation between the last witness and a sailor with a knife in his grasp, he tucked up his sleeves, wrenched the knife out of the sailor's grasp, and as he was going into the guard house he pulled deponent back by his clothes, and drew another knife and attempted to stab the deponent with it. Deponent seized it by the blade, and in doing so he cut his hand. Deponent then rebuked the sentry for not alarming the guards and securing the prisoner; and he then roused the guard, and Bulloo Sing, peon, snatched the other knife out of his hand, and the sepoys at the guard then came and arrested the prisoner. Deponent here produced the knife which he had taken from the prisoner whom he likewise identified.

Buddul Sing, deposed, that whilst he was in the town guard, their naib called out to the poons for assistance. Deponent came out thereupon and perceived Runjeet Sing and the sailor struggling, and the sailor had a knife in his grasp. Runjeet Sing then secured the knife from his grasp and got into the guard house, and as he went in he gave the sailor a shove which threw him down. The sailor got up instantly, drew another knife and ran at the sentry. Deponent then said to the sentry, is all this fun to you that you did not interfere when the sailor attempted to stab Runjeet Sing, and now if you do not charge bayonet immediately he will stab you. The sentry then presented his bayonet, and the sailor retired. Shortly afterwards the thanadar and his chokeydars arrived and Jumun, chokeydar, seized the sailor by the leg and threw him down, and deponent seized the knife out of his grasp. The sailor was then secured, and Mr. McCann and the constables came. In the mean time a European gentleman passed by and seeing the prisoner seized, asked deponent why they were thus maltreating him. Deponent showed them the knife and said that the sailor had wounded a man with the knife. They looked at the knife and then returned it to deponent and went away. Deponent here produced the knife stained with blood. This deponent identified the prisoner to be the sailor alluded to by him.

Suleem, chokeydar of Loll Bazar thana, deposed, that as he was at duty at the thana, he saw a sailor run down opposite the thana pursuing two natives, with a knife in his hand. Shortly after this he perceived Baukoollah the deceased, come towards his thana crying. Deponent asked him why he cried, and he answered that the sailor who had just passed the thana with the knife in his hand had wounded him. Deponent, when the wounded man came opposite the thana, brought a light and examined the wound which was on his belly and his entrails had protruded. Deponent then took him into the thana and bound up his wound with a piece of cloth and led him on a cot in the thana. Afterwards Hubeebollah, naib, came and took the wounded man to the hospital. As the sailor passed running speedily past the thana he did not observe his features, so as to be able to recognise him again if he were to see him.

C. K. Robison deposed, that he is a magistrate, and he, on the 5th of March went to the native hospital at the Chandney Choke to take the depositions of the Baukoollah sycr, a wounded man there. The prisoner was present at the time, and Mr. Delmar, the French interpreter and Mr. Leal the native interpreter, and a great crowd. Deponent cannot recollect the date, but it is in the deposition. Deponent cannot say if there were any of Baukoollah's relatives present. Baukoollah was sworn at the time. The depositions were explained to the prisoner, but he was asked if he would put any questions to him, and he said no. Baukoollah is since dead: looks at the depositions and says there are them. Baukoollah was perfectly sensible and collected at the time and expressed to deponent a conviction that he would not recover from the effects of the wound. Deponent once before saw him at the native hospital shortly previous to his taking these depositions.

C. F. Leal, interpreter to C. K. Robison, Esq., the magistrate, deposed, that he interpreted strictly to Baukoollah what the magistrate said; but he did not interpret Baukoollah's reply. Baukoollah said that there were Europeans present at the time he was stabbed. One of them, the prisoner at the bar, he said was the man who had stabbed him. He said he recognized him because he was shorter than the other man, and had a bruise under his left eye and a short beard. Deponent read the depositions now in his hands, and he admitted them to be correct, and made his mark to it in deponent's presence, who witnessed it.

C. K. Robison, Esq., recalled, said, he cannot say who interpreted Baukoollah's reply to him; but he is so very proficient in the Hindoostani language in which Baukoollah spoke, as not to be in need of Mr. Leal's assistance in interpreting the replies to him. He commenced taking the deposition after Mr. Leal arrived.

P. Delmar deposed, that he explained Baukoollah's depositions to Milliner, who declined putting any questions, saying, that the deceased is a stranger to him, and if he were to question him he would not answer correctly, and he was too drunk to know what had occurred on the preceding night.

The depositions were then read. Deponent said that he was a syce. On the night of the 4th March, as he was passing down Chitpore road, at 10 o'clock p. m. in company with his cousin, of the two sailors now before him, the latter passed him by, but the prisoner, without any words, having passed between them came up to him and stabbed him in the stomach with a knife. Deponent recognized him by a scar in his face and his beard, and he is shorter than the other man. Prisoner is a perfect stranger to him; he had not seen him that morning at a punch-house. Deponent is perfectly aware that he will not be able to recover from the effects of this wound.

Hyder, syce, deposed, that he is a syce and cousin to Baukoollah. On the night of the 4th March last, at 9 o'clock p. m. as he was in company with him passing through the Chitpore road on their way home to Amrahtollah-street from Banstollah lane, where they had been to have read to them some letters which they had received from their families, and when they arrived opposite the three storied house near the Terretta-bazar, they met an European sailor with two knives in both his hands. As he came up to them he stabbed Baukoollah with one of them and he fell. Deponent through fear jumped across the aqueduct, and when the sailor passed them he came to his cousin by whose desire he returned to Amrahtollah lane, and brought his brother, Ruzzah-oollah, to the spot where Baukoollah had fallen, and not finding him there, they enquired at the Lull-bazar thana and learnt that he had been removed to the native hospital at the Chandney Choke, where deponent and Ruzzah-oollah went and saw him, and saw his wounds dressed. Deponent then went to his duty at his employers, and Ruzzah-oollah remained with Baukoollah. Deponent was present when Dr. Bain and Dr. O'Brien dissected Baukoollah's corpse. The man who stabbed Baukoollah was a short man, but through fear deponent could not recognize him; but he subsequently heard that he was arrested on that night. If he had observed him sufficiently so as to identify him he would have done it before the coroner and at the police office.

Ruzzah-oollah, the brother of the deceased, deposed, that by information he went to the native hospital at the Chandney Choke, where he saw Baukoollah wounded and the Dr. O'Brien dressed his wounds. Deponent then went to his service and saw the deceased again at the hospital at 6 o'clock p. m., when the deceased informed him that if he would recover he would seek his redress, but if he died, he had pointed out the person who had stabbed him to the police magistrate in his presence.

P. O'Brien, the first assistant at the native hospital, at the Chandney Choke, deposed, that he recollects the deceased, Baukoollah, syce, being brought at about 11 o'clock p. m. of that night to the hospital. He had a wound on his left side protruding into the abdomen and a portion of the omentum had protruded out. It was a narrow wound $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch wide and $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch in length. Deponent thought either of the two knives in the court could inflict such a wound. The deceased gave his depositions to Mr. Robison, the magistrate, on the 5th March, and the deceased died at 11 o'clock p. m. on that day from internal hemorrhage caused by the wound he had received. The body was subsequently, by the order of the police, removed to the police hospital on the 6th March.

R. H. Bain, police surgeon, deposed, that on the 6th of March last, he examined the body of the deceased Baukoollah. There was one wound on the left side of the body a little better than one inch in length. Deponent shewed the head, chest and abdomen. There was a considerable quantity of coagulated blood in the abdomen, the lower extremity of the spleen wounded, the larger intestine had been divided in two parts, and there were two wounds on the omentum. The other membranes were all healthy. The lungs were rather soft, but healthy. The deceased died from internal hemorrhage caused by the wounds on the spleen and the omentum. Either of these two knives might inflict a wound of this kind.

This closed the case for the prosecution. Prisoner declined questioning any of the witnesses, asserting that he was too drunk to recollect the transactions of that night, so as to be able to cross question any of them.

He said, that on a Sunday morning, the 4th of March, he by leave left his ship with 20 rupees. His intention was to purchase some provisions, and three knives useful to his profession as a sail-maker. He likewise purchased three silk handkerchiefs and a box of cheeroots. He went with a shipmate who was arrested with him, to several places. He, from the quantity of liquor he had drunk at these several places, became entirely bereft of all recollection of what happened subsequently; but he has an indistinct recollection of being assaulted by some natives in a street, which so irritated him, that he lost all recollection of what occurred subsequently; and it was not until the next morning, that he found himself in confinement at the town guard and his kerchiefs, his cheeroots, and three knives all lost; and he was then taken to the native hospital at the Chandney, and there he learnt for the first time of the crime he had been charged with.

The prisoner called no witnesses to substantiate his assertions, but put in a petition in English, the purport of which, he said, he had dictated and knew its purport and did not require it to be translated to him.

This petition was but a repetition of his defence. He put in a certificate of good conduct signed by Captain Laor De Paert, Captain of the Salamander, French Frigate, on board of which ship he had served as a sail-maker to his Captain's satisfaction for one year. The certificate was dated Toulon, 5th June, 1835.

This closed his defence.

The learned Judge then summed up the proceedings and said, that the charge was one of murder, a very important charge, as on it depended the prisoner's life; and to clearly decide it, and do justice both to the prisoner and to the public was their important and painful duty. It is very evident that the deceased, Baukoollah, died on the night of the 4th March 1835; but no one has deposed that the prisoner wounded the deceased.

The only evidence of that kind is the deceased dying deposition. There is one person who deposed to his having wounded the blind man. One thing is plain, that the prisoner was intoxicated, and though the law does not excuse intoxication for a crime, because if so people may first drink and then commit crime. Yet justice Holroyd has decided, that when a man who is intoxicated and had no previous malice against any person, and having without any intention to inflict an injury to any person, but for absolute necessary purposes any deadly weapon, and then and there receives a provocation, as is deposed by Mr. Guizenc, of his having been assaulted, and these irritated with intoxication and maltreatment, he, in a fit of anger, wounds with that instrument any person mortally, the crime is only that of manslaughter; but if any person swears that the prisoner did run a muck with a deadly instrument in his hand in a state of intoxication and wound all the passers by because he had been just previously assaulted by some persons, and stab a person who was in no wise connected with the assault on him, and wounds him mortally, then the crime would amount to that of murder. Yet there is another circumstance to consider. If there is a great crowd and confusion, and the prisoner is struck by any of the crowd promiscuously, and in this crowd he meets the deceased and wounds him, mistaking him to be one of his assailants, although the man may not have been one of the assailants, yet it is very probable the assaulted person in the confusion might have mistaken him for one of them and wounded him in self defence in the state he then was. It is for the jury to draw this distinction between the crime of murder or manslaughter, from the evidence, and to judge whether the deceased was one amongst the crowd who had beat the prisoner on that night or was he met by the prisoner when he was not assaulted, but running wildly about the street and wounding all the passers-by promiscuously, and had at a time, when no persons were assaulting him, without cause or provocation, stabbed the deceased, as the deceased has declared, and the declaration made at that time by the person stabbed, even if made when the prisoner had passed on, but at the time he was wounded, is strictly in evidence, because it forms a part of the transaction itself.

Here the judge detailed the evidence of each witness, fully commented on the nature of it, and made learned legal observations on them to the jury. The judge remarked, towards the conclusion, that to constitute the crime of murder, malice, is required; but it is not absolutely necessary that sad and deliberate malice to take the life of any one individual; for if a person without malice towards any person, shouts with a gun wantonly in a crowd, the crime in that case is murder. It is for the jury to decide whether the prisoner had inflicted the wound on the prisoner or not; and if so, whether the deceased was in the crowd that assaulted the prisoner, and in the confusion mistaken by the prisoner for one of the assailants; in that case it will constitute the crime of manslaughter; or whether he, in passing down the street, excited by angry, malicious feelings, wounding every person whom he met promiscuously had thus met the deceased who was not one of his assailants, and wantonly wounded him, which would be murder. If the jury doubted in a case of this kind, they must give the benefit of the doubt to the prisoner, and return a verdict in that case; but if they are convinced that he did it in the latter manner, they must however painful it may be to their feelings, in order to discharge their duty conscientiously, according to their oaths, find the prisoner guilty of the offence for which he is now tried. If they doubt that he even wounded the deceased, then they must acquit him at once. After this he left the case in their hands, remarking that he had, as bound by his oath, tried the law in all its bearings in the case before them, and it now rested with them to return the verdict that they judged to be best suited to the case.

The jury retired for about quarter of an hour and returned a verdict of manslaughter.

The judge then addressed the jury and said, that as the prisoner had been found guilty of manslaughter in the case just before them and thus acquitted of the capital offence, he could not possibly be thought guilty of having wounded the old, blind man, with an intent to kill, as the indictment charges him, therefore the jury had better be sworn to bring that indictment, and have it formally read to them, and then, after, the prisoner has pleaded not guilty, acquit him of that charge. The jury were then sworn to bring the indictment which was read to them, and the prisoner having already pleaded not guilty, the jury, as directed, acquitted him of this charge.

The judge then remanded the prisoner for the present, and said that he would, at another time, pass the sentence against him for the crime or which he had been convicted.

The prisoner was then removed, and the Court adjourned at 6 o'clock P. M. till 11 o'clock A. M. tomorrow morning.—Hurkaru, April 26.

SESSIONS.—APRIL 25, 1838.

(Before Sir E. Ryan.)

Petumher Mookergia and Holladur Chuckerbutty were tried on an indictment charging them with having forged a document on the 5th of September 1837, purporting it to be the last will and testament of a Hindoo widow, named Servah Munglah Dabee, deceased, with intent to defraud Bemolah Dabee.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

Counsel for the prosecution, Messrs. J. Pearson and L. Clarke, Counsel for the defence Messrs. J. Cochrane and C. R. Prinsep.

Mr. Pearson addressed the jury and said, that the prisoners are indicted for forging a will and altering the name, both of which offences are equally criminal.

The deceased Komalunth was the widow of Ram Mohun Chuckerbutty, deceased, and she had an only daughter named Bemolah Dabee. This daughter was at Bindrabund, 600 miles distant from Calcutta, on a pilgrimage. On the 8th of Assaur, when her mother was attacked with the cholera, Servah Munglah Dabee imagining that the malady would prove fatal made a will on that day by which she bequeathed the whole of her property to her daughter, and Nobinchander Chuckerbutty, Anundoo Chuckerbutty, and Ram Kisto Odacare were witnesses and executors to it. She died on the 12th of that month, and her daughter, about 32 days after her demise, returned from Bindrabund and arrived. In Calcutta in the mean time another will, dated 5th Assaur, was filed in the Ecclesiastical Registrar's office, by the defendants, one of whom swore the usual affidavit for a probate by this will. She disposed of the property otherwise and appointed Petumher Mookergia her executor. In this will she mentioned her indisposition, whereas she was not sick before the 8th, and further there are proofs to show that Holladur Chuckerbutty was seen composing it, and although he declined to be the executor; but he subsequently applied for a probate on that will, and thus he clearly uttered this forged will by this act it is plain; and it would be an absurdity to suppose a person could have made a will on the 3d of Assaur, quite contrary to the one she executed on the 8th of that month.

The witnesses by application of counsels were all ordered out of Court.

Sheebchunder Ghose deposed, he knew Servah Munglah Dabee. She is dead: she died on the 12th of Assaur last. Previous to her death, the deceased made a will. She had an only daughter, a widow named Bemolah Beval, Deponent knows both the prisoners. The father of the last deponent is dead; his name was Guanganarain Chuckerbutty. Deponent never saw the will which Servah Munglah Dabee made, but heard she made one on the 8th of Assaur last. This will deponent never saw, but he saw a will in the possession of Gungana rain Chuckerbutty and Hollodhur Chuckerbutty. When they made it, deponent saw it in Shraaboon last, deponent saw it made out by those two persons, Petumber Chuckerbutty, Beromohon Chuckerbutty, Sheebnara in Holdar, Issurhunder Sircar, Ramloohun Kur, and Sooiopelunder Shaw were concerned in framing it. Petumber Mookergia was the executor to it, and the others become witnesses to it. This will was made on the 31st Shraaboon, about one month and 20 days after the death of the person whose will it purported to be, and was anti-dated the 5th Assaur last. Deponent, if he were to see that paper, could recognise it. Deponent knows the hand-writing of Issurhunder Sircar who wrote it. There was previously a rough draft made and submitted to the prisoner, who made a few alterations and then it was fair copied: the draft was written by Hollodhur Chuckerbutty. When this will was forged, Petumber looked at it, and said the whole responsibility of this affair will be on me. Hollodhur observed "who is to write the name of Servah Mundalah Dabee." Hollodhur then said, "Get Issurhunder to write her name and I will make a cross mark to it," and this was done. After this will had been executed, the witnesses remarked, as every thing was completed, what were they to get for their job, and Hollodhur replied "that matter has been discussed already;" and Issurhunder then wished to know the purpose of it, and Hollodhur said, of the 1,700 rupees of Servah Mundalah, which is of Bobany Lull Sha's hands, he would give 1,000 rupees of it to Petumber Mookergia and 300 rupees for the costs of this probate; the remainder, after considering what each of the others ought to get will be divided amongst them. Thakordos Chuckerbutty, Kosinath Kur and Prawn Kisto Sen, and the parties concerned in framing this document were present at the time when this conversation occurred. Deponent last saw Thakordos Chuckerbutty about fifteen or sixteen days ago at Sham-bazar. Kosinath Kur for fear of getting a subpoena in this case, has ran away.

Mr. O'Dowda, acting registrar of the Ecclesiastical Court, produced from the records of his office the will which was purported to be a forged document, together with the usual affidavit of the executor named in it, Petumber Mookergia, for a probate. Probate was not granted on it.

Sheebchunder further deposed, on looking at the will, that he recognised this to be the forged will. It is written in the hand-writing of Petumber Mookergia. Deponent is acquainted with Issurhunder Shaw, having seen him and Ramchunder Kur write once.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep. Deponent saw Beromohon Chuckerbutty. Deponent knew him. Gungana rain Chuckerbutty, whilst deponent was passing his house, as a friend, called him and informed him, that he had fallen into a fearful predicament, and when deponent inquired what it was, he replied his sister-in-law, Servah Mundalah Dabee, had the cholera on the 8th of Assaur last, when she made a will. She died on the 12th of that month; he then observed that if her daughters were to die, the executors to it would make away with his ancestral property, and added that his son Hollodhur Chuckerbutty and Beromohon Chuckerbutty had consulted together and resolved to make a forged will with an intention to take out a probate and preserve everything. Hollodhur, after his father and his brother had consulted together, said "let us make a draft of it," and so hinted deponent's advice. Deponent replied, "if you succeed in this fraudulent act it will be very advantageous to you, but if you are detected, the consequences will be very serious." Deponent did not assist in the making of this will. He was again sent for by Hollodhur, for the purpose of becoming an attesting witness to it. Deponent is not in the habit of becoming required as a witness on account of his respectability.

Deponent gains his livelihood as a mooktiar in the petty court, but he has never given his evidence in any of those cases, nor was he ever warned by the commissioners of that court regarding his evidence. Deponent did not get any part of the 400 rupees, because he declined to become a party to this nefarious transaction; he suspected it to be wrong, because he saw another sign the name of the deceased, after her death, to a will framed on the 31st Shraaboon and anti-dated the 5th Assaur. Deponent knew Rammoohun Chuckerbutty; he died about three years ago. Deponent never heard that he ever had a son. Deponent has seen Bemolah Dossee, who is a purdah-nasheen woman. She is the daughter of a Brahmin and does not go a gadding. Deponent sees her on business. Deponent does not know whether she has a husband. Deponent last saw Bemolah Dossee about three or four days ago, when she had the cholera morbus. She is now a widow and has no child. Deponent was not examined before the grand jury in this case, deponent first received a subpoena on it about a week ago. After the grand jury had found a true bill in this indictment, and the witnesses who were examined on that occasion, having mentioned deponent's name, the prosecutors subpoenaed him. Deponent does not know whether the prisoners were heirs-at law to Servah Mungolah's husband, they were the brothers of Suttah Mungolah's husband, and cousins of Servah Mungolah. At the time of her father's death Bemolah Dossee was a childless widow. All the property Servah Mungolah Dossee died possessed of, was left her by her husband. Hollodhur resides at Puthurgutta-street, to the west of Bemolah Dossee's house. The forged will was written in a hall, behind the two side rooms, at the entrance of the house. Deponent does not know whether Gungana rain entered a caveat against the will dated the 8th Assaur last, or whether it was ever filed in this Court.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cochrane. Prawn Kisto was present when the forged will was made, and is a witness in this case; cannot say whether he was examined before the grand jury. Deponent cannot say what relationship there is between Petumber Mookergia and Bemolah Dossee. Deponent never was before called to witness a forged will. Deponent knows Annuchunder Chuckerbutty; he lives in a separate hut; he is very intimate with Bemolah Dossee, and visits her very often. Deponent is paid for his trouble at the petty court, but he is not to get any thing for his trouble here to-day. He has no note of hand nor promise of a reward in this business. Bemolah Dossee is at her own house. Deponent knows Behary Lull Shaw; he is a rich man. Annuchunder Chuckerbutty is here to-day. Deponent saw five or six days ago, Beromohon Chuckerbutty at his house. Deponent did advise the defendants not to commit this act but they did not regard him. Deponent has heard, that every subscribing witnesses to this will has been put into this indictment.

Re-examined by the judge. When Hollodhur was writing the will, deponent saw Prawn Kisto; he came there after the deponent; but why he came deponent does not know. When he came, Gungana rain Chuckerbutty said "sit down;" he was asked to become a witness, but he declined, and said to Hollodhur "you have three or four witnesses, there is no necessity for my name."

Mr. Cochrane remarked to the Court, towards the close of this deponent's examination, that Prawn Kisto had been in Court all this time hearing this deponent's evidence, and has just left the Court. The judge asked Mr. Hilier if this was true, and sent for Pratt the bailiff, who had charge of the witnesses out-side the Court to inquire into it: and it then appeared that the constable had only charge of some and not all. The judge consequently asked counsel where the rest were: counsel replied that neither they nor the attorneys in the case knew them all, so as to be able to point them out to the constable, who was to have charge of them. The judge observed, that it is clear that when witnesses in a criminal case are ordered out and come in again they cannot be examined. Mr. Prinsep replied, that he was perfectly aware of the law in this instance. As Mr. Pearson had supposed that the judge would not re-examine the witness, he had desired Prawn Kisto to be the next witness to be called. He had just come in, but when he found that he was not required as yet, he went out again.

Prawn Kisto was then called and swore to the correctness of this statement of the prosecutrix's counsel, and added that he had been out with the other witnesses.

A Pratt, the bailiff deposed, that he called the names of the witnesses in the list furnished to him, and got some of them, but deponent did not see Prawn Kisto. He was not in his charge nor did any person call any of the witnesses under his charge. The judge then remarked that there ought to be two constables to relieve each other, and the names of the witnesses ought to be called as per list of the witnesses furnished to the constables by the parties, and then made over to their charge and kept in another room, and nobody permitted to speak to them until called for; a similar case he added should never occur again. A sircar of Mr. Hedell, the attorney for the prosecution, having deposed that Prawn Kisto was out during the time Sheebchunder was examined, and he had just called him in by mistake, the judge permitted him to be examined.

Prawn Kisto then deposed, that he knew the two prisoners at the bar and the last witness. This witness, like the former, proved the construction of the alleged forged will, and identified it in Court.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep. Deponent is a broker and an oil-merchant. Deponent undertook on one occasion to be bail for Moonshee Is-hur; but as the Moonshee could not give under bail he declined being bail. He did not receive 64 rupees on that occasion. When the will was signed, no person asked him to become a witness to it, nor did he refuse to become one.

The judge, after he had examined the evidence of Sheebchunder, witness, and found a material discrepancy between his deposition, and had further ascertained that there were no more witnesses to prove the making of the will, remarked to the jury, that if they believed these two witnesses, the case was plainly made out, and must proceed; but if they doubt them, for to him it appears a very strange circumstance that these two persons were, especially the latter, called for no other purpose by the prisoner than to witness their committing a forgery, a crime for which they could be transported for life, and which crimes are invariably committed in secrecy, but to enable them at some other period to appear as witnesses against them, and convict them in this case. Mr. Pearson added, that he had a documentary evidence against Holladbar, and if the actual forgery were proved against him, the fact of the other taking out the probate would in itself be sufficient to convict him of uttering a forged will.

The judge replied, that if the very first part of their evidence as to the perpetration of the forgery could not be believed by the jury, how could the case proceed against them.

The jury consulted and informed the Court, that they did not believe these two witnesses. The judge remarked, then the case cannot proceed, and directed the jury to acquit the prisoners, which they did. They were then ordered to be discharged by the judge.

Shumsnoodeen was tried for uttering a forged document, with intent to robbing Mr. Kuhn, the proprietor of the Commercial Advertiser.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

John Overet deposed that he is a Government pensioner, and lives in North Italy. Deponent is a subscriber to the Commercial Advertiser; its subscription is two rupees eight annas per mension; deponent knows the prosecutor and the prisoner. Deponent looked at a paper in Court and said he recognised it; he had seen it before. The writing on it purporting to be the writing of Mr. Kuhn; is not his, the document is a forged one. The prisoner presented it to deponent at his house the day before the Churruck pongah. Deponent desired the prisoner to write on it his receipt for the money and he would pay it to him. Patscher attempted to write, but the figures he made were no writing. Deponent after having called a sircar and ascertained from him this fact, said he would pay the money to the prisoner's master. The prisoner then requested deponent to accompany him there. Deponent left his house with the prisoner for that purpose, and procured a palkee at the first stand he came to. The prisoner at the head of the Dhurumtollah road gave deponent the slip and ran away. Deponent however proceeded with the paper to Mr. Kuhn, and there he learnt the bill was a forged one, and that the prisoner had been taken into custody on a charge of forgery.

W. C. Macquiere deposed, that Italy, the place where the last deponent resided, and where the prisoner had attempted to utter the alleged forged document, as stated by Mr. Overet, is in the suburbs of Calcutta, and within the jurisdiction of the 24 Pargunnah's Court, and not of this tribunal.

The judge said, that as the indictment stated that the prisoner uttered this will, knowing it to be forged within Calcutta; but as the document now, it appears by the evidence in this case, had been uttered out of Calcutta, this Court has no jurisdiction over natives of this county for crimes committed out of the limits of this city, except in particular Government cases, which he need not mention. He then suggested to the jury, that without entering into the merits of the case, to acquit the prisoner on this indictment, on the ground that the offence had been committed out of the jurisdiction of this Court.

The jury without retiring acquitted the prisoner.

The prisoner was then remanded.

TRAVERSE CASES.

In the case of Queen on the prosecution of Mootee Mangy versus Rammond Ghose, Gungapersad Seal, Kishna Ghose, Omit Holdar, Shaikamar, sircar, and three other prisoners, who were arraigned for having on the 18th of October last, assaulted Moottee Mangy in a violent manner.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

The prosecutor and his witnesses were then called on their recognisances, and not appearing, they were read and estreated, and a verdict of not guilty pronounced against the prisoners by the jury, and the prisoners released. The prosecution, the judge informed the jury, was a private one, and it appears had been needlessly brought before the Court.

The case of the Queen on the prosecution of Gooroo Chund Doss and Hurry Chund Doss, against Kalar Bux, jemadar, Jhubboo naib, and two chokeydars, for having on the 18th of January, assaulted the prosecutors, were then called on, and the jury sworn.

The prisoners having pleaded not guilty.

The prosecutor was called and he informed the Court that his attorney, Mr. Martindell, and his counsels, Messrs. Pearson and Leith, who have the sole management of their case, although they were in Court this morning were absent then.

The defendants likewise informed the Court, that their Attorney, Mr. Anly, and their counsel. Mr. Cochrane, were not likewise present in Court to conduct their case for them.

The chief Justice, after he had made the requisite inquiry from the clerk of the Crown, and ascertained that the attorneys and counsels, both for the prosecution and the defence, were informed that this case would come on to-day, addressed the jury, and said, that it appeared strange to him, after intimation had been given to these attorneys and counsels, that this case, would be tried to-day, that they were absent. A message was then despatched to them to require their attendance, and the jury were desired to await a little.

After a delay of about half an hour the prosecutors' counsel and attorney appeared, and the case was heard.

Mr. Pearson said, the prosecutors in this case were arrested on a false allegation of a theft from some accusers and assaulted very roughly. This class of crime is a very great offence to society, and this is very much aggravated by its having been perpetrated by the very persons whose duty it was to prevent the breaches of the peace.

Gooroochand Doss deposed, that he is a custom, and resided at Haankhola. Deponent knows the defendant at the bar. The defendant, on the month of Maugh last, at about 8 o'clock p. m., accompanied many other persons with lighted flambeaux to the prosecutor's house, and began to search the upper apartments. Prosecutor remained below till the jemadar sent for him and desired prosecutor to deliver up the keys of a chest, the property of this deponent, which they brought out of a room upstairs. The prosecutor replied, that the key was not by him, but at his house in Jorahbagan, and he would go and fetch it. The jemadar would not permit him to go there, but broke the chest open, but could not find any stolen property within it. The jemadar then, at the request of Kalloo Ghose, who had brought these persons to his house, took the prosecutor and his brother into custody, and Shoolucamp Shaw having brought a globe which he said he had found under the prosecutor's platform, and that it was a portion of the property stolen from the house of his master Kalloo Ghose, prosecutor, was then taken into the street, and he and his brother bound hand in hand, and taken in custody before Mr. McCann, who ordered the jemadar to release them; but the jemadar, after he had consulted with Kalloo Mullack, again bound prosecutor and his brother, and took them to Captain Birch's office; they were then made to wait below, whilst the jemadar went and spoke to Capt Birch and then took and confined the prosecutor and his brother in town guard all that night. The next day the charge of theft preferred by Kalloo Mulluck and his servant Soobut, was heard by Mr. C. K. Robinson, the magistrate, and dismissed, and the prosecutor and his brother released by his order.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cochrane. Prosecutor gave similar evidence in this Court, when Kalloo Chand and Soobut were tried on this charge and acquitted, and so did his brother who is very sick in his house. Kalloo was his next door neighbour. He had never heard of Kalloo's house having been robbed. Prosecutor put every person into the indictment who entered his premises. Kalloo was on bad terms with prosecutor. The case against Kalloo and Soobut was very prematurely brought on. Prosecutor had not time to subpoena his witnesses. The trial was found one day and the case called on the next. The prosecutor, his brother, Mr. McCann and Mr. Robinson, were the only persons examined on that occasion, and none of his servants. Here the prosecutor named the persons who were present on the occasion. One of them has died subsequently; but prosecutor has subpoenaed the rest. Mr. McCann's order to the jemadar was to deliver prosecutor and his brother to the care of his father. Prosecutor's brother was in attendance in this Court till yesterday, when he fell sick. Prosecutor never heard that Kalloo's house had been robbed, but Kalloo and his gang behaved like robbers in his.

Re-examined. Prosecutor asked Kalloo and his gang when they entered his house, what they wanted. They made no reply, but seized him. They produced no warrant on the occasion.

J. McCann deposed, that he is the deputy superintendent of the police. Complaints of robberies are made either to the magistrates or the superintendent of the police, and the thanadar. Deponent heard no complaint of a robbery committed in Kalloo Ghose's house on the day the prosecutor's house was searched, until shortly before the prosecutor and his brother were brought in custody to him. He desired the jemadar to take them to their father, and take his security to bring them to the police office the next day, to answer to the charge. It is not usual to search a house without a warrant. Deponent would not do it at night, nor would he take a man into custody at that late hour without an oath of the robbery; and if he had taken up a person in the condition in which these men were brought up to him, he would have sent them up to a magistrate for trial. He would not be punctilious regarding a search in the day time, if he was sure that stolen property was concealed in the suspected house.

Captain Birch deposed, that no person in this matter applied to him for a warrant to either arrest or search their house. He declined at first to answer whether he authorized the jemadar to search the prosecutor's house; but the counsel for the prosecution submitting that he was bound to answer the question, he said that he had given the jemadar authority to search the prosecutor's house. It was a verbal order and not given on any affidavit. The search was to be made in the prosecutor's thakoorbatty, to see if any of the property alleged to have been stolen from Kalloo Mulluck's house could be found there, and that if any were found to take the parties into custody. Kalloo Ghose was the complainant on that occasion, and said he suspected these two men as being the thieves. At night the thanadar gave him intimation, that a globe lamp had been found under the prosecutor's platform in his house, and jemadars and peons without seeing the persons brought in custody, ordered them to be confined in the town guard. The next day the case was taken up by Mr. Robinson, who, without an investigation, dismissed the charge.

Cross-examined. Deponent was not then so good a lawyer as now. The deponents are bound to obey his orders. Deponent did see the lamp. Mr. Robinson did make a preliminary investigation before he discharged the prisoners. They denied the charge against them.

Mr. Cochrane for the defence said, that the prosecutors had not shown that they were acquitted clearly of the charge Kalloo Mulluck had preferred against them. He next condemned in a very strong terms the practice of putting the neighbours and all witnesses in the case into the indictment, and thus deprive the prisoners of all evidence; and even if the search was illegal, it was committed by ignorant natives who were bound to obey the orders of their superiors on that point, and that they had no malicious intention in so doing. If any person had acted illegally, it was Captain Birch, who had given the order for their search; they, therefore, are innocent.

The judge then summed up the case, detailed the evidence, and commented on it, and said, that if the prosecutor's evidence is to be credited, the assault has been proved, and the prisoners have proved no justification. It is true that they searched his house by the order of Captain Birch; but Captain Birch himself had no power to order a search unless it was delegated to him by the magistrate, and thus, if the prosecutor is to be believed, and his testimony is uncontradicted, the jury must find the prisoners guilty, and it is for the judge to decide the nature of the punishment on the merits of the case.

The jury found all the prisoners guilty ; and the judge, as the prisoners had acted under the orders of Captain Birch, and could not discern that these order were illegal, but were bound to obey them, mitigated their offence, he inflicted on them the slightest punishment possible. They were fined 100 rupees each and ordered to be discharged.—Hurkaru, April 28.

TUESDAY, THE 30 OF MAY, 1838.

The Lunacy Case.

A commission of lunacy sat this-day at the Supreme Court house to enquire into the lunacy of Baboo Sreenauth Sandail, a supposed lunatic. The commissioners were Richard Marnell, Esq and W. P. Grant, Esq. counsel for the commission, C. R. Prinsep, Esq., Attorney Mr. P. Peard. The following jurors were chosen and sworn :

George Vint, Esq. Foreman ; D. M. Gordon ; G. A. Prinsep ; W. F. Gibbon ; J. Colquhoun ; J. S. Kellsad ; A. D'Souza ; C. Fagan ; W. Mackenzie ; J. B. Scott, Esq ; Carrapit Jacob ; Rajah Dabekissen ; Baboo Oboychurn Bonnerjee and Promothonauth Day.

The witnesses called and examined were Drs. H. S. Mercer and Walter Raleigh. A bearer named Gocool and a kansamah called Proncease, were stopped by the jury, who unanimously gave the following verdict : That Sreenauth Sandail was of un-sound mind, and had been so for about three years past, and did not enjoy lucid intervals, so that he was incapable of managing his own affairs ; and with regard to the amount of his property no evidence was tendered to them. The jury then adjourned to Saturday, the 15th instant, to meet and sign the inquisition. The gentleman of the jury then directed that all fees coming to them and partly to the commissioners, amounting in all to company's rupees 262 ; should be forthwith sent to Mr. Patton, the judge, to be applied by him in relieving the distresses of the sufferers by the late storm at Rungpore or Chingichutta in the 24-Pergunnahs, and the amount was immediately sent by the sheriff's office to Mr. Patton under the directions of Captain Vint, the Foreman.

J. H. PATTON, Esq.

Magistrate, 24-Pergunnahs.

Sir,—I have the pleasure to inclose the sum of 262 rupees, being the jury allowance in a case of lunacy of the 3d instant, which my brother jurymen requested me to forward you as their foreman, to be distributed amongst the unfortunate sufferers in Chingry Guttas village, &c.

I remain, your most obediently,

(Signed) GEORGE VINT.

(No. 183.)

TO GEORGE VINT, Esq.

Calcutta.

Sir,—I have to thank you, and your brother-jurymen, for your donation of 262 rupees intended to be devoted to the relief of the sufferers from the late storm, and beg to inform you that your wishes shall be attended to the best of my ability ; a receipt in duplicate for the amount is herewith annexed.

I am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

J. H. PATTON, Magistrate.

Zillah, 24-Pergunnahs, the 5th May, 1838.

Received from G. Vint, Esq., a donation of 262 rupees intended to be devoted to the relief of the sufferers from the late storm.

ZILLAH 24-PERGUNNAHS FOJJDARRY.

BARRACLT, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28, 1838.

(Before E. Deedes, Esq., Joint-Magistrate.)

Mr. McDougall, the grantee, appeared this-day, accompanied by Mr. Dias to inform the magistrate that he found it impossible to continue his residence at, or cultivation of the lands granted to him by the state in the Soonderbuns for the constant annoyance and disturbances created by the people of the zemindar of Khas Ballundahs. Mr. McDougall stated, that the zemindar's people had in a couple of hours destroyed a thatched house erected by him at considerable expense and trouble, and that the daring character of some of the attacks made him apprehensive of his life.

A similar representation was made by both Messrs. McPherson and McDougall to Mr. Commissioner Dampier a short time ago, and that gentleman immediately sent an official letter to the joint magistrate, requesting him, under the provisions of Regulation III. of 1828, to protect the grantees from the attacks and practices of the zemindars. Two cases were pending at this time at the Fojjdarry of Baraset, the one against the zamindar's people for stealing away and destroying several cocoanut plants, and the other against a sizar and other in the employ of Mr. McDougall for an alleged assault. In the former case the delinquents were sentenced, and the latter fell to the ground for the want of evidence. To our knowledge the latter case was a conspiracy supported by the most bare faced perjury, as the people charged with the assault, were at the time it was alleged to have occurred in attendance at the judge's Court at Alipore, at the hearing of Mahommed Ameer versus McPherson. Both cases were appealed by the Moon-shee's people and pending their issue, the offenders were released on bail.

Mr. Dias informed the magistrate, that his client had come to lodge an information against Moon-shee Mahommed Ameer, the zemindar Bycanto Paul, the Gomashtah, Mudden Mozumdar, the Felsuldar, and two Burkandazes. Mr. Dias said he would prepare Mr. McDougall's affidavits and file it before Mr. Deedes as a justice of the peace and magistrate, and he believed that the court would have no alternative but to issue warrants for the parties and oblige them to find bail for their future good conduct.

A native sizar-looking gentleman, here stepped forward and addressing the magistrate said, "my master is not that sort of man, that will be brought here on such an affidavit."

The following insolence was soon put a stop to by the magistrate telling him, that if he repeated his impertinence, he would let him feel the consequences of it, and that if he felt dissatisfied with any of the proceedings, he had his remedy by appeal to the superior Court. The magistrate then desired Mr. Dias to prepare the affidavit, on which being done, and on Mr. McDougall being sworn to it, writs were granted against the zemindar and his people.—Hurkaru, April 12.

MOONGHYR.

Resumption of Tasseer and Waste Lands in PurgunnahFurkea.

The resumption operations in this purgunnah have been nearly brought to a close, resulting, we are sure, very much to the satisfaction of Government. The settlements made with the zemindars and others for the land that has been resumed out of the old estates or muhals, show a considerable addition of revenue; and, which will progressively increase, till the close of the several terms for which the leases have been granted. The attempts of Government to procure an enhancement of revenue from the old muhals necessarily created great dissatisfaction among the zemindars at whose cost the increase was to have been induced; and when we examine the nature of the objections advanced by some of them, we are unavoidably led to question the right of Government to encroach upon the possessions of land-holders on any consideration whatsoever, not supported by the argument of pressing exigencies either of unavoidable foreign war, or general urgent measures to be adopted for the improvement of the country, embracing the benefit collectively of both the zemindars themselves and the people at large. The latter, we readily allow, may be prosecuted in a thousand very interesting and extensive channels of desirable improvement; but the former cannot, in the present posture of political affairs, be justified in any point of view. The excess in the former agrarian demands, however, has been laid; the resumptions are progressing; the resources of Government are being multiplied; the waste lands are put in the way of improvement (a very desirable thing no doubt); and the zemindars have signed, wept, bothered, and bestirred themselves to no purpose, as it respects saving themselves from the aggressions of the etchequer, into which, ere long, some forty or fifty thousand rupees, will flow from purgunnah Furkea alone. We could here suggest, that if the advantage of the people has been made the basis of the fresh exactions made from the Furkea zemindars, the additional profits thus secured should, at least, every third year, be appropriated exclusively to the local improvement of that purgunnah; some of which we here briefly point out. Bunds or embankments are very much required to prevent the inundations from the Gunduk, the waters of which, singularly enough, seldom make any productive deposits, while they interrupted the cultivations, and deprive the people of one of the best crops. Roads are very much wanted, sources of artificial irrigation are urgently and absolutely required, and, above all, a more respectable and efficient police is imperiously called for here, as well as in all the other parts of the country. If the people are made to add to the resources of the state, the latter should, in return, use its diligence to add to their comforts, safety, and prosperity.

The arguments generally made use of by the zemindars in support of their objections to the resumption proceeding, have been from time to time put into our possession, and as they are usually of the same kind, we here furnish a brief exposé of them as lately submitted to Government by Raja Bhudanund and his son Koomar Roodraund, zemindars of portions of this purgunnah.

1st. That one of the arguments used to warrant the resumption is that the resumed mouzas were not included in the famous decennial or perpetual settlement on account of their having been mere waste lands at the time. Against which position they urge that, at that time the papers of settlement did not specify the quantity of land comprehended within the area of the several tuppahs and mouzas included in the muhals, that these papers exhibit the aggregate of the estimated profits of four years, whereby a scale of jumma was formed for the levying of an excess to the revenue of former settlements,—that the sayer collections were taken away, and proportionate deductions were allowed them; that there is not a single mouza included in the tuppahs, nor any description of land that has at any time been exempt from the assessment, and jumma fixed by the perpetual settlement, that they support their objections on the provisions of regulations I. and VIII. of 1793, and the circular letter of the 22d May, 1818, in this particular; that all descriptions of land and mouzas whatsoever included within the boundaries of the tuppahs, as above settled in perpetuity, are unquestionably their rightful property, and can on no account be claimable by Government, and that the present measures of Government can be regarded in no other point of view than as the exhibition of an unjustifiable design of infringing on, and rendering the permanent settlement at once nugatory.

2d. Another argument used in support of the resumptions is the absence of any recorded jumma attached to the resumed mouzas and lands, in the column of jumma of the quinquennial register compiled in 1202 of the Fuslee year. This argument they rebut by observing, that the tuppahs, and mouzas were perpetually settled in the Fuslee year 1179, at which period those registers were not in existence; that they were embodied on data furnished by the kanoongoes, to which preparation of them they, the zemindars, were not parties, and therefore were not able to check the inaccuracies that abound in them; that as these registers were not in being at the time of the settlement, their rights, supported by section VII. or regulation I. and several sections of regulation VIII. of 1793 cannot be justifiably impugned, with a view to the intrusion of the claims of Government to lands lying within the land-marks of the tuppahs and mouzas settled in perpetuity before the quinquennial register was formed, that these registers comprise no part of the records of the perpetual settlement, a circumstance which in a peculiar manner renders them unauthentic, especially as they do not correspond with the substance and provisions of the pottahs and kuboolees mutually interchanged on the occasion. In proof of this they cite the following instance: Tuppah Jumalpoor, &c. is recorded in the said register, as assessed at Rs. 1,055. 5as. and 10gs. whereas, the amount of assessment specified in the pottah and kabolet is Rs. 12,429 12as. Again: tuppahs Rehooa and Sehuzaree, &c. in the register is stated to be assessed at Rs. 6,949 3as. but the amount entered in the pottah and kabolet is Rs. 8,200 10as. 8gs. Hence the spurious nature of the source of the formation of these registers is undeniably evident, that in the settlement books of 1197 Fuslee, jummas are attached to each mouza individually, consequently the argument herewith contested is not founded on act, that if any portion, or the whole of the lands comprising the estates of the zemindars had been discovered to be waste at the time of the compilation of the quinquennial register, that circumstance could only serve to prove that the zemindars, and not the Government, must have been subject to losses, from their having been unproductive; that nevertheless they have always faithfully discharged the demands of Government exacted from those very lands, which were included in the perpetual settlement, and that they have proved by respectable corroborative evidence, that the resumed lands were in a state of cultivation, before, at the time, and after a perpetual settlement.

3d. A further argument used is, that they support their objections by two things. 1st, Fesulas of the civil court, grounded on regulation XIV. of 1815; and 2dly, That the settlement made with them does not make any distinction between cultivated and waste lands. These objections are controverted by the assertion that the awards of the civil courts cannot abstract the investigation of the rights of Government. The petitioners contend that positively, entering various legal proceedings successively instituted in various courts, Mofussil, Appeal, and Sudder Dewanny, at the close of all of which the claims of Government were explicitly declared to be illegal, with reference to laying fresh jumma on the mahals included in the perpetual settlement; that the parties were peaceably put in possession of the lands attempted to be resumed, and that all these decisions were conformable to regulation 11. of 1819, XIV. of 1825, and sections XXII. and XXV. of regulation 111. 1793.

4th. Another argument started in support of the resumption is, that the regulations and the letters quoted by the zemindars, were only applicable to such mouzas as have been assessed by Government, and not to the waste lands. They contend that the settlements were made for pergunnahs without a specification of tuppahs, for tuppahs without a detail of mouzas; and mouzas without records nukka; consequently, all sorts of lands cultivated or waste, had been included in them, and therefore they indisputably belong to them.

5th. It is further urged in support of the Government resumptions, that the village aula of the zemindars themselves had pointed out the lands resumed as lying beyond the limits of the mouzas assessed at the time of the perpetual settlement. This argument, they say is, not founded in fact, for they flatly deny that their aula could possibly have done any such thing, since they knew that the truth of the matter was directly the reverse.

6th. Under this head they object to the argument that they cannot support their careat by any trustworthy document, by insisting upon it that they have submitted many of a very respectable and authentic nature, on the strength of which they urge that the claims of Government should be set aside.

7th. For an argument, that the perpetual settlement did not comprehend all the mouzas individually, they urge that their pattas, and the kabolents, expressly mention mouzas numerically detailed (with the collective jumma levied on them) comprehended in the several estates they refer to. They comprised in all 207 mouzas uslee and dakhilee; assessed at a total jumma of 22,262 rupees and 12 annas. And these were all perpetually settled.

Thus far we have very briefly represented the arguments pro and con of the resumption operations, but cannot spare time to enter at any length into the respective merits of the question as mooted by the contending parties. Let it suffice to intreat Government to hold in one hand the sceptre of mercy, while with the broom in the other, they sweep away any of those rights which they have themselves created, and till the moment of the commencement of the execution of the resumption proceedings, have upheld by their representatives in the constituted courts of the country.

But particular justice from us is due to the public officer of Government under whom the resumptions have been carried on in pergunnah Farkee. We allude to the Hon'ble Mr. Drummond, with whom we have, in the way of our humble calling, seldom come in contact. That this officer has acquitted himself, in the execution of his peculiarly trying duties to the satisfaction of Government, nobody will deny, after the result of the resumptions has exhibited a large amount of revenue added to the coffers of the state. That he could, nevertheless, have given satisfaction to the zemindars, nobody will be willing to credit, but we state it with pleasure as a matter of fact. Such, generally speaking, really is the case. We have had opportunities of conversing with many of the landholders concerned (much against their will, no doubt, originally) in the resumptions, and have from them obtained the following facts: That Mr. Drummond had decided upwards of two hundred disputed cases, of which only nine had been appealed to the higher authorities; but of which seven had been confirmed, leaving just two, in which his decision had been overruled. We have met with only two or three of the zemindars who seemed to be much dissatisfied with the result of Mr. Drummond's proceedings; but even they have been constrained to admit that in the decision of the rest of the cases justice had been done, since he was acting according to the orders of his superiors, and guiding his measures by the regulations of Government. We are no panegyrists, it will be allowed without controversy; but here we cannot refuse to do justice. We have before us the testimony of nearly a whole body of zemindars acknowledging that, whatever they might have to urge against the aggressive and arbitrary measures of Government, as they denominate them, they, with the exception of one or two captious individuals, conspire to represent Mr. Drummond as conducting his proceedings in the most impartial, cool and deliberate manner; readily admitting of remissions; correctly estimating the capabilities of the land; to be assessed, and rather erring on the side of concession than aggression. We are unchangeable in our opinion that the execution of the important functions vested in the younger branch, especially, of the service, are improperly regulated; and that but a very small number of them are fit to be entrusted with them. The exceptions are discovered accidentally, as it were. The world but scantily knows what is transpiring on the Mofussil. It is our province to search—we have done so; we have, we trust, honestly given them their dues. We could have lifted up a finger at Mr. Drummond, but we drop it when we are called upon by the concurring voices of the zemindars of Farkee to say that they have been satisfied with in his public capacity. We hope that Government will, ere long, prove that it is not indifferent to the expression of the sentiments of the people over whom they have set generally very incompetent officers for the distribution of justice, when such instances as the one we now usher into the light, are by the people (though unknown to themselves) brought to their notice.—Hurkaru, April 14.

CALCUTTA.

DEATHS AMONGST HINDOOS.—From a report furnished at the police office from the two ghauts, it appears that the following was the number of deaths which occurred amongst the Hindoo inhabitants of Calcutta, from the 1st to the 10th of the present month :

	By Cholera.	By small Pox.	By Miscellaneous diseases	Total.
1	49	6	8	63
2	50	9	13	172
3	87	7	14	108

8	37	10	9	56
9	28	7	14	49
10	20	8	16	44
	449	74	131	654

By our last notice, under this head, it appeared that the number of deaths within the limits of Calcutta, amongst the Hindoo inhabitants, was thirteen hundred and thirty-two from the 1st to the 18th instant. The following has been reported.

		Small Pox.	Cholera.	Miscellaneous diseases.	Total.

Towards Tantollah and Cullagah, where the cholera had about a fortnight or three weeks ago been most prevalent, it has become very mild; so that the medical students placed in those two thannas, have been withdrawn as having little or nothing to do. But it is now raging with virulence in the northern parts of the town, which are chiefly inhabited by Hindoos, as appears in the above memorandum.

DISCHARGE OF AN ENTIRE THANNA ESTABLISHMENT.—The whole establishment of the Beng Bazar thanna, namely the thannadar, the naibs, and all the cholera-dars attached thereto, were, the other day, discharged for a gross neglect of duty, of which, however, we have not been able to learn the particulars. It is stated that a robbery had lately taken place in their division, of property worthy about eleven hundred rupees, which they had kept a secret from their superior.

JUDICIAL APPOINTMENT.—William Patrick Grant, Esquire, the son of Sir J. P. Grant, has been, through his father's interest, appointed to the vacant office of Master in Equity.

MR. WILLIAM RUSHTON.—The following well merited tribute, has been paid by the editor of the Englishman to Mr. William Rushton :

"Our readers have doubtless noticed an advertisement which has been for some days prominently before them, announcing that Mr. William Rushton, in conjunction with other parties, is about to commence business on his own account as a book-seller, stationer and printer.

As this measure necessarily involves the dissolution of the connexion hitherto subsisting between Mr. Rushton and the Englishman establishment, to the extent, at least, of his duties as printer and publisher, we think it incumbent on us to offer him a public farewell, and to express our hearty good wishes for the complete prosperity of his new undertaking. For five years we have experienced from Mr. Rushton the most active and zealous co-operation in the performance of duties of which no one but ourselves can fully understand the difficulty—no one thoroughly appreciate the mental and bodily labor,—because no one was ever required to attempt them in this place before. Our readers may remember when every week, nay almost, every day, brought its meeting of angry creditors of fallen houses,—of steam projectors, ice projectors, library projectors, free press advocates, civil jury clamourers, bank act petitioners, &c. &c.; when every Saturday produced its Insolvent Court rife with interesting and intricate proceedings,—when every term yielded an infinity of cases springing from the commercial lombardise of 1833. Many of our supporters will also recollect when an overland packet was a rarity, and never to be calculated upon, and when, in consequence, the arrival of a Liverpool or Bordeaux ship was an event anxiously watched for, as likely to put us in possession of the latest news from home. It was during those periods of editorial difficulty that we felt the great value of Mr. Rushton's unwearied industry and friendly zeal. Day after day might he be seen at the counting-house or the town-hall, diligently reporting the speeches, the judgments and the embarrassing 'desultory conversation,' for which all kinds of meetings were then distinguished; and anon, as if gifted with the spirit of ubiquity, he was away down the river in the highest of beaushabs to meet the 'latest arrival,' telegraphed but a few minutes previously, returning with her (to us) greatest treasure, the latest papers, and creating an 'extra' while our contemporaries were asleep! These were services the value of which we have been reaping for the two past years; and though an alteration in the character of a journalist's labor enables us now to dispense in some measure with Mr. Rushton's further aid, we cannot forget what we owe to his great energy, activity, prudence and integrity, or deny ourselves the gratification of paying a public tribute to his worth.

As the sole proprietor and editor of the Oriental Observer Mr. Rushton continues the publication and management of that excellent periodical, but his general printing and stationary establishment is a new undertaking altogether, and, in our opinion, a very great desideratum in this town. We hope he will receive very extensive patronage, for if ever honest man deserved support, he certainly does.

HEALTH IN THE HOUSE OF CORRECTION.—It is considered very strange that the state of health in the House of Correction should be so different from the remainder of the town and its suburbs. While cholera and small-pox are raging in a frightful manner beyond its walls, not a single case of any of these scourges has occurred within them. There are now about a hundred and fifty prisoners in it, and some fourteen or fifteen of them, only, are afflicted with a slight fever.

THE PRETENDED RAJA OF BURWAN.—It is said, that the soi-disant Rajah of Burwan, has been ranging about the river lately with a retinue of boats full of his followers. He set out from hence some time ago with the avowed intention of going to Burdwan. This intention he has not fulfilled; but after remaining opposite to Chinsurah for some time, he proceeded to Culna and landed there with an armed rabble of some 300 men headed by himself in a tonjon, with a drawn sword in his hand, and a European legal functionary attending him. He ordered the sepalli centry at the Raj Bari to quit his post, which the man declined to do; and the pretender was prevailed upon, with great difficulty, by the darogah, not to attack the man. If he had done so, as there were probably more than 100 of the actual Rajah's men within the gate, with an abundant supply of arms, the pretender and his rabble would have been repulsed. Information of these proceedings being sent to Mr. Ogilvie, the magistrate of Burdwan, that gentleman immediately sent orders to the police to compel the pretended Rajah and his rabblement to retire. This they refused to do; and the Darogah reported that any attempt to carry his orders into effect would be useless and lead to bloodshed, and he had no force at all adequate to cope with the followers of the Pretender. Besides which, the fellow had been visited by crowds of people, the natives coming daily in thousands down to his boats. In the mean time, letters of his had been intercepted, addressed to all the neighbouring zemindars, calling upon them to assemble at Burdwan and witness his re-ascension to the guddee of his ancestors. Mr. Ogilvie, under these circumstances, proceeded to Culna, with a military force, and apprehended the Pretender, and has now in custody. The magistrate had previously received orders to apprehend this man, if he should attempt any proceeding of the nature described.

The pretender calling himself Petaub Chund and claiming the Raj of Burdwan, of whose proceedings, at Culna, we gave an account the other day, has been apprehended. It would seem that he never could have had any serious intention of going to Burdwan, as he was perfectly aware that he would not be permitted to go there with an armed rabble, such as he chose to be attended by. He remained, therefore, at Culna until the 2d instant, sometimes going ashore merely to create a tama-ha. Crowds of people collected to see him, amounting sometimes probably to 50,000, including a very large proportion of women. On the morning of that day, however, the magistrate arrived with a company of the 2d native infantry, commanded by Captain Little of that corps with another commissioned officer. They found the impostor in his boats, moored near the mouth of a nullah, in a good position for defence or escape. He had the discretion to choose the latter, and attempted to make off as soon as he saw the troops approach. As soon as the magistrate saw this, he commanded the boats to stop. His orders, however, were disobeyed. Hereupon, by some mistake, a volley was fired by the troops, and four of the deluded followers of this man were wounded by the fire, three of whom have since died. The fellow upon this, jumped into a dingy, but the people deserting him, he threw himself into the river and got on the bank where he lay motionless like a dead body, and had nearly escaped by this artifice. An experienced havildar, however, gave him a kick and thus discovered him. Several of his followers were taken prisoners in the boats, and among them, three Europeans. One of these is Mr. Shaw, the Attorney, who was lodged in the jail of Burdwan, where his countrymen also found quarters; but they have been brought down to Calcutta on writs of habeas corpus.

The pretender himself, was, immediately after he was captured, sent off to Hooghly, in charge of Captain Little and his company, and was, early on the morning of the 6th instant, delivered over by that officer to the magistrate of that place, and is safely lodged in the jail. Very few of the natives assembled at Hooghly to witness the Jai Rajah's re-entry into the prison; but at Nyah Serai where Capt. Little had encamped the evening before, we learn that many thousands of people had flocked in from all quarters to see the prisoner. It is said, that the Pachete Rajah, one of the powerful zemindars, with whom Petaub Chund was in correspondence, has, since the capture of the Pretender, broken out in open revolt and attacked and taken possession of a factory of Dr. Cheek's. Mr. Halkett, the officiating magistrate of Burdwan, has gone out against this mad, with two companies of sepoys.

During the last week, Mr. Shaw made an application to the Deputy Governor of Bengal, setting forth, as report says, that the proceedings on the part of the force employed to apprehend Petaub Chund, were most unwarrantable, and quite uncalled for; he prayed, therefore, that some able and impartial officer may be appointed for due investigation into the affair; and his honour in council was pleased to commission the superintendent of police for the Bengal presidency for that purpose. He has left Calcutta, accordingly, for Burdwan.

The 19th instant was the third day of the examination, and, at about half past five, Mr. Longueville Clarke addressed the magistrates and said, for the present his friend, Mr. Leith, and he would address no further evidence, nor as yet press the magistrates to take any further step for an ex-parte case, which these preliminary inquiries always were. They had proved all that was necessary; and he would stake his professional reputation, that if the statements were not contradicted, any judge, charging a jury, would tell them that if they believed the witnesses they must find a verdict of guilty. But he would not now ask the magistrates for a warrant: he should, as he had always stated his intention to be, submit the evidence taken down to the Government; they might hand it to their law officers, or, what would be more proper, they might obtain copies of the magistrates' depositions. He would give the Government ample time to consider the matter, and to make every inquiry; and, as he believed there is no fear of Mr. Ogilvie's wishing to escape, or that he could do so, he did not consider that by following this course, the ends of justice could be defeated. But he sincerely believed that the ends of justice would have been defeated, if Mr. Leith and he had not forced this investigation on. They had waited to see what the Government would do, and they found them sending a gentleman to Burdwan, as he believed, in utter ignorance of the fact, that from the power of Prawn Baboo, and the dread of the magistrate, no witness would go here to depose against them. This he had distinctly proved in evidence, and also Mr. Ogilvie's admission, on a former occasion, "that the Rajahbarry was a sink of iniquity, and that he believed every native in the Government employment at Burdwan, was an annuitant of Prawn Baboo's." The witnesses would not go there, and they were all here, and nineteen of them he had examined. By this course he had saved evidence, which he believed would otherwise have been lost, and he had only caused it to be taken in the legal and proper manner, before the justice of the peace. He appealed to the magistrates to say, whether his friend and he had not conducted the examinations fairly towards the accused, and the witnesses.

Mr. O'Hanlon said, most fairly, that he believed, if it became necessary to issue a warrant, Mr. Ogilvie would surrender. Mr. Clarke replied, that it rested with him, the accused should not be put to any inconvenience which was not absolutely unavoidable, with a view to the ends of justice. Mr. Clarke also stated, that the intentions of his friend and himself to forward their notes of the depositions, as soon as they could be fair copied, had been communicated to the Government. Mr. O'Hanlon observed, that he also had mentioned it."

DORJELING.—The new settlement at Dorjeling progresses. About fifteen locations have been made, and additional applications are daily flowing in. A line of bungalows is constructing in the new road to the new settlement, to which all interested subscribe 100 rupees; for this sum Col. Lloyd's agents now call upon them, to enable the good work to proceed.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.—A meeting of the subscribers and proprietors was held on the 5th instant, for the purpose of electing a curator, in the room of Mr. John Bell, who had resigned. Sir J. P. Grant was in the chair. Mr. Bell's letter, assigning, as a reason for his resignation, a difference of opinion with his colleagues, was read. A minute, by the same gentleman, and counter-minutes, by Messrs. H. M. Parker and W. P. Grant were likewise read, and a discussion ensued thereupon. It appeared that Mr. Bell considered the library in a state of insolvency, and that he saw no prospect of extricating it from its difficulties. He also seemed to feel hurt, that he had not been consulted by his colleagues, touching some of the measures which had been adopted by them.

Mr. W. P. Grant, in explanation, denied that a difference of opinion subsisted between Mr. Bell, Mr. Parker, and himself, he likewise disputed the accuracy of Mr. Bell's calculations, and shewed, by the scrutiny of an account laid before the meeting, and prepared by the Librarian, that the library was far from being in a state of insolvency. Mr. Grant further stated, that Mr. Bell had always been duly invited to the meetings of the curators, but having failed to attend, he could not justly complain of not having been consulted. Mr. Grant spoke of the attacks which had been made on the curators in the public papers, and appeared to think, that they proceeded partly from an unaccountable wish to discredit the efforts of the curators, and partly from ignorance of the real state of affairs.

Mr. Stoequeler pro parte, and with reference to the remark regarding newspaper attacks, avowed that he grounded those which the Englishman had made, on evidence furnished by the curators themselves. He referred to their last published statement of accounts, (1st April) in which it appeared that the library owed upwards of eight hundred rupees to the Union Bank, but had, to meet the debt, only 900 rupees, in course of collection, a sum that might or might not be recoverable.

Mr. Stoequeler said, that he felt much interest in the prosperity of the library, and that, as the public could only be induced to support it by being put in possession of the state of affairs, he thought it the duty of the press, when the affairs were represented to be in disorder, to urge a reform in the management. He was much gratified with Mr. W. P. Grant's present explanation, and regretted that it had not been laid before the public, instead of the imperfect statement which had alarmed him (Mr. S.) and other friends to the library.

Mr. W. P. Grant and Mr. H. M. Parker expressed their surprise, that the imperfect statement should have found its way into the public prints. It contained important omissions, and its appearance had not been sanctioned by them.

On the question of Mr. Bell's resignation being put from the chair, Mr. Bell was asked whether what he had then heard and seen respecting the accounts, did not cause any alteration in his intentions?

Mr. Bell avowed that his opinion remained unaltered.

Mr. W. Adam then proposed that a committee be formed to investigate the accounts, and report upon the state of affairs.

Mr. J. P. Grant seconded the proposition. Mr. Stoequeler moved as an amendment, that the curators be requested to prepare and publish a statement of the accounts made up to the 1st May (instant), exhibiting all the available assets of the institution, and specifying its debts and dependencies. Mr. W. Ochme seconded the amendment. Mr. W. Adam submitted that the original motion and the amendment might be rendered perfectly compatible with each other, by the curators being requested to form the committee of investigation. In this form the proposals were put from the chair and agreed to nem. con.

On a motion that the meeting do proceed to elect a curator, in succession to Mr. Bell, Mr. Morrell proposed Mr. Stoequeler. Mr. S. submitted that, not being a proprietor, he was ineligible. Mr. J. P. Grant then named Mr. William Carr, who had formerly been a curator, and merely resigned because he was about to proceed to England. Mr. Stoequeler seconded the nomination, and Mr. Carr was duly elected.

The meeting then separated after voting thanks to Sir J. P. Grant, for the kind manner in which he had performed the troublesome duties of the chair.

SALE OF COMPANY'S COMMISSIONS.—Despatches have been received in India, announcing the intention of the Honourable Court to withdraw their old prohibition of the sale and purchase of commissions in the army; in other words, it has been found expedient to legalize the purchasing system which could not be prevented.

CIVIL SERVANTS' PERIOD OF PROBATION.—It is said that the Court of Directors intend to vest a discretionary power in the local Government, of modifying the present peremptory rule, which allows to their civil servants, the term of one year only for passing the college examinations, from the date of their arrival at the presidency.

RUMOURS OF WAR.—Preparations for a further concentration of forces, are said to be going on, and another company of sappers and miners have marched for Sylhet; and it is hinted, that two more regiments will be added to the Sylhet frontier.

SECTION WRITING.—Government have at length come to a decision on the much mooted question of remuneration to section writers. The pay is hereafterward to be one rupee for one thousand four hundred and forty words. The resolution applies to all section writers who have entered the service subsequent to the 1st of January last, but does not affect the remuneration of old servants. At the end of each year a committee is to be formed to take into consideration all matters touching section writing, and to make their report thereon.

DISCOVERY OF MAKING FADDOCA.—Mr. D. W. H. Speed has succeeded in making faddoca from the cassava plant. Having obtained some plants of the cassava from the Horticultural Society, Mr. Speed proceeded to his task with an ability that exhibits itself in the perfect success of his endeavours. To make the speculation in any way responsive to the trouble and time which it requires. It is desirable that the remaining portions of the plant should find a sale in the market; and as it is in its nature nearly, if not altogether, unknown to our native fellow citizen, we have the pleasure to state for their information, that the cassava is used in the West Indies as a substitute for bread, and that very pretty eating may be had from it, in the shape of good, wholesome food. If any inducement were given by purchasing these portions, so that on the disposal of the whole plant, a profit might be reaped from his labours, we are given to understand, that Mr. Speed would not be unwilling to manufacture another article of dirt, admirably adapted to the uses of convalescents and young children.

ACQUEDUCT IN NEW COOLOOTOLAH STREET.—The acqueduct, which was noticed in the papers some time ago, as proposed to be made in New Coolootollah street, at the expense of Baboo Moteelaul Seal and Baboo Maudhub Dutt, has lately been begun. It will cost the Baboos about four thousand rupees.

FANCY SALE.—The sale of fancy articles for the relief of sufferers in the north-western provinces, realized about six thousand rupees.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH OF MR. HUNTER.—Intelligence has been received of the death of Mr. Hunter, of the civil service, under very melancholy circumstances. The catastrophe is described in the following extract of a letter, dated Ghazepore, May 8, 1838.

‘Mr. Hunter, joint magistrate of this station, was amusing himself yesterday evening about 6 o’clock, leaping a spirited horse over a ditch or drain. About the third attempt, the horse nerved and turned, which suddenly unseated Mr. H.,—he fell on his head, crushing the crown inwards, and was taken up senseless; blood was gushing from his mouth and ears. Medical aid was speedily called. Mr. Assistant Surgeon Jackson was first in attendance, but nothing could be done; the poor gentleman never spoke again, and was dead in an hour after the accident.

MR. MANGLES.—Mr. Ross Donnelly Mangles has been appointed to succeed Mr. Walters in the Board of Revenue. This leaves the secretaryship in the judicial department to the Governor of Bengal vacant, and it is not improbable Mr. F. Halliday will be permanently appointed in Mr. Mangles’s room.

THE BURMAM AND PISHIL GAVINS.—A letter from Assam states, that the Burmah and Peshawar Gains had returned to their old places, and that there is not the slightest chance of another disturbance at present, they having sent back their hired fighting men.

THE BURMAM AND PISHIL GAVINS.—Two companies of Assam light infantry have been ordered to keep the pass between Burmah and Nepal, and to intercept all letters that may be passing. A sample of Thacawaddi’s serawl has been sent to Major Lister for his guidance. It is a compound of clumsy pot hooks and hangers, as a great man’s manuscript ought to be. The Nepouese Rajah, on the other hand, writes a fine list, something between German text and running hand.

SALE OF THE COMPANY’S SILK FACTORIES.—The under-mentioned silk filatures, belonging to the East India Company, which were put up for sale at the export warehouse on the 22d instant, fetched the following prices:

Bhowannygunje factory, 100 pottery ghies, &c., standing on about 12 beegas of land, subject to an annual rent of Sa. Rs. 72. Upset price Company’s rupees 1,780, was purchased by Baboo Rogoonath Bose for Co.’s Rs. 1,785.

Hajah factory, 180 pottery ghies, &c. standing on about 21 beegas and 12 cottals of land, subject to an annual rent of Sa. Rs. 43-3-4. Upset price Company’s Rs. 2,677, was purchased by Baboo Cos-math Bose for Co.’s Rs. 2,670.

Madaymoore factory, 70 pottery ghies, &c., standing on about 9 beegas of land, subject to an annual rent of Sa. Rs. 36. Upset price Company’s rupees 1,423, was purchased by the same individual for Co.’s Rs. 1,482.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—His Excellency the Commander-in-chief has tendered his resignation. This regulation, in which his departure for England has been fixed to take place in the ensuing cold weather, was sent in last month, various reasons of a public nature, are assigned for this step.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—Colonel Alves, and his corps diplomatique, are still at Kotah, emancipating the Rajah from the thralldom of his hereditary prime minister, who has hitherto arrogated to himself all the powers and emoluments of a Maire du Palais, but who has now engaged to relinquish these prerogatives, on being granted a lat jagher! These arrangements will, in all probability, be concluded by the end of the present month, when Colonel Alves expects to return to Ajmere.

The wealthy Seths of the city of Ajmere have miserably come down with nearly two thousand rupees, in aid of the famishing poor of the Doab.

AGRA.—The weather has been extremely variable since the last report, the wind being chiefly from the north, and north east; at one time hot and oppressive, even long after sun set, but as the night advances, it becomes almost cold. This must be owing to rain from a northerly quarter, and it is known, that a heavy fall took place at Kurnaul on the night of the 11th and 12th instants. Cholera, happily, continues to retrograde, but the hospitals, European and native, are full of fever cases, accompanied by distressing affections of the head. A general deterioration of air, or exhalations issued to an extent in its operation, ascertained at the same time by a great diversity of temperature, have, no doubt, rendered the present season a very unhealthy one.

The number of poor working under the magistrate are still ranged somewhat below 80,000. The official return is 77,500, and the new entries are at present not more than sufficient to cover the number of vacancies arising from dislike to hard work, a wish to better situation, death, sickness, and the dread of catching the cholera.

MUMBAI.—Owing to cholera having prevailed for some time past amongst the Europeans of the troop of Horse Artillery at Mitala, where several men have been carried off by the disease, it has been determined to move the troops into tents across the Jumna, for change of air, and to enable the barracks to be white-washed, and otherwise purified; the same measure having been resorted to, with complete success last year, in respect to the Foot Artillery at Agra.

ATYAGURH.—The bridge over the Kala Nudlee at Hydumy in this district, has suffered a serious fracture, one of the blind arches having sunk so as to become separated from the main building. This bridge was only finished in 1830, and cost the Government 96,000 rupees.

Cholera and small-pox have both broken out in this town, but have not assumed any very virulent character.

MYSROOR.—Mangoe grove, large enough to hold between 2,000 and 3,000 people, is walled in, and divided by a bamboo fence, into secure and commodious lanes. Into this enclosure the poor are admitted every morning at daybreak. Bread is baked on the premises of a Resident, and its distribution is superintended by another soon after sunrise. Three chapatties weigh a pound, and this quantity is given to the leanest adults; two to the less lively, and to the weaker children, and one to the remainder: a man follows, distributing salt, and four bladders of water. Subordinate arrangements are observed, and adopted as suggested by necessity, for convenience of distribution, and the preservation of order: thus, tickets, consisting of an office stamp pasted on wood, are suspended to the necks of the weaker objects, and these are confined to one line; none are allowed to pass the entrance, nor to rise from their seats, after a certain juncture. These, and similar precautions are necessary, for the good of the whole. The number now fed, amounts to about 1,450 souls; and without doubt, the majority of these are nearly, if not entirely, sustained by the charity. One maund of ota bakes into 1½ or 1¼ of bread; therefore seven maunds gives about 2,400 cakes,—enough for 1,000 applicants.

SAVOOR.—The weather continues delightfully cool, and the station is remarkably healthy. Much praise is due to Captain R., executive officer, for the attention which he has bestowed on the public roads, and for general improvement throughout the cantonment.

SMILA was never so crowded as it is this season.—The rent of houses is enhanced fifty per cent. Upwards of twenty houses of this and last year's erection, are all occupied. Public offices are converted into private residences by the majority of the Governor-General's office establishments, and the public bazar contains a portion of those who were unfortunate enough not to obtain domiciles elsewhere. Lord Auckland is said to be displeased with his house. It is littered away in paltry closets six and seven feet square, and has only two rooms deserving the name. His Lordship's staff are little better off. Among the Commander-in-Chief's party, there are many in larger and better houses than His Lordship. This is rather charming. His Lordship's cutee was rather imposing: the elite of Smila, headed by Sir H. Fane and staff in "review order," ushered him in. Provisions are scarce and dear, which, perhaps, accounts for the monotonous dullness of the place at present. Balls and dinners are talked of, and the political agent is preparing for a grand fête to be assembled at Smila. Theatricals were talked of, but the dramatis persone hang back from apprehensions, that their body is neither numerous nor choice enough to afford popular representations. It is said that the Governor General returns here next season, after visiting Lahore, but doubts are entertained whether the Commander-in-Chief does. The death of his mother may induce his return home, but every thing is yet in profound uncertainty. A mission from Lahore is daily expected, and a return one, headed by Mr. Macnaghten, is talked of. The establishment of a cantonment at Ferozepore on the Sutlege is, I believe, determined on, and apprehension seems to be entertained that all is not right on the N.W. frontier. Artillery and Cavalry, it is presumed, will constitute our chief arm at the remodelled fortress and new cantonment. The influenza, an epidemic, which more or less has affected the inhabitants of Upper India during the last four months, visited this place, and is now disappearing. Its symptoms are those of mild fever and partial cold, and with care it is got over in a few days. On Wednesday and Saturday evenings, the public are gratified with good music from the Governor-General's band. There are about 300 Christian residents here now. The weather is still delightfully cool; fires are kept in the houses, and people stroll about all day without even a chatta.

MONOYRA.—A fire broke out in the Surwun Bazar at Monghyr, on the evening of 8th of April, at sunset, which, owing to the high wind blowing at the time, first threatened to be very destructive, but was afterwards nappily got under without any very extensive loss. The vicinity of the burnt part of the town to a bazar, in which a vast quantity of grain was stored, caused serious alarm at the commencement of the disaster, but we are happy to have learnt that the flames were arrested before reaching this valuable store. It is supposed that not more than five and twenty houses were burnt, and these, for the most part, were huts. Had the wind blown a contrary quarter, that is from the westward instead of the eastward, a great portion of the town must have been destroyed. The conflagration was accidental, having been excited by the overboiling of a glue pot.

LODHIKAN.—A deputation, headed by Mr. Secretary Macnaghten, to the Lahore Court, was to leave this station on the 10th instant. Its object is, it is supposed, to arrange preliminaries and forms for the interview between Lord Auckland and Runjeet Sing, which is to take place at Faurapoor on the Sutlege, next November. The deputation will be escorted by two companies of native troops.

NEEMUCH. This part of the country is in a sadly unsettled state, overrun with plunderers of all descriptions. Capt. Ross, the Deputy Judge Advocate Genl., had a very narrow escape from being murdered, he having been attacked on his road to Alhow some days ago by three horsemen. They waylaid him as he was riding along unarmed, and with cries of "maer Funnere salah" charged him spear in hand. One fellow aimed directly at his breast but by wheeling his horse sharply round he escaped the blow, the weapon passing under the bridle arm, without injury. Being no match for the party, he put spurs to his horse and escaped, after being pursued for two miles. A representation of the business has been forwarded to Government by Mr. Bax at Indore, and it is to be hoped that something will be done to rid the country of these scoundrels.

NATIVE STATES.

NIPAL.—It is understood that in the event of a collision between us and the Burmese, the latter will be supported by the Nepalese. Some of the most impregnable of the hill forts are under repair, and a wooden barrier and intrenchment is being erected continuous to our territories. Such are the reports from this quarter.

KOTAH.—Native reports state, that the inconvenient and anomalous system of Government, which has held together now many years, and which it became expedient, if not necessary, for the British Government to assist in establishing at Kota, after the death of that "Nester of Rajasthan" Qaleem Sing, who did beyond doubt fill the office of prime minister in most embarrassing times, for a long period, with great tact and wisdom,—is on the point of being disannulled; as the treaties of separation, twixt the Maharao and the Raja Rana are being drawn up, by Captain Ludlow the political agent at that state, Colonel Alves, the agent in chief of Rajpootana, having afforded him the no small advantage, on the occasion of his late visit at Kotah, of witnessing the completion of the arrangement, which the subordinate official had been most anxiously and laboriously employed in preparing for some time past, for the ultimate approval of the greatest chief of all—the Governor General of all India.

HERAT.—By letters from that quarter it has been learnt that the forces of Iran have besieged the fort of Herat for seven months past, but by the bravery and boldness of Kamran, the King of that place, the fort remains unconquered. Large quantities of grain is stored in the fort, and plenty of wells.

The Shah of Iran asked his courtiers to assail the fort at once, but they advised him not to do so, as there would be a great loss on his side. The Shah has determined to take the fort, or die in the attempt.

JYSEPOOR.—The Regent Rawal Beres Sal, is said to be suffering from abscess of the liver, and is expected to sink under it. His death will be the signal for numerous commotions and intrigues in this state. The rubber crop has been a complete failure and considerable depopulation is taking place in consequence.

BEWAR.—An order from the commissioner, over this zillah, enforced by the magistrate, authorizing the slaughter of cows outside the different villages, has thrown the Hindoos into a state of great ferment. Finding their expostulations to the commissioner unavailing, they have referred their complaints to Mr. Metcalf, the Governor-General's agent for these districts.

RAJAWAR.—Travellers from that quarter mention, that the forces of Rhybar having descended from the hill, and stolen away the cattle of the Mahals of Mullar, while they were grazing in a pasture, and when the owners of Rohawar received the intelligence, they pursued and attacked them. The Khyber for e were defeated and hid themselves in the hills.

CIVIL.—Reports from this place say that Captain Alexander Lumsden is enjoying his furlow well at Cabul and the Amers of the place visit him every day. There has been very little snow, and the travellers state that they have never felt so much heat in Cabul as they do this season.

SCIND.—By intelligence received from Scind, it appears that some ten or twelve thousand of belot hies having assembled together, had commenced depredations within the Scind territories, and had plundered and ruined many villages therein, when the amers of Scind, with a view to put an end to the evil, sent a force against them. On their confronting the enemy, the number of the latter being greater, the former was defeated. The amers of Scind, about a month after, got up a powerful army, which proceeding against the Bojoochees, the tables were turned against them, and their number being smaller, they thought it best to retreat. The Scind troops routed them and killed many of them in their retreat.

BOMBAY.

LOSS OF A LARGE VESSEL AND A PATAMAR.—A large vessel and a patamar have been lost between Burn Hill and Mount Formosa to the southward. The wreck was discovered by a vessel which lately passed down the coast, and information of the event communicated to our naval authorities. The person by whom the communication was made, observed to him that a large spar about 15 or 20 feet above water, and on proceeding to examine this, another spar was observed standing eight feet out of the sea. The first was evidently, it is said the lower mast of a vessel, as the stump of it was clearly distinguishable, and the smaller one was the mast head of a patamar with the rigging upon it. From the observations which were made, it was supposed that the wreck must have been a brig, and that she must have gone down in a straight direction, her keel resting on the bottom. Those who examined the vessel think that she must have been of a large size. Endeavours were made to disengage each of the spars but without success, although they managed to tow the smaller one about fifteen yards, when it was retained by something to which it appeared to be attached. On sounding there was a depth of 23 fathoms alongside the vessel which was lying with her head to the southward, from which circumstance it is thought she was homeward bound. The patamar, on examination, appeared to be held down only by the ship's rigging, and could be moved about easily. They sounded also on the deck of the vessel but could not see either its hull or that of the patamar. The conjecture is, that the vessel and the patamar must have come in collision during the night of Monday the 23d of April, which was a very dark and boisterous one, and to have gone down both of them instantaneously. Great fears are entertained that all on board perished. The wreck lies in 22 fathoms water about 15 or 16 miles from the shore, in latitude 12° 26' north, longitude 74° 59' east, Burn Hill bearing north 48° east Mount Formosa S. 72° E. and Mount Dilly just in sight from the wreck bearing S. 40° E.

CANTON.

JOHN SMITH.—A great excitement, it is said, at present prevails in Canton, in consequence of a person named John Smith, an English Protestant, having lately renounced the Christian faith for the doctrines of the prophet. The individual is said to be a tailor, but very industrious, who employs many poor people and has a com-led him to change from Protestantism to Romanism, in expectation of obtaining relief, and that being disappointed he has now become Mahometan, in which he has been more successful, having, in the few days since he had was married in his dress changed, obtained a large sum of money in presents from the Moors. He is in fact a native of the amongst those people who crowd to see Abdul Rahim Mowlah, which is the name he now assumes. He has deserted his wife and children, declaring however his readiness to provide for them if they like this new career, but he is shortly to be married to a Moir woman, with whom he will probably get a considerable marriage portion. There are also said to be different plans to provide liberally for him either to give him a bazaar in the parish or to send him to the coast. Although he has made a fine proclamation of his apostasy, though he secretly thinks the Moors can derive much credit from their convert.

BURMAH.

MARTABAN.—The barracks for the expected European regiment at Martaban, and, no doubt, will be ready before the end of the month.

The result of the investigation which was held at Martaban by two Burmese officers of rank, into the outrages committed on our frontier, is just what was all along anticipated. It seems that the Burmese officers sent over to say they had secured two of the men accused of committing murders and robberies. Mr. de la Coudamine proceeded to Martaban to ascertain the fact, and being satisfied they were the men, (although they were anything but secured, being in fact gentlemen, at large, and in the suit of a high Birong official who had accompanied the Burmese commissioners) he called for the apprehension of some more of those whose names had been given in by him on a former occasion. To his surprise, however, the Burmese commissioners said they had done all that was required of them. They had made enquiries, they said, and apprehended two men, and they intended to return to Rangoon immediately. Being asked if they intended to try even the two men whom they pretended to have secured, they said no, it was no part of their duty. Mr. de la Coudamine took his leave and the next morning, (the 1st) the two Burmese officers, started on their return, although the day before they had said they intended remaining some days longer. What occasioned this precipitate retreat on their part is not known. Some attribute it to the want of provisions at Martaban for so large a number of followers as accompanied them; others to the preparations going on here for the reception of additional troops. Others again assert that orders have come down from Court, both to prohibit the encouragement of dacons in future, and to put a stop to any enquiry into what they may have already effected. Among the native reports current in the place, one that possesses peculiar interest for the Malakian ship-builders, is, that opposition building-yards are to be established at Martaban under the auspices of Mr. Barkley.

Several vessels have come into the river in search of cargoes of rice. The price of this article has consequently rapidly risen, and may even be quoted at from seventy to seventy-five rupees per 100 baskets. At Rangoon rice sells at twenty-five rupees per 100 baskets, and doubtless, the authorities there checked their wisdom in keeping down the price of food for the people. At Martaban the sale of rice to our troops is strictly prohibited, but the price is so high there must be some sufficient compensation for the loss sustained.

Private letters from Rangoon to the 30th of April, announce the second battle of Magway, in which the British forces, being victorious, the Burmese army was defeated with twenty times of its followers.

three females. The charge against him was his supposed predilection towards the English.

The Governor of Bangoon was, in a little way, also indulging his taste for the "advancement of the human race." He had ordered for execution a man convicted of stealing three rupees, and had himself tortured an individual for the purpose of extorting confession. The British merchants are forbade to approach this great man with their shoes on. Fifty thousand baskets of paddy had been sent to Ava, and all the dried buffalo hides. The latter were intended to make shields of. An opinion was gaining ground, that Tharrawadie was determined to refuse compliance with the Yan-laboo treaty, and, as a precautionary measure to guard against internal commotion, he had made away with the young prince, who might have been a rallying cry for the opposite party in Ava.

CAPE.

DREADFUL MASSACRE OF THE EMIGRANT FARMERS.—By the mail which arrived this morning from the northern frontier, we have received the appalling intelligence of the massacre of Mr. PIETER RETIEF, together with 270 persons, comprising men, women, and children! If the account furnished us be correct, the Zulu Chief, Dingaan, must, with the most subtle treachery, have inveigled the emigrants into his territories, and, having acquired their confidence, he must, at a moment when thrown off their guard by his specious kindness, scattered and comparatively defenceless, have committed this savage butchery. This is a true sample of native character, and shews what Europeans may expect when left to their tender mercies. At present time will not permit us to dwell upon this painful subject; we therefore give the following extract from the account which had just reached our hands:

Colesberg, 4th March.

"Agreeably to the wish of Dingaan, as respects the emigrant farmers settling in his territory, Pieter Retief proceeded to take possession of such lands as that chief had previously pointed out for the purpose. After a nine-days journey, and having passed through numbers of Dingaan's people, with the most friendly intercourse, they arrived at a spot in the vicinity of Port Natal, where they established their head-quarters, and on which they purposed to build a fort, &c. Two days' after their arrival, Retief made known his intention of locating on separate places such families as might wish to be so placed. On the fourth day these persons assembled with their waggons and families, amounting in all to two hundred and seventy souls, men, women, and children. On the fifth day they left head-quarters, and, on the night of the seventh day, they were surrounded, and attacked by a commando of Dingaan's people, and all perished, including PIETER RETIEF!

"Intelligence of this dreadful catastrophe has been received by Mr. Maritz (formerly of Graaff-Reinet), and by him it has been forwarded to farmers residing on the Riet and Modder rivers, together with a communication that he wishes as many as are capable to join him for the purpose of giving assistance to the emigrants remaining at Retief's head-quarters. In consequence, however, of a rumour that all are killed, the farmers are rather tardy in their movements, and some doubt is expressed as to whether they will proceed.

"I have this intelligence on the authority of a gentleman of unbounded respectability, who has actually read the document, spoke to Maritz on the subject, and who heard the aged people bewailing the loss of the children."

1838.

THE OVERLAND ROUTE.

REPORT.

The steam committee in publishing the following report of Col. Barr's proceedings in Egypt, have to congratulate the subscribers to the fund, and the public in general, on the near completion of arrangements which will so greatly tend to facilitate the transit, and promote the comfort of passengers, proceeding to England via the Red Sea.

It will be in the recollection of the subscribers that Col. Barr, under instructions from the committee, took with him from hence and also purchased in Egypt, sundry articles, consisting of small tents, sedan chairs, covered chairs for ladies and children; tables, small table chairs and cooking utensils; a portion of which he left at Cossier, to be distributed on the route between that place and Thebes; and the remainder he disposed of between Suez and Cairo. These will be found sufficient for the accommodation of such passengers as are likely to proceed by these routes, before the more extended improvements are brought into operation.

Immediately on his arrival in Egypt, Col. Barr communicated, as requested by the committee, with Col. Campbell, the consul-general there, who entered warmly into our project and addressed to Boghoz Bey, the minister, a long official letter to be submitted to the Pacha, on the subject of the erection of suitable buildings between Suez and Cairo.

Pending the expected answer to this communication, which on the assurance of Boghoz Bey, the committee have every reason to believe will be favourable; arrangements were entered into with Messrs. Hill and Raven, of Cairo, to provide the necessary establishment of carriages and baggage, waggons, &c., for conveying passengers across the desert.—This agreement provides, that in consideration of the sum of £1,000 Sterling, Messrs. Hill and Raven engage to procure and hold on account of the steam committee.

4 Light vans with canvas or woollen awnings and stuffed seats.

2 Luggage waggons.

40 Mules.

5 Sets of harness for light vans of 4 mules each.

3 Sets of harness for luggage waggons of 6 mules each and to keep up the following establishment:

6 Carriage drivers.

15 Assistants at station-houses.

1 Harness mender, and

2 Shoeing smiths; one at Suez and one at the centre station house.

The whole to be kept in a thorough and efficient state of repair for the space of five years, commencing from five months after the 20th April, at which time the £1,000 was paid to the contractors.

The following regulations as to the time of starting from Suez and Cairo, the rate of travelling, and the fares to be charged, were also arranged.

TIMES OF STARTING AND RATE OF TRAVELLING.

From Cairo.—If more than a sufficient number of passengers for one van are anxious to proceed to Suez; the first van to start within 48 hours before the departure of the steamer from Suez, and the second within twelve hours after the first. If only sufficient passengers for one van, to start thirty-six hours before the departure of the steamer; or as may otherwise be agreed on by the majority of passengers.

From Suez.—The first van to start six hours after the landing of the first lady passengers from the steamer;—the second twelve hours after the first; if the number of passengers exceed ten. In event of there being no lady passengers, then the first van to start six hours after the landing of the first ten male passengers.—Ladies to have always prior claim as to proceeding by the first or subsequent carriages.

The right of male passengers, without families, to a similar choice, to be hereafter determined by the steam committee. Every facility to be afforded to such ladies or gentlemen as may wish to perform the whole, or any part, of the journey by saddle, in place of carriage conveyance.

THE RATE OF TRAVELLING TO BE,

20 hours actual travelling, or less if practicable.

21-3 hours stoppage at the centre station.

½ do. at the other stations.

The votes of a majority of passengers by any carriage, may extend the period of halting at the mid-way station for any number of hours, not exceeding twelve; or of departure from Cairo or Suez for six additional hours. This latitude be necessary at particular seasons.

FARES AND CHARGES.

From Cairo to Suez and from Suez to Cairo, for Ladies or Gentlemen... £ 6 0 0

Children under 10 years of age ... 3 0 0

Servants 3 0 0

The above to include the carriage of one cwt. of luggage for each lady or gentleman, and ½ cwt. for each child or servant, with provisions, attendance, &c.—but not including wines, spirits, beer to go by the luggage. Extra luggage waggons, and be charged at the rate of five shillings per cwt.

To procure the carriages, in conformity with the above agreement, Mr. Raven was about to proceed to England, at the period of Col. Barr's departure from Egypt.

With regard to the buildings between Suez and Cairo, plans have been prepared of a centre station and four intermediate ones in the desert, which are now before the committee, all of which Messrs. Hill and Raven offer to contract to build, for the sum of 5,117 dollars, or about 12,000 rupees. The centre station to contain one room of 24 feet by 18, and 5 sleeping apartments of 14 by 12, and 15 feet high, with stabling and other requisite buildings; the whole protected and enclosed by a wall 15 feet high to be built of stone, in a substantial and workmanlike manner. A water tank also to be added sufficiently large for the use of the mules.

The intermediate bungalows to be built with walls twelve feet high, and to have stabling attached; together with water tanks, the whole to be built in the same substantial manner as the centre station.

At the date of Col. Barr's departure from Cairo, Col. Campbell had not received any positive answer from the Pacha, relative to the erection of these buildings, but in a letter dated Alexandria the 11th April, he writes to Col. Barr, that "the Pacha, who is now in the Delta, has written; in a letter received yesterday; that he will arrange everything satisfactorily with me respecting those buildings on his arrival at Alexandria, which will be in a few days. His arrival however will probably not be in time for me to communicate to you, before the departure of the expected steamer, any arrangements which the Pacha may make with me, and therefore I fear that I shall not be able to let you or the Bombay steam committee, know the result before the steamer which will leave Suez in the ensuing month.

"Nothing, of course, can be undertaken in the way of building or forming establishments of any kind or nature, between Suez and Cairo, until I shall obtain the Pacha's sanction to that effect."

The committee have every reason to believe that the Pacha will himself undertake the erection of these buildings, but in the event of his declining to do so it will be necessary to place at the disposal of Col. Campbell, the requisite funds for carrying on the work on his obtaining His Highness's sanction to do so. In the mean time, however, a sufficient number of tents have been provided as substitutes for the buildings; and as the contract with Messrs. Hill and Raven, comes into operation on the 1st of October, passengers on landing at Suez, from and after that date, will find there a branch of the Cairo hotel, where they can remain comfortably, free of all expense (except for wines, &c.) for as many hours as they please. From thence a ten hours' drive in a comfortable open, or close carriage, over an excellent road, will take them to the half-way house, whence an additional drive of 9 or 13 hours brings them to Cairo, where they will find comfortable accommodations in the English hotel.

With a view also to improving the communication between Cosseir and Ithebes, likely to be visited by so many passengers from India, Col. Barr communicated with a Mr. Prusse, a civil engineer, formerly in the Pacha's employ, now resident at Luxor, and obtained from him plans for a building at Luxor, another at Cosseir, and four intermediate ones in the desert, the erection of which he offers to superintend and conduct.

Mr. Prusse estimates the expense of these buildings as under for a house at Luxor, as per plan..... £500
Ditto at Cosseir ditto..... 250
4 intermediate houses at £175 each..... 700

£1,450

He states, however, that it is difficult to estimate correctly the expense of building in Egypt, where the price of labour and materials varies so much, but he feels confident that the cost of those he proposes, would not exceed, under any circumstances, £1,700.

The Pacha had also given orders to build a number of boats both for the Nile and Canal, to be placed under the entire control of the consul, allowing them to fix a fair scale of passage-money. As we may reasonably expect, from the management under which they will be placed that these boats will be kept in a proper state of cleanliness, this act of the Pacha's will prove one of the greatest boons he could grant to the traveller through his dominions. His Highness had further intimated his intention of having small steamers on the Nile and Canal, as soon as they can be prepared, and has, in fact, promised to afford every facility for the transit of passengers. The committee have only to state in conclusion, that an accommodation building at Mocha or Aden, if the latter should be selected as the coal dépôt, appears to be absolutely necessary for the comfort of passengers, as all complain of the discomfort of having to remain on board the steamer while the coals are being taken in.

TRIAL BY JURY IN CIVIL CASES.

"We invite the attention of our readers to a letter addressed to the Honourable the President of the Council of India, by the committee appointed by a public meeting at the Town-hall to communicate with the Government, respecting trial by jury in civil cases in the Supreme Court, and the answer of Mr. R. D. Mangles, the officiating Secretary to the Government of India. This case of British subjects is strongly and clearly put; and the delay and dilatoriness of the "powers that be" not spared. The answer is anything but satisfactory; for the committee are told to wait the result of the deliberations of the Law Commissioners, "who are engaged in the consideration of the existing law of procedure in all the Courts of India and in framing a code for the future regulation of the same;" and consequently ten years hence we may possibly hear a recommendation of jury trial in civil cases has gone home for the opinions of the Court of Directors, and Board of Control, and in ten years more, we may, if we are in good luck, ascertain what those opinions may be. Six years have been consumed already, and the only progress we have made is the receipt of an assurance, that "the best attention of the Legislative Council will be given to our wishes," which means, being translated, "open your mouth and shut your eyes and see what the gods will send you."

Calcutta, May 21, 1838.

TO THE HON. THE PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF INDIA.

HON'BLE SIR,—We beg permission to address you as the committee appointed by a public meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta, convened for the purpose of promoting trial by jury in civil cases in Her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature for this presidency. Our object is to entreat the favourable and immediate attention of Government to the prayer of the inhabitants of this city, a prayer important in its object, often urged, powerfully supported, yet long left without any reply.

In 1726, British Law was first introduced into India, and in 1774 the Supreme Court was founded in Calcutta, with the same number of judges and similar jurisdiction as the King's Bench in England. With British Law, and a British Court, the inhabitants had hoped that trial by jury, which is the grand characteristic of that law, and the invariable practice of these Courts, had also been given to this city, but in 1779 the judges determined, that except in criminal cases, they had no authority to try by jury. In consequence of this determination a petition was presented by the inhabitants of this city to the legislature, against a court being established, "who should be at once judges and jury, and invested with uncontrolled and indefinite powers, such as no men were to be trusted with." This petition was presented, but was not followed up by any substantive motion, for then one great obstacle existed to granting its prayer, which has long since been removed, the want of a sufficient number of capable jurymen.

On the 14th of April 1832, a public meeting was convened at the Town-hall to petition Parliament for a legislative enactment, for trial by jury in civil cases. The requisition to the Sheriff was signed by the unprecedented number of 312 persons, comprehending every mercantile firm in Calcutta, and 162 of the most opulent natives. One of the present judges of the Court, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Grant, took a most prominent part at the meeting, and all the resolutions were carried with only one dissentient voice, and 3,108 inhabitants of Calcutta, signed the petition to the King and Legislature.

The Right Hon'ble Charles Grant presented this petition to His Majesty and to the House of Commons and the Marquis of Lansdowne to the House of Lords. Mr. Grant, as President of the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, addressed a letter dated November 1834, to Mr. Longueville Clarke, the chairman of the committee, recommending an application to the Governor General and the Legislative Council, as possessing full powers to comply with the prayer of the petition. In consequence of this recommendation, a second public meeting was convened by the high Sheriff at the Town-hall on the 8th of July 1835, at which a petition was unanimously voted to the Hon'ble Sir Charles Philipps Metcalfe, then Governor General, praying for an Act of Council, granting trial by jury in civil cases, and which petition was signed on behalf of the inhabitants by the high Sheriff of the city.

No legislative enactment having been passed, and the Right Honourable Lord Auckland having arrived as Governor General, a third public meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta was convened at the Town-hall on the 12th of April 1836. At this meeting a petition to the Governor General was unanimously voted, and presented to him personally by the high Sheriff, and the whole committee, on which occasion, his lordship was pleased to say, that the petition should be laid before the Law Commissioners and their attention called to its great importance.

From that time to the present no legislative enactment has been passed, no communication has been made to the committee, and trial by jury in civil cases has not been introduced into Calcutta.

In addition to the above detail, shewing the unanimous wish and continued efforts of the inhabitants of this city to obtain trial by jury, we beg to refer to the repeated charges of Chief Justice Ryan to the Grand Jurors, especially in the 12th of April 1828, and also to the charges of Chief Justice Grey, and Mr. Justice Franks, pronouncing their strong opinions on the importance of introducing trial by jury in civil cases, while the fact of Mr. Justice Grant having been a member of the committee up to the time that he became a Judge of the Supreme Court, at once establishes, that the judges of the Supreme Court, consider, the introduction of juries in civil cases of essential consequence.

The recommendation of the president of the Board of Commissioners to apply to the Legislative Council, at least establishes that the highest authority in England, did not object to the proposal. The numerous signatures of the barristers, officers of Court, and attornies to the petitions; prove, that the experience of the profession was strongly in favour of the measure.

Such, Honourable Sir, are the facts under which we address you, and respectfully entreat your early attention to the prayer of the inhabitants of this city. We do submit in plain, but we trust in becoming language, that the strength of our case is almost unparalleled. The capital of British India is now praying for the introduction of that system, which is the most ancient, and the most prized in the British Constitution, a system closely identified with the cherished punchyat of the natives, and forming as it were a link still further to unite the European and native subjects of Her Majesty. The introduction of this system has been strongly advocated by the judges of the very Court in which it is to take effect, it has been advocated by the bar, the officers, and the attornies, and three times in the last eight years have the citizens publicly assembled and petitioned the Crown, the Legislature, and the local Government, to grant them that trial by jury, which ought to be inseparable from British rule, and which is rapidly introducing into every country through which knowledge, freedom, and tolerance, are disseminating.

We have the honour to remain, Hon'ble Sir,

GENTLEMEN,—I am directed by the Hon'ble the President in Council, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 21st instant, and to inform you, in reply, that at a time when the Indian law commissioners are immediately engaged in the consideration of the existing law of procedure in all the Courts of India, and in framing a code for the future regulation of the same, his honour in council does not think it proper to forestal the results of their deliberations upon a general subject of such great importance, by introducing immediately a charge in the mode of administering civil justice in the Supreme Court of Calcutta.

2d.—I am instructed to add, that a copy of your letter under reply, will be forwarded to the law commissioners and that, as stated in the para. 2, of Mr. Secretary Macnaghten's letter to Mr. Cockrell, dated the 30th of May 1836, on the final consideration of the questions as to "what alterations should be introduced in the mode in which matters of fact are now decided by the Supreme Court, or what modifications generally in the application to India of the principle upon which they are decided in England; the best attention of the Legislative Council will be given to the wishes of the body which you represent, and to the arguments with which those wishes have been urged.

LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a general meeting of the members of that Society, held at the Town-hall, on Monday, the 28th May.

PRESENT.

Rajah Radhakant Bahadoor; Rajah Kallykissen Bahadoor; Rajah Rajnarain Roy Bahadoor Cower Sutchurn Ghosaul; Baboo Ramruten Roy; W. Storm, Esq.; Baboo Callykinker Pallit; G. Vint, Esq.; Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore; Baboo Prosonocoomar Tagore; W. F. Fergusson, Esq.; G. Prinsep, Esq.; W. C. Hurry, Esq.; D. Hare, Esq.; J. Handfrays, Esq. and Moonshce Muhomed Ameer.

Baboo Kannoylall Tagore and several other members and visitors, upwards of 60 individuals.

Rajah Kallykissen Bahadoor was called to the chair.

The secretary read a short report of the proceedings of the committee since the last general meeting, and which is as follows:

The committee beg leave to lay before the Society, the following short report of their proceedings since the last general meeting.

Their first meeting was held at the Town-hall on the 27th March, when an establishment was voted for carrying on the business of the Society, and Mr. Dickens was requested to find some gentleman willing to undertake the office of secretary. The Union Bank was requested to act as treasurer, and it was ordered that a respectful letter be addressed to Government, informing them of the establishment of the Society, soliciting to be allowed to communicate with Government through the secretary of the Society on all subjects connected with the general interests of the landholders, in the same manner that the Chamber of Commerce does now on matters relating to trade.

An application was presented by the provisional secretary, requesting the Society to memorialize the Government, to introduce the Vernacular language into the proceeding of the Sadder instead of the Oordo, as contemplated at present.

On the 2d of April, the committee met at Mr. Hurry's office, that gentleman having agreed to act as European secretary, and having offered the Society the use of apartments in his house, No. 3, Clive-street ghaut. Baboo Prosonocoomar Tagore also consented to continue to act as secretary for the native languages.

The following gentlemen were elected additional members of the committee.

Baboo Pranauth Chowdry; Baboo Callynauth Roy Chowdry; Baboo Mothoornauth Mullick; Baboo Shumbo chunder Mitter; Rajah Burrodacaut Roy; and Baboo Radhamadhub Banerjee.

A list of districts was submitted to the meeting, in order to form sub-committees of correspondence.

On the 23d April, the committee took into consideration the resumption petition, and agreed to forward it to Government, and support it by a separate representation. It was resolved, that Government should be applied to, for a copy of the draft resumption law, which is understood to have been printed. The answer of Government to the request of the Society, to be allowed to communicate with it having been received, was read, and is as follows:

No. 501.

To W. C. HURRY, Esq. AND BABOO PROSONOCOOMAR TAGORE.

Gentlemen, I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 7th instant, enclosing the prospectus of a Society to be called the Landholders' Society, and requesting permission to address the Government, through the medium of the Society's secretary, in the same manner as is done by the Chamber of Commerce.

In reply, I am directed to state, that the Hon'ble the deputy Governor of Bengal will always be disposed to receive and consider the representations of any class of the inhabitants, affecting their own interests or the good of the community.

The communications of the Landholders' Society upon matters connected with the lands, revenue, and judicial departments of government, must be addressed in due course, through the secretary of those departments.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

Sec. to the Govt. of Bengal.

General Department.

Fort William, 11th April, 1838. }

On the 7th of May the committee were increased to the twenty-four, by adding six European members, as follows:

G. Vint, Esq.; W. Storm, Esq.; Robert Watson, Esq.; James Hastie, Esq.; J. McKilligan, Esq.; and W. Fergusson, Esq.

They determined, that the question of vernacular language be discussed at a general meeting in consequence of its importance, and this-day (the 28th) was accordingly fixed for the purpose.

On the 14th May, the distribution of the sub-committees was completed. On the 21st May, the answer of Government to the letter, requesting a copy of the draft resumption regulation was read, and is as follows:

To W. C. HURRY, Esq. AND BABOO PROSONOCOOMAR TAGORE,

Hony. Secys. of the Landholders' Society.

Gentlemen,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th ultimo, applying for a copy of the proposed resumption regulation,

In reply, I am instructed to acquaint you, that the printed draft to which you allude, has been forwarded by this Government to the Government of India, and is understood to be now before the Legislative Council.

I am, Gentlemen, your most obedt. servt.

*Revenue Department
Fort William, 1st May, 1838.*

It was resolved that a second application be made to Government.

At the above meetings, the following gentlemen have been elected members of the Society :

Wm. Martin, Esq., C. F. Dumaine, Esq., P. J. Paul, Esq., R. Salano, Esq., James Furlong, Esq., John Carr, Esq., W. N. Hedger, Esq., W. Storm, Esq., John Bell, Esq., John H. Brightman, Esq., H. Harris, Esq., D. Andrew, Esq., A. C. Dunlop, Esq., J. Humphreys, Esq., George Palmer, Esq., W. F. Ferguson Esq., Baboo Ramdhun Banerjee, James Fergusson, Esq., G. Vint, Esq., H. Haimes, Esq., Rustomjee Cowasjee, Esq., Ramee Soorjamoney Debby, Rajah Bejoygovind Singh, Mirza Mahomed Mehendy Isphahani, D. W. H. Speed, Esq., M. Larrola, Esq., W. Patrick, Esq., Thomas Tweedie, Esq., C. A. Cantor, Esq., W. R. Logan Esq., Chuectam Sing, Joykissen Mookerjee, Rajah of Tipperah, Dewan Mahomet Ally, Baboo Sibjoy Tagore, Gourkisson Roy Chowdry, Moonshee Dalabally, Callycomul Roy, Calypsaud Roy, G. Higgins, Esq., J. H. Arratoon, Esq., Baboo Bissambhur Roy, Rajah Gungadhar Roy, Baboo Chundercant Choudry, Edward Preston, Esq., John Russell, Esq., Robert Watson, Esq., Baboo Essenchunder Banerjee, R. Thomas, Esq., Mirza Mahomed Mehendy Musky, J. C. Miller, Esq., Baboo Neelratten Holdar, Allan Gilmore, Esq., J. McKilligan, Esq., James, Hastie, Esq., Baboo Essenchunder Kanoongjee, Moulouee Curram Hussien, Moulouee Carramutally, Baboo Collykum Pauth, G. F. F. Speed, Esq., W. Carr, Esq., H. J. Loughton, Esq., James Colquhoun, Esq., Colvin Campbell, Esq., Henry Roe, Esq., being 65 in number, and making the present number of members 161.

The committee in thus giving you a short summary of their proceedings beg to remark, that they have not confined themselves to the monthly meetings prescribed by the rules of the Society, but have met and transacted business every week since its formation, being anxious to bring it into extensive operation as speedily as possible. In the short time that has elapsed, they have obtained the recognition of the Society by Government, and the permission to address it through their secretaries; they have organized permanent sub-committees of correspondence for every district in Bengal, and appointed three sub-committees for special purpose of importance, viz.

G. Vint, Esq., W. Storm, Esq., and Baboo Ramcomul Sen, formed a sub-committee for examining a paper of grievances of the landholders, received from Baboo Mothooranauth Mullick.

Messrs. George Prinsep, Moonshee Mohamed Ameer and Suttochurn Ghosaul have been elected to consider the resumption petition, and prepare a letter to Government to accompany it. Rajah Radhacaunt Bahadoor, Rajah Kallykissen Bahadoor, and Baboo Ramcomul Sen are to take into consideration the very important subject of public instruction, which though it may not be considered as directly within the province of the Society, as in various ways closely connected with its objects.

Your committee feeling deeply the importance of general co-operation, in order to make the Society really and permanently useful, earnestly entreats every member to use his influence to obtain as large an accession as possible to its numbers, so, that it may, in a short time, present almost, without exception the whole body of Landholders, and consequently become the proper organ of their opinions. The short time that has elapsed since their labours commenced, has sufficient to show, that much good may be effected by union and perseverance, and your committee trusts, that in these qualities the Society will not be found wanting.

W. COMB HURRY,

P. TAGORE,

Hon'y. Secretaries.

The translation of the above report in Bengallee was also read by the pundit of the Society, for the explanation of those who do not understand English.

An application from Moonshee Mohupped Ameer, expressing his opinion in favour of the Persian language, was also read by the secretaries in Bengallee and English, which was replied to, by the following gentlemen:—Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, Rajah Radhacaunt Bahadoor, Mr. W. Ferguson, and G. Prinsep, Esq.

After a considerable discussion on the merits of the petition, the following resolution was proposed by G. A. Prinsep, Esq. That this meeting generally concur in the opinion expressed in the petition, that it would be desirable to make the Bengallee the language of the courts in Bengal, and the Oordoo that of the courts of Bihar and upper-provinces; but as the question affects not the landed interests alone, but all the community, this meeting do not think it a subject proper to be taken up separately by the Landholders' Society. This was seconded by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, and carried unanimously. After offering the usual thanks to the chairman, the meeting dissolved.

Proceedings of a meeting of the committee, held at the Society's office, No. 3, Chitce-street-ghant, on Monday, the 4th instant.

PRESENT.

AMERICAN ICE.

To the Editor of the Bengal Hurkaru.

Sir,—I am directed by the committee for promoting the importation of American Ice, to forward to you the accompanying resolutions, which will, of themselves, explain the object proposed, and the circumstances in which it has originated. Should you deem it right to aid the views of the committee, may I solicit the favour of your transmitting to me your opinion in writing for the purpose of its being submitted to the Government.

I have the honour to remain, Sir, your obedient servant,
LONGUEVILLE CLARKE, Chairman of the committee.
Esplanade Row, July 1837.

Resolved.—It appearing that Mr. Tudor experiences great difficulty in procuring vessels to carry cargoes of ice, and for which he is obliged to pay double freight, the importation might be greatly promoted, if the Government would offer an encouragement to ship-owners by a remission of port duties, a plan which has been successfully adopted by the authorities at Havannah.

Resolved.—That the true ground for soliciting the Government to offer this bounty to vessels landing ice, is the opinion of the medical profession of its vast importance to the public health, especially in cases of fever so incidental to this climate.

Resolved.—Some medical gentlemen of the first eminence, having offered to favour the committee with their opinions in writing on the great importance of a permanent supply of ice to the public health, that a circular be addressed to all the members of the profession at the presidency, soliciting their opinions on the subject, for the purpose of being submitted to the Government in aid of the intended application by the committee.

TO THE HONOURABLE THE PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

HONOURABLE SIR,—I have been directed by the committee for encouraging the importation of American ice into Calcutta, to solicit most respectfully the aid of the Government, in promoting the undertaking.

The grounds on which the committee urge this request are, that the importation of ice is of the greatest importance to the public health, and that the success of the undertaking is endangered, unless assistance be afforded.

The committee are well aware of the unremitting attention bestowed by Government to the great object of public health, and of the vast sums expended for this purpose. They therefore believe, that if they can clearly establish that the importation of ice is of immense consequence to the health of this great capital, that the assistance which they seek will meet with favourable consideration.

The committee have obtained the opinions of all the principal medical practitioners in Calcutta, regarding the efficacy of ice in diseases, peculiarly incidental to the climate, and I am directed to submit to your Honour in Council, correct copies of the circular, which the committee issued, and the answers which they have received. The letter of the committee distinctly stated the object which they had in view, and that the opinions were to be submitted to the Government. Of the twenty-two answers which they received, twenty-one treat a permanent supply of ice in Calcutta, as of great importance to the public health.

It was about a year ago, that the committee from carefully watching the receipts and expenditure of the speculation, began to entertain fears, that the sale of ice in Calcutta might not remunerate Mr. Tudor, its spirited importer; they believed that the undertaking might be injured, and not benefitted, by raising the price, as that would diminish the sale, and if the sale were not rapid, loss would be inevitable, from the perishable nature of the article. The committee were aware, that the Government of Havannah had for the last eighteen years, secured a permanent supply of ice for that settlement, by giving Mr. Tudor a monopoly for its importation, and remitting all port and pilotage duties on vessels landing a cargo of ice; and they were also aware, that this plan originated at the suggestions of the medical profession. It was under these circumstances the committee proposed to adopt a similar course, but forbore making any application until they found Mr. Tudor entertaining doubts of his own success. Mr. Tudor has never been apprized of the fears, or intentions of the committee, but these fears have been realized, by the following paragraph in a letter from that gentleman, dated the 15th of February:—"The profits at best are very small—expenditures, of every kind, very heavy. After a shipment of twelve cargoes, and the consumption of four years of time, the debtor side of the ice account to India exceeds the credit side, and it is still a business of hope and expectations."

Under these circumstances the committee respectfully submit to your Honour in Council, that the opinions of so many eminent medical men, decidedly establish, how important it is to the public health of the capital to secure a permanent supply of ice. The experience of the committee, and the statement of Mr. Tudor, shew that after four years' trial, and expenditure has not been covered by the receipts, and they are fully convinced, that increasing the price would not afford a remedy. It is under the latter circumstances, and on the former ground, the committee venture to appeal to the Government for aid.

The chief obstacles which Mr. Tudor has to encounter, are the objections of ship-owners to carry cargoes of ice, and the very high freight which they charge. It appears to the committee that these difficulties might be in a great measure removed, by the adoption of the plan pursued at Havannah, and if the port and pilotage charges were remitted to eight vessels every year, provided they landed not less than one hundred tons of ice, ship-owners would be desirous of taking the cargoes of ice at prices which Mr. Tudor could afford to pay.

"But while the committee, in the best exercise of such judgment and experience as they possess, venture to offer this suggestion, they trust that it may not deprive the undertaking of the benefit of any other plan, which may seem to your Honour in Council more expedient.

I have the honour to remain, with great respect,

Honourable Sir, your obedient humble servant,

LONGUEVILLE CLARKE,

Chairman of the American Ice Committee.

Calcutta, 8th June, 1838.

No. 1.

TO LONGUEVILLE CLARKE, Esq., &c.

Sir,—In reply to your letter of this day's date, calling for my opinion as to the importance of a permanent supply of ice to the public, I beg to state, that I consider it would be a very great blessing indeed, if the use of the commodity, could be placed within reach of the poorer classes of the community.

A press of business obliges me to be succinct in my reply. As an article of luxury, I need not expatiate upon the use of ice. It lies more within my province to declare, that the article is a therapeutic agent of immense value in the treatment of a variety of ailments that urgently demand the aid of the surgeon, no less than of the physician. This is especially the case on occasions where the preparation of artificial cold mixtures, would be operose, incur delay—be inaccessible to many on account of the expense, &c. and after all, the substance not be suited for direct application as well internally as to various parts of the external surface of the body, as ice.

Purposely omitting all but affections of imminent danger, I content myself with observing, that there are cases of hemorrhage where during the hot-season especially, the application of ice, and of ice only might save life. In certain fevers, with great determination to the head, and burning heat, the application of ice lessens vascular action, and soothes the sense of rending pain in the brain, bringing not only relief, but a tendency to repose. The same remark applies still more forcibly to the dentition fevers of children, in whom the sensorial excitement and tendency to organicism, are still greater than in adults. In internal inflammation, the surgeon in this climate does not possess a more soothing or more potent resolvent, and in cases of strangulated hernia, through such are not frequently heard of amongst us, ice might literally be worth its weight in gold. I might adduce other instances, but time will not permit.

I have the honour to be, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

8th June, 1838.

J. GRANT.

No. 2.

TO L. CLARKE, Esq. Chairman I. C.

Sir,—In compliance with the request contained in your circular, I have to state that cold is undoubtedly a most powerful remedial agent in many cases of medical, surgical, and obditiual diseases, and ice, affords an easy expeditious, safe, very convenient and effectual means of applying it. In my opinion, in this point of view, ice is as valuable, as it is, as a comfort and luxury, in this torrid climate, and even in these respects it promotes health and makes life worthy having.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedt. servt.

A. HALTIDAY, M. D. Presy. Surgeon.

Chowringhee, August 8, 1837.

No. 3.

TO L. CLARKE, Esq. Chairman I. C.

Sir,—With reference to our conversation the other day, I can have no objection to state it as my opinion, that Government can seldom have a more favourable opportunity of conferring a most incalculable benefit upon the inhabitants of all ranks and conditions of this town and neighbourhood, than by holding out every inducement for the importation, and the reduction for the price of ice.

I do not speak of this article as a luxury merely, but as a most important and essential remedial agent in a vast variety of diseases, both medical and surgical.

The substitutes to which physicians and surgeons have for ages been in the habit of resorting, for the relief of many of the formidable diseases of this country, are not to be compared in efficiency to the pure water ice; besides which, they were always very limited in their use or application, in consequence of the expensive nature of the materials of which cold or cooling mixtures were formed.

By relieving the vessels importing ice to this town, of the various duties to which they were now liable, Government will confer a lasting boon upon all classes of the community of this place.

It is not the higher ranks of Europeans and rich natives alone who use ice; on the contrary, I have been credibly informed, that the greater number of purchasers of the first cargo of ice, were driggers who crowded to the ice house every afternoon, to provide themselves with a small portion, ere they commenced their seven miles' walk home.

I am, Sir, your most obedt. servt.

There can be no doubt that ice in cerebral and other affections, is one of the most certain remedies we possess: and the only means in some affections, on which we can rely for the prevention of a fatal result.

Sir,—In reply to your circular of the 20th ultimo, which incessant occupation has hitherto prevented me from attending to, I have no hesitation in stating it as my opinion, that a permanent supply of ice in such a climate as this, would not only be one of the greatest luxuries, but one of the greatest benefits, which could be conferred on a large portion of the population of Calcutta. Where disease in every form is so fearfully rapid in its progress, and so frequently attended with great determination of blood to the head, &c. the advantages of having at all times at command, a remedy of the greatest efficacy in subduing high vascular excitement, need only be mentioned to be duly appreciated.

I might enter much into detail on such a subject, but the expression of an opinion, being all you require, I shall conclude by hoping your committee may succeed in persuading Government to hold out every inducement in their power, to the accomplishment of an object, of so much importance to us all.

Believe me, yours faithfully,

Sir,—With reference to your letter of the 20th ultimo, requesting my opinion as to the importance of the use of ice in a medical point of view to the community of Calcutta, I beg, in reply, to state, that I consider it of essential benefit in many cases of disease incidental to this climate, especially in fevers and inflammatory affections, and likewise to a large class of invalids, whose digestive organs are in an impaired and debilitated state, arising from efforts of climate and other causes, an affection, which, amongst the community, prevails to no small extent.

SIR,—In reply to your letter of the 20th ultimo, and its accompanying resolutions, I beg to state, that ice is of the highest utility in the ordinary gastric (commonly called bilious) remittent fever of Bengal. It is also beneficially used in many forms of dyspepsia common to our climate, and, altogether, I think the regular and ample supply of ice a matter of first rate importance to public health.

SIR,—In answer to your letter of the 20th ultimo, I have the honor to submit to you my opinion, "on the great importance of a permanent supply of ice to the public health," for the information of the committee for promoting the importation of American ice.

In all ages cold has been regarded by physicians, as one of the most powerful means of allaying the worst symptoms of inflammatory diseases, and is at present universally used by medical practitioners in all civilized countries.

How invaluable therefore must such a remedy prove in a country like this, (sent to us in its beautifully—congealed form,) with a high temperature of the atmosphere, where inflammatory diseases are so abundant, and assume so formidable an array of alarming symptoms. In the ardent fevers which hourly present themselves in this city, with great determination to the head and other cavities of the body; intense thirst, a burning and dry state of the skin; great restlessness and general uneasiness, with a pulse upwards of 120, the application of iced water is at once a sure means of alluding these symptoms, and affording to the patient the most speedy, grateful, and soothing relief, next to blood-letting, and purgatives. I consider cold effusion to be the next most powerful agent in the cure of fever, and, therefore, a prodigious acquisition to medical practice in this country.

In the diseases of infants, the value of ice is incalculable, especially in dentition, where there is such enormous determination to the head, and which so frequently and rapidly terminate in convulsions and death, there is no means which relieves heat, and distention, by emptying the large vessels of the brain so effectually and so safely, as the application of iced-water to the head, and I can declare, that many parents in this city, owe the existence of their offspring to the judicious use of the invaluable remedy. In that state of debility following acute disease, the patient has been kept alive again, and again, by dipping toasted bread in iced water, when nothing else would remain on the stomach. In the irritable stomach also, which is so frequent and distressing a symptom of acute disease, I have seldom failed to allay it, by giving from time to time, a tea-spoon-full of iced water, the parched mouth and intense thirst of the cholera patient, has also been relieved by it, of which I have been witness to many instances.

In the long train of diseases to which the delicate female is liable in this country, I can bear ample testimony to the value of ice in these complaints.

Numerous other proofs most convincing and satisfactory, of the efficacy of ice, could be adduced by me; but which I consider, unnecessary after what I have already stated in its favor. In one word, I regard the importation of American ice as one of the greatest blessings bestowed upon the people of this metropolis, both in a medicinal point of view, as well as an article of comfort and luxury.

God bless the ice.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedt. servt.

In all cases of febrile excitement, more especially those attended with fixed determination of blood to the head, I look upon the command of a supply of ice, as one of the most valuable and safest of our remedies; it enables us more effectually, than any other application we possess, to reduce, and keep down, the immoderate circulation, and increased nervous irritability which is commonly destructive of life, in cases of fever; to effect which, without it, all our endeavours are in vain, and which it is our most anxious object to effect. As a topical agent, in many ordinary affections, its efficacy is undoubted, and when within our reach, one of which we are always glad to avail ourselves; but it is in fevers, and the acute attacks, common to this climate, that its advantages are most apparent, and Government could in no manner shew its care and regard to the well-being, and protection of its servants and subjects at large, so well, as by affording its most liberal assistance, in promoting the importation of a constant supply of an article, of such active powers, and great value, in the treatment of these diseases, characteristic of, and incidental to, the country.

SIR,—In answer to your circular of July 20th, wishing my opinion in writing, as to the importance and use of ice in a medical or surgical point of view, I beg to state for the information of the Ice Committee, and the Government, that I consider its use to be truly valuable, and of very great importance, not only in fevers, but in various other disorders, both surgical, and medical, and that there are some cases, in which a substitute for ice cannot be obtained. I have within the last few days had two such cases under my care. I have frequently used ice in this country, and have had many years experience of its utility both in public and private practice in England.

MY DEAR SIR,—With reference to our conversation last night about the ice, I am prepared by professional experience to afford my unhesitating testimony, to the powerful agency, which it possesses, when judiciously employed, in alleviating disease, and contributing towards a cure. It would be tedious to enumerate the cases, in which the use of this admirable adjuvant, tends to produce decidedly beneficial effects; but there is one class of disorders, which I cannot help particularizing (at the risk of writing somewhat more technically than I intended) as cases where I have witnessed wonderfully beneficial results, from its discreet use; I allude to infantile fever during dentition, in which there is always determination to the head, sometimes so sudden and to such an extent, as to prove fatal in an incredibly short time, if not promptly arrested, nature endeavours to counteract this result by increased secretion from the bowels, i. e. by spontaneous purging; and the ordinary treatment is to follow up nature's plan by keeping up a free action of the bowels by medicine, many is the little sufferer, however, whom I have seen sink under this indispensable evacuation, who might have been saved if we had possessed the means, which the ice now affords us, of determining powerfully, and at once, from the brain by its application in substance to the head.

Its beneficial effects in such cases, is almost immediate, by unloading the vessels of the brain and thereby enabling you with safety to moderate, or arrest the alvine flux, which is draining away the strength of the babe. It will sometimes stop a convulsion fit, as if by magic; and when one reflects that the cranium of the infant is in its upper part almost as thin and diaphanous as an egg-shell, where the several bones are in actual apposition, and that there are several spaces where the membranes covering the brain, and the scalp are only separated by the interposition of a thin membrane, one ceases to be surprised at its immediate effects.

I beg you to excuse my troubling you with such details, but our conversation on the subject was interrupted, and I wish to instance to you how specifically the faculty may furnish grounds for their general recommendation of the efficacy of ice in the cure of disease.

I will only add, that the specific cases which I have adduced might have suggested another claim on the patronage and support of the ladies, at least such as are mothers, or hope to become so, and in these two classes, I presume, may be included a pretty considerable majority of our fair countrywomen at the presidency. I again beg your excuse for the length of my note and remain,

Yours very faithfully,

MY DEAR SIR,—I must beg your forgiveness for my remissness to answer your first letter. In reply to your inquiry of the estimate which my professional experience of its use has induced me to form of ice, as a remedial agent in tropical disease, I am really at a loss for words to express my sense of its value and importance.

I can only state my opinion comparatively, by saying that in all the acute disease, to which European adults and children are liable, I esteem it as a remedy, only second to the lancet, and I believe that a permanent supply of so invaluable and powerful an agent, would prove a source of benefit to public health, and a means of saving life, not inferior to any single article of pharmacy, which can be named, in the hands of an Indian practitioner.

I remain, my dear Sir, very truly yours,

In reply, I have to state that, in my opinion, the use of ice as a remedial agent, is very important, whether with reference to its immediate application in diseases of congestion, inflammation, and hemorrhage, or to those still more extensive though not so direct benefits, arising from the tonic effects of cold fluids, taken in moderation into the stomach.

SIR,—In reference to your circular of yesterday. I can with much satisfaction and confidence add my testimony, to the value of "Ice" as a pharmaceutical agent, in some of the most important and fatal diseases of Bengal.

As a local application in cases of fever, where determination to the head prevails, and induced, in local inflammation wherever situated. "Ice," constitutes one of the most efficacious antiphlogestic remedies, in conjunction with bleeding, and purgatives, whilst as a source of relief, and luxury to the feverish patient, by affording a naturally cool beverage, which no art can imitate, its advantage cannot fail to be generally admitted, and appreciated.

The advantages we have lately enjoyed in Calcutta, by obtaining ice at all seasons of the year, must be obvious to every medical practitioner. For my own part, I regard this article as important in the highest degree as a remedial agent, none have had so much reason to rejoice in the benefits afforded by the use of ice, as the sick whether we consider it, as a comfort beyond all price to the sufferer, or as a powerful aid in promoting the cure of disease.

It is unnecessary to detail the particular instances wherein ice is valuable in medical treatment, but I have no hesitation in saying, that in fever, in various forms of inflammation, in many cases of external injuries, and in the practice of midwifery, there are numerous instances, in which the life of the patient may depend upon the internal administration, or the external application of this substance. In cases of impaired digestive powers also, I believe it to be highly useful, as a stomachic tonic. Indeed, so much do I value it, that apart from every consideration of individual comfort, I consider it to be the duty of every medical practitioner, to use all his endeavours to ensure a never-failing supply of ice in this city.

Considering ice solely as a medical substance, I would deem all the subscriptions we have made and all the support you now seek to encourage the importation, as well and cheaply bestowed.

Sir,—I beg to apologize for having so long delayed answering your circular of the 20th July, and your note of the 13th instant, on the subject of ice, and its importance to the public health. This arose in the first instance, from my considering myself unconnected with, and unknown to, the inhabitants of Calcutta, and that my opinion consequently, could not be regarded by them as of the slightest importance, and since the receipt of your last note, I have been much occupied.

There can be no doubt, that ice is an article which contributes largely to the enjoyment and the health of those, who can afford to purchase it, and, were it cheap enough, and procurable at all times, it might be turned to various uses in medical practice. But at the same time I must express my opinion, that the committee have not taken up the true ground for soliciting the bounty of Government on this occasion, the real importance of ice is, as an article of luxury, during health, much more than as a means of cure either in fever or any other disease.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the date of the 20th instant, requesting my opinion on the subject of the importance of ice to the public health, and more especially in cases of fever so incidental to this climate.

I have now the pleasure to communicate through you, for the information of the committee, that I regard ice as subordinate to no other agent, in the prevention or treatment of disease, and as a remedy in controlling fever, in its various applications, the power of which is second only, if, under some circumstances, it be not even superior, to that of the lancet; a remedy which can never supersede the lancet, nor dispense with it, but which, when added to it, forms by the combination a treatment so powerful and efficacious, that it will render death from the acutest cerebral inflammation, as rare, as recovery is at present. Employed as a remedy (known by the name of the ice cold dash) there is no degree of burning heat which the animal economy is capable of producing, no intensity of vascular action, and no violence of pain, that can resist its continued application. The cold evaporating lotions, which were in former days applied to the head, proved useful in mild cases, but to hope to control the more formidable cases of the fever of Bengal, by their aid alone, is to expect to coerce a giant by twisting around his arms a spiders thread, the impression which the one makes upon the brain, compared with the effect produced by this remedy, may be said to be, what the application of six leeches to the temples, is to the abstraction of thirty ounces of blood.

With the earnest hope that Government may be induced to listen favourably to the appeal of the committee, and thereby secure to the inhabitants of this city so powerful and so blessed a remedy in the hour of sickness.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your faithful and obdt. servt.

WILLIAM GRAHAM, M. D.

There are few in this country who will not concur in the opinion, that the importation of ice is a valuable auxiliary to the comfort of an Indian life. But if we completely lay aside the notion of its forming a part of the luxuries of the East, we shall find numerous reasons to hail its introduction as highly subservient to the preservation of health.

I will not take up your time by referring to any theoretical opinions on the subject, but will merely adduce a few instances in which my personal experience, can bear testimony to its salutary effects. I have found it essentially useful in cases of dyspepsia, which is a very prevailing disease in this climate, and a slight acquaintance with its tonic powers will sufficiently elucidate the cause.

I have likewise proved its beneficial effects, in cases of retention of the placenta, when all other remedies have failed, though administered to the utmost extent, and in the following cases of hemorrhagia uterina, I have used it with great success, viz. Narcium or bleeding at the nose, hemostasis or spitting of blood, uterine or uterine hemorrhage, in certain cases of fever too, its powerful aid has frequently been proved especially during the hot season of the year when an inevitable exposure to the heat of the sun, frequently produces considerable derangement of the brain.

I have no doubt that the experience of every individual, will tend to corroborate the opinion, that the addition of ice to the luxuries of our table, ought to be considered equally desirable in a medical point of view.

BANK OF INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JUNE 11, 1838.

At a meeting of the provisional committee of the Bank of India, held this day, it was resolved, to recommend that the bank be opened on the 1st of January; and that a meeting of the subscribers on the 15th September, be convened for the purpose of considering that recommendation, and for fixing a day for payment of the first instalment; the committee expecting to receive before the last mentioned date, communications from England, respecting the co operation of parties in that country interested in the formation of a new India Bank.

It was also resolved, that the honourary secretary do address Messrs. Kearsay, Hughes and Thomas, of London, authorizing them to register applications for shares, provided that the parties making such applications shall not be considered to be proprietors, unless the instalments on their shares shall be paid in Calcutta, within six months, after notice in England of the same having been called for in India.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the medical and physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's apartments, on the 2d of June, 1838.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read :

From J. Graham, Esq., assistant surgeon, and Johnstone, Esq., surgeon, requesting to withdraw from the Society.

From Mr. Bouchez, requesting to be appointed librarian to the Society, stating, that he had for some months past acted in that capacity. This request was referred to the committee of management.

From H. T. Prinsep, Esq., secretary to the Government of Bengal, forwarding a copy of Copland Hutchinson's " Practical observations on Surgery," which was presented to the Society's library by the Hon'ble Court of Directors.

J. G. Vos, Esq., M. D., was proposed as a member of the Society by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Dr. McClelland.

The following communications were then presented :

1st. A case of lithotomy terminating fatally on the 5th day after operating, with remarks on the causes of failure in extracting large calculi, by Dr. D. Stewart, M. D.

2d. Illustrations of the poisonous effects of the external application of arsenic, and its employment in some of the manufactures of Bengal, by the same gentleman.

3d. A case in which a bony deposit was found adhering to the falx cerebri, by T. B. Colledge, Esq., surgeon, Macao.

4th. An interesting case of placental presentation, also by Mr. Colledge.

These two cases were presented by Dr. D. Stewart, on behalf of Mr. Colledge.

5th. A report upon cholera, which prevailed in the 3d troop, 1st brigade, horse artillery, by W. McGregor, Esq., M. D.

6th. Two cases of traumatic tetanus, successfully treated by tartar emetic, by Dr. Bowron.

7th. Dr. Goodeve read an extract from a letter he had lately received from Mr. Cumberland, of Pooree, containing an account of a hot spring at Khoordah, in that district. The temperature of this spring, varied from 112° to 128° of Fahrenheit, when the water in a neighbouring tank stood at 64°, the air being 56°. The water appears to be impregnated with sulphureted hydrogen. Mr. Cumberland sent a specimen of fish, several of which were swimming in the spring, where the thermometer stood at 112°. These fishes died when they came in contact with the water at 128°.

8th. Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy, presented a magnificent and unusually large specimen of calculi which he had removed from the urethra of a native.

A long discussion upon various topics followed, chiefly upon matters connected with the obstetric art in connexion with Mr. Colledge's second paper.

cretary, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Col. L. R. Stacy, 32d N. I., proposed by the secretary, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Motions of which notice was given at last meeting.

Motion No. 1, by the secretary seconded by Dr.
Strong, was brought forward and carried, nem con.

Motion No. 2, by C. K. Robison, Esq., seconded by W.
Storm, Esq., was next brought forward and carried nem con.

Notice of motion.

Proposed by G. A. Prinsep, Esq., seconded by C. K.
Robison, Esq. "that the sum of 500 rupees be appropriated for procuring cotton-seed of every variety in estimation from South America, and that a correspondence be opened with Rio Janeiro, for the purpose of obtaining it."

Reports.

The President drew the attention of the meeting to the subject matter of motion No. 1, of April meeting which was brought forward at the last meeting, and carried by an amendment on the original motion, being at the same time referred to the general committee, for consideration. He (the President) would read the report of that committee, drawn up at a meeting held on the 9th instant, as follows:

"The committee having given the subject of reference to them their best consideration, are of opinion that upon the account of the state of the funds laid before them by the Secretary, the means of the society at present are inadequate to admit of its offering any sufficient rewards, for the four practical treatises on cereal grain, sugar, silk, and cotton; and the committee have therefore abstained from entering into any further detail, conceiving that the general operations of the society will be endangered if the present ascertained surplus be applied to these purposes."

" D. HARE.

" JOS. WILLIS.

" JOHN BELL.

Proposed by G. A. Prinsep, Esq., seconded by W.
Earle, that the above report be confirmed. Carried nem con.

The President read the report of the silk committee, on three samples of yellow and white raw silk, sent in for competition, with reference to the prizes offered by a resolution passed at a general meeting of the society held on the 12th April, 1837.

The Committee are of opinion that the samples submitted by Mr. W. G. Rose, of Rannaghur factory, near Coolbarish, are the best and entitle that gentleman to the society's gold medal.

That the sample of yellow silk sent in by Mr. Lay, superintendent of Mr. Larruletta's filatures at Jungypoor, is the second best, and entitles that gentleman to the society's silver medal.

Moved by C. K. Robison, Esq., seconded by the Secretary, that the silk committee's report be confirmed: carried.

The President also read the sugar committee's report on a sample of sugar submitted by Mr. Blake of Dhoba, who was the only competitor for the prizes awardable under the same resolution as those for silk.

"The committee are of opinion that the sample before them, does not come within the meaning of the Society's intention, as expressed in the printed conditions, the sugar in question having been made from goor by a double process, and not by a single boiling, as practised in the West Indies, &c.

The committee recommended that the premiums shall be open to competition till the 1st May, 1839, and that a specific advertisement be published and transmitted to all known cultivators.

Moved by C. K. Robison, Esq., seconded by G. T. F. Spred, Esq., that the committee's report be confirmed: carried.

The following communications were submitted to the notice of the meeting:

From H. Piddington, Esq., dated May 10, enclosing copy of a letter written by him to Col. James Young, in February, 1831, on the subject of cule cochineal, prepared from the Sylvestre insect.

From J. Guilding, Esq., dated May 23, forwarding a sample of cule cochineal, made by him from Sylvestre insect, abounding in Madnapore, and asking for an opinion upon its quality, &c.

From Professor O'Shaughnessy, dated May 31, giving his opinion on the cochineal paste prepared by Mr. Guilding. Having submitted it to chemical test, the Professor speaks in very favorable terms of this dye. "This I think completes the proof that between the fin and Sylvestre insects there exists at least no chemical difference." The conclusion at which Mr. Piddington and Professor O'Shaughnessy arrive are very similar, the only difficulty appearing to be in obtaining a complete absorption of all moisture from the paste, immediately after the process of manufacture.

(Referred to the cochineal committee.)

From Major W. H. Sleeman, dated Subbulpore, May 7, conveying much interesting information on the mode of cultivating the lac insect.

(Referred to the committee of papers.)

From the Revd. C. E. Driberg, dated May 9, annexing a paper on the "culture of the cocoanut tree in Ceylon," received from a friend in that island.

(Referred to the committee of papers.)

From Col. Dunlop, a parcel containing varieties of hill forest trees, referred to in his letter to the Secretary, on the 25th March.

From G. H. Smith, Esq. dated Delhi, May 8, promising to forward, shortly samples of cotton of the first and second year's crops, raised from Upland Georgia seed.

Gives a favorable account of an experimental plantation of Otahcite sugar cane in Deyrali Dhoon.

From the same, dated May 18, forwarding for the opinion of the committee, samples of Upland Georgia and Sea Island cotton, the produce of his garden at that station, as alluded to in his former letter of the 8th.

From R. Lowther, Esq., dated Allahabad, May 20 advising despatch of two cases containing samples of the produce of four varieties of cotton-seed forwarded by the society for distribution in that and the neighbouring districts.

Enclosing a memo. received from Mr. Lambert regarding these samples.

From Dr. Hufnagle, dated May 30, forwarding a bale of cotton, being a portion of the second crop produced from 400 plants grown at Cossipore, raised from Upland Georgia seed imported by the society in 1836.

Suggesting that the bale of cotton be sent to England for a competent opinion as to quality. Forwarding also two bottles of oil pressed from the seed of this cotton.

From T. O. Crane, Esq., Secretary Agricultural Society of Singapore, dated May 11, acknowledging receipt of Secretary's letter of the 17th March, together with the Seychelles' cotton-seed, and transactions of the Society vol. 5.

Enclosing a small sample and a few seeds of a description of cotton resembling Sea Island.

From Major Syers, Secy. to the Agricultural Society of Cuttack, presenting samples of Upland Georgia cotton and Virginia Tobacco, grown on that district from seed received from the society referred to in his letter of the 4th May.

Note.—All these samples of cotton ordered to be referred to committee for reports.

From Mr. A. Harris, dated 24th May, forwarding three cuttings of cane (variety unknown, but resembling the China cane) together with a large cane, retained from the small stock.

Mr. Harris states, that the original cuttings from which these three average canes were produced, did not exceed the thickness of a common raton, shewing a vast improvement on the plant canes; but the most extraordinary improvement is upon the raton, which is nearly four times the thickness of the plant or parent stock,—a fact which is at variance with the course of ratooning in general, since ratons are invariably smaller, and can only be accounted for, in the extraordinary fertility of the Sunderbund soil, and holds out fair prospect of ultimate remuneration to those grantees who are now laboring to convert a rank pestilential morass, into a highly cultivated sugar country.

A full length sugar cane was submitted, said to be produced in the Island of Ceylon by Mr. Henly, from Mauritius plant,—of four months' growth.

From A. Harris, Esq., dated May 28, offering a few remarks on a trial made with a plough recently received by the society, made at the Porto Novo foundery from an American model.

From Major J. A. Moore, dated Hyderabad, May 18, advising despatch of three apples of the nonpareil species, grown in a friend's garden a few miles from the station.

From Colonel Stacy, dated Dacca, May 20, forwarding a bag containing the roots of a plant, common in that part of the country, called "Suth Moolee," or the sixty radishes, also a few bags of a climber termed "Tielh, Gulah."

From Captain Cautley, dated Saharunpore, May 11th, advising the despatch of a quantity of banasmutti seed rice, which he presents to the society.

From Dr. W. Montgomerie, dated Singapore, April 23, acknowledging the receipt of Secretary's letter of the 17th March, intimating a resolution of the Society for awarding him a silver medal.

In reply Dr. Montgomerie returns his best thanks to the society for this mark of its approbation, but regrets that "circumstances should render it necessary to decline the intended honor."

From Signor G. Mutti, dated Kootroor Bagh, Poonah, 7th May, acknowledging receipt of Secretary's letter of April 15, and returns his best thanks to the society for the resolution therein conveyed of awarding him the society's gold medal.

Promises to afford further information to the Society on the cultivation of the standard mulberry trees, &c.

From Major Parsons, dated Cawnpore, May 4, acknowledging receipt of Secretary's letter intimating despatch of cotton seed.

Mentions having raised a quantity of fine Guinea grass from seed forwarded by the Society in 1836.

From Major Gawkin, dated Coel, May 2, acknowledges receipt of cattle committee's pamphlet, but regrets his inability to give any information on the subject in question.

Advise despatch of sample of four growing of oats, and promises to send seed of the "Prangoo" if successful in raising plants from a few seeds lately received.

States that the Guinea grass seed has vegetated, and alludes to trials made with the French oat seed, and Italian six grass seed received from the society.

From Captain Jenkins, dated Gowhatti, May 13, advising despatch of two parcels of fresh Fia cocoons.

From W. Prinsep, Esq., dated May 19, reporting on musters of raw silk forwarded by the committee for his opinion as to the market price.

From James Anderson, Esq., M. D., secretary to the Agricultural Society of Boerhoom, dated June 5, giving cover to a copy of the proceedings of a late meeting of the Branch Society and calling the attention of the parent institution to a few of the resolutions contained therein, viz. for the supply of sugar-cane, fruit trees, seeds, &c. Encloses also a copy of the proceedings of their society since its formation up to the present time.

From W. Rushton, Esq., dated May 12, offering to print the transactions of the Society on the same terms as the Bishop's College or Baptist Mission Press.

Memo.—The question had been settled before the receipt of Mr. Rushton's letter, and the 6th volume is now printing at the Baptist Mission Press.

The Madras Journal of Literature and Science from January, 1837, to March 1238, 5 numbers, has been received through Messrs Thacker and Co.

From Captain F. Jenkins, dated Gowhatti, May 31, intimating his intention of forwarding by a different mode to that hitherto pursued, which has proved unsuccessful, some eggs of the Fia worm to try if by this means they can be received in a living state.

From James Anderson, Esq., M. D., secretary Agricultural Society, Boerhoom, forwarding the samples of cotton alluded to in his letter of the 5th instant.

From Miss Peacock, a pod of a large species of tamarind the produce of Mhow.

Dr. Wallich stated, that it was not a tamarind, but the adansonia digitata or boobab of the West Coast of Africa.

From Dr. Wallich, dated June 13, annexing extract of a letter from Mrs. Captain Milner, presenting a basket of beautiful and perfect bunches of purple and white grapes, with some interesting details as to the mode adopted by that lady in treating the vines. Proposed by the president, seconded by the meeting, that the special thanks of the society be offered to Mrs. Milner, for her highly interesting and beautiful present, which clearly proves that nothing but taste and attention is wanting, to secure as fine grapes and as plentiful in and about Calcutta, as in the finest vine countries.

Memo.—The Secretary had also received within the last week, a splendid bunch of grapes from Col. James Young, the produce of the vine planted by C. K. Robinson, Esq., in the Union Bank compound, and a bunch from Mrs. Smith, the produce of her garden in Short's Bazar. If every householder in Calcutta would plant but two vines, he would secure at once a cool retreat, and delicious fruit by simply planting cuttings in a soukey corner. Mr. George Prinsep presented a fine specimen of cotton grown from Persian seed, valued by Mr. Hill at fifty per cent. more than Surat. It has the advantage of black seed which are easily detached.

Mr. Masters presented a fine graft of the Ficus Elastica, of 48 day growth, 10 feet in length and 6 inches in circumference.

Mr. G. T. P. Speed presented a specimen of hemp grown from the purple Ibiscus, grown at Patna.

The thanks of the meeting were ordered to be given for all the above communications and presentations.

DARJELING.

CALCUTTA, TOWN HALL, 15TH JUNE, 1838.

At a meeting held this-day, J. W. Grant, Esq. in the chair, the following report, drawn up by two gentlemen, to whom the public are greatly indebted, was read to a rather numerous and most respectable assemblage.

The present meeting has been called by a few of the applicants for sites, with the view of promoting such measures, as may be likely to insure comfortable accommodation to all parties, who propose to visit the station. It is, perhaps, scarcely necessary to inform the meeting, that unless active steps are now taken, another year will be lost to the community. Many parties are anxious to build bungalows, and expressed their determination to do so; but the difficulty of procuring builders to direct and superintend these operations, has been already experienced by the whole of them.

Under these circumstances, the idea of starting a hotel on the scheme of a tontine has been suggested, as likely to induce respectable builders to undertake its erection, while, at the same time, the opportunity thus afforded to settlers of procuring competent persons to enter into contracts, &c., would no doubt be taken advantage of by many, who from want of time and other causes could otherwise do nothing.

A plan of a hotel has been prepared by Messrs. Burn and Co., which Mr. Spence approves of; and as he agrees to open it on much the same footing as the one conducted by him here, the question now remains to be considered, "whether or not an adequate sum for its erection is likely to be raised? Messrs. Burn and Co. are not at present prepared to give an estimate of the cost of such a building at Darjeling would be considerably less than in Calcutta. The scheme of the proposed tontine has been kindly drawn out by Mr. Curmin, and along with the plan, both are now submitted for consideration.

Doubts have been expressed by some persons as to the probability of a hotel succeeding at Darjeling, and the Mussoorie one is quoted as being nearly a failure. Without enquiry here into the accuracy of this assertion, it appears to us, that the circumstances are totally different. The Mussoorie hotel was started after the number of bungalows built exceeded the demand for them. At Darjeling there is not a hut at present available. No doubt it may be argued that the hotel is not likely to be patronised after parties have built their own bungalows; but the answer here again is, that the cases are not parallel; and whatever number of bungalows are built at Darjeling, it may be fairly presumed, there will always be a sufficient influx of Bengal visitors, who, from various causes, would prefer a residence at the hotel, to the trouble and expense of building houses for themselves.

Most persons present are aware, that measures are now in progress for the construction of a public road, and four staging bungalows. These undertakings will probably be completed against February next. There are other matters of importance to the settlers. Such as arranging for a proper dak line; managing the details connected with these bungalows; fixing on a European of respectability near Titilay, who would keep a store there and at the station, and act likewise as an agent in procuring bullocks, &c. &c. These objects must be attended to by the committee to be now appointed. It may be satisfactory, however, to the meeting to learn, that a statement regarding the alteration of the dak line has been already submitted to the proper authorities, (with every prospect of success,) which, if adopted, will enable a traveller to lay dak from Calcutta at once to the second bungalow at Punkabancee, 1,500 feet above the sea level, and where he may arrive with ease on the fourth evening.

With these observations this report may be concluded. The subject in all its bearings is now before the community at large; and whatever difference of opinion there may be, as to the means proposed, discussion cannot fail to promote the speedy establishment of an object, conducive alike to the health and recreation, of a great proportion of the Europeans in the Bengal presidency.

HENRY M. LOW.

Calcutta, 15th June, 1838.

W. M. BRUCE.

It was then proposed by Captain W. N. Forbes, and seconded by Mr. W. Stoin, Resolution 1st.—That the report be approved of.—Carried unanimously.

Proposed by Mr. C. K. Robison, and seconded by Captain Forbes, Resolution 2d.—That the scheme of the tontine be approved of.

An amendment was, however, proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, seconded by Mr. Patrick, and carried, that instead of a tontine scheme, the necessary funds be raised by proprietary shares of 250 rupees each.

Proposed by Mr. Samuel Smith, seconded by Mr. Deane,

Resolution 3d.—That a committee be appointed for the purposes stated in the report; with instructions to call a meeting of subscribers, when it shall appear that a sufficient number of shares are subscribed.

This resolution being carried nem. con., it was moved by Mr. R. Stewart and seconded by Captain Forbes, Resolution 4th.—That the committee do consist of the following gentlemen, viz. Messrs. J. W. Grant, C. K. Robison, J. Curmin, Samuel Smith, W. Patrick, Theo. Dickens, H. V. Bayley, Major Garstin, Capt. Bruce, Lieut. Gilmore, H. M. Low, W. F. Fergusson, G. G. Macpherson, Dwarkanauth Tagore, and Pronosnooroomar Pagnon, with power to add to their number.

Proposed by Mr. C. K. Robison, and seconded by Captain Forbes, Resolution 5th.—That Mr. H. M. Low be requested to act as honorary secretary. Carried nem. con.

Proposed by Captain Forbes and seconded by Mr. W. Stoin.

Resolution 6th.—That the committee be authorized to meet any necessary expenses in circulating books, &c., for which expense the subscribers shall be responsible.

Proposed by Mr. W. Prinsep, seconded by Captain Forbes,

Resolution 7th.—That the committee be requested and authorized to place themselves in communication with Government on all subjects connected with the Sanatorium, and particularly to endeavour to have the road now in progress, converted into a good carriage road.

Proposed by Mr. H. M. Low and seconded by Mr. C. K. Robison, Resolution 8th.—That the thanks of the meeting be given to Mr. Curmin, for the trouble he has taken in preparing the plan of a tontine.

Resolution 9th.—That the thanks of the meeting be given to the chairman.—Marked, June 16.

MRS. CHESTER'S FAREWELL DRAMATIC CONCERT.

On Tuesday evening, we attended the above performance at the Town-hall, and considering the circumstances under which it had been got up, we were agreeably surprised to find it so well attended. There could not have been less than twelve hundred rupees in the room.

Mrs. Chester welcomed with hearty congratulations, which, doubtless, stimulated her to do her utmost to please her audience; for she acquitted herself much to their satisfaction.

Mrs. Valadares warbled through passages of considerable length, with great rapidity and delicacy of tone.

O'Mauley was quite at home: his comic song of "St. Patrick was a gentleman," was very good, and more so his Duet with Mrs. Chester; "When a little farm we kept." He has good taste in his singing, as all the world knows from Dublin to Calcutta, and is an excellent comic actor.

Mr. Linton was in good voice: he sang, "Oh maiden fair," with Mrs. Chester in very beautiful style; but we think he was not quite so successful in "The Midnight review." We are aware that it is a very difficult piece, and we have seen Phillips fail in it.

Jem Crow and "The Lover's Mistake" certainly were mistakes, and we would recommend Colonel Free-love to save the prompter a great deal of trouble, and himself too, by learning his part better the next time he undertakes one.

Mr. Rykmann, senior, on the Basson Bassoon, was beautiful. His son, through indisposition was unable to attend.—Hurkaru, June 21.

R. D. MANGLES, Esq.

R. D. Mangles, Esq. who has been appointed to officiate as a member of the Sudder Board of revenue, in the room of Mr. Walters, who has proceeded to sea for the benefit of his health, took his oaths and seat at the board on Tuesday last, the 19th instant, it being the first board day, at which he has attended ever since his appointment as a member of it.—Hurkaru, June 26.

THE DARJELING MEETING.

A meeting was held at the Town-hall, this morning, Friday the 29th June inst.

PRESENT.

Messrs. J. W. Grant, J. Abbot, S. Smith, W. Patrick, J. Cumin, C. Deane, W. Bruce, W. Storr, A. Grant, D. McPherson, M. Dugal, C. K. Robison, J. Spence, Davidson, J. H. Stocqueler, Gray, W. Jackson, R. Evans, R. Walker, Captain Harrington, A. H. Sim, G. Pinsep, Willis, Earle, Barwell, and H. M. Low. The secretary read the following report from the committee:

THE COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

By the 3d resolution passed at the public meeting of the 15th instant, your committee was directed to call a meeting of shareholders so soon as it appeared a sufficient number of shares had been subscribed for. Upwards of ninety having been taken on the 22d, your committee felt justified in calling the present meeting, and they have now to report the number of shares subscribed for as 105.

It will be in the recollection of the meeting that two plans for the proposed hotel were produced on the 15th instant; and that neither of them were approved of. Your committee at their first meeting, came to the same conclusion, viz. that there were objections to both; and Major Garstin having kindly undertaken to make a new plan, it was accordingly submitted for consideration at a meeting of the committee on the 22d. At this meeting too, another plan by Messrs. Burn and Co. was laid on the table.

Your committee do not feel authorized to recommend either for adoption. They approved generally of Major Garstin's, as from the explanations given by him, it seems to combine comfort with economy. But before adopting a plan at all, it is evident that some reference must be made to the amount of funds subscribed for, as well as to the opinions and wishes of the tenant who is to occupy the premises. Another consideration is impossibility of finishing a building on the scale contemplated so early as March next. Your committee, therefore, are decidedly of opinion, that a temporary building should be erected at a moderate expense; and, though at first this recommendation may almost have the appearance of throwing away money, they are satisfied the result would prove a saving. Ample time would thus be given for practically ascertaining the value of materials, cost of labour, &c. &c. and in afterwards effecting a contract for the more durable building, the Company would no doubt have the benefit of a competition, which at present cannot be expected. On the whole then, after giving the subject their best attention, your committee would recommend;

1st. That authority be given to levy the subscription forthwith;

2d. That a sub-committee of three be named for the above purpose, and with power to carry through the necessary arrangements for vesting the property in their names, as trustees for the company;

3d. That the committee be directed to make arrangements for the erection of a temporary building at an expense not exceeding Rs. 6,000, and at the same time to secure a respectable tenant for opening it as a hotel. In conclusion, your committee have to observe, that though active operation cannot be commenced on the spot, before the month of October, still it is very necessary that certain measures should be in progress here, with as little delay as possible. That some difficulties exist is unquestionable, but if resolutions are passed to the effect recommended, your committee feel confident, these difficulties will soon be surmounted, and that the sanatorium of Darjeling will thereby be established on a permanent footing, by next hot-season.—J. W. Grant, Chairman.

RESOLUTIONS.

1st. Moved by Mr. Abbot, and seconded by Mr. Stocqueler, that the report now read be approved, and that the meeting do authorize the committee to carry through the whole measure recommended. Carried nem. con.

2d. Moved by Mr. Smith, and seconded by Mr. Dearie—That Messrs. J. W. Grant, W. Patrick, and Dwarkanauth Tagore, be the trustees for the company with the powers recommended. Carried nem. con.

3d. Moved by Captain Harrington, and seconded by Mr. George Pinsep—That at present a temporary building is alone in contemplation, it will be sufficient at first to raise Rs. 100 per share. Carried nem. con.

4th Moved by Captain Harrington, and seconded by Mr. Bruce,—That the committee be authorised to apply Rs. 200, in aid of the bungalow subscription.—Carried nem. con.

5th. Thanks to the chairman, moved by Mr. Patrick, and carried by acclamation.

LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the committee held at the Society's office, No. 3, Chive-street ghaut, on Monday the 25th instant.

PRESENT.

Rajah Kallykissen Bahadoor; Rajah Rajnarain Roy Bahadoor; Rajah Burrodaraunt Roy; Cowar Sutchurn Ghosaul; Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore; Baboo Prosonodoomar Tagore; Baboo Ramcomul Sen; G. A. Pinsep, Esq.; G. Vint, Esq.; W. C. Hurry, Esq., and W. F. Fergusson, committee.

Baboo Shreemonthloll Khaw, member.

The gentlemen proposed at the last meeting as members of the Society were unanimously elected.

The following gentleman was proposed as a member.

Proposed by G. Vint, Esq. and seconded by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore—W. Bruce, Esq.

The stamp duty now levied on the kaboolats and security bond of the gomastahs and other mollusil servants, was mentioned by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore as a grievance, and he proposed that a respectful application be made to the board of customs, salt and opium, pointing out the grievances sustained by landholders, particularly in consequence of a new order of the board, that the security taken from any gomastahs or other servants should be on a distinct stamp, by which the amount previously required is doabled to 16 (on salaries of 3 to 5) rupees per month. That, as all leases and kaboolats between zemindars and ryots are exempted from all stamps, it appears, that persons who are employed in collecting the rents from the above lessees, ought on the same principle, either to be exempted, or at least put on a lower stamp. This was seconded by Rajah Kallykissen Bahadoor, and carried unanimously. Resolved, that a circular letter, inviting new members to the Society be lithographed for distribution.

Honorary Secretaries.

Hurkaru, June 30.]

A CASE OF VIOLENCE.

The following has just reached us from a correspondent and we publish it without comment :

"A firm in your city, having some causes of discontent with a gentleman, with whom they were in partnership in a sugar concern, contrived first to have him arrested upon a partnership balance sworn to, it is said, as a private account! The arrest was illegal, being performed by bursting open his door, at nine o'clock at night! to the unspeakable terror of his family.

Having got the managing partner out of the way, their next step was to demand possession of the factory, which the assistants, acting by orders of their principal, refused to give, and, in two or three days, boats with about thirty EUROPEAN SAILORS, and forty burkandauzes, were brought up from Calcutta, and the factory taken by storm; though there was no great fighting of course, for the assailing party were headed by Europeans, and the two European assistants in the factory, very properly turned the whole of their attention, to protect the managing partner's lady, her two children, and female servants. She fortunately escaped across the river in a dingy, to Chinsurah, and is now in safety.

The assailants were perfectly aware that the mother and her children were residing in the factory, and that there was, moreover, from 5,000 to 6,000 gallons of rum in the distillery store. It was with the full knowledge of this circumstance, that these gentlemen led a party of sailors to assault it! Can any husband or father think of the possible consequences without a shudder! There is "no mistake" here, Mr. Editor, for one of the gentlemen has actually admitted before a magistrate, that he was accompanied by sailors! A friend of his an officer of a ship, on the river for his health! and he, walked in to the factory, by accident, as one might say, seeing all quiet and abandoned! This occurred on the morning of the 10th instant, but owing to the absence of the magistrate of Barrasut, on duty, the parties are in full possession of the factory, to which they might suppose they had some right; but they have, moreover, taken possession of the dwelling house of a respectable family, and seized the property of all kinds, both factory and private, and some of it is on its way down to Calcutta! Petitions have been presented to the local authorities, the joint magistrate at Barrasut, and the superintendent of police, and proceedings will be immediately instituted in the Supreme Court. It is needless to say, that the assailants had no sort of legal process with them, which could give any colour to their proceedings."—Hurkaru, June 21.

With reference to a statement which appeared in your paper yesterday, from a correspondent, respecting an attack on a sugar factory by some sailors and others, I beg to inform you, that the facts alleged to have occurred are highly coloured, although there is some faint resemblance in the general outline. With the parties sent to take possession, there were 10 not 30 sailors, who were carried up, in order to prevent a breach of the peace, which it was supposed might follow any collision between the burkandauzes of the respective claimants to hold the factory. There was not the slightest resistance, the late occupiers having one and all left the premises, it is supposed, on the report of a party of sailors advancing being received, and no part of the furniture or private property was removed. The house belongs to the factory, and the entire concern to the firm in question. As the matter will be shortly brought before the Supreme Court, when and where the actual circumstances and merits of the case will be fully disclosed, it is unnecessary to say one word more on the subject. The public will soon be enabled to judge who is right and who is wrong. —Hurkaru, June 22.

I observe, Mr. Editor, that your devils have overlooked a note in which I requested you to give my name and present residence in Calcutta to any person who may inquire for them; pray do so, if you please. My respondent informs you, that the facts "are highly coloured." I promise you they are not coloured enough; and, verily, the idea of carrying up sailors "to prevent a breach of the peace" is a rich specimen—almost as rich as the comfortable ignorance in which he appears to be, that the bodily fear is quite equivalent in the eye of the law to the violence. The entire concern did assuredly not belong to the firm in question. If their title was so clear, why use such means? and why, within ten days of the violence, claim in writing, only a joint proprietorship? This document I have seen, Mr. Editor. —Hurkaru, June 25.

SUPREME COURT.

TUESDAY, JUNE 5, 1838.

In the matter of Thomas Wilson, of Dhurumtollah, paper manufacture, Messrs. Baillie and Molloy, attorneys for the insolvent, applied on filing his schedule, that Saturday the 28th of July next, be fixed for the hearing of the petition of the insolvent, filed in the court on the 26th May last. Application granted, on the usual notice of hearing being served upon all the creditors of the said insolvent. — Hurkaru, June 7.

SATURDAY, JUNE 9, 1838.

John Pratling Green and Taranychurn Neaghy, were this day brought up before the court for the hearing of the matters of their respective petitions. The latter was discharged, and the former remanded to the 28th of July next, for the purpose of serving notice of hearing on the detaining, and several other creditors, who had not been already served to that effect.

Joseph Snelson Morton. — Mr. Strettell applied on behalf of this insolvent, on filing an amended schedule, that Saturday the 28th of July next, be appointed for hearing the matters of his petition. Granted, on the usual notice of hearing being served upon all the creditors of the insolvent.

The assignees of the estates of Messrs. Alexander and Co.; Messrs. Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co.; Messrs. Ferguson and Co.; Messrs. Colvin and Co.; and Messrs. Mackintosh and Co.; applied, that their quarterly accounts with the estates and effects of these insolvents, be received and filed in the court. Applications granted. — Hurkaru, June 11.

FRIDAY, JUNE 15, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

This was the first day of term. The chief justice sat alone, and little was done except the taking of common motions.

SEEDBOONDERY DORSET versus COMMONWEALTH DORSET.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Nott) wished to apply to the equity side of the court, for a new trial of the issue at law, tried in this case last sittings, and he intimated an intimation of calling upon the other side to shew cause in the first instance.

The Advocate General (with whom were Messrs. Leith and Morton) for the defendant, objected to this course, and cited the case of Morris v. Davis, 3 Russ. Rep. 3-8 in which upon a similar application the Lord Chancellor Eldon, after consulting with the Vice-Chancellor, held that the proper course of proceeding was to make an ex parte application for the judge's notes of the trial, showing some reasonable prima facie ground for questioning the verdict.

Mr. Clarke said, that there was a distinction in this country, where, although the court was nominally a different court, the judges were the same in law and equity.

Sir E. Ryan was of opinion, that a statement of ground ought first to be made in order to satisfy the mind of the court of the probable necessity for reconsidering the verdict. This was not by any means a motion of course.

The usual practice was, as laid down in the case cited from Russell.

Mr. Clarke said, that he should adopt this mode of procedure, and that he should make his application on Monday next.

RUSSICKCHUNDER SEAL versus JAMES MILLETT.

Mr. Leith moved that the payment of a sum of money directed to be paid by the master's report in this cause, should be made by a transfer of accounts, instead of the usual mode of payment into the hands of the accountant general. Notice had not been given of this motion, but it was apprehended that no objection could be made. Motion granted.

In Mr. Ogilvy's case no application whatever was made to the court, the objections to the return of the writ of habeas corpus, have been dropped, as the prosecutor is anxious that the proceedings may not appear to be vigorously and harshly pressed against the defendant.

The chief justice intimated that only common motions would be taken to-morrow, Saturday (this-day).

In Macnaghten v. Tandy the demurrer to the bill (which is a bill of discovery to ascertain the names of the proprietors of the Algar Ukbar) stands for hearing on Monday. — Hurkaru, June 16.

Our Supreme Court report of Saturday was incorrect (as mentioned by our morning cotemporary) in stating, that the demurrer to the bill of discovery in Macnaghten versus Tandy stood for hearing on Monday (yesterday) This was a clerical error for Thursday. We may mention, however, that the Englishman is by no means altogether accurate in warning its readers not to confound this case with the famous libel case in which the same parties appear as plaintiff and defendant, and in informing them that the two cases have no connexion with each other. It is very certain indeed, that a bill in equity to compel a discovery is not quite the same thing as an action at law to recover damages for a libel; but in the present instance the former is closely connected with the latter, inasmuch as the bill is filed for the purpose of ascertaining the proper parties to the action, and it may be considered, therefore, as supplemental and auxiliary to the proceeding at law. The defendant has demurred to the bill on the well established principle, that no party is bound to discover any matter which may subject him to penal consequences. The precise question, however, involved in the present instance, has not been forestalled by any reported decision, and is still quite open to argument on behalf of the complainant.

MONDAY, JUNE 18, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

(before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

HURRYLOLL TAGORE versus SHAMYLOLL TAGORE.

Mr. Clarke moved that judgment might be entered upon a cognovit given by the defendant to the plaintiff. The defendant died in May last, and application was made within a few days after that event to a judge in chambers to enter up the judgment as of the preceding term, and liberty was then reserved to make the application, without prejudice, in the present term. According to the old rules, if a party had died in vacation, the judgment might have been entered up as of the term preceding, and, although by the new rules all judgments are to be entered of record of the day and year, whether in term or vacation, when signed, yet a discretion was reserved to the court to allow a judgment to be entered up nunc pro tunc. In the recent case in the court of exchequer at home Munn v. Lord Ardley, 5, Dowling's Reports, 595, the application was refused, merely because it could not have been granted under the old rules: the defendant had died in Hilary Term, and the motion was not made until the Easter Term following.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that it was an important point, and the court would take time for consideration.

JOSEPH versus PRINSEP AND OTHERS, EXECUTORS.

The Advocate-General moved, that certain words of course, accidentally omitted in a decretal order made in this cause in July 1837, might be inserted by amendment. The other parties had given their consent. The order was interlocutory only, and it was the custom for the registrar only, and not the judge, to sign interlocutory orders. The clause omitted was the usual direction to take an account of the debts due to the testator. In Wallis v. Thomas, 7 Ves. Jun. a similar application was granted; at least the master was authorized to take the accounts without any alteration in the decree itself.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the alteration would be a material alteration in the decree, yet as all parties had consented, it might be made. His lordship added, this could not form a precedent for future cases.

IN THE MATTER OF W. CURRIE, DECEASED.

The Advocate-General moved, that the usual citations should issue in the goods of this party. Mr. Currie left debts and effects in this country and also in England; and by his will appointed his son and another party executors, who had proved the will in the proper ecclesiastical court at Canterbury. But it had been decided that such probate would not extend to India, and it now became necessary to take out administration with the will annexed in this country. A power was given by the executors, to Messrs. Colvin and Co. to institute actions, and otherwise to act; and the question was whether this power extended to enable them to take out administration and act as executors here.

Sir E. Ryan was of opinion, that the power was insufficient.

Motion refused.

SREEMUTTY SINGHOOSONDERY DASSIE versus SREEMUTTY COMULMONY DASSIE.

This was the issue out of chancery tried last sittings, to inquire into the validity of a certain clause in the will of a wealthy Hindoo Kissenchunder Seal. It may be recollected that the cause occupied four entire days in the hearing, and that a verdict was found for the defendant, negating the clause.

Mr. Clarke now moved for a new trial. He felt himself placed in a very difficult position in applying for new trial upon evidence on which their lordships had once already expressed an opinion; but the case appeared to him so full of doubt and uncertainty, that he was inclined to hope the court might see some ground for a rehearing. He should now state the chief points upon which he founded his present application.

Sir E. Ryan. Have you any new statements to bring to the notice of the court? If not, your position is one of insuperable difficulty. The court cannot well come to a different conclusion at this stage of the proceedings, from the verdict which was pronounced when the evidence was fresh in their minds. I feel bound to say that it then appeared to myself and Mr. Justice Grant, that you had argued the most ably and ingeniously, and indeed urged everything that could possibly be advanced; yet we felt that the probability was, if anything, slightly the other way, and that the plaintiff had not succeeded in making out her case.

Mr. Clarke said, that there were one or two points which he had not then dwelt upon strongly enough; chiefly the circumstance that the defendant had instituted equity proceedings immediately after the death of her husband, when if the will she set up had really been in existence, such proceedings would have been quite superfluous. His grounds for the present motion were,

1.—That the plaintiff's case was supported throughout by probabilities.

2.—That the plaintiff's case was consistent with that which she had previously set up in equity, and that the defendant's was the reverse.

3.—That the plaintiff's witnesses were consistent with themselves and with each other, whereas the testimony adduced by the defendant was highly contradictory and inconsistent.

4.—That all plaintiff's witnesses were perfectly uninterested in the result, while most of the defendant's had some interest.

5.—That the witnesses for the plaintiff were far superior in character and station of life, and therefore more worthy of credit.

Sir E. Ryan said, that he retained his former opinion. He did not say that the defendant's story was the most probable, or that her witnesses were more worthy of belief; but the onus of proof rested upon the plaintiff, and the court could not come to the conclusion that the plaintiff had succeeded in clearly establishing it.

Sir J. Grant fully concurred.

Rule refused.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Nott for plaintiff.

The Advocate-General, Mr. Leith, and Mr. Morton, for defendant.—Hurkara, June 19.

THURSDAY, JUNE, 21, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir John P. Grant.)

HURRYLOLL TAGORE versus SHAMYLOLL TAGORE.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that Mr. Clarke had applied to the court in this case, for liberty to enter up judgment, on a warrant of attorney given by the defendant, empowering the plaintiff to enter up judgment on a cognovit. (See the Hurkara of Tuesday.) The cognovit had been prepared, but the defendant died before judgment was entered up, and the application was made a few days afterwards to a judge in chambers, and by his direction referred to the court. Now according to the old rules, all judgments had reference to the first day of the preceding term, but by the new rules every judgment had effect from the day when signed. It was true, that the court had still a discretionary power of allowing judgments to be entered nunc pro tunc. But it was the opinion of their lordships, that since the new rule, it was necessary for the party to be actually living, at the time when the judgment was signed. Such opinion had been expressed in the last edition of Archbold's practice, and also by Mr. Baron Parke in Mann versus Audley, 5 Dowl. Pract. Reports. Under these circumstances, the court could not grant the application.

Motion refused.

ADMIRALTY SIDE.

IN THE MATTER OF THE SHIP "CALCUTTA."

This was a claim of salvage. An application had been made to direct the sheriff, to cite Charles Howe Cockerell and others, owners and consignees of the bark "Calcutta," to shew cause why salvages should not be allowed to Captain Charles Henry West and the officers of the steam-ship Enterprise, for the rescue of the said bark from the perils of the sea.

It appeared from the affidavits, which were put in and read in this cause on the part of the salvors, that in the month of October last, the steamer Enterprise, employed on Government service in the river Hooghly, observed a vessel off Satgor point, in apparent distress, and making a signal that no pilot was on board. This vessel, which was the bark Calcutta, burden 440 tons, P. H. Bentley, commander, was at that time drifting rapidly towards a dangerous shoal, with a heavy gale blowing, threatening squalls, and a strong flood-tide. She appeared to be dismasted. The Enterprise immediately left the duty on which she was engaged, and proceeded to the assistance of the Calcutta. After considerable exertions, and with no small difficulty and risk, the steamer succeeded in making fast a hawser, and in getting the bark clear of the sands, and then towed her to Kedgee, where she anchored. The whole of the ensuing night was tempestuous, and the steamer remained near the rescued vessel, for her protection, until day-light the next morning, when she towed her up the river to her moorings at Diamond Harbour. The affidavits on behalf of the claimants stated, positively, that, from the dangerous position of the Calcutta, and the strong wind and tide, she must have been infallibly wrecked, but for the timely aid afforded by the steamer. One of the affidavits was that of Longueville Clarke, Esq. who was on board of the Irrawaddy steamer, Captain Warden, commander, and witnessed the danger of the Calcutta, and the exertion of the Enterprise. The vessel and cargo were valued at more than a lac of rupees.

The counter-affidavits (among others) of Captain Bentley, the commander, and of Mr. Middleton, the first officer, set forth, that no signal of distress was made by the Calcutta, that she was in no danger whatever, and that the only signal was the union-jack, which had been flying all day for a pilot. They added, that, observing the Enterprise and Irrawaddy in sight, they had supposed that those steamers were disengaged, and they wished, therefore, to obtain their services. These gentlemen positively swore, that to the best of their judgment and belief, the steamer rendered no material service, and that the Calcutta could have easily reached Diamond Harbour in safety, without aid. The Calcutta was a strong new vessel, totally uninjured; she was not dismasted, but had struck her upper spars, and double-reefed her top-sails.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith, addressed the court on behalf of the defence. The learned counsel contended, that there was no ground for this claim, upon the other party's own showing. No danger was incurred by the steamer, and nothing was performed except what was within the scope of her usual duty and occupation. The steamer, therefore, was merely entitled to the ordinary rate of remuneration for her services, (which had already been received) and to no extraordinary reward in the shape of salvage. Cases had been decided in which it was held, that the claim could not be sustained for the performance of a mere duty. In the instances of the Governor Raffles, and the Francis and Elisa, 2, Dodson's Adm. Rep. the crew of a vessel were held not entitled to salvage from the owners, for rescuing their own vessel from mutineers and pirates. And in the Joseph Harvey, 1, Robertson's Reports, it was laid down that mere pilotage duty, even under hazardous circumstances, must be distinguished from salvage services, and is entitled only to the common remuneration.

Mr. Prinsep, for the plaintiffs, urged, first, that quite sufficient appeared upon the affidavits to shew the extreme danger in which the vessel was placed. It was sworn positively by persons competent to judge, that the vessel was placed in so precarious a position, that she must have been speedily wrecked without aid. This inference was very natural too, considering the circumstances of wind and tide, and it was absurd to suppose, that the vessel could have got off, and arrived at her moorings in safety, if left entirely to her own devices. Authorities were not wanting to shew, that no great exertion was essential to be proved on the part of the salvors, and no vast risk necessary to be incurred, in order to entitle the salvors to their claim. In the case of the Maria Edward's Adm. Reports, 175, the vessel had been totally abandoned and first taken possession of by two fishing-boats; yet, although these vessels were proved to be fully competent to the task of carrying the vessel safely to shore, a King's ship interfered for the purpose of giving assistance, and was held entitled jointly with the original salvors. Secondly, it had been urged on the other side, that the steamer had done no more than her duty, whereas to entitle a party to the claim, such party (it was alleged) must be a mere volunteer. Now the cases cited, relating to the saving of a ship by her own crew, were utterly inapplicable, because the crew had done nothing more than they had actually contracted to do, and could not, therefore, claim any reward: and the distinction between pilotage and salvage might be safely admitted, without affecting the present claim. If the commander of the steamer had been a regular pilot, and had performed nothing more than a pilot's duty, he certainly could not have demanded any additional remuneration; but the case was not so. It was true, that to a certain extent, it is the general duty of commander of a steamer to interfere, because general instructions to that effect have been promulgated under the sanction of Government. But to a certain extent too, it is the duty of every ship to assist another in distress, as it is the duty of every good Christian to lend a helping hand to his neighbour. The case of her Majesty's vessels being allowed salvage for saving other ships from damage or destruction, was precisely in point. It was the bounden duty of a King's ship to aid and protect a merchant vessel under British colours—in the instance, for example, of such vessel being attacked by a hostile ship of war,—yet the King's ship might institute a claim for salvage. In the matter of the Marianne, Haggard's Adm. Reports, 158, where the vessel was saved by the King's sloop Arrow, Lord Stowell said, that the sloop was entitled to salvage, although there was an obligation upon her Majesty's vessels to aid the merchant ships of this country.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that the court wished to look further into the affidavits, and that they should postpone judgment until a future day.

Cur. adv. vult.

This case occupied the court until between 3 and 4 o'clock; and the demurrer in Macnaghten v. Tandy was postponed on that account until the next equity day, (Monday.)

Two cases stand for trial to-morrow, (this-day) on the Common Law Board.—Hurkaru, June 22.

FRIDAY, JUNE 22, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir John P. Grant.)

CROWN SIDE.

THE QUEEN versus MOSAHUB ALLY AND FAY ALLY.

These two prisoners, who were convicted of theft at the 3d sessions of 1836, and whose case was transmitted home by the judges, for the merciful consideration of the crown, were this morning, placed at the bar. The clerk of the crown read aloud her Majesty's free pardon, signed with the royal sign manual, and countersigned by the secretary of state. The pardon was interpreted to them by the sworn interpreter of the court, and the prisoners were ordered to be discharged from custody.

Prisoners discharged.

PLEA SIDE.

JAMES YOUNG versus MUDDOOSOODEN SITT.

This was the first cause on the common Law Board, and stood for this day.

The Advocate General had been instructed to apply to the court for liberty to postpone the trial, as Mr. Clarke (to whom the learned Advocate was opposed) was the only counsel on the opposite side, and had met with an accident in spraining his ankle, which unavoidably confined him to the house.

Sir E. Ryan said, that if the opposite counsel consented, the case might stand over.

Stand over.

IN THE MATTER OF JUDGE, GENTLEMAN.

The Advocate General moved the court, that leave of absence for three years might be granted to Mr. Joseph Spencer Judge, an attorney of this court, for the benefit of his health.

*Leave granted.PHOSOOOOCOMAR TAGORE versus WOOMESCHUNDER PAUL CHOWDRY.

This was an action upon a bond, and was heard ex parte.

The plaintiff and defendant were sureties in a bond given to the receiver (E. Macnaughten, Esq.) for securing the payment on the part of their principal, of certain money payable by instalments. — After the payment of a certain portion, default was made by the principal, and two instalments falling in arrear, the receiver, having applied without success to the principal debtor, instituted proceedings against the present plaintiff, as surety. The plaintiff paid the amount due, Co.'s Rs. 10,500, and now sued his co-surety upon a separate bond, which he had taken from him for his own indemnity.

The plaintiff was very nearly nonsuited, from inability to give legal proof of the default in payment on the part of the principal debtor; but he was allowed to recover on giving evidence of the demand made upon the principal, and of the proceedings at law instituted against himself at the suit of the receiver, and under which he had paid up the arrears which had accrued due.

The Advocate General and Mr. Prinsep appeared for the plaintiff.

Verdict for Company's Rupees 10,500.

EQUITY SIDE.

MUDDOOSOODEN SANDILL versus RALSMONEY DOSSETT.

This cause stood for hearing on the pleadings, the bill having been filed for an account.

Mr. Prinsep (with whom was Mr. Cochrane) for the complainants, stated, that the parties had agreed that a decree should be taken by consent. The learned counsel proceeded to specify the terms.

Mr. Osborne rose and said, that in the consultation at which he was present, the terms consented to were not the same as those now stated on the other side, and in the absence of his leader, Mr. Clarke, he did not feel himself justified in consenting to any alteration.

Mr. Prinsep said, that if Mr. Clarke had been present, he would not object to the terms now stated.

Sir Edward Ryan observed, that this was a curious position to place their lordships in. The court were first informed, that a decree would be taken by consent, and then, as soon as the matter was opened, it appeared that there was a dispute between counsel, respecting the precise terms. The regular course was, whenever the parties were willing, that a decree should be had by consent, to draw up the decree before coming into court, and then for the senior counsel on each side to sign it. If counsel could not agree, the cause must be gone into, and the court would decide.

It was at last settled, that a decree should be taken on the pleadings, and that a reference should be directed to the master to take an account of all matters in the pleadings mentioned.

MUTTYLOLL SEAL versus MUDDENMOHUN NUNDUN AND OTHERS.

This was a bill for a foreclosure, stating the loan to a deceased party, (represented by the defendants,) and that the same was secured by bond with warrant of attorney, and a mortgage of certain premises.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith appeared for the mortgagee.

Mr. Osborne appeared for three infant defendants. The cause was heard ex-parte against the adult defendants.

Sir E. Ryan. Let there be the usual decree of foreclosure.

MUDDENMOHUN MITTER versus JUGGERNAUTH PERSAUD MULLICK.

In this case the bill was filed for a foreclosure upon two mortgages. The cause was heard ex-parte, and the usual decree made.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith for the mortgagee.

Decree of foreclosure.—Hurkaru, June 23.

MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir John P. Grant.)

SREEMUTTY NIBRUNNONEY DABEY v. SHAMLOLL TAGORE.

Mr. Clarke moved that the master's report might be confirmed. The former master had made his report in the cause, to which exceptions had been taken and in part allowed. The report had been referred back, and the present master (the vacancy having occurred in the interim) had made his report upon only the matters excepted to. At the present time, therefore, there were two separate reports, forming one entire and complete report in the cause, and the object of the present application was to consolidate and confirm the same. The learned counsel argued, that it would involve both the master and the parties in great hardship and difficulty, if the whole of the matters brought before a former master were obliged to be gone into a second time before the new master, and the whole report drawn up afresh, while, perhaps, the portion requiring reconsideration and amendment, might bear a very minute proportion to the entire report. Moreover, there was another obvious objection, inasmuch as the master would make the whole report his own, by embodying the former report in his fresh report upon the matters excepted to, whereas the special direction and authority given by the court, would extend only to the latter.

Sir E. Ryan said, that this was an application to add together two separate reports by two different masters, and transmute them into one. Such an application was without precedent in this court, and could not be granted.

Refused.

MANUK AND OTHERS versus SARKIES OWEN AND OTHERS.

The Advocate General (with whom was Mr. Clarke) moved upon affidavits, that the present trustees of the marriage-settlement might be removed, on the ground of insolvency, and others substituted in their stead.

Mr. Prinsep, for the trustees, did not object, on the part of his clients, to their discharge, and to the substitution of new trustees. His clients, indeed, were anxious to be relieved from their trusts, and secured from all future liability. Yet he conceived it necessary to submit to the court, whether the present proceeding was strictly regular, and whether trustees appointed under a solemn deed, could be removed by a mere petition to the court. He submitted that the parties might change the trustees of their own act, and discharge the present trustees from their liability, a regular deed of release.

The Advocate General, in reply, observed, that he could not understand the course adopted by his learned friend, and he was not aware that there was any middle course between opposing a motion and not opposing it. The parties could not effect the change required without the aid of the court, first because one was under age, and secondly because another had refused to give his consent.

The Court said, that it appeared that no opposition to the change was wished to be made on the part of the present trustees, and they unquestionably possessed the right of coming in and opposing the application in its present form, until they were themselves duly discharged from all liability. There must be a reference to the master.

— versus —

Mr. Clarke applied for a sale by the sheriff, of the goods of the defendant, seized under a writ of sequestration for want of an appearance. The affidavits stated, that the goods seized were perishable commodities, and that damage and loss would inevitably ensue, if the sale were delayed.

Sir E. Ryan. Why, it appears that the property in question consists of GRAM, and I am not aware that gram can be called a perishable commodity. I have heard of cases, indeed, where a sale of cattle has been permitted, on the ground of the expense incurred in the keep: in vulgar language, they "eat their own heads off."

Mr. Clarke suggested, that at the commencement of the rains, grain was likely to be damaged by being long kept, and in support of this position, he referred to a report of the agricultural society, who (the learned counsel observed) must be deemed a better authority upon such a point, than even their lordships! Besides, the price of grain was likely to fall in a short time, and this property, therefore, would be sold at a depreciated price.

Sir E. Ryan said, that even if this were the case, it did not bear out the statement that gram was a perishable commodity. The actual sale of the property would be a measure of some severity, and the court saw no reason for hastening it. No judgment had yet passed against the party:—he was only in contempt for non-appearance. The ground of the affidavit be must amended.

Refused.

NIBBUNMOONEY DABEY versus SHAMLOLL TAGORE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Leith rose and said, that he had to shew cause in this case.

The Advocate General observed, that he had not expected to be called upon, as the motion was his own, and it was in his discretion to press it or not.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the course was certainly not strictly regular. It was for the party who had obtained the rule, to apply to make it absolute if they chose. The other side need not interfere, because, unless a motion is made to make the rule absolute, of course it falls to the ground.

The Advocate General, however, said, that he was perfectly ready, and he proceeded accordingly to support his rule. The nature of the application was this. A creditor Juggomohun Mookerjee, had applied, at a late stage, for leave to come in and prove his claim before the master, and the court had allowed this upon a special order, directing that all costs incurred by the proceedings before the master, should be paid by the creditor. The question was, whether the costs of certain objections to the items of a bill before the taxing-officer, were to be considered as included in the terms of the order. The learned counsel contended, that these costs did not arise from the delay of his client, that they would have been equally incurred if he had come in six months earlier, and that they did not fall, therefore, within the purview of their lordships' order.

Mr. Leith shewed cause, contending that the costs of the objections were clearly, to all intents and purposes, costs occasioned by the application of the creditor, and fell within the express words of the order.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that the court had given leave to this creditor, with considerable reluctance, and that the order then made was, that all the costs incurred, should be borne by the applicant, as they considered that he had placed himself in the most unfavourable position in this respect. It was the intention of the court, and the order so expressed it, that the party who had already suffered from the creditor's wilful delay, should not be put to any expense at all in the matter. The order extended, not merely to costs caused incidentally by the delay which had occurred, but to all costs whatever which the application should occasion.

Rule discharged.

BONNERJEE versus BONNERJEE.

Upon the application of the Advocate General, the court said, that judgment would be given in this case (upon exceptions to the master's report) in the course of a day or two.

The motions occupied the court to-day until so late an hour, that the two demurrers standing for hearing on the plea and equity side, were postponed. Their lordships intimated, that in the event of the causes, which stand for to-morrow and the next day, being terminated at an early hour, the demurrers would be taken upon one of those days.—Hurkaru, June 26.

TUESDAY, JUNE 26, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

RANDIONE GHOSE versus RAMANUND GHOSE.

The case was called upon, but stood over, being tied up by a rule nisi for its postponement until next term, on the ground of the absence of two material witnesses.

JAMES YOUNG versus MOODOSOODUN SULT.

Mr. Prinsep opened the pleadings.

The Advocate General stated the case for the plaintiff. The action was brought to recover the balance of principal and interest due upon promissory note for Sa. Rs. 15,000, of which the defendant was the maker, and which had been indorsed over to the plaintiff as secretary to the Union Bank. The defendant and his brother were partners, and had established a cootic or banking-house, which transacted the business with the Union Bank. This promissory note had been given to secure a loan, and the defendant upon two different occasions, had paid up a sum, amounting to between two and three thousand rupees, upon account of the note. The defendant's brother was in the habit of signing for himself and his partner, and had signed his brother's name in his presence upon the present occasion. The learned counsel submitted that proof of the payment on account of the note would preclude the defendant from denying his own liability, and the authority of his brother to indorse.

Evidence was then tendered in support of the above facts.

Mr. Clarke for the defence submitted, that there was not sufficient proof of authority, or that the instrument was duly explained and recognised by the present defendant; and further, that, as it had appeared from the plaintiff's own case that several dealings had taken place between these parties and the Union Bank, there was nothing to shew satisfactorily to what account the alleged sums had been paid. He therefore prayed a nonsuit.

Sir E. Ryan. There is quite sufficient prima facie evidence to shew that the sums were paid on account of this promissory note. If you go for a nonsuit, that evidence must be assumed true for that purpose;—it is otherwise, if you submit the case to us as jurors, and claim a verdict for your client.

Mr. Clarke then called a witness to prove that the cootic was the sole property of the brother, and that the defendant had no interest in it whatever. This witness was examined and cross-examined at great length, and the plaintiff produced testimony in contradiction of the material parts of his evidence.

The Court was of opinion that the plaintiff had succeeded in proving the authority, and was entitled to a verdict for the whole balance claimed.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

WOODYCHUM DOSS versus BRINDABUN.

Mr. Marnell opened the pleadings.

The Advocate General stated, that this was action upon an account stated between the parties. Judgment had been allowed to pass by default for want of appearance, and the plaintiff now proceeded to assess damages. Both of the parties carried on business in Calcutta, and there had been several extensive mutual dealings. Upon the settlement of accounts between them, some time since, a large sum was found due, and acknowledged to be due to the plaintiff; to recover which with interest from that date, the present action was brought.

The Court were of opinion, when the evidence had been gone through, that the plaintiff was only entitled to recover the sum acknowledged to be due upon the settlement of accounts, and that there was no evidence before their lordships to support his claim for interest.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke moved, in the cases, in which a motion was made yesterday to confirm the two separate master's reports; that the said reports might be taken off the file, and referred to the master to be consolidated, when the consolidated report might be afterwards moved to be brought up and confirmed.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that the court would direct that both the reports should be taken off the file, but that when they were referred to the master, that officer must deal with them according to his own discretion, without any special order from the court.

versus THACKERAY.

Mr. Leith moved, that judgment might be entered up in this case as for want of a plea. The plaint was framed upon a bill of exchange, and the plea was the general issue, which, since the new rules, is a nullity.

Motion granted.

The demurrers were again postponed. Sir John Grant said, that in the demurrer on the plea side he had only just received the paper-books. Sir Edward Ryan intimated an opinion to the counsel for the defence, that most of the authorities relied upon by them, had been expressly overruled by more recent decision.

—Hurkaru, June 27.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

RUSSICKCHUNDER NFOGHY versus SHEEMUTTY HUNDEE-MONEY DOSSIE.

The Advocate General (with whom was Mr. Prinsep,) for the plaintiff, stated, that this was an issue from the equity side of the court, directed for the purpose of trying the question whether the complainant in the equity suit (the defendant at law) had accepted and acknowledged a certain Bongallee security in the nature of a bill of exchange for the sum of Sa. Rs. 2,900. The defence set up was that the defendant had never signed her name to any such paper and that the whole was a forgery; but the plaintiff would call the subscribing witnesses, and show when and how the whole happened. The brothers of the defendant (who is a lady of property) by name Cossinauth Dutt and Bisinnauth Dutt, had been indebted in large sums to the plaintiff; some of these debts were liquidated by the sale of certain property mortgaged by them to the plaintiff. The present defendant had paid several large sums at different times and given securities, on account of her brother's debts, and among others had signed the present acceptance to cover the balance found due to the plaintiff from Cossinauth Dutt, on a settlement of accounts between those parties.

Several witnesses were called on behalf of the plaintiff, and examined and cross-examined at great length. Among others, the alleged subscribing witnesses to the instrument were called to prove its validity; the defendant's counsel endeavoured to shew that their names had been subsequently added.

Sir Edward Ryan observed, as soon as the case for the plaintiff had closed, that the court would not call upon the other side for their defence, as they were of opinion, that the plaintiff had failed in proving the genuineness of the acceptance.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith appeared for the defence. Verdict for the defendant.

This case occupied the court the whole day.

The case in yesterday's report, entitled "— v. Thackeray," ought to have stood "Mulloodhur Ghose v. Thackeray." Our reporter accidentally failed to catch the plaintiff's name.—Hurkaru, June 28.

THURSDAY, JUNE 28, 1838.

THIRD TERM.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan and Sir J. P. Grant.)

SCHNEIDER versus MORGAN.

This was an action upon the common counts for goods sold with which particulars of demand had been filed, stating that the plaintiff claimed the value of a buggy sold to the defendant. The plea was special, and stated that the chattel sold did not correspond with the representation of the seller. To this the plaintiff demurred upon the ground that the plea was bad for duplicity, and, moreover, amounted to the general issue.

Mr. Clarke stated to the court, that after the intimations thrown out by their lordships, questioning the validity of the plea, the defendant would, with the permission of the court, withdraw his plea, instead of risking an argument upon the demurrer. Upon the question of costs, he submitted, that some allowances might reasonably be allowed, on the score of the doubt and uncertainty in which the point had appeared to be involved, and that the amendment, therefore, might be allowed without costs, the costs to abide the event of the cause.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that the court would permit the plea to be withdrawn and amended, but that there was no ground for refusing costs to the plaintiff. The cases relied upon by the defendant, had been clearly and expressly overruled.

Leave to amend on payment of costs.

JOHN REVELEY v. BENJAMIN HARDING AND OTHERS.

The Advocate General, shewed cause against the rule nisi obtained by the plaintiff in this case for entering up judgment as in the case of a nonsuit. The action was brought against an insurance office for Co.'s Rs. 12,600. This plaintiff was resident at Penang, from which place the ship sailed, and where she had been insured. The vessel was wrecked at Cochin, and the owners now claimed for a total loss. A Mr. Philip and Mr. Morton had been material witnesses to prove the plaintiff's case;—the former had sailed from Calcutta, and the latter was dead. There were other persons at Penang, capable of giving important evidence, and it would be necessary to apply for a commission for their examination. Under these circumstances the learned counsel submitted, that no unnecessary delay had been shewn.

Mr. Leith in support of the rule, contended that the plaintiff had been guilty of laches and unwarranted delay. The original action was commenced more than a year ago, and discontinued;—issue had been joined in the present action last January, and nothing had been done since. The defence was that the ship had been run on shore by fraud and design; and although underwriters were generally unwilling to take defence in actions upon policies, yet in this case they conceived it to be their duty to defend, as they were confident of the truth of their case, and the fraud of the claimants.

Sir E. Ryan said, that if the underwriters were so confident of their case, it would be more satisfactory to give the other side a full opportunity of procuring all the necessary evidence. The court however, would not compel a commission to examine witnesses, unless the defendants consented.

Mr. Leith consented to a commission.

Rule discharged—costs to abide the event.

RAMDHONE GHOSH versus RAMANUND GHOSH.

Mr. Clarke shewed cause against the rule nisi for the postponement of this trial, obtained on the ground of the absence of two material witnesses. There was no affidavit on the part either of the defendant himself or his attorney, nor was there any sufficient ground shewn for the continued absence of these witnesses. The learned counsel put in counter-affidavit of his client and attorney, and it appeared that these witnesses were at Dacca, which was stated to be only 200 miles from Calcutta, and readily accessible by dawk communication.

Mr. Leith supported his rule.

Sir Edward Ryan said, that the rule must be discharged, and with costs. There was no other affidavit but that of the gomastah, and the court observed, that frequent attempts had been made lately to postpone trials upon such vague grounds. Their lordships would require a much more certain and substantial foundation for such applications. A suspicion naturally arose that the application was made merely for the purpose of delay.

Rule discharged with costs.

MACNAGHTEN versus TANDY.

This case being called on, the counsel for the defendants were about to support their demurrer, when the court observed, that they wished to hear the complainant's counsel first in support of the bill.

The Advocate General stated, that the defendant was the editor and publisher of a newspaper called the Agra Jekhbar, and that the present bill had been filed against him for a discovery of the names of the proprietors of the said paper, in aid of an action at law about to be brought against them for certain libels contained in that newspaper. There were several grounds stated in the demurrer, but the chief grounds were that the bill sought a discovery which would subject the defendant to pains and penalties, contrary to the principles recognized by courts of equity, and, moreover, that the defendant himself might be examined as a witness at law in an action of libel against the proprietors, and that he was not subject, therefore, to a bill of discovery.

Sir J. Grant suggested, that the learned counsel might confine himself to the former point, as it appeared prima facie to make strongly against him.

The Advocate General submitted, that there was no ground for the objection. It was only stated, that an action was about to be brought against the proprietors, and the defendant was not necessarily included in this. There was nothing whatever to shew that the answer to this bill would attach criminality to the defendant. Besides, there was no possible object to be gained by calling upon him to acknowledge himself responsible a proprietor, because he was already amenable as the avowed editor. But, even admitting for argument's sake, that part of the discovery sought in the bill extended against the defendant himself, and afforded a ground for the objection that he was not compellable to criminate himself by his answer, this did not apply to the whole bill, and there were abundant authorities to shew that a defendant might demur or plead, to part of a bill and answer to the remainder. The present demurrer, therefore, was at all events too large.

Sir Edward Ryan. There certainly is some distinction, by the manner in which Mr. Advocate General has ingeniously shaped his case. The court now wish to hear the opposite side upon the other main point taken in the demurrer.

Mr. Phipps, in support of the demurrer, contended that their opponents were placed in this palpable dilemma:—if they mean to argue that this defendant was an interested party, and as such liable to the bill of discovery, then the first objection would arise, that he was called upon to make a discovery which would criminate himself as proprietor, and if on the other hand it was contended that he was not interested, and was in this respect a mere third party, an equally insurmountable objection arose in the principle that a party capable of being made a witness at law could not become a party to a bill of discovery. Now, it was stated in the bill that C. G. Mansell (and others were proprietors of this paper:—then, why was not an action brought against Mr. Mansell and Mr. Paudy subpoenaed as a witness to prove the proprietorship? No authority could be shewn for making a witness defendant in an equity suit for the mere purpose of obtaining his evidence; and, indeed, if such a principle were once acknowledged, it would lead to endless abuses. Every one was liable to be subpoenaed as a witness; but was every one therefore compellable to answer a bill of discovery? Besides there were no grounds alleged how or why this party possessed any knowledge upon the subject, or enjoyed peculiar opportunities of procuring information. It was true, that he was editor of the paper in question, and as such employed in the office, but this was no guarantee that he was acquainted with the names of the proprietors themselves. The bill might just as well have been filed against the Printer's devil, who of course was also employed in the office. The whole proceedings was a mere experiment; the bill was (as it were) shot into a mob, and the complainant might go on in the same manner from party to party, until he succeeded in hitting upon some one capable of giving him the desired information. But, farther, the learned Advocate General had considered the former objection upon two narrow grounds. There were authorities to show that no bill of discovery would lie in aid of any criminal proceedings, whether the defendant himself was implicated or not, and that it was very questionable whether it could be supported for any tort whatsoever. These positions were laid down by Lord Langford, the master of rolls, in a recent case reported in 1 Keen's reports, Glynn v. Houston, where the bill was in aid of an action for false imprisonment against the Governor of Gibraltar. So in Caxton Douglas, 16 Vesey Junior, it was laid down, that it was material whether the criminal matter affected the defendant or other parties, and that no one was bound to answer to matters tending to implicate another in a criminal charge.

Mr. Leith followed on the same side, and urged the points dwelt upon by his leader, contending that this demurrer was founded upon two well-established principles of equity, viz. that no party was bound by his answer to criminate himself or any other person, and that a witness could not be made a party to a bill of discovery. The learned counsel further proceeded to argue, that it was necessary for a party to come into a court of equity (as usually expressed) "with clean hands:" whereas it here appeared upon the face of the bill, that the complainant himself had given ample provocation, and had in fact commenced hostilities by publishing gross libels against this very defendant.

Sir E. Ryan. That appears upon the face of the bill no further than this,—that you have accused him of it in your own libel!

Mr. Leith then urged another point, viz. that the party was bound to deny solemnly all the charges against him contained in the libel of which he complained: otherwise it would not appear but that a plea of justification might be put upon the record in the action at law; and proved;—in which case no bill of discovery could aid him a jot. Now the charges contained in the alleged libel were not denied by the complainant, and the charges, therefore, must be assumed as true.

Sir Edward Ryan. That position would be good, where the party libelled sought for a criminal information against the libeller, but the principle is quite inapplicable to the present case. The complainant is not prejudiced by omitting to traverse the truth of the charges.

The Court then directed the attention of the complainant's counsel to the dilemma in which they appeared to be placed.

The Advocate General said, that there was not only the authority of legal decisions in support of their side, but the express declaration of an Act of Parliament. By the 38 Geo. III. c. 78. s. 28, it was expressly enacted, that in all cases where bills were filed for the purpose of discovering the names of the proprietors or publishers of any journal, or ascertaining other necessary matters in aid of an action at law for libel, it should not be competent for the defendant to plead or demur, but that he should be compelled to answer the matters required. Now he did not mean to say that this act expressly extended in India, but it amounted to a clear admission, by inference, that bills of discovery had been formerly entertained, and were not wholly unusual in such cases.

Sir E. Ryan. It seems to me merely to narrow a right in the part of the defendant, which formerly existed!

Mr. Clarke followed on the same side. The learned counsel took a new ground of argument with reference to the above cited Act of Parliament, and contended that although the act itself did not extend to India, this court, sitting as a court of equity, would recognize the principle there laid down, because by the express provisions of the charter, it was empowered to decide according to equity and good conscience, and the practice was directed to be regulated according to the rules which were acknowledged, and acted upon at home. Now, it was clear that such a bill as the present would be entertained by the court of chancery at home, because it would not be competent for the defendant to plead or demur, and the demurrer must therefore be overruled. The same principle ought to be acted upon here.

Sir J. Grant. I understand this act to mean that the defendant, when interested, shall not shelter himself from a discovery upon the mere ground that such discovery may subject him to penal consequences.

Mr. Clarke. The act contains no such restriction, my Lord. It provides generally that the defendant shall be compelled to answer, and he has no right to demur upon one ground more than upon another; whether it be his liability to penalties, or his competency as a witness at law. The object of this enactment is plain. It was, doubtless, occasioned by those disgraceful tricks to which the proprietors of journals (as in the notorious case of the John Bull) had recourse, in putting forward men of straw to become the scape goats for the most atrocious libels. There were exceptions to the rule that no bill of discovery would lie for torts, or against parties competent to be called as witnesses. In the first place, there were cases (reported in Vernon), where it was expressly laid down that a court of equity would entertain a bill in aid of an action in the form ex delicto, as well as for actions ex contractu. As to the other point there was one instance where witness was compelled to answer to a bill of discovery in a matter relating to canal-tolls, and another where a factor was compelled to answer, although a real principal was concerned. Now it might be said, perhaps, that these cases arose ex necessitate rei, and were mere exceptions to the general rule, inasmuch as the witnesses, made defendants, were the only ostensible parties. But the present case was fully as much an exception, and presented peculiar features which justified a modification of the general rule.

Sir Edward Ryan. I retain my former opinion, and I have no doubt whatever that such a bill as the present cannot be sustained. This is a bare question of law, and unconnected with any disputes which may exist between Mr. Macnaghten and Mr. Tandy. We are told that an action of libel is pending, but of this we can take no notice.

If the party answers this bill as it stands, he must, infallibly criminate himself. It has been ingeniously suggested, that the part relating to the defendant might be omitted; but this is impracticable. It is impossible for the defendant to answer the bill at all, without stating that he is connected with the paper, or otherwise interested so as to make him incompetent as a witness.

Again, no authority is shown and I believe none exists, which contravenes the general principle, that such a proceeding is untenable in the case of a mere personal tort, whether the defendant be implicated or not.

The exceptions to the rule that a witness cannot be made a party to a bill of discovery, are founded upon peculiar circumstances, which have no sort of existence in this case. They are exceptions which only confirm the general rule.

As to the 38 Geo. III. c. 73, I must confess myself utterly unable to perceive the grounds of the learned Advocate General's inference. It appears to me to imply, not that such bills were formerly entertained but that such demurrers were formerly allowed. The other argument founded upon that act is inapplicable. If this were a mere matter of practice and procedure, it might be otherwise, but it is a question of general right. Besides it seems quite clear that even in England this could not extend to the case of witnesses made defendants, because even if an answer, were obtained, it would not be evidence against a third party, and unless the act went so far as to make such answer legal evidence, the provision so far would be utterly nugatory. Possibly this very act, may have given rise to the present novel bill of discovery! The demurrer must be allowed, and the bill stand dismissed.

Sir J. Grant concurred.

The Advocate General. I hope your lordship will not allow costs, to a party guilty of such gross libels.

Sir E. Ryan. We have no grounds before the court Mr. Advocate, for assuming that the allegations are libels.

Bill dismissed with costs.

RAMDHONE GHOSE, REPRESENTATIVE OF MUDDENMOHUN GHOSE, DECEASED, versus RAMANUND GHOSE.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings. The plaint was on the common counts for money lent and interest, laying the promises both to the deceased and the plaintiff. The plea was non assumptis.

Mr. Clarke stated, that this action was brought to recover the balance due upon a Bengallee instrument in the nature of a bond, given to secure a loan of Sa. Rs. 1,600. This was the case in which their lordships had discharged the rule nisi on Thursday, for the postponement of the trial, obtained on the alleged ground of the absence of two material witnesses for the defence. There was an order drawn up by the court under the new rules, compelling the other party to admit the execution of the instrument, in default of having appeared to shew cause before a judge at chambers against making such admission.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the order was incorrectly drawn. The rule in question, R. 59, gave no power to compel the admission of any document, but merely allowed a discretion with respect to the costs of proof, in the event of a refusal to admit the execution.

Mr. Clarke said, that the order had certainly appeared to him inaccurate, and he was prepared therefore to prove the instrument in the regular way.

The subscribing witnesses were then called, and the instrument and consideration were proved, also the fact that the plaintiff was the only surviving son. The sum of Rs. 838 were allowed by the plaintiff, as having been paid on account of interest, and a verdict was taken for the balance.

*Verdict for the plaintiff.

SHAIK BENGALLY, BUTCHER, versus SHAIK PEEB ALLY.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings. The plaint was for goods sold and money lent.

Mr. Clarke stated the plaintiff's case. Part of the claim was for the principal and interest of a loan, and the remainder for the value of certain cattle sold to the defendant. Witnesses would be called to prove the transactions, and an admission of the debt on the part of the defendant, coupled with a promise to pay.

Evidence was given to shew that the parties had agreed to settle their money disputes, that they met at defendant's house, and that the defendant eventually agreed to pay Rs. 1,600. A written statement of the court was intended to have been drawn up on the following morning.

The Advocate General (with whom was Mr. Prinsep) for the defence contended, that this could not be received as proof, since it was clearly nothing more than an attempt to compromise the threatened action, and was an offer made merely to purchase peace.

Sir Edward Ryan thought that it was evidence, and conclusive unless the other side could rebut it.

Verdict for the plaintiff for Rs. 1,600, each party paying his own costs.

* SYED MERAH versus ABDOL GUNNEE.

Mr. Barwell opened the pleadings. This was an action upon the common counts. The plea was the general issue.

* Mr. Clarke in the course of the day suggested as a general point of practice though immaterial in this case, as the plaintiff had obtained a verdict,—that according to rule (34) of the new plea rules, it was unnecessary to prove that the plaintiff was the legal personal representative. That rule provides, that the character in which the plaintiff sues shall not be considered in issue unless expressly denied.

The Court acquiesced.

The Advocate General appeared for the plaintiff, who is a Mahomedan trader. Several commercial transactions had taken place between these parties, and the plaintiff claimed the sum of Rs. 2,064, as the balance due to him.

After a lengthy examination and cross-examination of witnesses on both sides, it was agreed, at the suggestion of the court, to refer all matters in difference between the parties to arbitration, the costs of this action and of the award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator.

The Advocate General and Mr. Barwell for the defence.

Referred by consent.

RAMDONDOL SEAL versus BISUNNUR DHUR, HEIR AND REPRESENTATIVE OF RAJKISSEN DHUR.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith appeared for the plaintiff. The claim was for Rs. 2,125.

The defendant had put in an appearance, but had not pleaded, and now appeared in court personally, to confess the action.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

The chief justice intended that he should sit alone to-morrow (this-day) at eleven o'clock, to take common motions.—Hurkaru, June 30.

SUDDER DEWANNY ADALUT.

JUNE 5, 1838.

(Before J. R. Hutchinson, Esq. Judge.)

A petition was presented for an appeal by a party to a suit tried before the judge of zillah Tihoot.

The petitioner stated, that a person named Shibchunder, who resided within the district of Tihoot, had become security to another person for the payment of a debt due to him by a third party. The original debtor having failed to pay this debt when it became due, the creditor sued both the debtor and his security for the amount, and, having obtained a decree in the zillah court of Tihoot, he seized some lands and houses for the execution of his decree, situated within the jurisdiction of the zillah court of Dacca, as the property of Shibchunder the security. The petitioner admitted that these lands and houses had been formerly the property of Shibchunder, but he had sold them to the petitioner long previous to his becoming security for the debt, for the liquidation of which they were now seized. He further added, that he was a resident within the district of Dacca, and consequently not amenable to the jurisdiction of the court of zillah Tihoot. He therefore prayed the Sudder Court to reinvestigate the merits of his case, and order the replevin on his lands and houses to be withdrawn.

The vakeel of the party who had seized these lands, &c. as the property of Shibchunder, replied that at the time that Shibchunder became security for the payment of the debt for the realization of which the property which this petitioner claims to be his, had been seized, he had represented to his client that the property in question was his, and it was on this very property that his client had consented to accept the security of Shibchunder. The judge was of an opinion, that there were sufficient grounds to admit the appeal to be heard, and it was ordered to be registered accordingly.

JUNE 4, 1838.

(Before E. R. Barwell, Esq. Commissioner.)

Several proprietors of lands in a zillah appertaining to the Bengal presidency, petitioned the commissioner against the collector of that zillah.

The petitioners stated, that the collector in question had in one day decided the cases respecting their lands against them, and that they had subsequently petitioned the collector for official copies of the decisions passed by him on their cases, which he had refused to grant on the plea, that by the time these documents could be furnished to them, the period of three months allowed by the regulations from the time of the decisions being passed in their cases, to file their appeal to the superior court would expire.

On perusal of those petitions, the commissioner, direct ed a precept to be despatched to the collector, desiring him to forward to the superior court his replies to the charges instituted against him by these petitioners. The collector thereupon made his return, in which he stated, that he conceived that the period of three months allowed to any dissenting party from his decision to appeal to the superior court, commenced from the date of the decision of their case and not from the time when the order passed by him was engrossed and ready for transcription, as these petitioners conceived it to be, and consequently as three months would expire from the date of his award in their cases, before they could obtain copies of the documents they required, and file their petition of appeal before the superior court, he had declined furnishing them with official copies of these documents.

After the receipt of this return of the collector to the precept directed to him in this case, Mr. E. R. Barwell, the commissioner of the Sudder Special commissioner's court, took up the matter pending on these petitions, and after he had carefully perused the petitions and the collector's reply to the charges urged against him or them, he decided that in his opinion, the period of three months allowed to a dissenting party to appeal from the award of the minor court to the Sudder Court, commenced from the date on which the orders on their cases were ready for transcription, and directed the collector to furnish the documents required by these petitioners.—Hurkaru, June 15.

SUDDER REVENUE BOARD.

MAY 15, 1838.

THE SETTLEMENTS TRANSFERRED TO MR. LOWIS.

The secretary to Government in the revenue department, informed the secretary to the revenue board, that the Government had at the suggestion of the revenue board, approved of the transfer of the settlement department to Mr. Lowis, as a temporary measure, and desired the members of the revenue board, to put him in immediate possession of it, as this measure would enable Mr. Tucker, now in charge of this department of the business, to resume his usual business at the board, and thus supply the vacancy occasioned by the absence of Mr. Walters, who has proceeded to sea.

TRANSFER OF THE BACKERGUNGE DIVISION OF THE SUNDERBUNDS FROM THE DACCA DIVISION COMMISSIONER TO THE COMMISSIONER OF JESSORE.

Government has, at the suggestion of E. M. Gordon, Esq., backed by the recommendation of the Sudder board of revenue, been pleased to transfer the control over the proceedings of the divisions of the Sunderbunds, appertaining to the zillah of Backergunge, from the surveillance of E. M. Gordon, Esq., the commissioner of the 15th or Dacca division, to the superintendence of Dampier, Esq., commissioner of the 18th or Jessore division; and the secretary to the revenue board was directed by the secretary to Government, in the revenue department, to inform the two aforesaid commissioners of the transfer.

DEFALCATION IN THE CALCUTTA COLLECTORATE.

Defalcation of sicca rupees 5,014 was lately discovered to have occurred in the office of the collectorate of Calcutta, whilst it had been under the superintendence of Mr. C. Trower. This was duly reported to Government, and his honour the Vice-President in Council, after minute inquiry and due deliberation, informed the secretary to the revenue board, through the medium of the secretary to Government in the revenue department, that Government did not consider the case of this defalcation attributable to Mr. Trower, nor did it attach any blame regarding it to that gentleman in his official capacity; therefore his honor the deputy Governor of Bengal, did not consider that gentleman in any way blameable or responsible for this deficit.

The revenue board was further informed, that the revenue accountant had been directed by the secretary to Government in the revenue department, by the orders of the Vice-President in Council on this subject, to write the amount of this defalcation, in his account of the revenue, to the profit and loss entry in his books, with a memorandum that the amount is to be debited conditionally to Hollodhur Roy. In the event of the bills for the amount of this deficit being found, the amount is to be recovered by a bill from the said Hollodhur Roy, as the discovery of these bills are considered by Government to be necessary in order to prove his responsibility for this amount.—Hurkaru, June 26.

SITTINGS IN THE SUDDER DEWANNY AND NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

Since the commencement of the present month the judges of the courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut, have commenced their private sittings in which they adjudicate matters submitted to the court as a joint body, twice a week, instead of once a week, as was formerly the case.—Hurkaru, June 26.

TIRHOOT.

PRINCIPAL SUDDER AMEEN'S COURT, MAY 28, 1838.

(Ubdool Wahid Khan, Bahadoor.)

This case was originally instituted in the court of the moonsiff of Mudepoor. The plaintiff sues three individuals, viz. Premjha, Hemunjha, and Shamjha, for a bonded debt of Rs 200 with 11 Rs 8 As. interest that has accrued thereupon. The defendants contest the demand by denying the genuineness of the tumssook; and producing witnesses to prove as much. The plaintiff substantiates his plea, by the depositions of witnesses, who swear to the money claimed, having been paid to one of the defendants, and to the rest being parties to the instrument produced in court. The moonsiff decrees the suit in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants appeal; the case is referred to the former principal Sudder ameen, from whom the decision of the moonsiff is reversed. The respondent resorts to a khas appeal, i.e. to the court of the additional judge, who, considering the grounds of the decision of the principal Sudder ameen as inconclusive, refers the case to this Court.

This-day the principal Sudder ameen examined the case, and had all the papers on the file read. It was discovered that two of the vakeels, a mookhtarkar and the stamp vender attached to the moonsiff's court, named by the respondent as witnesses to the defendants' preventing him by entreaties from prosecuting him, some time before the institution of the suit, had not been called in by the principal Sudder ameen. This court thought it desirable to have them produced, and gave the vakeel of the respondent two weeks' time for that purpose. The vakeel of the appellant was also permitted to produce, if he wished it, any other witnesses or proofs in support of his side of the question.

In the course of examining the file of the proceedings in the case, the fysula of the moonsiff was read. Ere it had been gone through, it struck the court that half of the fysula related to one, and half to another case. The under part of the paper had been added evidently by carelessness or accident, without the incongruous junction having been discovered, by any of the courts through which the file had been travelling in quest of a final decision; and but for the watchfulness of this court, it might have had to stand a second khas appeal.

ADDITIONAL PRINCIPAL SUDDER AMEEN'S COURT.

(Shoojaodeen Ulles Khan, Bahadoor.)

On entering, we found the court engaged with a suit respecting the right by law, and fact of occupancy, to certain real property, lustily being contested by four vakeels. There was apparently so much said by all of them, several speaking at once, that if the court could by any possible means, remember but a tithe of what was spoken for and against the merits of the case, we warrant the result would be the most inconclusive conclusion, at which any judge or jury could arrive. We were utterly foiled in our attempts to make anything of the business. The court, however, patiently endured the wrangling of the legal twigs, and seemed to be very much at its ease, as to the drift of the speeches addressed to it, as if out of a four-mouthed speaking trumpet.

In the midst of the hubbub, we caught the eyes of the court, which led to the inquiry, "what is that gentleman about?" One of the vakeels, who had seen us perpetrate our mischievous work in the other courts, explained the sum and substance of our business, with which the Khan seemed satisfied; and turning to us asked, whether we should like to consult any of the papers in the file, to furnish ourselves with accurate data for our reports. We should have accepted the offer, but contented ourselves with replying, that we would at present rather dispense with any other mode of preparing our reports than that which we have hitherto adopted.

THE PUNDIT'S COURT.

There is yet another court at this station to be noticed. We have several times passed by it, while it sat in the verandah of the building in which the magistrate's kut-cherry is held; but could not possibly suppose it to be a court of justice. We had taken the whole concern as the darbar of the nazir, or dufter of one of the pleader's practising here. Being told this morning what it meant, we took a closer survey of it than it had deserved, without a label to point it out. "This too is a judge; and this is a court of justice!" To this court criminal cases are referred by the magistrate,—sometimes with a direction, that if the case turned out to be a serious one, it should be sent back for trial to the magistrate's court. The Pundit seemed to be a quiet, harmless personage, with two smart right and left hand men, to help him to sustain the labours of justice.—Hurkaru, June 18.

THE JUDGE'S COURT, MAY 25, 1838.

Since our appearance in this court, we had no apprehension that our avocations would prove unpleasant to the authority that presides over it, we could not possibly anticipate any thing but ready encouragement in the prosecution of our labours. Publicity, we should have imagined, would be courted where there was a consciousness of the characteristics which adorn the bench. Our first report will offer a satisfactory testimony of readiness to set in the fairest point of view, as we are in justice bound to do, those qualities which are entitled to approbation, and this we shall continue to do wherever and whenever we may have opportunity.

Adulation we hold in contempt; but we shall never forget ourselves so far as to withhold the meed of praise when the authorities deserve it. On the other hand we have fearlessly brought to the notice of the public every thing that required to be dragged from mofussil obscurity to the knowledge of the world. Of this nobody that values the weal of the community, the impartial distribution of justice, the correction of abuses which seldom find the light of publicity through any other channel, can possibly question the advantages. And we always had an impression on our mind, not yet obliterated, that the appearance of public reporters in the mofussil courts could not but be appreciated by Government, likely as it is to be left totally in the dark, respecting a thousand things and circumstances which transpire at a distance from the presidency. Such has been and are our views; and we persuade ourselves that we are not harbouring chimerical notions.

When we made our debut as a reporter at Monghyr, we had our fears; we did not, we frankly own, expect that ready and civil encouragement in those courts which we were satisfied would by no means be long withheld. The authorities there not only offered no hindrance to the prosecution of our duties, but seemed to help us forward, though we are sure the freedom of our remarks was calculated to rouse into irritation the corrupt passions of human nature, and expose us at least to the exhibitions of some tokens of the displeasure of those who had not been accustomed to have their public proceedings roughly handled, or freely commented on; still they took no means of obstructing us or even indirectly exhibiting any hostile feelings. We were readily accommodated with a seat, though there were not wanting people, among those who frequented the courts, who regarded our being allowed to sit in court as reprehensible. It was argued that it was a mark of the favour of the court towards us; for what was more monstrous in the mofussil than to permit any person not a functionary to be sitting in open court!

At Bhaugulpore, too, every facility was afforded us by all the authorities; nay, they seemed to be studious to render us perfectly satisfied that we were before liberal-minded judges and magistrates, who desired no kind of concealment from the eyes of the public at large. They seemed rather to court publicity; and both there and at Monghyr, we pursued and terminated our career without the slightest impression on our minds that we could possibly give umbrage. Had we published any misstatements we should have been happy to have had our mistakes rectified: we courted no favour, but we received kindness freely.

On our arrival at this station, we heard a rumour that our pursuing the avocations of a reporter would not be relished by the authorities; but we gave no credit to it: we went quietly round the courts and were much gratified by what we saw in some of them. We readily laid the result before the public. To-day we appeared in this court and took our stand not far from the bench in a part of the court-house to which the vakeels and others freely resorted, and where we ourselves went several days without any objections being raised. But when we went to-day with pencil and paper in hand, we were desired by the judge to place ourselves there where the populous was standing—a place so far removed from the presence that we are certain we shall not be able to catch distinctly what transpires about it. There was not another individual, vakeel or mooktear, in the place where we had stationed ourselves, we incommoded nobody: we were merely taking notes in our memorandum book placed on a kind of railing that separated us from the vakeels, &c. that were standing before the court. Whatever might have been the object of the direction we received this-day, we cannot view it in any other light than at a manifestation of those sentiments which we were on our arrival at this district told to expect. We were unwilling to call away the attention of the court from the case which it was then occupied upon; but we intend to bring the matter formally before the judges, as it is obvious that we cannot rely on the accuracy of our reports, if we have not an opportunity of distinctly hearing the proceedings.—Hurkaru, June 23.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

MAKING OF THE GOVERNOR WITH RUNJEET SING.—It is said that a large force, under the command of Major General Duncan, will proceed, soon after the rains, towards Ferozepore, on the Sutledge, in which neighbourhood the meeting between the Governor-General of India and the ruler of the Punjab, will take place. The force will consist of one regiment of native cavalry, a troop of European horse artillery, two squadrons of Her Majesty's 16th lancers, one regiment of European, and five of native infantry.

THE GOVERNOR OF SERAMPORE.—The Hon. Mr. Hanson having been appointed Governor of Serampore, by His Majesty the King of Denmark, arrived in the river on the 20th instant, and landed in Serampore the next day at noon, under the salute due to his rank.

THE BHOTAN EMBASSY.—Within the last few days, letters have been received in this city from the British embassy in Bhotan, from which we learn, that Captain Pemberton and party have abandoned their original plan of proceeding into Tibet, and may be expected in Calcutta towards the latter end of June.

THE CULNA AFFAIR.—Mr. Shaw, who had gone in company with Mr. Hedger to attend the investigation at Burdwan, had been again arbitrarily seized by order of Mr. Ogilvy, the magistrate, who was still in power there, and dragged through the streets to the cutcherry; three men having seized him to effect that purpose, without any previous warning. After having been kept in the compound for upwards of an hour, (his papers having also been taken possession of,) he was admitted to the "presence," where he found Mr. Ogilvy on the bench, and another person, whose name Mr. Shaw was not acquainted with. He requested Mr. Ogilvy to inform him who the gentleman was; but Mr. Ogilvy declined. Mr. Shaw insisted on his right to be informed who it was, by whom he was to be judged; whereupon both the gentlemen on the bench rebuked him harshly, and paid no attention to his protest, against the examination of his private papers. Mr. Ogilvy at length said, that he considered Mr. Shaw's bail to be invalid, and that, therefore, Mr. Shaw was to be detained in custody. Upon this Mr. Hedger, who had hastened to the scene, on hearing of Mr. Shaw's arrest, informed Mr. Ogilvy, that as he Mr. Hedger, had been bail for Mr. Shaw, he considered himself discharged from all further responsibility. To this Mr. Ogilvy demurred; but Mr. Hedger informed him with firmness, that as he had chosen to take Mr. Shaw again into custody, he had, ipso facto, freed the bail, and that Mr. Hedger should act accordingly. Thus Mr. Shaw was again incarcerated by a proceeding so arbitrary, that we should have thought no magistrate would have dared to have exercised his power in such a manner upon a British subject, since, at least, the revolution. As to the investigation which has been going on there, it seems from the accounts received, to be worse than mockery. Mr. Ogilvy, who stands accused of the highest crime known to human law, was actually conducting the investigation. He has, however, been temporarily removed from his acting magistracy—a course of proceeding which will secure an impartial investigation of the affair. Mr. F. C. Smith, condemned as especially indiscreet and improper, the conduct of Mr. Ogilvy, subsequently to the first arrest of Mr. Shaw, and the magistrate has been accordingly summoned to Calcutta.

Ogilvy, and a criminal information against Mr. Barlow for improper neglect in the discharge of his magisterial and judicial duties, no less than thirteen civil actions, arising out of the Culna affair, have been instituted by different parties against the first-named gentleman, who has been arrested by Mr. O'Hanlon, the magistrate, but bailed on two lacs of rupees.

The preliminary proceedings in the case of the pretender to the raj of Burdwan, commenced before the magistrate of Hooghly on Monday. *Pertaub Chund was in the cutcherry, the greater part of the day, having portions of the documentary evidence read. He admitted many of the letters addressed by him to neighbouring Rajahs. On Tuesday, Mr. Shaw and Mr. Graham attended on his behalf. Neither of these gentlemen had taken out a mauktar-nameh. There was no objection to his cross-examination of any of the witnesses on any points relating to himself; and he very frequently addressed the magistrate. The proceedings were not of much importance. The soi disant Rajah was not present on Tuesday.

On the 14th instant, seven other witnesses were examined for the prosecution in Mr. Ogilvy's case, in the course of which one of the witnesses said, his son was one of the people shot, and gave other particulars which we are requested by the magistrate to withhold, also the other evidence given. At the conclusion of this day's examination, Mr. Prinsep observed, that no distinct evidence had been heard of Mr. Ogilvy's giving the order for the firing. In reply to which, Mr. Longueville Clarke said, that very plain evidence had been given on that point.

The final examination of witnesses for the prosecution and defence, in Mr. Ogilvy's case, concluded at seven o'clock on the 22d instant. The nazir and darogah of Burdwan, were the two last witnesses examined for the defence. The former deposed, to his being sent for by Pertaub Chund, and to his going on board his budgerow, and to his having received a letter written in English for the magistrate, but which he returned to the bearer of it; and also to his having received two other letters written in Persian, from Pertaub Chund. He could not state the hour he received the letters, nor from whom they came. They were signed by Rajah Pertaub Chund. He directed the bearer of the English letter to send it himself to the magistrate, if he wished it to be sent. To the bearer of the two Persian letters, he gave no reply, but sent the epistles to the magistrate, after the disturbance was over. The contents of one of the Persian letters was a request to him, the nazir, to point out or say, how many and what part of Pertaub Chund's followers he wished to disperse. He further said, that he informed the magistrate of the whole of the proceedings; but when cross-examined, he stated, that he was about to inform the magistrate of the letter he had received, but was interrupted by the magistrate's saying, "insert all in your report." This conversation took place on his way with the magistrate and others, to Mr. Alexander's house. He saw the sepoys load their guns, but could not say whether they put balls in or not. He was on the bank of the river when the sepoys were drawn up in a line. A boat was seen making off from Pertaub Chund's boat, and the Captain ordered two guns to be fired over them. They were fired; then three others were fired, and afterwards many others were fired, one after another. He did not hear Mr. Ogilvy give any orders to fire. Mr. Ogilvy was in his sight all the time. Deponent further said, that forty-two burkundazes had been sent to Culna, by a person in Prawn Baboo's, or the Raja of Burdwan's employ. He saw them on the banks of the river. After some further questions were put to this deponent, the darogah was called.

The darogah deposed, that no riot or disturbance had taken place on the part of Pertaub Chund's people.

In many instances he denied what the nazir had stated. He was examined as to the deposition he had made before Mr. Ogilvy at Burdwan, and, respecting which, he could give no explanation. He said, that he could neither read Bengallee nor Persian; that the nazir had done all. He gave further evidence, which we are not permitted to publish. Mr. O'Hanlon said, that himself and Mr. Robison thought the affair was bailable, and he doubted not but that such would be his determination on the following day. It was then intimated, that the same bail which had been given, would again be offered. Mr. Lenth, addressing the magistrate, said, that he had no wish to throw the least obstacle in Mr. Ogilvy's way, but that it was for the magistrate to consider the heavy amount that would be required to bail Mr. Ogilvy, and the efficiency of that bail.

Ross Donnelly Mangles, Esq. and John Lewis, Esq. have since become bail for Mr. Ogilvy's appearance, to stand his trial at the next sessions of oyer and terminer. Messrs. Prinsep, Ogilvy, Mangles and Lewis, were closetted with Mr. O'Hanlon; but the subject of their confabulation has not yet transpired, as all reporters were prevented from entering the room. Nobody attended on behalf of the prosecution.

BURDWAN.—In consequence of the failure of the Ranees of Burdwan to pay the Government revenue with punctuality, the Sudder Board of Revenue have, on the report of the local commissioner, directed that immense zemindarries to be brought under the jurisdiction of the court of wards. This will eject Pran Baboo, who is the brother of one Ranees and the father of the other, from all management of, or concern with, the property.

The commissioner for the division, will proceed by dawk to carry these orders into effect, and in person make arrangements for the future control of the estate.

PILGRIMS TO JUGGURNAUTH.—Letters have been received at Calcutta from Balesour, and other stages on the way to Juggurnauth, stating, that the pilgrims proceeding to that place, to witness the approaching festival of Rutijatra, are immense; and that the price of provisions has, in consequence, considerably risen almost everywhere, a circumstance which has inconvenienced the poorer orders very much.

CIVIL APPOINTMENT.—Mr. F. Halliday succeeds Mr. R. D. Mangles, as secretary to the Government of Bengal, in the judicial and revenue departments, an appointment calculated to give general satisfaction.

THE BERENICE.—By private letters of the 19th ultimo, received from Bombay, we learn there was a rumour at that presidency, that the Berenice would be despatched, not to the Red Sea, with the May packet, but to the Persian Gulph with troops, in consequence of disturbances having broken out in that quarter.

POLITICAL APPOINTMENT.—It is said, that Captain Wilkinson, the political agent, is to be transferred from Chota Nagpore to Burra Nagpore, and that Captain Eric Sutherland is to succeed Captain Wilkinson. Major Sutherland, they say, has been offered the residency of Hyderabad; should he accept it, Colonel Spiers will go to Gwalior, and somebody else to Rajpootna. Major Sleeman is spoken of, as likely to be appointed superintendent of police for all India.

JAIL OF CALCUTTA.—The great jail of Calcutta is at present, and has been for some days past, crowded to excess by debtors in large and small amounts, and criminals from different parts of the country—many debtors are there on account of small debts of nine and ten rupees.

INSURING GOODS.—The recent action brought by the consignee of goods against the insurance office, (although the ultimate decision of the court on the legal question was in favour of the defendants) has suggested to most insurance offices the adoption of the measure of precaution by inserting in every policy a clause somewhat to the effect following:

"It is hereby further declared that nothing herein contained shall be construed or taken as a guarantee or affirmation on the part of the assurers, that the above-mentioned goods or any parts thereof have been or shall be laden on such vessel or any other, and that no such guarantee or affirmation is hereby intended to be given by or on behalf of the assurers, to the assured or to any person or persons whatsoever, before or at the time of granting this policy."

EXTORTION OF THE THANADARS.—That worthy gentleman, J. H. Patton, Esq., the magistrate of the 24-pergunnahs, has ordered notice to be stuck up both in Bengallee and English, at the boundary guard at Malauly's dugah and elsewhere, authorizing any person or persons to take into custody any one found extorting from the vendors of fish, vegetables, or other articles, and hand him or them to the police authorities.

KIDNAPPING.—Several cases of kidnapping have been brought to light during the month, which call imperatively for the interference of the Government to check the abominable system of enslaving the people, which has been for some time going on. In one instance, at Chuckerbare, thirty-two individuals were released from imprisonment in a gaol, guarded by an armed burkundauze force, and where some of these unfortunate wretches had been confined for about five months, and from what we learn, dealt with very cruelly. One old man, in particular, had been daily subjected to flagellation, for refusing to comply with the requests of his captors, and when he was released, his back presented a search for his nape, being horribly scarified and inflamed from the nape of the neck downwards. Information has also been received by Mr. Patton, the magistrate of the twenty-four pergunnahs, that several hundred individuals are confined in different parts of his district and the town of Calcutta, and he has instituted a search for their prisons. Much praise is due to the indefatigable magistrate and Mr. Dias, who has been mainly instrumental in bringing this affair under the cognizance of the magistrate, for their exertions to release the unfortunate kidnapped individuals from durance vile and ultimate slavery. We hope the miscreants who have been the prime movers in this nefarious traffic, will be brought to condign punishment.

JUNE 11.—BRUTAL AND COWARDLY ASSAULT.—Mr. Charles Augustus Kresting, the youngest son of the late Hon. Jacob Kresting, Governor of Serampore, appeared before the magistrate this day and presented a petition to the following effect. That on the night of Sunday last, he called on a Mr. F. Lynch, (who resides in Armenian Bazar, Entally, and with whom he was on terms of intimacy) on private business, when he was suddenly assaulted by several inmates of the house. He was first of all thrown on the steps by two burkandazs, who held him one by each arm. Lynch then sprang upon him and seated himself across Krefting's chest, and while in this defenceless state he beat him across the face with his clenched fists in the most cruel and unmanly manner. When Lynch had got tired of this mode of ill-usage, he laid hold of Krefting by the hair of his head, which latter he kept dashing against the step for some time. When he was released by Lynch and his myrmidons, he was delivered into the hands of chokeedars, who conveyed him to the Mannicktollah thanah, and after having been kept there upwards of two hours, the thanadar was pleased to release him. The confinement and release was done without the knowledge or consent of Sergeant Dyson, to whom Krefting stated all the particulars. Mr. Krefting's clothes were actually torn from his back, and a new hat was stolen from his head. Several ladies and gentlemen who were at Alhpore as witnesses against Lynch, informed us, that they had heard Lynch and a fellow named Baboo Oboychurn Doss, assert, some days previous, that the first time they caught hold of Krefting they would either beat him severely or murder him outright. Mr. Krefting never gave any cause whatever for this unmanly treatment. His face is in a shocking condition; he can scarcely see out of his eyes, and his forehead is cut and bruised in a most shocking manner.

Mr. Krefting attended the magistrate this day, Monday, when the depositions of his witnesses were taken and he applied to Mr. Patton to admit Mr. C. B. Marnell, junior, as his attorney, to conduct the prosecution against Lynch, which was granted.

DACOITY AND MURDER.—On the 24th of June, a dacoity was perpetrated in the house of a baboo at Sulkeah, by a band of nearly one hundred armed men! who cruelly murdered two men, and severely wounded three others. The object of the villains, in attacking the house of the baboo was to obtain possession of twenty thousand rupees, which he had received the day previously; but they were disappointed in their expectation, as the money had been sent to Calcutta. They, however, took away property to the amount of twelve thousand rupees. Strange to say, the whole of this large body of dacoits, after perpetrating the murders within three miles of Calcutta, with torches burning, and playing their flutes, drums, &c., effected their escape and remain undetected!

Several dacoities attended with murders, have lately been committed within a short distance of Calcutta, with impunity, the villains almost invariably effecting their escape; and latterly these robberies seem to have greatly increased. This state of affairs, calls loudly for a speedy reform in our police system. While the police committee are maturing their plans for the amelioration of the system, peaceable citizens are being pulled out of their beds and murdered, by bands of lawless marauders, who roam the country sans peur, undeterred by the impotent police of the mofussil.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENTS.—It appears that the statistical inquiries which the committee of the Capital Punishment Society has instituted, have led them to the conclusion, that milder penalties are more efficacious in all cases, and that the total abolition of Capital Punishments, would be a measure equally of humanity and expediency.

SUICIDE.—On the 28th of June, between the hours of five and six o'clock, Mr. Charles Dossa, a respectable East Indian, residing in north road Entally, was discovered suspended by a rope from the ceiling of his bedroom. His friends who live but a short distance from the house where this tragic scene occurred, were immediately informed of the circumstance, and they lost no time in repairing thither; when, finding the body still warm, they cut it down, but life was quite extinct.

AN EUROPEAN FOUND DROWNED.—On the 20th instant, the thanadar at Howrah, reported to J. H. Patton, Esq., that an European was found drowned that morning, whose body washed on Sulkea ghaut.

CRIM. CON.—The decent monotony of mofussil life has recently experienced a slight shock at a station not 100 miles from Dinapore, in consequence of the sudden fancy of a married lady, the wife of a staff officer, to occupy the bungalow of a gallant son of Mars, distinguished for his literary and theatrical talents. The attraction is said to be purely platonic; but, nevertheless, the gentlemen of the long robe, are about to institute a cold matter-of-fact inquiry into all the pros. and cons.

CASE OF SEDUCTION.—An East Indian, who is a writer in one of the public offices, lately seduced a young female, who, it appears, had formerly been a ward of the Free-School, and had been subsequently apprenticed to a milliner. He, under some pretence, took her on board a boat in the river, and there, after effecting his purpose, left her completely destitute. Information of this occurrence was conveyed to Mr. A. Garstin, the secretary to the Free-School, who proceeded to the ghaut, where the boat was moored and brought the girl out of it, and took her to the residence of the chief magistrate, who took down her depositions in which she charged the young man with a rape. He was consequently arrested on the charge, and gave bail for his appearance at the police office to defend himself. The case was fixed for trial on Monday, the 21st instant; but as the prosecution has not yet made her appearance to conduct the case, it is to be supposed, that the affair has been hushed up.

SEDUCTION AND BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE.—Mr. T— appeared at the police office, accompanied by his daughter, to prefer a charge of seduction and breach of promise of marriage, against one Mr. William F—, who is on the eve of marriage with another party. We could not ascertain what decision the magistrate passed in the case, but we heard Mr. F. loudly declaiming against the gay Lothario, who, we sincerely trust, will be made to pay the penalty of his overt gallantry.

STEAMER ENTERPRIZE.—The hull of the steamer Enterprize, which was put up for sale to-day at Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co.'s auction room, for the second time, was, we hear, again bought in—the highest bid being but 7,300 rupees.

SHAFT OF THE BERENICE.—What the skill of the Bombay engineers was unable to effect, and what in truth they despaired of getting effected out of England, has been successfully wrought by the superior scientific ability of Major Forbes. The shaft which was preparing at the mint, for the Berenice, has been completed under the able superintendence of that officer; and we consider that the simple fact speaks more than anything we can presume to utter, as to the praise he may justly claim for having thus shown our friends the ducks that a remedy was nearer at hand than they had ventured to imagine.

SHIPWRECK.—The American ship Gasper, has been totally wrecked near Hooghly Point.

DISTRESS IN THE UPPER PROVINCES.—The following extract of a letter shows the great distress prevailing in the upper provinces:

MAY 27, 1838.—The present state of things in this part of the country, presents matter for consideration, in my opinion not less interesting to the legislator than to the philanthropist. The city and suburbs of Agra are supposed to contain a population of 80,000, and now nearly an equal number of paupers from the neighbouring districts may be added. By the last daily report, the burials by the police were 400, and were from three to four hundred for several days before—say 10,000 a month, at which rate the whole population, ordinary and accessory, would be swept off in sixteen months. From 100 to 150 per diem, of those taken to the asylum die within twenty-four hours, from the impossibility of restoring the exhausted powers of nature, impaired as they generally are by disease. It is understood, that of the low caste village servants, few beyond those now congregated at Agra and other places, where relief is afforded, survive. Even of the small renters a large number have perished, others have abandoned their lands to escape from claims for rent or debts due to mahajuns, which they had no means of satisfying: but a still more extraordinary fact is, that some who hold rent-free lands have fled to other parts of the country, deserting their rights in despair. Everywhere are some roofless villages, and even large towns thinned of half their inhabitants. So utter has been the destruction of agricultural capital, that unless Government will advance to the remaining zemindars the means of purchasing the necessary cattle and seeds and supporting the labourers, there can be no cultivation, however favourable may be the approaching season for agricultural purposes. Mark that this does not proceed from any actual dearth of provisions. The markets are well supplied with corn enhanced indeed in price by the expense of bringing it from a distance, but not so dear as to be beyond the reach of the labourer employed at the usual rate of hire. Does not this shew that the root of the evil lies in that part of the agricultural system that makes the labourer dependant on the profits, and not on the wages of his own individual labour? The labouring agricultural population becomes multiplied to the utmost extent that an average season will afford surplus falls below the average, they borrow; when it exceeds it they refund. In such circumstances the failure of two crops successively, necessarily brings with it utter privation without resources. The capitalist may, on reduced means, support a smaller number of labourers, and those who are cast adrift may starve; but the ryot who has by the failure of one crop, exhausted his means of borrowing, must perish with all his family, if the second crop does not yield a sufficient return to subsist upon till the first crop of the following year is realized. Half a crop will not be applied to the maintenance of half the population for six months, but of the whole population for three months, leaving the whole no resource for the remaining three months. Such is the cottar system. Such has it been found in Ireland, and if not equally destructive in the highlands of Scotland, it is because in seasons of distress the landlords racked their means and their credit to support their dependants. The prosperity of a neighbouring district affords no resource to the population of the less fortunate. That is already stocked chock full of labours, and can employ no more. Perhaps, indeed, a few hundred families may find room in new lands, as has happened this year at Dehra Doon. Even the village manufacturer or artisan perishes in the ruin of his customs. To see clearly where the mischief originates, is one step towards the discovery of the remedy. The legislature treats the zemindar as a contractor for the rents of certain lands, of which rents it leaves him a share for his trouble and responsibility. It does not assign to him, but to the cultivators, the fruits of superior culture or of a succession of favourable seasons. He is interested in affording the ryots assistance only when that is indispensable, and only in so far as it is so for the realization of his rents. He has no further interest than that, either present or prospective, in agricultural improvement, and practically his concern and interference are limited precisely to the attainment of that single object. Then comes the ryot who is just able to pay his rent and support himself and his family, while another harvest is preparing. Thus, of the whole produce, the only part that is not consumed by the actual labourer and the tax-gatherer, is that which is sold to pay the Government dues. The most intelligent persons here estimate the Government share at one-sixth of the next produce, after deducting seed and food for cattle. Supposing the share of the zemindar to be another one-sixth then two-thirds remain to repay the labour of production. Were the zemindar the party entrusted in raising the produce to the maximum of value at the minimum of expense, he would of necessity become a capitalist. Very possibly more produce might not be raised than is at present, but the surplus after payment of labour would undoubtedly be far greater. A much smaller portion of the whole population would be altogether dependant in the course of the seasons, and there would be a fly-wheel power or compensation-spring in the hands of the farmers to equalize irregularities. Here is a great legislative object, the means of accomplishing which may not be very obvious or easy of attainment, but are surely well worth the consideration of the council.

LIGHTNING.—On the 6th instant, the gunpowder magazine at Howrah, had a narrow escape from destruction by lightning. The south-east corner was struck and a piece of the masonry knocked off. The sepoy on guard gave the alarm expecting every moment the magazine would explode. On examination, however, it was found that the building was but slightly injured and the lightning had not penetrated the interior.

THE SOCIETY FOR THE ACQUISITION OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE.—The second monthly meeting of the society for the acquisition of useful knowledge took place at the Sanscrit college-hall on Wednesday evening last. The business of the meeting commenced with a discourse on anatomy delivered by Baboo Rajkissen Dey, a student of the medical college. The discourse was a creditable one. After he had taken his seat, Baboo Uday Chaudhary delivered a speech in Bengallee on the vernacular tongue, pointing out the imperfect state in which it is at present, and the ease with which it may be rendered copious and expressive; and shewing the necessity on the part of his countrymen to cultivate it. The Baboo spoke at considerable length. The Reverend Mr. W. Adam, who is famous for his familiar acquaintance with the vernacular tongue, was present on the occasion, and expressed himself highly gratified with the Baboo's style.

THE HINDOO CHARITABLE INSTITUTION.—The second annual examination of the pupils attached to the Hindoo charitable institution, and the distribution of prizes to such of them as had rendered themselves deserving of the same, took place at the Town-hall on the 13th instant. This institution, which affords instruction in English to a number of boys whose parents are void of means to pay for tuition elsewhere, is principally conducted by Baboo Gopal Lal Mitter, a student of the Hindoo college. The examiners, Mr. Hare and Rajah Kalikissen, expressed themselves gratified with the progress the students have made.

THE EAST INDIA POLITICAL REGISTER.—The prospectus of a periodical, under the above title, to appear once a week, commencing from Saturday, the 9th of June next, has been circulated. It is to be of the size of Cobbett's Political Register, containing thirty-two closely printed columns, and giving the fullest detail of all English, foreign, and domestic news, parliamentary debates, &c.

This journal is to be edited by T. Beresford Gahan, Esq., late proprietor of the national advocate, and a special magistrate in the West Indies, and now a resident at Calcutta. The register has since appeared, and we are of opinion, that the editor has mistaken his vocation. If we may form an opinion from the rabid nonsense the journal contains, we would say, that the best thing the editor could do, would be to locate himself forthwith in Mr. Beardsmore's asylum, and entrust himself to the safe-keeping of that gentleman.

MISSING MAIL.—The Calcutta dawk of the 16th of May, for Delhi, Meerut, Shaharunpore, Goolianah, Simla, Subathoo and Umballa, is reported missing after passing Mynporee with all letters and papers, but under what circumstances, there is no information; and from the length of time that has elapsed, it is to be apprehended, none is forthcoming.

MR. PEARSON.—We are informed that Mr. Assistant Surgeon John Thomas Pearson, is likely to be appointed assistant surgeon in medical charge of Dorjeeling.

WAX-CLOTH versus CAOUTCHOUC.—Previous to determining upon the substitution of caoutchouc for wax-cloth, it has been deemed advisable to have a certain quantity prepared for the purpose of ascertaining how far, in common wear and tear, it is superior or even equal to wax-cloth, its comparative cheapness with the usual cost of the latter being undoubted. In conformity with this design, a small piece of caoutchouc cloth was lately submitted to a committee, who, it appears, after testing its quality by various experiments, have pronounced it inferior to wax-cloth, and not at all calculated to constitute a saving substitute, which it was expected to form.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—The skeleton of a human body, measuring nine feet four inches, was dug up by miners, near the southern extremity of the Hymalyan mountains, during the past month, at a very short distance from the surface of the nearest stratum of mould.

Captain Abbot, of the artillery regiment, reached Delhi from Mhow, some days ago, having been neither stopped nor robbed on the way up.

Captain Abbot, merely heard the voices of some fifteen horsemen, who passed on the closed side of his palanquin, at about twenty yards distance from it, and after whom a "hue and cry" was raised, by a rabble of villagers, near Humeergurh.

The rise of the river Jumna, has carried away the bridge of boats at Rajehat.

Rumours of the murder, in Persia, of Mr. McNeill, the British representative, prevail at Delhi and the neighbouring stations.

The artilleryman, Cotter, who was sentenced to death, by a general court-martial, lately assembled at Kurnaul, underwent his sentence in presence of all the troops at that station, on the morning of the 8th instant. The unfortunate man met his fate with great firmness, and marched round the square with a steady and deliberate step, keeping as exact time with the music, as if he had been one of a funeral party following a comrade to the grave.

PURRAH NUGGER.—Several natives of Delhi, to whom the Nawaub of this zillah is indebted, lately made a representation to the Governor General, in which they stated, that they could not sue the Nawaub in the Session Judge's Court, for the recovery of their debts, as the judge of that court would not try complaints against a man of the Nawaub's rank. In reply to this, His Excellency very properly directed all complaints from parties within the Company's jurisdiction to be heard against the Nawaub, and adjudged.

AGRA.—Government have refused to acknowledge the claims of Mirza Kamber, to be considered as heir to his late father Prince Sooleeman Shakoh. One branch of the native noblesse has thus been cut off.

Slight shocks of an earthquake were felt at the station on the 26th and 27th ultimo, but very imperceptibly. They were most distinct beyond the city.

Captain Runbeer Singh, an officer in the Nepal Rajah's service, lately passed through Agra on a mission to Candahar.

The late revisit of cholera in the 23d regiment has nearly ceased, but the native portion of the troops are still suffering with fevers to an unprecedented degree for Agra. The native part of the community is tolerably healthy, at least that part of it which is pretty well sheltered from the intense heat of the season; but amidst the miserable employed or unemployed destitute poor, who have assembled here, the mortality is quite appalling. The state of the weather is most appalling from intense heat and sand; the burden of the atmosphere is altogether almost unendurable.

MYNPOORE.—A bhany dawk from Calcutta was recently plundered near this station. No particulars have transpired beyond the precincts of office.

JAUSEMOW.—On the 28th ultimo, the house on the Jausemow estate, the residence of Mr. J. Amman, adjoining Cawnpore cantonments, was entered by 70 or 80 armed depredators, who managed to carry away property to the amount of 8,000 rupees, chests of drawers, &c. were broken open by hatchets. Mr. Wilson, the magistrate, repaired instantly from his residence at Nabob Gunge to the spot, but the thieves had by that time gone away with their booty. However, it is hoped, that they will not escape unpunished. Mr. Amman was from home during the outrage, and Mrs. Amman with her two little children and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Trickett took refuge in a fisherman's boat which happened to be at the ghaut. The chokedars were unable to offer effectual resistance; three of them were severely injured in opposing the attacking party.

NAISMURH.—The remains of the Joora force were expected to return to this station by the 29th instant. Nobody appearing inclined to take the country, it was abandoned to the lawful and most lawless owners. None of the murderers for whose apprehension the force was sent out have been apprehended, so when was the business managed?

NU-SERABAD.—Heavy showers of rain have recently fallen here and in the neighbourhood.

HONTE.—Cholera is raging here with great violence. On the 28th instant twenty people are said to have died in one hour, and from that time till the succeeding day, not one, who was attacked, escaped.

CANWPORE.—The heat is intense; much sickness prevails amongst the European troops, especially Her Majesty's 3d dragoons. Eight funerals took place on the evening of the 2d instant, at the calvary end of cantonments. Every door on the windward sides of the dragoon barracks, closed at night "by order," and not a breath of air sufficed to perfuse those densely inhabited buildings. The prevailing sickness, which partakes much of the nature of apoplexy, cannot be attributed to want of exercise, as the dragoons are indulged with riding school every morning, and frequently enjoy foot parades, which last until dark in the afternoon.

ALLAHABAD.—The following is an account of a dreadful whirlwind at Allahabad:

On Saturday, the 2d June, (that is the day before yesterday,) the whole sky looked strongly hazy, and the barometer for three or four days previously having indicated the approach of bad weather. I left office rather early in order to be at home when the gale should come on. About 5 o'clock, we were at dinner when the room became so very dark, and there was such a cry of surprise outside amongst the natives, that I went out to see what was the matter. The whole sky was blood-red, not with clouds, for there was not a cloud to be seen, and, overhead moved immense masses of dust; but below there was not a breath of wind! The people said they never before saw such a sight.

Shortly after, it became dark and the wind moved on strongly, carrying with it the sand and dust. We collected together in the compound, to witness what was going on, and it soon became so extremely dark, though the sun was still up, that we could not see one another at the distance of two yards.

The darkness was not only visible, but tangible, and as each volume of it passed, the light from above flashed down like lightning, so that those whose eyes were not thoroughly stuffed up could get a glimpse of what was going on around. It was really terrific. At last there came on a dreadful crash; every thing moved from its place, bundles of bamboos clattered along, branches of trees, crows, and tiles were swept furiously past, and the frame-work of the tiled roofs shook like a sheet, sending a shower of tiles up with every shake. It now became much clearer; but soon after this, there was another dreadful gust accompanied with total darkness. I left my tent and staggered about trying to get to my family, as by a great crash of tiles and the sound of falling timbers, I thought they were buried under its ruins; but I could see nothing. Thank God I found them safe, but the building was much shattered. Some rain with hail and thunder now came on and the sky consequently cleared. Chairs and tables, a large bed, and the other usual furniture of a room had a reel about the compound; every rope of the tent having snapped, and the traps made their escape. Such a storm was never remembered by that venerable authority, always appealed to in such cases,—the oldest inhabitant. The loss on the river must have been dreadful, but I have not yet heard anything particular. On shore, people were dashed into ravines, and against walls and trees, others suffered by the falling of buildings and trees, and many were cut by tiles, and I understand that two dead bodies have been picked up. I forgot to mention that a few days ago about seven in the morning we had a slight shock of an earthquake.

Now, this has a good deal of the marvellous in it; and would read well in the Wonders of the Universe, or any other veritable work on the mysteries of nature; but it only forms the first course to a rare treat;—so, be prepared to give your powers of belief a little further relaxation. Yesterday, at the same hour, on it came again, though not heralded in with so much grandeur; but I will not tell you with so much minuteness; let it suffice, that the gale was very dreadful throughout; but, at one particular moment, it was more like a thunderbolt than the effect of wind. Buildings, and even trees of great size, were laid prostrate in the twinkling of an eye. The Sudder Board office is in such a state of wreck, that another house has been taken for the business, and the disarrangement and injury done to the records, will much impede the public business for some time. Several bungalows are irreparably injured, and the tiled houses of the native are every where uninhabited. Even the Sudder Dewanny offices, which are thoroughly pukka government buildings, had sustained injury. We hear of many people having been injured. I heard one man crying who was crushed under a tree, and it is wonderful that any who were out, were able to save themselves, for the tiles were quoted down at times with sufficient force to split a man's skull. All my own property is injured, and a great proportion of it, is utterly destroyed. When the great gust came on Mrs. * * and I were standing at the door of the little building I before mentioned; the terrific rain that accompanied its bursting upon us, made me determine to run to the open garden. The moment I said "we had better run," Mrs. * * ran forward, that door being to the leeward, instead of keeping under the wall;—but just then down came the roof upon us. I heard her shriek, and after getting close to the place myself, I looked for her and found that she was still buried under the rubbish. I screamed to the people, who were about the compound, but could get none to hear;—when I attempted to run forward against the wind, I was, really moving backwards, and it was with the greatest difficulty that I managed to keep about the spot. My own strength was not of the slightest use in extricating Mrs. * *, and I tried to lift the roof which I found had fallen edgeways across the small of her back with a beam of wood. Fortunately, I at last made myself heard, and a man came to my assistance, and we got Mrs. * * out, wonderful to say, unhurt, except from a few slight bruises. Thank God it is over, and so well over. Beams of wood with nothing attached to them, to give them wings, flew fifty yards. A rabbit coop which takes six men to lift, jumped away about thirty feet,—a tree growing in a grove was lifted up into the air carried over a compound wall, right up to the door of the dwelling. I need not give you any other specimen.

It is really worth while to see a dust storm up here at any time; you can have no idea of the sublimity of the approach. There is nothing admirable afterwards. The day before yesterday my mouth got so full of dust, that I looked as if a rajmistry had been feeding me with a handful of cutcha plaster. The whole station is in consternation.

I learn that the barometer indicates a still more severe storm for to-day than either of the last. If so, God help the poor inhabitants.

MUSSINGABAD.—Letters from Saugor, of date 3d June, state that a most daring dacoity had been lately committed at Mussingabad. The rascals attacked the city, adjacent to the cantonments, so early as half past seven o'clock in the evening, cutting down every one who opposed them, killed five men and wounded several, and carried off 15,000 rupees in money and goods. Major Ouseley has his people in active pursuit, scouring the country in every direction, but with what success, has not yet been ascertained.

NATIVE STATES.

HERAT.—It appears that Herat has at length fallen to the besiegers. The son of Dost Mahommed Khan had previously proceeded with a considerable body of horse to pay his court to the King of Persia. Dost Mahommed Khan has now himself treated with the King, and to incite the latter to attempt the conquest of Hindoostan, has assured His Majesty that Cabul and Candahar are prepared to obey his bidding, and that he may deal with these countries as in his wisdom and mightiness he may think fit, provided only he will aid him in the invasion of India. Thus there seems every prospect of a very promising flare-upon our frontiers!

LAHORE.—Ukhbars from Lahore state, that on the Maharajah being informed that a letter had arrived for him from Captain Burnes, announcing his withdrawal from Cabul, his Highness observed, that Dost Mahommed Khan might live to rue the day, and it was now clear enough that that chief believed he had made a better book with the Russians. Sirdar Ummur Sing remarked, it was impossible to say what such a combination of powers might effect, but that, if it were every man for himself, the khyburwalla, with his one hundred thousand horse and twenty-five thousand infantry, might come down when he pleased. He would encounter Sikhs, who have been victorious in the mountains in Moolton and in Cashmere.

SUREPOOR.—The Rawul Beree Sal expired here on the 27th ult. His death, it is thought, proceeded from apoplexy. Luchwan Singh, his nephew, succeeds him in his regency for the present. Cholera still rages.

ULWUR.—The reforming Rajah of this state has not reformed his own barbarous and inhuman habits. He recently ordered the hands of a Meenah to be cut off, and the poor wretch to be, in this condition, exposed outside the gate of the city, where he expired from loss of blood. Before life had become extinct, he was attacked and half devoured by swine and carrion birds! This unfortunate creature's crime was, that as a sentry on duty on the palace some years since, he became cognizant of the murder of a thakoor, who had, while engaged in an angry dispute with the Rajah, kicked his highness in the belly, an insult which so enraged the other thakoors present, that they murdered the author, as he retired by the passage which the Meenah guarded.

Not is the cruelty of this Rajah confined to his own direct acts. He sanctions, and even encourages the atrocious crime of suttee, two instances of which occurred in his estate, within the last seventeen months, one of them at Ramghur. Yet this is in the face of a positive pledge given by him to Government, that he will discontinue and prohibit this barbarous rite!

BOKHARA.—By letters received from merchants at Bokhara, it appears, that Shah Morad, the ruler of Bokhara, considering himself as an old friend to the ruler of Herat, had forwarded an army, consisting of four thousand musketeers, for the protection of the territories of the latter. When they got near the fort of Gorgan, spies took information to the chiefs of the Iran army, that forces from Turkistan had arrived for the aid of Herat, and their intention was to enter the fort. On this, measures were adopted to stop the progress of the said army, and the consequence was, that they were obliged to return home disappointed.

CAUBOOL.—The chief of Caubool lately held a council of the wise heads of his empire, to consult about the best means to be resorted to for the safety of the state. The chief requested to know whether it would be wise for him to form alliance with the chiefs of Hindoostan, or with the people of Iran. Some of them maintained that the latter ought not to be done, as the Iranians belonged to the Shea sect of the Mahometan creed; but this objection was overruled by one of the Moulavees stating, that inasmuch as the Sheas are not prohibited from reading Namaz and the Koran, and they perform the pilgrimage to Mecca, and other ceremonies prescribed by the Mahomedan religion, there can be no harm in making friendship with the ruler of Iran. The chief approved of the remarks, and made up his mind to send one of his sons to Iran.

MADRAS.

ICE HOUSE.—The good folks in Madras, have determined on leaving the luxury of ice afforded them, and are about to erect an ice house.

ERECTION OF A THEATRE, &c.—It is said, that some public-spirited gentlemen at Madras, have projected a scheme for an establishment to comprise a theatre, an assembly room, and accommodation for the Masonic Lodges working at Madras. It is calculated that a sum of about 35,000 rupees will be required to compass these objects, and this is proposed to be raised on the principle of a joint-stock company, in 700 shares of fifty rupees each.

LORD ELPHINSTONE.—The report of the recall of Lord Elphinstone, is not true.

MR. HARRY VIVEASH.—This fortunate gentleman has come in for a fortune of £100,000, by the death of his cousin, and is now Harry Baskerville, Esq.

MESSERS. BANNERMAN AND GARROW.—The commission to investigate the charges preferred by Mr. Bannerman against Mr. Garrow, is now complete. It consists of Mr. Stonhouse, Mr. Babington, and Mr. Ashton.

THE NABOB AND HIS FAMILY.—His Highness the Nabob and his family, after embarking on board the Hersfordshire and proceeding to sea for twenty-four hours, have returned without accomplishing the object of their voyage. The mother of his Highness suffered so severely from sea-sickness as to create serious alarm and uneasiness in the mind of her son, who was induced to join her in requesting Colonel Walpole to get the Captain to steer back to Madras. The Nabob by all accounts is a good sailor, and was quite well on board, but the rest of the party were in the most deplorable state. The trip including passage-money, &c. cost fourteen thousand rupees!

THE TANJORE COMMISSIONERS.—The H. C.'s sloop Amherst arrived at Madras, for the purpose of conveying the ex-Tanjore commissioners to Calcutta, and they received a notice to be on board on the 2d instant last, but not having completed their arrangements, and believing that Government would order the ship to wait here for a few days longer, they neglected to obey the summons of Captain Jump, who has actually sailed without them, and left them to experience the inconvenience of not taking a jump in time.

CAUSEY CHITTY.—That ill-fated man, Causey Chitty, has at length, after an incarceration of nearly a quarter of a century, obtained his liberation, unconditionally.

ROBBERS.—A short time since, as Mr. Babington's party were travelling through the Salem district, on their way to Coimbatore, they were attacked, near a place called Tripatore, by a gang of robbers. The leader seized and stopped the palanquin of Miss Mollie, a young lady who accompanied them, but not being readily supported by his less valiant companions, he was knocked down and beaten off by the bearers.

Shortly after the same set made an assault upon the baggage, but there also meeting with superior opposition, they took their revenge by stoning the defenders of the property, and spoiling the beauty of some of the female followers.

THE BARQUE STAR.—The barque Star, which left Malacca on the 26th ultimo, with a detachment of the 48th regt. N. I. on return to Madras, got aground off the coast of Lookoot on the 30th ultimo, and little hopes were entertained for her preservation. The Fanny, which arrived at Malacca, on her way to Singapore, with the head-quarters of the 8th N. I., disembarked the troops, and went to the assistance of the Star, but had not returned at the date of the last advices. The Star narrowly escaped an attack while conveying a detachment of the 8th to Malacca, having been surrounded by five piratical praos, but owing to the gallant assistance of the troops and the prompt discharge of a few volleys of musketry, an attempt to board was not made.

WAR WITH BURMAH.—On dit, that dispatches have been received by Government bringing the following unfavourable intelligence from Ava. "King Tharrawaddie had positively and finally refused to receive a new resident, or to comply with any of the other demands which were insisted on by the agents of Government." If this information be correct, a war is inevitable, and the necessary preparations will soon be in progress.

BOMBAY.

EXTRAORDINARY FALL OF ICE.—At Nowloor, in the neighbourhood of and about two miles from Dharwar, there fell, a few days since, a block of ice or a body of hailstones in one mass, which measured nineteen feet ten inches. This extraordinary mass fell on a Sunday night, and on the Wednesday succeeding a servant, who was sent for the purpose of bringing away a pail full of the bulk, reported that the mass then still remaining was as large as three palanquins.

INDUS TRADE FAILURE.—The four boats which left Bombay in April for the Indus, with a return cargo for Loodiana, have failed in entering that river, off the mouths of which they with difficulty escaped shipwreck, and have returned to Mendavee with damaged cargoes. One of them was thrown on her beam ends by the heavy swell which sets in there at this season, but fortunately righted again. The poor men have been kindly received by the resident, Colonel Pottinger, but it is to be regretted that any attempt was made so late in the season.

WAR WITH PERSIA.—The course of events in Persia has called for an armed interference on the part of the Government of Bombay. An armed force is to proceed the Persian gulph forthwith, according to directions received from Lord Palmerston, and take possession of the island of Karack, which is situated a little to the northward of Bushme. The ridiculously small number of 600 sepoy, is to be despatched on this expedition.

THE WRECK.—The following is an extract from a letter which has been received from Captain Jump, of the Hon. Company's ship Amherst, who was directed on his voyage down the coast to survey the spot in which the wreck of a 600 ton ship was said to have been discovered by Capt. Green of the Triumph.

"At ½ past 5 p. m. I went myself in the cutter to examine the wreck, and found the peel of a mast 8 to 10 feet above water, and a small spar about 4 feet above water. This must evidently belong to a large buggalow, being a rough poon spar 18 to 20 inches in diameter, and the smaller one appears to be the yard (of poon also). The heel of the mast is much bleached, and the part under water is covered with barnacles, showing it must have been there some time.

They must not be very secure in that description of vessel, must have got un-shipped, and is now hanging by rigging. In that case it would give way to a concussion such as that of a ship running against it, and not be more dangerous than a large fishing stake.

Captain Green's bearings were pretty correct."

Captain Green, however, must have been very short-sighted, not to distinguish the difference between the mast of a buggalow and that of a large ship. He besides said nothing about the spar being loose, although his men tried to detach it, and not a word was spoken of the barnacles.

DUTY ON NUTMIGS.—The Government has thought proper at last to give up the duty imposed on nutmigs, &c. on being imported into the island.

ANOTHER REVOLUTION EXPECTED AT GOA.—There is a rumour among the Portuguese population of Bombay, that another revolution is on the point of being perpetrated at Goa. According to the latest accounts from that unfortunate city, a private notice had been received by the secretary to Government, that three of the regiments had leagued together to take up arms against the constituted authorities, the object of the combination being, to depose the Governor and certain others of the leading functionaries, with the exception of the Commander-in-Chief. The reason assigned for this movement, was the irregularity in the payment of the troops, who are now, it would appear, three months in arrears. The embarrassments of the Portuguese Government may in some measure be accounted for, by the necessity that occurred lately, for the fitting out of an expedition which proceeded to Macao, for the purpose of supporting the Governor of that place, who, but the last accounts, was in daily expectation of being compelled to abdicate, on account of his having rendered himself exceedingly unpopular with his new subjects as well as obnoxious to the Chinese authorities. The force sent, consisted of 270 soldiers and sailors, who left Goa on the 15th ultimo, in a corvette. Should the threat of a rising at Goa be put in execution, there can be but little doubt of its success, as the military there are all powerful and have invariably succeeded in cashiering their chiefs, civil or military, when prompted to do so by that impatience of control so habitual to troops serving under a weak and impoverished Government, the conduct of which easily affords a pretext for rebellion.

THE INDIAN NAVY.—The pay of lieutenants in the Indian navy is to be increased sixty rupees per mensem, by the addition of batta at the rate of Rs. two per day. The allowance to captains of steamers from passage-money to the Red Sea is to be reduced to Rs. three hundred instead of as at present Rs. four hundred.

BUILDING OF SEVENTY-FOURNS.—Orders have been received from England for the construction at Bombay of two seventy-four-gun ships, for the royal navy. This will put the dockyard establishment in motion, and lead to a good deal of bustle in the building department. These vessels for want of room in the regular docks, are to be built at Cross Island, which will thus be turned to good account, and perhaps be rendered permanently very useful as an auxiliary to the dockyards.

DISCOVERY OF THE SOURCE OF THE RIVER OXUS.—The interesting discovery of the source of the river Oxus has been made by Lieut. Wood, of the Indian navy, attached to Captain Burnes's mission. This celebrated river rises among the mountains of Pameer in Sirkool, from a lake nearly fifteen thousand six hundred feet above the level of the ocean, and encircled by lakes on all sides except the west, through which it finds a channel. To the late Captain Burnes and Lieut. Wood have given the appropriate name of "lake Victoria."

SECUNDERABAD.—Accounts from Secunderabad state, that the present is one of the severest seasons that has been known there for many years, the thermometer being in the shade 104 degrees. There has been no rain, and consequently no decent forage is procurable. The fruit trees are drooping fast, notwithstanding all the watering and care bestowed on them. The troops are, however, extremely healthy. Murders and robberies are common in the neighbourhood of the camp.

THE TUNKS.—It is said that a Turkish force has overrun one of the finest of the south-western provinces of Persia. Should then the force sent up to the gulph be of no further service, it may yet be extremely useful in restoring this unfortunate province to a state of order. We have heard no further particulars.

THUGS.—An extensive execution of persons convicted of thuggee has taken place at Mangalore, and no less than eight of these miserable enemies of mankind perished on the scaffold. A large number is also on the road to Madras for transportation to Moulinein.

BURMAH.

Maulmein Chronicles of the 28th of April, have been received during the week. Affairs seem to be in status quo. Major Bensou, of the H. C. 11th native infantry, and late military secretary to Lord William Bentinck, proceeds immediately to Rangoon, in the room of Colonel Burney; and we shall soon learn how far the determination of Tharrawaddie not to treat personally with any representative of the British Government, will be persevered in.

In the mean time the clouds are collecting on our Nepaulese frontier.

Mr. Blundell and the British residents at Maulmein, assisted by a few Burmese and Chinese, have subscribed Rs. 1,117 to the famine fund for the north-west frontier.

THE LATE HEIR APPARENT.—The late heir apparent, it appears, was put to death in the most violent and outrageous manner, usual forms in all cases of executions of any of the royal family, having been dispensed with,—he was dragged forth and beheaded like a common criminal. That he had been guilty of attempting to recover his rights of which he had been deprived by the usurpation of the present king, has not yet been established on sufficient evidence.

The execution of the young late heir apparent to the throne, has been followed by that of a great many individuals connected with him. The measure is said to have proved most unpopular throughout the country. A correspondent writes, "Tharrawaddie's measures are becoming very unpopular among the people—a perfect change is visible since the period of this Woodcock's arrival. But I am convinced, that the ruling passions of the Burmese are those of patriotism and loyalty, I would say, they would willingly join any party, to be from Tharrawaddy Government. * * *

"But for the salutary check of the advice of the more moderate of his court, I believe, the King would long since have broken out in open war. He believes his star to be in the ascendant; perhaps, believes himself destined to expel us out of India. At all events, he cannot know how far Providence is in his favour, till he has a quarrel with us, an event which he seems to covet rather than to dread."

Coal has been found, in large quantities in Mergui.

THE GEORGE SWINTON STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—On the 23d of May, the George Swinton, was struck by lightning, by which the fore-royal and top-masts were shattered, but her gallant and lower masts escaped with little damage. No person on board was injured.

THE VICEROY OF RANGOON.—Accounts from Rangoon mention that the viceroy of that place begins to manifest a better feeling towards the English residents there. The shoe-order has been restored to its former footing at the top of the stairs, or at some other respectful distance from "the presence."

The viceroy has also abolished or modified the orders in respect to head-coolies, which will probably remove some vexations, attending unloading and loading vessels.

But the most remarkable act of the Rangoon viceroy is, that he has lately decided receiving a handsome and valuable present from an European merchant, who had the honour of an audience soon after the shoe-order was rescinded.

SINGAPORE.

PIRACY.—We have advices from Singapore to the 10th May, but there seems nothing of importance stirring at that settlement. Piracy, however, continues to flourish.

A most barbarous act of piracy and murder was committed on the crew of a small boat consisting of four Chinese, all mere lads, on their way from Rhio to Singapore. At the entrance of the Straits of Rhio, in the vicinity of the Pan Shoal, she was set upon by a sampan containing six Malays, who boarded her and butchered in cold blood, three of the poor Chinese, apparently with no other object than to gratify their diabolical cruelty, as there was nothing for them to plunder; the other was left on board cruelly mangled, and weltering in blood, and probably owes the preservation of his life to the belief of the savaged that he was also dead. He was three days in the most denorable condition, suffering from his wounds, and subsisting on the leaves of trees growing on the beach, towards which he had contrived to paddle his boat, when he was fortunately fallen in with by a sampan pukut, and taken to Singapore, where his wounds have been attended to.

DESTRUCTION OF PIRATES.—The Diana steamer was on the 18th of May, off Tringganu, in company with her Majesty's sloop Wolf, engaged in action with a fleet of six large Illanoon pirate prahus, as they were in action with and nearly capturing a junk that had sailed a few days before from Singapore laden with a valuable cargo for China.—It appears from Captain Congalton's account, that the pirates were discovered about 9 o'clock in the forenoon by the Wolf, as they were attempting to enter Tringganu road, where she was then lying at anchor; but on perceiving her they stood out to sea and attacked the junk under sail some miles distant. The Wolf instantly got underweigh, but without her armed boats or the gun-boats attached to her, which had been ordered to a neighbouring island in quest of another fleet of pirates that were reported to have committed depredations upon some Tringganu. The steamer was seen from the Wolf to the northward at about noon, when Captain Stanley immediately despatched his gig and jolly boat to her, well armed and manned with directions to Captain Congalton to down to the junk; but it was not until half past 4 o'clock, that the steamer thus reinforced, reached the pirates, who were then a little astern of the junk, and repeatedly fired on her as she neared them. As soon, however, as she took a position, she poured in such a murderous fire on each of the prahus that their decks were soon cleared, and on a breeze springing up five of them hoisted sail, leaving their commandore in the large prahu to continue the action. She was, however, soon silenced, boarded, and brought astern of the Diana pass sun-set; but finding she was in a sinking state, Captain Congalton cut the tow rope and left her to her fate after taking out the prisoners, while the Diana proceeded in chase of her consorts; but they escaped with the darkness of the night, aided by some squally weather that followed. There was no doubt, from the severe manner in which they were mauled by the Diana, that these prahus will never again be fit for sea, and that the remainder of their crews have had an awful lesson for their temerity, nearly one hundred and forty having been killed and wounded, and thirty taken prisoners out of three hundred and sixty, the number which the fleet is stated to have been composed of. The prahus were from fifty to sixty feet in length, each mounted with a long 4 pounder and numerous swivels, in addition to muskets, blunderbusses, spears, &c.

The Wolf returned into harbour on the 2d of June, having left her armed boats, together with the gun-boats belonging to the station, to prosecute search after the prahu which escaped in the rencontre. On the day following that occurrence, the Wolf was joined by the boats, (which had been absent on a cruise to some islands on the coast) and were instantly despatched in pursuit by Captain Stanley, with orders to proceed in the direction of the Redang islands to which it was considered likely the pirates would resort for the purpose of refitting; the boats of the Wolf having, on a previous visit to this island, discovered traces of a piratical rendezvous at that place, with docks for laying up the prahus, &c. As the piratical fleet was in a manner cut off from the main land, besides being at the same time in too disabled a state to permit of their continuing their course homeward, there seems every probability of the expedition of the boats to the Redang islands being attended with success. The only probability against it, in the minds of those who were present at the encounter, and witnessed the crippled condition of the prahu that escaped, is, that they all went down during the tempestuous night which succeeded the engagement.

CHINA.

Files of Canton papers to the 20th May, have been received during the month.

The creditors of Hing Tai have determined on memorializing the home Government respecting the postponement of the settlement of their claims by the Cohong.

The opium trade still continues much embarrassed, and scarcely a prospect of improvement. The advices from Peking are very unfavorable to the probability of any legislative interference to protect the importation.

Captain J. T. Laucaster, formerly of the Caledonia, Bombay ship, lately of the Agnes, at Lintin, in consequence of the difficulties of a situation in which it devolved on him to keep many and complicated accounts, to which he had been hitherto a stranger, and which had for some time irritated his mind, and induced him to believe that he could not give satisfaction to his employers—an impression which was not founded on fact, his owners being, on the contrary, perfectly contented with his management; became unsettled in his mind and a fever with which he was afflicted during the last three days of his life, probably assisted in subverting his reason altogether, and on the 10th of March, he went on shore at Lintin, proceeded inland and blew out his brains.

MEETING OF THE AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION OF BENGAL.

Calcutta, July 2, 1838.

At a meeting of the Australian Association of Bengal, at the Town-hall this morning,

Edward Stirling, Esq., C. S., in the chair,

The secretary read the report of the committee as follows:

THIRD REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION.

We are happy to have it in our power to commence our third report, by announcing the safe return of the first ship despatched by us.

The Gaillardon, Capt. Rapson, left Calcutta on the 17th Dec., and the Sandheads on the 20th, and returned here on the 20th ultimo, exactly six months. The passage to the Swan was rather a long one, and in consequence of the great delay and detention, the vessel was likely to suffer by going to the new settlement in South Australia. Capt. Rapson decided with the concurrence of the majority of his passengers, to proceed direct to Hobart-Town, and there to take up freight and passage for the cargo and passengers bound to Adelaide; under the circumstances, we approve of Capt. Rapson's determination in that respect. The vessel returned through Torres' Straits, and although a trifle was earned by her after she left Calcutta, the amount will not materially add to the profit of the voyage, which we reckon about 1,500 rupees, though we have no accounts yet from Sydney.

Our agency at Sydney was addressed in the first instance to Mr. R. H. Biowie, late of the firm of Shedden and Co. of this place, but as that gentleman had no settled purpose of remaining in the colony, or at any rate residing at Sydney, our affairs passed into the hands of Messrs. Campbell and Co. of George-street, as provided for in our instructions. We are inclined to think, that the discretion exercised by them in sending the vessel back at once in ballast, rather than incur certain expense for the chance of freight and passengers, has been advantageous.

We attribute the success of our first ship in a great measure to the active exertions of Capt. Rapson, who obtained the most satisfactory testimonials from the passengers, as to the table and general conduct of the voyage. We consider him deserving of our best thanks, and trust the meeting will join us in the expression of them.

It was our desire to take up the ship again immediately, but no sufficient freight or passengers have yet offered to warrant our doing so. We have, therefore, suggested to Capt. Rapson to take an intermediate voyage, so as to be back here in time to sail in December, and should he act upon our suggestion we shall be prepared with your sanction to make arrangement with him for a further voyage.

Our letters from Sydney are few, and hitherto from Van Diemen's Land we have none; and, therefore, cannot say what support we can reckon upon from the colonists. As yet we have only received good wishes for our success.

We would observe, that although the voyage of the Gaillardon is satisfactory in its results, we think, there are grounds for the expectation of still greater success in future operations. First, because the ship is calculated to earn a larger freight than on her last voyage. Second, because Captain Rapson is now willing to undertake the voyage for a specified sum, and third, because we may reasonably reckon upon more freight and passage-money in return voyages hereafter, when our arrangements shall be more complete and more generally understood.

The disasters of our second ship, the Emerald Isle, have been a source of much regret and annoyance, and, we fear, the voyage will entail considerable loss on the association, but we have the consolation of knowing that every thing was done by us that could be done to insure success, as will appear by the report of the gentlemen you deputed to inquire into the matter at the last general meeting. We trust that the conduct and language we and our zealous secretary have had to endure from the passengers of that vessel, will be deemed by you to have been wholly unmerited.

We have reason to believe ourselves unfortunate in the choice of the ship and of her commander, the former being a new ship, her defects only became apparent in the course of the voyage; we trust they will have been remedied ere she leaves the Mauritius. Her sailing qualities are spoken very favourably of. We have yet no information of her having proceeded on from the Mauritius, but the intelligence may be daily expected.

As a strong prejudice appears to have been excited at Madras, and, as we have but one subscriber at that presidency, we submit to the meeting, whether it may not be desirable for the future to avoid the expense of time and money, which must be incurred by calling there, and which, so far as we can see, is likely to be thrown away.

We beg to submit the accounts of the association with our secretary.

It was then moved by Mr. Wm. Priasep, and seconded by Mr. R. J. Bagshaw.

That the report just now read be approved of.
Moved by Mr. J. Bagshaw, and seconded by Mr. W. Priasep.

That the thanks of the association be offered to Captain Rapson, of the Guillardon, for his zealous co-operation with the agents of the Society, and the satisfactory manner in which he has fulfilled his engagements.

Proposed by the chairman, and seconded by Mr. C. R. Prinsep.

That the Guillardon, Captain Rapson, be advertised for the colonies for the first week of August.

Moved by Mr. W. Prinsep, and seconded by Mr. Gardiner.

That the meeting, finding by the proceedings, that Madras has not responded to the endeavours of this association, to include that presidency in their ar-
